It is necessary to guard one's self, on the one hand, against indiscriminate and omnivorous reading, which is a deadly foe to mental power; and, on the other, against the narrowness of overspecialization, which is almost equally destructive of intellectual life in any broad and liberal sense. These two perils may be avoided by generalizing one's specialty. It is a fact, though perhaps not generally recognized, that the intensive process in any field of study yields ultimately the broadest results in the way of general culture.

A floating sentence caught my eye some time since: "A man cannot know any subject which requires intelligence without knowing more than that subject." In this fugitive and unfathered sentence I find the deepest philosophy of the study life. To know anything well is to know it in its relationships—and where do the relationships of any fact or group of facts in the universe end? The use of the word "universe" is indication enough that there is no end to such relationships save the limits of the universe itself. Intensive study grips the totality of related facts by the handle of one.

Suppose that my specialty is a language. Am I a master of my subject when I have succeeded in mastering the formal elements of that single language? What about its place in the family of languages? What of the history which produced it and the race of which it is the expression? What of the mental characteristics of the race whose speech it is? What of the psychology of speech in general? What is the meaning of language and what part does it play in human life? These ways and by-ways of knowledge open directly from a single special subject and belong essentially to it. My father used to tell me, when I was a small boy, that the country roads over which we used to drive had no end save where the oceans made an end of the dry land. Every subject of human thought stands at the center of a network of related knowledge leading out to the limits of what may be thought and known. The so-called and greatly lamented narrowing effect of specialization is due, not to the method itself, but to a crude and narrow application of it. Most men are entirely too limited to attain the full measure of possibility in any field of thought or endeavor, however limited it may seem to be.

I have yet to meet the man too large for a country parish, or too wise for any single department of human knowledge. The truth involved in this principle should be eagerly appropriated by the religious worker in establishing a center for his intellectual life. The lateral outreach of really profound Bible study involves, as belonging to its essential context, whatever men have thought or felt or done. The Bible in its narrowest dimension is as broad as man and the world. If only the Bible student would venture to restrict his reading to such of the best books as his study and the devout curiosity which that study arouses naturally lead to, going out upon literature, history, science, and art through the avenues which the Bible itself opens, his work would be graciously unified, his time would be saved, while the best of the world's thought would assuredly come into his possession.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE VANDERBILT CONTROVERSY.

(This interesting account of the controversy concerning Vanderbilt University appeared in the Nashville Banner of February 21. We reproduce it in order that our readers may secure a clear understanding of the origin and progress of this regrettable contest. It will be observed by those who carefully read the account, that the Church left nothing that was possible undone, to secure a satisfactory adjustment of the points at issue, before appealing to the courts.)

The first step looking to the creation of Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the name of which was afterwards changed to Vanderbilt University, was a resolution passed in the Tennessee Conference, having been introduced by Dr. D. C. Kelly and Rev. Welborn Mooney, in October, 1871, as follows:

"Resolved, That we request the Presiding Bishop to appoint a committee of three to confer with the Memphis, North Alabama, North Mississippi and any other Conferences likely to co-operate with us in reference to the establishment and endowment of a Methodist University of high grade and large endowment."

This resolution was adopted and the Bishop appointed D. C. Kelly, A. L. P. Green and R. A. Young as the committee.

The Memphis Conference took similar action on November 17, and within a few days the North Mississippi, North Alabama, Arkansas, Alabama, White River and Louisiana Conferences passed similar resolutions and appointed like committees. (While the Tennessee Conference acted first, because of its having met earlier, it is well known that to the late Dr. W. C. Johnson, of the Memphis Conference, belongs the honor of having first advocated the establishment of a central Methodist University.—Editor of the Advocate.)

The Memphis Resolutions.

These committees met in Memphis on the 24th of January, 1872, and after three days of deliberation passed what is known as the Memphis Resolutions. In these resolutions the Convention resolved to take measures looking to the establishment of an institution of learning of the highest order, where the youth of the Church and country may prosecute theological, literary, scientific and professional studies. The institution was to be called Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It provided for a theological school for the training of young preachers, who should be recommended by a Quarterly or Annual Conference. One million dollars was to be raised; the location was left to the College of Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, and provi-tion was to be made in the charter for giving fair representation in the management to any Annual Conference thereafter co-operating. The Bishops were made a Board of Supervisors.

A Charter Obtained.

A committee was appointed to take out a charter. This charter was taken out in the Chancery Court of this city and in the charter the persons applying for the same were designated as representatives of their respective Conferences. The Memphis Resolutions were made a part of the charter, and the committee appointed to take out the charter were made the first Board of Trust. At subsequent meetings of the Board of Trust they reported to the Conferences what action they had taken and requested the Conferences to nominate members of the Board, the Board to be reorganized to conform to such nominations.

The various Conferences accepted the report of what had been done and the charter, and nominated the members of the Board of Trust, and these were seated upon the Board.

In January, 1873, the final organization of Central University was completed, agents appointed to solicit funds, and an address issued to the entire Church and to the public, setting forth the needs of the University. This address was prepared by Bishop McTyeire, and the Memphis Resolutions were written by him.

The Vanderbilt Gift.

In February, 1873, Bishop McTyeire, being convalescing from a surgical operation in New York, was a guest of Commodore Vanderbilt, and on March 17, 1873, Commodore Vanderbilt made the gift of "not less than $500,000 to Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

The Board of Trust accepted the gift with its terms, and decided to change the name to Vanderbilt University, which was done by an amendment to the charter.

From 1873 to 1905 there was no friction between the Church and the Board of Trust. The entire College of Bishops were members of the Board of Trust, and the Church confirmed all the trustees except four, who were elected not from any particular Conference.

In 1898, at the request of the Board of Trust of the University, each of the Annual Conferences interested agreed to transfer its rights to the General Conference. The General Conference accepted the same and thereafter confirmed all the trustees from 1898 to 1910.

The Bishops Eliminated.

In 1905 the Board of Trust eliminated all the Bishops but five, and prepared an application for a new charter to be taken out under the Act of 1875, which was to get rid of the provisions of the Memphis Resolutions.

These acts of the Board created a fear on the part of the Church that the Board was trying to sever the ties between the University and the Church and resulted in the appointment by the General Conference of 1906 of the Vanderbilt Commission. This Commission held several sessions in Nashville and filed its report in the latter part of 1906, holding that the University was created and founded by the several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; that they were members of the corporation and had the right to elect the trustees; that the Bishops were common law visitors with the right to supervise the University; that by the transfer in 1898 the General Conference became the member of the corporation and had the sole right to elect members of the Board of Trust.

The Bishops and the General Conference accepted the report of the Vanderbilt Commission. The Board of Trust passed a resolution which was capable of being construed either as an acceptance or as not an acceptance.

The Suit Instituted.

Uneasiness continued in the Church as to the attitude of the Board of Trust until the General Conference of 1910 when, not being able to get the Board to meet and pass a resolution definitely accepting the report of the Commission, the General Conference elected Messrs. N. E. Harris, A. W. Biggs and V. A. Godhey as members of the Board of Trust.

At its June meeting in 1910, the Board of Trust refused to seat these trustees, undertook to abolish the arrangement by which the Church was to confirm all the trustees, and undertook of its own accord, independent of the Church, to elect trustees in place of the three the General Conference had elected, and voted down a resolution recognizing the rights of the Church in the University.

The Bishops vetoed this action of the Board of Trust, but the Board paid no attention to the veto. Under direction of the General Conference the Bishops thereupon filed the present suit for the purpose of setting up the Church's rights in the University.

THE WOMAN AND THE CHURCH.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The Louisiana Annual Conference, in session duly assembled, imposed upon certain members the arduous and somewhat perilous task of discussing, elucidating and ventilating the question of woman's official relation and rights in the Church.

Moreover it was ordained that the question should be treated in a "calm, judicious and impersonal manner." So I herein proceed to discharge said duty imposed, with an eye single upon the aforementioned restrictions.

1. Woman should have official rank in the Church from a historic standpoint. The early Church recognized her as deaconess and evangelist. John wrote an epistle to "the elect lady," evidently some woman of more than ordinary rank and influence in the ecclesiastical circles of that day. If some will or may contend that these had no representative authority, I briefly mention the fact that such a thing as representative government in Church or State was then unknown. All the influence wielded was that based on natural gifts and piety. In the history of the Church, extensive and important spiritual and beneficent interests have repeatedly been committed to the care and oversight of godly women, and I recall no instance whatever where one of these have been false or untrue to the sacred trust. Holy women of the post-apostolic Church directed and controlled religious communities to the glory of God, and the help of suffering humanity in that decadent age. Has the name of the many abbesses or superiors in the convents or refuge homes of that age been forgotten?

Or have our Methodist men forgotten Selima, Countess of Huntington, who, as a faithful stewardess under God, ministered to the needy and sustained preachers in the field? Was she wise, was she prudent, was she faithful enough to cast a hailot in a quarterly, Annual, or General Conference? Surely, women of this rank in spiritual and administrative affairs have sufficient understanding to vote in the councils of the Church.

2. Women should have official position in the Church from a Scriptural standpoint. Paul's wise admonition to Corinthian female busybodies in the Church was a specific command to meet an existent condition, and cannot fairly be given a general significance. Moreover, this same apostle states elsewhere that in the kingdom of Christ there is neither "male nor female." He argues most strenuously against class or caste conditions, maintaining that all are one in Christ. No close student of the Old Testament Scriptures can fail to note that women held official position in Church and State. To argue otherwise would be doing violence to the plainest historical facts.

3. Women should have official position in the Church, from a standpoint of simple justice and fair dealing. They form a large body of church membership. They contribute liberally of their means to support the institutions of the Church. They are as vitally interested in the progress and welfare of the Church as any. In devotion, in service, in sacrifice, in godliness, and in all the graces that adorn the Christian character, they are the equals of men. Faithful in that which is least, let the Church of the living God commit to their care and diligence the things that are greater. Why, the Church in Scripture is represented as a "bride." That may mean more than we sometimes suspect. Maybe, if we give our women membership in the Annual Conference, some legal questions might arise that would tax the ingenuity and wisdom of our College of Bishops to decide. Hitherto they have always sustained the decisions of the presiding officer. A little rift in the unanimity of the thing would be refreshing.

But in all seriousness, are we men afraid to trust the women in these affairs? Men give them their love, their service, their confidence; none are nearer in all the sacred relations of life than the good women, and yet these Solons guard the threshold of the council chamber against the approach of those who only desire to enter therein to do good, as though their presence was unhal- lowed.

Finally, may not the admission of woman to all the rights and privileges in the church councils be a means of bridging that chasm of sexly antagonism and unnatural jealousy that exists among our people? If the women are crowding the men, make more room at the top. The worthy will reach the highest places as among the men, for all life is ever, "ad astra per aspera." Fisher, La.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The session of the Divinity School will begin with the evening of June 24, and conclude with the 11 o'clock lecture on July 3, 1913. Dr. Henry F. Cope, General Secretary of the Religious Education Association, will be the lecturer for the first four and a half days, beginning on the evening of the first day of June 24 at eight o'clock, and concluding with the evening hour on Saturday, June 28. Dr. Cope was with us during the second session of the School and it needs only to be said that he is a master of the subjects that he will speak upon.

Bishop Candler will follow Dr. Cope, beginning on the Sabbath with the 11 o'clock hour (June 29), and will lecture at the popular hours throughout the remainder of the session. Bishop Candler believes in the School and it is his pleasure to render this service for us. What a treat there is in store for those who hear him from day to day!

Dr. John A. Rice, who is one of the best pastors in our Church, and who is serving one of the strongest churches in the connection, will be our teacher of the Bible throughout the session. One of the striking qualities of Dr. Rice as a pastor is that he has an Official Board, every one of whom is a personal worker for Christ—a thing that can be said of very few men. There must be a marvelous spiritual touch with men to secure such co-operation as this in soul winning. Dr. Rice's church also has two pastors—one at home, and one in the mission field. Up to a few weeks ago, he had received about seventy-five people into his church this year, most of them on profession of faith.

Church News

The sum of $24,000,000 is the total amount that all Christian denominations in the United States are asked to pay for foreign missions during 1913.

Bishop J. A. Hartzell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has been spending the winter in America, will sail on April 19 for Africa, where he is the resident Bishop.

May 15 is the date fixed for the meetings of the three Presbyterian General Assemblies in Atlanta, Ga.—the Presbyterian, North; the Presbyterian, South; and the United Presbyterian.

The old Park's Hill Camp Ground, located near Carlisle, Ky., where for thirty years vast audiences gathered to hear America's greatest preachers at the annual camp meeting, was recently sold as a site for a big farm.

A great revival meeting was recently held in Frederick, Okla., by the pastor, Rev. L. A. Scales, assisted by Evangelist W. M. McIntosh. There were 200 conversions and more than 100 accessions to our Church.

The total value of church buildings owned by Protestant Churches in the United States is said to be $1,300,000,000, and the total membership is placed at 23,300,000. Protestantism has an average investment of $565 for every church member.

Among the pledges received during the past few days in the campaign to raise $1,000,000 to save Goucher College, was one for $500 from Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President. Two of the President's daughters received their college training in Goucher College.

Sir John Kirk, of England, is the only survivor of the Livingstone Expedition into Africa in 1858-1864. He attended a celebration in London in honor of Livingstone's centenary on March 17, and was entertained by the Royal Geographical Society of England as the guest of honor.

Our church buildings in Mexico City were badly damaged during the recent disturbances in that city. The only parsonage there was completely demolished. Our missionaries in Saltillo and Durango were advised by the United States Consul to leave their posts.

The Presbyterian Church (North) has 12 institutions preparing young men for the ministry, whose total assets are $11,623,684. It costs this Church an average of $720 a year for every ministerial student enrolled in her schools. There are about 125 young men now pursuing theological studies in its seminaries.

According to figures compiled by Rev. Walter H. Houston, the Corresponding Secretary of the Permanent Committee on Vacancy and Supply, of the Presbyterian Church (North) of America, that denomination needs at the present time 1000 ministers in order to properly man its churches in the United States. Of the 296 Presbyteries reporting, 234 reported 706 congregations able to support a minister that are at present without a pastor.

The new catalogue of Wofford College, of Spartanburg, S. C., states that the present enrollment is 504, there being 308 in the college department, and 196 in the preparatory department. Every county in South Carolina is represented in the enrollment but one, and there are 184 regular students from Spartanburg and the surrounding community, which speaks well for the reputation of Wofford College at home.

Three prominent Baptist educators have recently resigned their positions and re-entered the regular pastorate. They are Dr. R. G. Bowers, President of Ouachita College, of Arkabutla, Ark., who becomes pastor of the First Baptist Church of Little Rock; President R. A. Kimbrough, of Union University, at Jackson, Tenn., who becomes the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Abilene, Texas; and Rev. I. N. Langston, Educational Secretary of the State of Texas, who becomes the pastor of a church in Franklin, Texas.

President Stewart, of Auburn, N. Y., has been elected Chairman of a Joint Commission of Theological Seminaries and the Federal Council of Churches to recommend a course of study for Protestant ministerial students who intend to engage in settlement work. The Social Service Commission, of which he is Chairman, has under advisement plans of co-operation with the American Association for Labor Legislation to secure uniform laws in all the States of the Union granting all industrial workers at least one day of rest out of seven.

The 1913 edition of the Roman Catholic Directory gives the total membership of that Church under the protection of the American flag as 23,329,047. Of this number 15,143,190 are in the United States. Thirty-one States have more than 50,000 Catholics. The 17 States that are the strongholds of that Church are: New York, 2,790,629; Pennsylvania, 1,633,353; Illinois, 1,460,987; Massachusetts, 1,383,435; Ohio, 743,065; Louisiana, 584,000; Michigan, 568,505; Wisconsin, 558,476; New Jersey, 506,000; Missouri, 470,000; Minnesota, 454,797; California, 403,500; Texas, 306,400; Maryland, 260,000; Kentucky, 163,228; New Mexico, 140,573, and Kansas, 161,000.

CHURCH AFFAIRS IN HOMER, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: The outlook and uplook in church and other affairs in this part of our Lord's vineyard is really encouraging. This section of the country suffered no little on account of the boll weevil, but that pest has about disappeared and a material prosperity that surpasses anything in former years seems to be returning. Something like $75,000 worth of mules and horses have been sold from this town to the farmers within the past few months.

These indications of a prosperous condition of the surrounding country are stimulating to the business, school, and church activities in our growing town. Yes, Homer is, indeed, a growing town, and is destined to be a great town in every sense of the word. Being located in the hill country, and free from malaria, with pure artesian water, it is an ideal place to live. The lack of railroad facilities has operated against the growth and material progress of the town. But that will soon be a thing of the past, since an interurban electric car line is now being surveyed from Shreveport to Monroe, via Homer. The prospect of an additional railroad has already caused new business enterprises to be launched. The foundation for a large ice plant is being laid; a new depot has recently been built, and a wholesale grocery and other store buildings will be erected in the near future.

The public school has recently taken on a new and larger life. The tax for a $45,000 high school building has already been voted. Prof. O. B. Staples, one of the liveliest and best equipped school men in the State, is in charge of the school interests of the town.

But Homer's greatest wealth is not in these institutions of sense and time, but in her noble, law-abiding, godly citizens. Our people are not unmindful, therefore, of the Church, the unfailing source of their light and life. Five Protestant Churches are represented here, and are working together harmoniously. We have never lived in a town more completely dominated by a spirit of fraternity and good fellowship. It can truly be said: "Behold how they love each other." It is delightful to live in such an atmosphere. The people are intelligent, social, and musical. The musical talent deserves special mention, for Homer has some as fine (both male and female) voices as you will find anywhere. We think the Methodist church here has as fine, if not the finest, choir in the State. If you doubt this, Mr. Eldtor, just come up and preach for us some time and judge for yourself. Our people think very highly of your paper and I'm sure they would enjoy your preaching.

We are planning for a forward movement on all lines. The good people of our church have been greatly burdened with a debt incurred several years ago by the erection of a larger and more suitable church building. This, we hope to liquidate during the present year—after which our financial problems will be more easily solved. Our loyal people speak very favorably of all their former pastors, which, you know, always makes the present incumbent feel comfortable.

T. J. WARLICK.

WE ARE IN NEED.

To All the Friends of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss.

We gave notice at our Conferences and through "Our Home" that we had paid out all our reserve fund on the new buildings, which are now all paid for and well furnished. But our treasury is empty. Each month we have made appeals for help and funds sufficient to meet our necessary current expenses. We knew that the weather conditions were against good congregations and collections, so we borrowed $1000 in February, thinking that that amount, together with our monthly income, would tide us over several months. But the 1st of March found us with $135 in the bank and about $1200 due on monthly bills and salaries. We did not have enough to pay our helpers. We could not afford to borrow another $1000 this month.

What ought we to do? We have prayed, and waited for you good people to answer by sending in what we need. We have not received enough yet to pay our bills; they are still unpaid, and this month is nearly out. We are trying to economize in every way. But how can we live on much less than we are at present? Must we cut the rations? Must we turn the children out on the commons? Some of you wise people, who know how to feed, clothe and educate 214 children on our income for the last three months, please come and show us how it can be done.

Now, my dear friends, we cannot afford to borrow money every month. We must not get in debt. We cannot afford to turn the children out. We cannot afford to keep them and let them suffer, and we cannot close the door to other needy, homeless children. Will Methodism in Mississippi stand for that? No! Then what must we do?

Let every preacher, and every layman, and every woman, who loves God and the Church, and who cares for children, say, "We will not stand for such neglect, but will go to work to-day and keep on working until the Home is supplied with sufficient funds to care for all her children without going in debt. Cannot you people, whom God has blessed with homes and loved ones, send us a check to help make a home for the homeless? You mothers and fathers, whom God has spared to your children, send us a contribution to help provide for these who have none. If you were gone, what would you want others to do for your children? 'Do unto others as you would have others do to your children.'

Pray for us, that the spirit of interest and liberality in the people may be increased, and that the Holy Spirit may guide us in the wisest and most economical expenditure of all funds committed to us. Your brother, W. M. WILLIAMS.

The Legislature of South Carolina recently passed a compulsory education law, and it was promptly vetoed by Governor Blease.

According to Dr. Edgar E. Brandon, of the United States Bureau of Education, the schools and colleges of the Latin-American countries are abandoning the study of Latin.

King George of Greece, who was assassinated last week, was one of the oldest and most loved rulers of Europe. Prince Constantine, his eldest son, has been proclaimed king to succeed him.

The British whaling ship, Scotia, has left England to patrol the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of Newfoundland. She will soon be joined by the American steamer Birmingham, and the two will warn vessels at sea of approaching icebergs. Both vessels are equipped with wireless attachments.

Mr. E. A. Winship, Editor of the Journal of Education, of Boston, was in New Orleans last week, and in an address before the young ladies of one of the high schools stated that the New Orleans schools have made greater progress in the last ten years than those of any other city in the United States.

The State Board of Equalization of Louisiana recently won a decided victory when the State Supreme Court sustained its position placing the assessable valuation of the Union Sulphur Company of Sulphur, La., at $10,000,000, instead of $2,500,000, the valuation contended for by the Company.

That the State of Texas is a great agricultural State may be seen by the fact that her farm products last year were valued at $400,000,000. Texas has 265,000 square miles of territory and 4,000,000 inhabitants. The next States in the Union in rank after Texas as agricultural States are Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and Ohio.

The Louisiana Historical Society has announced its purpose to have erected in New Orleans a ship to be the exact duplicate of the Bermuda, Christopher Columbus' flagship. The Society has been assured that if the vessel is completed in time, it shall be the first to pass through the Panama Canal when that waterway is completed.

On March 15, the strike of the garment workers of Boston, Mass., was practically ended when the manufacturers granted the requests of 6000 strikers and they returned to their places. The strikers demanded that 50 hours' work be the amount required for a full week's wages, and that a half-holiday be granted them on Saturday.

Prof. Clifford B. Beers, Secretary of the National Committee on Mental Hygiene, stated recently before the City Club of Philadelphia that there are more insane persons in the United States than there are students in American Colleges and Universities. He also stated that it costs annually $135,000,000 to maintain our asylums.

The faculty of Vassar College recently issued an order forbidding the students of that institution to attend moving picture shows. The reason assigned for this action by the faculty was that habitual absence from the school in order to attend something of so little value as a moving picture show lowers the dignity of both the pupils and the school.

Fifty families of Montclair, N. J., recently formed an organization for the purpose of co-operative housekeeping. Each family pays a steward according to the number of members of his family. The steward as general manager employs a head cook, ten under cooks, ten house maids and a delivery man. All food is prepared in one kitchen, and is delivered to the fifty homes in an automobile. Whether the experiment will prove to be a money saver remains to be seen.

On March 20, the New York Association for Relieving the Condition of the Poor announced that it had received a gift of $650,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth M. Anderson. This is the largest amount ever given for settlement work, except probably the Sage Foundation, which is an individual enterprise. The money is not to be used in the purchase of food and clothing, but in installing laboratories to be operated in the interest of the prevention of disease among the poor.

The second trial of Baron Yun Chl Ho and others for alleged conspiracy to assassinate the Governor General of Korea in 1910 was completed on March 20. Ninety-nine of the accused were found not guilty, and Baron Yun, together with four others, was sentenced to six years in prison, his sentence being reduced from ten years. It is said that Mr. Yun is suffering from incipient tuberculosis, and that he is not likely to survive a six-year term of imprisonment.

Mr. G. A. Clifton, owner of a Savannah (Ga.) Cotton Factory, recently made successful experiments with negro women as factory hands. He reports that his experiment was entirely satisfactory. However, other similar experiments have proven to be failures, and it is by no means certain that negro help can be depended on for operating cotton mills in the South. The negro is a faithful laborer, but to require him to work regularly, be on time, and obey fixed factory rules is ordinarily too much for him.

THE CENTENNIAL OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Seeing allusion to various kinds of centennials, I have thought to write something of this one which is of peculiar interest to all Methodists of the Southwest, as it was the first Annual Conference in this vast country.

In 1813 a number of Protestant families had moved into the "Natchez country," and the Western and Tennessee Conferences had sent the "saddle-bags" fraternity to carry the Gospel to them. This Natchez country embraced what is now the seven Southwestern counties of the State of Mississippi. Owing to the difficulty and dangers of reporting back to the mother Conferences, in the fall of 1813, because of the unrest of the Indian tribes as a result of the war of 1812-16, these "saddle-baggers" in this territory met on Nov. 1, 1813, at the residence of Rev. Newitt Vick, about five and one-half miles southwest of Fayette, on a main public road, and held a Conference of their own—the first one ever held in the vast Southwest, and from which has sprung more Conferences than I dare to name now. I leave that to others.

Last summer the District Conference of the Port Gibson District met at Fayette, and its members, wishing to visit this historic spot, called on this scribe, who has known the place all his life, to act as a guide. He did so, and following out the suggestion made on that trip, he on the 1st day of November, 1912, procured from Mrs. Abbie Terry a deed in fee simple to one-half acre of ground, embracing the site of the Vick residence, for "the sole use and benefit of the Mississippi Conference" of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; had it properly acknowledged and recorded in the Chancery Clerk's office at Fayette, and sent it to the Historical Society of the Mississippi Conference.

So it is now up to the Conference to determine what use it will make of this place. It would seem fitting, as the next Conference is to be held at Natchez, for the members to get up an excursion and come in a body out to this place. Should they conclude to do this, transportation out from Fayette and back will be provided, and a luncheon served to all visitors. And the Editor of the church organ, too, must come along.

HOME MISSION DAY.

The Board of Missions has named March 30 as Home and Conference Mission Day. It is the purpose of the treasurer to emphasize and strongly stress the importance of the general observance of that day by all our pastors. Secure as much in cash on your assessment as possible and forward the same to me at once.

The first quarterly payment is now due our mission pastors and there is no money in the treasury to pay them. Only $211.87 have been received up to this time. Urgent appeals are coming in for help from the Board of Missions, and these appeals can be met only through your co-operation. Let us have a large collection for Home and Conference Missions on March 30.

Very sincerely,

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

The Board of Trustees met Wednesday and organized as follows: R. T. Moore, President; D. G. Petty, Vice President; R. E. Bobbitt, Secretary-Treasurer. The following non-resident members were present: H. N. Brown, B. H. Sheppard, W. R. Harvell, B. L. Thompson, S. H. Porter, C. D. Hicks, T. C. Middleton, A. W. Baird.

The Domestic Science Class served a luncheon and the members of the Board were extravagant in their praise of it. Ten of our Normal girls have just received first-grade certificates. These are to graduate in our Teacher-Training Course in June. They took the examination in January in the Theory and Art of Teaching. Not a department of our work but is paying. Our new catalogue will be on the press soon. R. E. BOBBITT, Pres.

WILL CHAPERONE MUSIC PUPILS.

I have planned to go to the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music early in June to be with my 13-year-old daughter, and I will chaperone gratis any young student or teacher who would like to go for summer study. Address Mrs. Rebekah Ellison-Johnston, Centenary College, Shreveport, La.

A PHYSICIAN WANTED.

The citizens of a growing town of Northwest Louisiana are anxious to have a reliable physician make his home among them. A first-class practice awaits the right man. If any are interested they may communicate with W. F. Rogers, R. F. D. 1, Shreveport, La.

A RETOLD STORY.

Jno. W. Boswell.

The following story was never before in print. It relates a bit of experience in the life of one of the pioneers of Methodism in the West, the Rev. Arthur Davis, a man noted for his strong common sense and ability to get at facts and to state them in the shortest way possible. Arthur Davis was nature's man. As far as I know he was made after no pattern. I feel sure that the like of him has never been duplicated. In polite literature he would have been called "unique." As a man "strange but pleasing in character" he was "quaint." As a preacher he dived deeply into a few subjects, elucidated them, and enforced his conclusions in a way possible to no other man. He was a great preacher, at the same time an enthusiastic farmer—the best farmer in all the land. Cotton was his specialty. Had he studied the gospel and applied himself to the itinerant work as he did to cotton planting his fame would have been nation-wide, and he would worthily have filled the highest place in Methodism.

In this story all the names used except that of the preacher are fictitious. The story itself is true. I give it as told me by Brother Davis without exaggeration or embellishment. A few old persons in West Tennessee know that one who repeats a tale told by Arthur Davis can hardly make it any bigger or more vivid. He is apt to go below rather than above the mark.

Some time about the middle of the last century Arthur Davis was appointed to a circuit in Mississippi—that part of the State then in the Memphis Conference. He had a good home in Tennessee, and that year had made a fine crop. The move was long and tiresome for there were no railroads, and Brother Davis was not pleased. But he went, carried his wife and children, some household necessities, and, what was unheard of, and as far as I know never has happened since, he carried a wagon load of corn and fodder, and bacon sufficient for the year. The circuit did not stand very high on the list of appointments. This Brother Davis knew, but as a loyal preacher he determined to do his duty. He told the stewards and others interested what he knew about their past record, and added: "I am going to stay here the year through. I have come prepared to take care of myself. I have brought provisions enough for awhile, and when they are gone, I've got plenty more at home." The people had never heard anything on that wise from a Methodist preacher. They sat up and took notice.

His first business on the circuit was to "hunt up" the principal officials, who on that day were the class-leaders. One of the chief churches was a considerable distance from his hired house. The day before preaching he made his way to the home of the class-leader, one Brother Lazyby. The weather was bitter cold. He didn't know the road, but he knew the direction, and was sure that after going a few miles he would meet some one who would tell him the exact way. Soon he met a man who informed him that Lazyby lived about ten miles out, and a mile or two off the main road. From this point on Brother Davis shall tell the story in his own way.

"After riding one or two more miles I met another man who told me that it was about ten miles to Lazyby's, and he gave me directions. I went on and on, and it seemed to me that the further I went the further it was to Lazyby's. Along close to sun set, when I had begun to despair, and was nearly frozen, I halted at a house and asked the way to Lazyby's. The good woman who answered my call, pointing the way, said: 'It is only a few hundred yards ahead.' I was thankful. I soon rode in sight. I looked at the house, and knew instantly that if I stayed there all night I would suffer. (Here he gave a description of the surroundings.) I had about made up my mind to pass by and seek other lodgings, but just as I got opposite the gate, a man at the house hollered: 'Hey, aint you our new preacher?' The jig was up. Lazyby would hear that I had been inquiring for him all along the road, and if I failed to stop he would think it strange. I had to stop. I went in the house, and as soon as I shook hands with his wife she went out of doors and brought in a big load of wood and built up the fire. In a little while I saw Lazyby go through the gate with a little sack under his arm. I knew what he was after. He was going to a neighbor to borrow flour to make biscuits for the new preacher. He got the flour and was soon back home, and the wife cooked supper. But before we sat down to the table she brought in another big load of wood and made another big fire; and Lazyby sitting there talking.

"We ate supper, and in a few minutes Brother Smartman, the steward who lived close by, came in for an evening's talk. While we were talking, Sister Lazyby, who was anything and everything but lazy, washed the dishes, put them away, and did several other little jobs, and then brought in another big load of wood, Lazyby sitting there talking. A good fire built, Sister Lazyby took down her knitting, seated herself, and for the first time during the evening, had a chance to rest or engage in the conversation.

"When she was seated I turned to her and said: 'Madam, you must be tired.' 'No,' said she, 'I am not tired.' I say, madam, you must be tired. 'No, Brother Davis, I am not tired. I have done nothing unusual.' But I say you must be tired. Since I have been here, you have milked the cow, cooked supper, waited on the table, washed and put away the dishes, and made many other turns, and besides, you have brought in three big loads of wood and made three fires. I say madam, you must be tired. Then turning to Lazyby, I said: 'You great big, strapping, good-for-nothing fellow. It is a wonder the Lord hasn't taken your wife away from you long ago. It is a wonder she has not died of pneumonia. Look at the cracks in this house letting in the wind and the cold all the time. You might at least stop up the cracks with mud. And besides, you sit here and enjoy yourself and let that good woman bring in wood and make fires for you, and the weather freezing cold. She says she has done nothing unusual. Of course, then, she makes the fires not only when company is here, but all the time. You ought to fix up this house for your wife's comfort.'

"Brother Smartman looked and listened in astonishment. He had never heard such talk from one man to another. He had heard his wife, who was 'the man of the house,' say pretty sharp things. When Brother Smartman got back home he told the old woman, who despised laziness above everything, what I had said to Lazyby. She was not much of a church woman, and never attended preaching, but she at once determined to hear me the next day. As soon as Smartman left for home Lazyby gave me an account of Mrs. Smartman. 'She is a hard case, Brother Davis. She never goes to church, and if you go to her house she will not treat you with common politeness. Brother Smartman is awfully hen-pecked.'

"A fine congregation met me next day. At the close of the service I shook hands with the brethren and sisters and had many invitations to dinner, and to stay all night. Directly I heard a great stentorian voice on the outskirts of the crowd, and saw a strong woman pushing her way towards me and saying, 'He isn't going home with any of you, he's got to go with me.' As soon as she caught my hand, she exclaimed, loud enough to be heard by everybody: 'You've got to go with me. Anybody that talks like you did last night is my man.' She became my strong friend and always came to hear me preach."

Sister Smartman never forgot Brother Davis, but when he left the circuit she slid back into her old ways. When I knew her years after that, she was the same old Sister Smartman. She never came to church, paid little attention to religion, but she never declined to cook good things for the preachers. I remember to this day the fritters and molasses as fondly as did the Hebrews remember "the melons and the leeks, and the onions" back in Egypt. My last encounter with the dear old woman was a stunner. It was at a camp-meeting. She had forgotten me. When we sat down to dinner I said: "Sister Smartman, it has been a long time since we saw each other." Her reply was, "If I ever saw you, I don't remember you." Said I, 'I remember you very well—I've been to your home a good many times. Very many preachers remember you with great pleasure.' Her answer was quick: "I don't know what they remember me for, unless its because I cooked for them, and the Lord knows I've served my time at that."

Brother Davis was true to his words and work. He had a successful year and left the circuit with the confidence and good will of everybody, and with a full pocket-book. The circuit heretofore had given its preachers a bare living. Brother Davis was paid twelve hundred dollars. His talk to Brother Lazyby was worth a whole hundred.

PREVENIENT GRACE—WHAT IS IT?

What was the loss to Adam and Eve by eating the forbidden fruit? If death resulted, what kind of death was it? Was it moral and spiritual death, depriving them of the capacity, inclination, and disposition to righteousness? We think that an affirmative answer will have to be given. What answer is to be given to the question, "Whence this universal feeling after God, this disposition to God and to righteousness?" It can not, it seems, be the product of moral and spiritual death. Is it not rather the outgoing of life? If so, it must have come from God; for he is the author of all life, and it must not be considered different in the spiritual realm from what it is in the natural realm. God puts life into the corn and into the wheat; he puts the chemicals in the earth; he gives the sunshine and the rain that the sower may plant the seed and that the eater may have bread. But, notwithstanding this liberal provision, the seed to sow and the bread to eat are conditioned on the judicious use of these gifts.

So, this disposition to God and to righteousness is the gift of God, and is what may be properly called "Prevenient Grace"—grace before. Prevenient grace is life, and I think it is the heritage of the race. It furnishes the moral capability, disposition, and inclination to God and to righteousness, and is the ground and reason of universal reprehensibility, in case that the will does not respond to the emotions supplied by this prevenient grace or life, instead of responding to the impulses of the carnal nature—the appetites of the flesh. If what is said above is true, man, just after the fall, did not have these two contradictory emotional impulses; one based on the appetites of the flesh, the other on the aspirations of the spiritual, or soul element of man. The will is the arbiter over the claims of these frequently contradictory impulses, and when it decides in favor of the call of the carnal appetite to participate in that which is known to be wrong, that is sin; and in no other way can sin have an existence. If prevenient grace is not made to exist with the coming of the child into the world, when is it imparted? For man can not respond, and will not respond, if he is in the condition that Adam was in just after eating the forbidden fruit. So, we think that prevenient grace is life, and if its impulses are obeyed, the life from above is developed.

The Home Circle

A HERO.

A few years ago a fire broke out in a charming little Swiss village. In a few hours the quaint farm houses were entirely destroyed.

One poor man was in greater trouble than his neighbors, even. His home and cows were gone, and so, also, was his son, a bright boy of six or seven years. He wept, and refused to hear any words of comfort. He spent the night wandering sorrowfully among the ruins.

Just as daybreak came, however, he heard a well-known sound, and looking up, he saw his favorite cow leading the herd, and coming directly after them was his bright-eyed boy.

"Oh, my son, my son!" he cried, "are you really alive?"

"Why yes, father. When I saw the fire, I ran to get our cows away to the pasture-lands."

"You are a hero, my boy!" the father exclaimed.

But the boy said: "Oh, no! A hero is one who does some wonderful deed. I led the cows away because they were in danger, and I knew it was the right thing to do."

"Ah!" cried the father, "he who does the right thing at the right time is a hero."—Southern Churchman.

YER CAN'T RUB IT OUT.

A little incident which I read not long ago brings forcibly to mind a great truth, says an exchange. A wealthy young fellow was standing before a costly plate-glass window, idly scratching upon it with a diamond ring upon his finger. A small street urchin, after watching him for awhile with evident signs of displeasure, finally said to the older boy, who was disfiguring the window:

"Don't yer do that no more. What yer doing it fer?"

"Guess I shall do it if I want to. Why not? Why shan't I do it?" said the other.

"Because," said the younger boy, and his voice became earnest, "because yer can't rub it out."

Human character is the window clear, flawless, glistening, smooth, upon which every thought, word and action are leaving their certain trace. That unholy thought which brought a flush to the cheek and caused a start of guilt lest another should suspect it, cuts its way through the clear crystal, leaving an unsightly scratch behind. That unkind word to someone else brought not alone the heartache to the one thus unkindly treated, but it also left a mark on your own character, where before there had been none.

And the worst of it is that none of these unsightly scratches will rub out. Try as we will, we cannot rub out the marks which our daily lives are leaving upon our personal characters.—The Presbyterian.

TO HOLD SUCCESS.

Some years ago, in a poor school house in a back district, a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word which had passed down the entire class.

"Go up to the head," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can, if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one; Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.

"Dave, how do you get your lessons so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson, and get my mother to hear me at night; then I go over them in the morning before I come to school. And I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave!" said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way, and you'll do."

Dave is to-day the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributes his start to the words:

"Go up to the head, and see that you stay there; you can if you work hard."—New York Christian Advocate.

SMALL BEGINNINGS.

A farmer once found a very small potato in one of his pockets when he came in from his work. "Here," said he, laughingly, to a boy twelve years old who lived with him; "plant that, and you shall have all you can raise from it till you are of age."

The bright boy cut the potato into as many pieces as there were "eyes" in it, and planted it.

In the autumn he dug and laid by the increase of it, and planted that in the following spring. Next year he planted the larger crop gathered the previous autumn. The potatoes grew healthily and did well, and his fourth year's harvest amounted to more than a hundred bushels. The farmer asked to be released from his bargain, for he saw that the boy's planting would cover all his land.

Small beginnings often lead to large results. So let us never despise "the day of small things."—Southern Churchman.

A CHILD'S CANDOR.

President Taft was out for his afternoon walk in Washington one day when a flaxen haired little girl ran out in front of him, held up her finger, and exclaimed in a shrill baby voice:

"I know who you are!"

The President, thinking it not at all unusual that she should possess this information, but willing to gratify her, asked:

"Well, who am I?"

"Aw," she said, teasingly, "you're Humpty Dumpty."—Everybody's.

A PLEA FOR TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

By Geo. W. Hlvelcy.

Pure and undefiled religion is not confined to men of any particular rank or station in life. The hod-carrier who toils arduously day after day can find peace in doing the Master's will as well as the king on his throne or the queen in her majesty. Nor is the growth of this noble plant confined to any particular locality. When nourished by divine grace, it will grow and flourish alike in the low land of the Mississippi, the Amazon and the Nile valleys, as well as the high altitudes of the Alleghenies or the Alps. But without God's grace, we are nowhere secure.

In all probability, Daniel had never listened to a temperance lecture; yet he was a total abstainer. "But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself." If a "Gideon's Band" can promote righteousness, then surely a Daniel's band would be beneficial to the sons of men. If Daniel and Cyrus needed to refrain from the use of wine in those days, how much more need is there for total abstinence to-day! Distillation did not begin until a little more than one thousand years ago. Quite different, indeed, must have been the wine by which Noah became intoxicated and some of the brands on the market to-day. "When Noah was drunk, he was simply imbecile, but the victims of modern alcoholism have to struggle with menageries of wild beasts and jungles of hissing serpents and perditions of blaspheming demons." Even the mild decoctions of the "olden days" were so destructive that they aided in the overthrow of Babylon. True, that great city was destroyed because of her indomitable pride, her sacrilegious impiety and her cruelty to God's chosen people, but drunkenness was the occasion of her destruction.

One of the many sad features of the liquor traffic is that our nation is in league with it. Every well informed man knows that for every dollar that this business puts into our national treasury it costs the American people seven dollars. And this is only the direct cost in dollars and cents. Only God in heaven knows how many homes have been blighted, lives destroyed and souls driven to torment. Who can tell the indirect cost of strong drink to our nation? In speaking of the liquor tax, I am reminded of a story I read in my boyhood days. A farmer was trying to fatten a herd of swine, using milk as their food. Though great pails of milk were poured into the trough every day, somehow the hogs did not fatten. This led to an investigation, when it was discovered that there was a great leak in the feed trough. Viewing it just from a money standpoint, how long can any nation, however wealthy or resourceful, stand such a great leakage?

It is not my purpose to detain the reader long just here. But permit me to say that as the Syrian king sought to invade Israel, first to plunder their coffers of gold and silver, then to blight the honor of both Israel and Judah, so King Alcohol, not content with our gold and silver, would blight our homes and pollute our sons and daughters. About twenty years ago there lived in the city of Chicago a fiend in human form. When his murderous deeds were known to men he was chased to his lair, brought before the seat of justice, tried, found guilty of murder, and condemned to die. Such was the fate of the multi-murderer, Herman Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes. Only about thirty persons perished at his hands; only a few cities and States felt his withering touch. But there is not a State in the Union, scarcely a city, town, or hamlet in all America, where the withering touch of alcohol has not left its cruel imprint. Oh! that every man in this vast domain would unsheath his sword, throw down his scabbard and make such a relentless war against this cruel curse that it will be forever banished from our civilization. Our annual output of gold and silver is enormous, but those things are not our greatest resources by any means. Our greatest resources are our girls and boys.

JUDGE LAMAR'S REVERENCE FOR THE SCRIPTURES.

In 1890, when he was on the Supreme Bench of the United States, Judge L. Q. C. Lamar delivered the Alumni Address at Emory College, where he had graduated nearly a half century before. The president of the institution at that time was Dr. (now Bishop) Warren A. Candler. On the day that Mr. Lamar was to speak Bishop Candler was escorting him to the chapel, when suddenly the great jurist told him that he expected in his address to refer to a Commencement sermon which he had heard preached at Emory in 1845 by Bishop Soule and said, "I want to be certain that I can quote the text correctly." He then repeated the words, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself," and asked if those were the exact words of the Scripture. Bishop Candler replied that he thought that they were, but said that he was not absolutely sure. Mr. Lamar then inquired if a Bible was accessible by which they might be verified. The Bishop told him that it would take but a moment to stop at his home and secure one. They stopped at the gate and Mr. Lamar remained in the carriage while the Bishop entered the house to procure a copy of the Scriptures. Upon his return it developed that the great orator and jurist had quoted the text with the utmost precision; and as a kind of apology for the trouble to which he had put President Candler, he remarked, "When I quote the words of our Savior, I feel that I must repeat them exactly as they fell from his lips."

For this interesting incident in the life of this illustrious Southerner, we are indebted to Bishop Candler, who some months ago related it to us. So far as we know, it has never before been in print. Such reverence for the Word of God in a man of Judge Lamar's fame and towering ability was certainly beautiful. And what a rebuke it is to ministers who neglect the Divine Revelation, or who misquote or carelessly misapply the utterances of the Mighty God who tabernacled in the flesh and spoke in the accents of human speech!

WILL SOUTHERN WOMEN STAND FOR THIS?

Recently Mr. O'Driscoll, an alderman in Denver, Colorado, submitted to the Council of that city a measure forbidding the saloons to sell intoxicating drinks to women, a proposal which was quite similar to the law that deals with this matter in New Orleans and the other cities of the South. One would have thought that such a proposed enactment would have been given the hearty support of the women suffragists of Colorado, since it is generally contended that women are much more ardent in their advocacy of prohibition than men, and this is one of the reasons most commonly urged why they should be granted ed the right to vote. But, on the contrary, Mr. O'Driscoll's measure met with violent opposition from the Colorado Equal Suffrage Association, as is attested by the following communication which was sent to the municipal authorities:

"To the Honorable Council of the City and County of Denver:

"Gentlemen—The following resolution was passed by the Colorado Equal Suffrage Association at its last meeting, and is herewith presented to your honorable body with the request that its provisions be granted:

"Whereas, the Colorado Equal Suffrage Association believes that men and women are equal before the law as citizens, and that any laws, either local or State, discriminating between men and women are a violation of the Constitutions of State and Nation, a restriction of the liberty of women citizens and their constitutional rights as citizens, and constitutes class legislation; and, "Whereas, the Colorado Equal Suffrage Association stands for a single standard of morals for men and women and is irrevocably opposed to any legislation, either local or State, that tends to establish a double standard of morals, which the world over has always been a contributing cause of immorality; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Colorado Equal Suffrage Association begs your honorable body to defeat by your votes the O'Driscoll bill which provides that it shall be a misdemeanor for proprietors to serve liquor to their women patrons."

It is well nigh inconceivable that fanaticism could so becloud the judgment of a body of worthy women as to lead them to take such action as this. Because men, for the present, cannot be shut out of saloons, that women must, therefore, be given the right to enter them and drink at the bar alongside of male toppers, is certainly a queer sort of logic for people who assert that they must be vested with the ballot in order to reform and save society. How can two wrongs make a right? What sense is there in swinging the door to temptation and ruin wide open to all because there are some against whom unfortunately, for the time being, it cannot be closed? Think of how much it would aggravate the already deplorable conditions in a city like New Orleans for all restrictions to be removed and men and women (negro women included) permitted to drink and carouse side by side in its thousands of dramshops! It is appalling to reflect upon what would be the certain result of such legislation.

Surely this outbreak of the women of Colorado is enough to make the women of the South hesitate before they commit themselves to a movement that is so wild as to lend its support to such a policy. We shall be much surprised if the splendid womanhood of Dixie does not show itself to be generally immune from this unhappy contagion which is sweeping over the West and North. Many of our most profound thinkers are becoming more and more convinced that if the American Republic is saved from the high-mountain waves of radicalism which are already menacing its safety, the conservatism of the South will have to do it. Let us remember that much depends upon us and see that we do not fail our country in this perilous hour.

NOT THE PLACE FOR THEM.

There are said to be more Methodist theological students in the Yale Divinity School at this time than of any other denomination. We do not know how many of these are from the M. E. Church, South, but doubtless there are some; and we suggest that they ought to be tested pretty thoroughly as to their doctrinal soundness before we turn them loose on our congregations. Why should a Southern Methodist preacher go to New England, the home of Unitarianism, Eddyism, and various other kinds of isms, to secure training for the work of soul-winning? If we may believe what we read, orthodox Christianity lacks much of being vigorous and aggressive in that section, and it would be more fitting for Methodist preachers to go there in the capacity of missionaries than of students.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The New Orleans District Conference will convene at 10:30 a.m. on April 17 in Bogalusa, and adjourn at 12 m. the following day.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, spent Sunday, March 16, with Rev. W. V. Shearer at Coffeeville, Miss., and preached two excellent sermons.

There was a meeting of the managers of the Seashore Camp Meeting last Tuesday for the purpose of planning for the camp meeting to be held there next June or July.

Reports published in the New Orleans daily papers last week were to the effect that our church at Provençal, La., was practically destroyed by a storm that passed over that section of the State on March 14.

We are requested to state that the Preachers' and Laymen's Missionary Institute of the Ruston (La.) District, which was announced to be held at Winfield from March 31 to April 2, has been changed to April 7-9.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College of Brookhaven, Miss., will spend next Sunday in New Orleans as the guest of Rev. J. L. Sutton. He will occupy the Louisiana Avenue pulpit both in the morning and at night.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., is spending a few weeks with his son, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., at Carriere. He has been preaching some at Carriere while tarrying there, and the congregations have been greatly edified by his sermons.

The Lafayette District Conference will convene in New Iberia, La., on May 19, and continue to May 22. Rev. R. H. Wynn, the capable presiding elder, will preside, and Rev. A. S. Lutz, the pastor at New Iberia, will be the host of the conference.

After having advertised for bids for the erection of their new church and having rejected them all, the building committee of the Crowley (La.) Church decided themselves to supervise the work of constructing the new edifice, instead of letting it out by contract.

The following brief but sad message was received from Rev. W. F. Rogers, pastor of our church at Sallis, Miss., last Monday: "A cyclone completely destroyed our church building here in Sallis last Thursday night. We are going to rebuild as soon as possible."

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Columbia, Miss., brought his daughter to the Touros Infirmary in New Orleans last week, at which place she underwent an operation. We are informed that the operation was successfully performed, and that the patient is now doing nicely.

Rev. H. J. Maddox, of Satartia, Miss., made glad the heart of the Publisher last week by sending in nine subscriptions to the Advocate and a check to correspond. Brother Maddox is not only doing good work for the Advocate, but is planning and working for a great revival meeting at Satartia.

The new church at Como, Miss., is practically completed. The congregation worshiped in the new building on the third Sunday of this month. Rev. J. B. Randolph, who is in the midst of his third year among the splendid people of Como, has wrought well in bringing to completion this handsome new church.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Sldon, Miss., who will be the host of the Durant District Conference, desires the pastors in the Durant District to send him a list of delegates as soon as possible. Brother Armour has already begun making preparation for the Conference, and the delegates may anticipate having a good time.

The Sardis District Conference will convene in Como, Miss., on April 17, and continue through the following Sunday. Bishop W. B. Murrah will preside. Rev. J. W. Dorman, the wide-awake presiding elder, has the work in his district well in hand and anticipates encouraging reports at the approaching conference.

Rev. W. W. Drake, Missionary Secretary of the Louisiana Conference and the popular pastor of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge, La., honored the Advocate office with a brief call one day last week. He reports that Rev. W. A. Mangum is doing a good work at Second Church in Baton Rouge, and that Rev. W. H. Coleman is an ideal presiding elder.

In the March 13th issue of the Advocate we stated that Rev. Cleanth Brooks of Lexington, Tenn., was a member of the Committee appointed by Bishop Morrison to inquire into the rumors concerning Dr. W. E. Thompson's alleged connection with the Collierville (Tenn.) bank failure. We have learned since that Brother Brooks was not a member of that Committee.

On Wednesday, March 19, Mr. John Stockwell and Miss Mary Lou Howell were married by Rev. K. W. Dodson in the Broad Street Church of Lake Charles, La. Brother Stockwell was recently accepted by the General Board of Missions for work in Africa, to which place he will be accompanied by his accomplished bride, who is a daughter of Mr. R. P. Howell, a local elder of Lake Arthur, La.

Mrs. W. B. Hogg, wife of Rev. W. B. Hogg, pastor of the Fernwood (Miss.) charge, underwent a serious operation at the Baptist Hospital in Jackson on March 19. The last word received at the Advocate office concerning her was to the effect that she was in a critical condition. Let prayer be made that this elect sister may be restored to health.

In a letter containing four renewals to the Advocate, Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Sallis, Miss., speaks encouragingly of his work there. He recently organized four Ladies' Aid Societies and they have already begun to secure funds for repairing the parsonage and the church buildings in the charge. He also reports a live Junior League at Sallis and growing Sunday schools.

We learn with pleasure that Sister A. D. Elder, who recently underwent a serious operation at the Baptist Hospital in Jackson, Miss., is steadily improving. Brother and Sister Elder are among our best people in Coldwater, Miss., and they have many friends in North Mississippi who are praying that God may sustain Sister Elder in this trying ordeal of sickness and soon restore her to her loved ones in perfect health.

Dr. J. W. Lee, the brilliant and versatile pastor of St. John's M. E. Church, South, of St. Louis, will lecture at the First Methodist Church of this city, on Wednesday evening, April 2, and at Parker Memorial Church on Thursday evening, April 3. The public is cordially invited to attend. Dr. Lee is one of the foremost lecturers in America, and a rare treat is in store for the Methodists of the Crescent City.

Mr. Frank M. Long, Secretary of the Louisiana State University Y. M. C. A., of Baton Rouge, and a member of our First Church there, recently volunteered to go to Brazil as a missionary. He has been accepted by the Board of Missions at Nashville and assigned to work in Granbery College in Brazil. He will do Y. M. C. A. and church work together and will be jointly supported by our Church and the Y. M. C. Association.

Easter Sunday was a day of large congregations and splendid results in nearly all the churches in New Orleans. Besides those who were received by letter, there were thirty-nine members taken into the Church on profession of faith. The largest number of accessions by one church was a class of twelve received by Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., into the Epworth Church. Rev. H. R. Singleton enrolled ten, which was the second largest class received.

Rev. J. G. Snelling reports that last Sunday was one of the best days enjoyed by the Carrollton Avenue congregation of New Orleans this year. In addition to suitable Easter decorations, which made the church auditorium present a most attractive appearance, the day was made notable by an unusually large audience and a cash collection of $115 toward the new church building fund. At the evening service, Bishop E. D. Mouzon occupied the pulpit and preached a masterful sermon to a large audience.

This week will be an unusually busy one in New Orleans Sunday school circles. The District Sunday School Convention was held in the Carrollton Avenue Church on Tuesday evening; Prof. M. A. Honline delivered a lecture to Sunday school workers at the First Church on Wednesday afternoon, and beginning Friday evening Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamill, of Nashville, Tenn., will conduct a Sunday school institute, which will close with a general rally at the First Methodist Church next Sunday afternoon.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, recently held a Missionary Institute at Ethel, La., in the Zachary charge. The Clinton and Jackson, East Feliciana, Wilcox, and St. Francisville charges sent delegates to the institute. The institute was conducted during the morning so that all the delegates could return to their homes the same day. The speakers were Rev. W. W. Drake and Mr. W. S. Holmes of Baton Rouge, and Rev. J. B. Williams of Clinton. There were about thirty delegates present.

Among those who have sent in two or more subscriptions during the last week, whose names are not mentioned elsewhere, are: Dr. T. C. Wier, Starkville, Miss., 11; Rev. W. W. Moore, Lyman, Miss., 9; Rev. R. T. Pickett, Carthage, Miss., 6; Rev. H. C. Murphy, Varnado, La., 5; Rev. A. S. Raper, Courtland, Miss., 5; Rev. W. M. Sullivan, Moss Point, Miss., 5; Rev. W. W. Hopper, Woodville, Miss., 5; Rev. E. S. Lewis, West Point, Miss., 4; Mr. T. J. Otts, Homer, La., 3; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., New Orleans, 2, and Mr. J. M. Harle, New Orleans, 5.

Rev. R. F. Harrell has made a most excellent beginning on the Centerville (Miss.) charge. The church at Centerville has been painted, and funds are in hand for papering it. The young men of the community have been brought closer together and meet regularly for social and athletic purposes. The congregation is completing arrangements for entertaining the Port Gibson District Conference. We acknowledge a cordial invitation to be present during the conference, which we shall be most happy to accept if possible.

Read Brother Williams' appeal in behalf of the Mississippi Orphans' Home which appears on page 4. This urgent call should meet with a prompt and generous response from the 115,000 Methodists of the Magnolia State.

In a personal letter to the Editor, Dr. S. A. Steel, the capable pastor of Washington Street Church of Columbia, S. C., says: "I am delighted with my work here. I find Columbia a beautiful city and the people royal in their hospitable spirit."

We are pleased to note that the Memphis Methodist Hospital enterprise is making steady headway. Do not miss Brother Ellis' interesting account of the meeting of the Trustees of this institution which may be found on page 12 of this week's issue of the Advocate.

Rev. A. J. Henry, the faithful pastor at Tishomingo, Miss., in a letter containing three subscriptions to the Advocate, inclosed a post card picture of our parsonage at that place, taken after the terrible storm that passed over that part of Mississippi last week. The parsonage was almost demolished, and Brother Henry and his family are now dependent on others for shelter. The damage done to property in Tishomingo amounted to near $50,000, and he estimates that the damage done within the bounds of his charge will total $100,000. Cash sent to Brother Henry would be money well spent, for not only is his family in need, but also many of his congregation.

The following message should receive the instant attention of every reader who is at all in a position to render aid: "The disastrous storm that swept over Pontotoc County last week has made us all sad. We have been working hard all day packing boxes with clothing for the score or more who have been left absolutely destitute. Among those who lost everything but the clothing they wore were Brother D. M. Floyd, our pastor at Randolph, and his family. His home and everything he had is gone. Who will send a cash contribution for this worthy brother and his wife? I will receive it and see that he gets it at once. You may send by return mail to your brother in Christ, Rev. W. D. Wendel, Pontotoc, Miss."

The following news item appeared in last Saturday's issue of the Magnolia (Miss.) Gazette: "Mrs. Julia Watkins, mother of Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church of Natchez, died at her home in Jackson on Thursday." We are, indeed, sorry to learn of the death of this elect woman. She was also the mother of Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, one of the teachers in Whitworth College at Brookhaven, Miss; Miss Janie Watkins, a teacher in the Haygood Memorial College of Soochow, China, and Hons. W. H. and H. V. Watkins, leading attorneys of Jackson, Miss. These worthy children of this noble woman have the sympathy of all who know them in this hour of sore bereavement.

In a personal letter to the Editor, dated March 22, Dr. Theodore Copeland, the popular pastor of the Cabanne Church of St. Louis, says: "Bishop Hoss came to see me this week. He said while here that he thinks he is in better physical condition than he has been in for two years." The Bishop is reported to have preached a great sermon at Battle Creek, Mich., before leaving there, and his future plans include the holding of the St. Louis District Conference at Washington, Mo., in April. He expects to attend the meeting of the Bishops and the General Boards in Dallas.

BROTHER MAYS' BAPTIST CLAIMS.

In the Times-Democrat of the 10th inst, Rev. L. T. Mays is represented as making very great claims for the Baptists in the Valence Street Baptist Church of New Orleans on March 9. One among those claims was that John the Baptist was the first Baptist preacher, and that when he baptized Christ, Christ went up straightway out of the water; seeming to forget that John was a Jew and as such was circumcised at eight days old and that he died (or rather was beheaded) before the Baptist Church was founded, since he and his crowd claim that it was founded on the day of Pentecost. He also ignores his own New Testament, which was made in 1865 and revised in 1883, in which we find (Matt. 3:16) that Christ came up from the water, and not up out of the water. "From the water" is right; for the preposition 'apo,' which occurs 600 times in the New Testament in 16 different senses or ways, is never used in the sense of immersion nor that of "up out of."

Another claim he made was that there were no Churches but the Baptist for 100 years after Christ. At this point one is left to wonder what went with them so soon! He then declares that Linus, who is thought to have been made Bishop of Rome about A. D. 66, was a Baptist, and all from him down to A. D. 325. First, he knows all were Baptists from John the Baptist for 100 years; then he knows all were Baptists from Bishop Linus down to 325 A. D., and then he mentions Constantine as uniting Church and State, and Sylvester of the 4th century. He then admits that the history of the Baptists was lost for centuries. In other words, the Baptist Church ceased in the face of the fact that Christ declared: "That thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my Church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18). One would naturally infer from all this that if the Baptist Church did exist so early and then disappear for centuries, as Brother Mays admits, it was not the Church of Christ, for he informs us that even the gates of hell shall not prevail against his Church. But they did prevail against the Baptist Church so completely as to blot it out of all history for centuries.

Another of his claims is that Isaac Newton was a Baptist, although he was an Arian and did not believe in the Trinity. He then can see that John Milton was a Baptist, who was also an Arian, never joined any church, and never was known visibly to worship God.

Another claim is that the Baptists in the United States number 7,000,000, if the Campbellites are included. Why did he not say also, "by including more negroes than any other Church?" He seems not to know that in Whitaker's World Almanac, published in London, denominations are thus numbered:

Methodists of all classes	18,600,000
Roman Catholics of all classes	15,500,000
Presbyterians of all classes	12,250,000
Baptists of all classes	9,230,000

These numbers do not include mere friends or infants, but communicants only. They are the numbers in the English-speaking religious communities of the world.

Another claim of Brother Mays for the Baptists is that they had a wonderful increase in membership last year, but he does not seem to remember that their increase was largely due to the fact that many of their members and ministers proselyte from other Churches, irrespective of how they get them—pull, shove, drag, offer inducements, misrepresent, declare more than is really true, worry, tease, torment, just whatever the case requires to get the member.

Another claim of his is that the Baptists are democratic. He overlooks the fact that Christ said "My kingdom is not of this world" (John 18:36), and, too, that Paul said: "Christ is the head of the Church" (Eph. 5:23), and again to the bishops of Miletus: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers" or bishops (Acts 20:28). Christ said to his disciples: "Go ye into all the world" (Mark 16:15), which does not mean wait till you get a call. Paul said: "Remember them which have the rule over you" (Heb. 13:7), but did not say those whom you rule that are over you.

Mrs. STOVIA IDA PRIME (nee Barlow) was born in Harrisville, Simpson County, Miss., Feb. 12, 1882, and departed this life Feb. 19, 1913. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when 14 years of age, and lived as a consistent member until she was translated to the Church above. She leaves a husband, Robert L. Prime, and two children. Two daughters preceded her to the eternal home of the blessed. It was only on the earthly side that death lay upon her like an untimely frost upon the fairest flower of all the field. On the heaven side, by faith, we believe that the splendor of our Father's smile has kissed away all the marks of frail mortality, and that the wife and mother stands glorified in endless felicity.

ROBERT H. BARR, P. C.

Mrs. WALTER W. SMITH (nee Bertha Maddux Hoover) was born in Carroll County, Miss., June 17, 1884. She joined the Church in early girlhood and was married to Walter W. Smith, of the Bluff Springs community, on Oct. 23, 1901. On her wedding anniversary, just eleven years later (Oct. 23, 1912), she took her departure for the mansions of light. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn her loss, an infant child having died just before she did. Hers was one of those sunny dispositions. Her words were always seasoned with grace, and reminded one that she had her conversation in heaven. She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and a consecrated Christian. The community at large realizes that a noble woman has fallen in Israel, and all hearts throb in sympathy for the bereaved ones in this hour of sorrow. May the husband and children, as they wait on this side, rest assured that she is waiting on the other, and may the sun break through the clouds of this dark day and dry their falling tears.

JOHN RITCHEY.

Mrs. Y. A. LEE (nee Ella Roberts) was born near Edwards, in Hinds County, Miss., on March 27, 1862. She spent her early life there and was married March 22, 1882, to Mr. T. A. Lee, one of Mississippi's most worthy sons. To them ten children were born, 3 of whom, with the husband, preceded her to the better land. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and was truly a good woman, one who evidenced in her life and character the power of the gospel of Christ. I knew her during the last few months of her life; the strength of her faith and the beauty of her submission to the will of God were a benediction to my soul. She died Feb. 27, 1913, in the triumph of a living faith. Among the bereaved ones are 2 daughters, 5 sons, a mother, 2 aunts and 3 uncles. May the tender memories and gentle influences of a beautiful Christian life ever remain to sweeten the lives of those who are left behind, lighting their paths here and brightening their hopes of an endless life, and may the God of all grace comfort and sustain every saddened heart. Her pastor, L. L. ROBERTS.

On March 4, 1913, we laid to rest all that was mortal of BEN JOHNSTON in the cemetery at Enon Church, of which he had been a faithful member and steward for a number of years. Truly, a good man has gone from among us. Brother Johnston was born on April 29, 1846, and died March 3, 1913. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Enon in 1873. The church had no member who was more faithful in attendance upon its ordinances. His moral influence was a power in the community in which he lived. Brother Johnston was a Mason and was buried with Masonic honors. No worthier brother ever wore the emblem of innocence or the badge of a Mason. He was married in Dec. 21, 1868, to Miss Amanda M. Carpenter. To them were born 11 children, eight girls and 3 boys. He leaves a wife and 8 children to mourn his going. We look forward to the time when we shall see him, together with others, on that beautiful shore. May the family from which our honored brother has departed be blessed with the presence of Him who alone can comfort them in this sad time of need.

G. W. McLAIN, Pastor.

Mrs. G. M. SHAFFER (nee Outz) was born in Georgia on Jan. 8, 1847, and died at her home near Gibsland, La., in the triumphs of the Christian faith, May 3, 1912. She was happily married to Mr. G. M. Shaffer, Feb. 3, 1870, and of this union were born twelve children—six boys and six girls. Sister Shaffer was converted early in life, and soon afterwards joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and from then until the day of her death, lived a consistent, useful Christian life. She loved her Church devotedly, and was always ready to do what she could to build up the cause of God in the community in which she lived. When called upon to do so, she would lead in public prayer, and the congregation was always impressed with the earnestness of her appeals and with the simplicity of her faith. In the death of Sister Shaffer the Church loses an exemplary member; the community, a true friend; the husband a faithful wife, and the children a devoted mother. May God comfort the sorrowing ones, and bring them all together again in heaven, where parting shall be no more.

J. O. BENNETT.

On Dec. 2, 1912, the Lord saw best to call to himself MARY F. ARMIDING BRIDGES, the wife of J. C. Bridges, of Bush, La. She was born in Cincinnati, June 26, 1848. She came with her parents to St. Tammany Parish in 1855. She was converted early in life and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at what is now called Waldheim, La. She married J. D. Heiten in 1868. There were no children to bless this union; but she raised one of her nephews, who was left an orphan when a baby (John Dave Thomas, who now lives at Bush, La.). Her husband died on Dec. 3, 1885. On Aug. 28, 1907, she was married to J. C. Bridges, whom she leaves behind to mourn her going. Mrs. Bridges was a faithful and devoted Christian. She delighted to do what she felt was her Christian duty. She bore her sufferings with patience, and was ready to go when the summons came. She died in Bogalusa, La., at the home of her brother, Mr. Otto Stratman, who is a steward in our church at that place. On account of the absence of her pastor, the funeral service was conducted by Rev. L. I. McCain. May God bless you, Brother Bridges, in your sorrow, and may he bless all her relatives.

T. V. PETERS.

Ebenezer Church, of Buena Vista charge, lost one of its most loved, honored and respected members when the death angel visited the home and summoned the sweet spirit of Mrs. JULIA VALLIANT to come up higher. Mrs. Valliant was born in Alabama, Mar. 3, 1838, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life, and was married to Mr. William Brewer in 1852, and to them a daughter was given. They were permitted to live together only one year, when Mr. Brewer was summoned to meet his God. Mrs. Brewer, after living a widow for some time, was married to Mr. J. D. Valliant, of McCondy, Miss. To them two sons and one daughter were given. For several years they were happy companions, when Mrs. Valliant was again left a widow. Her life was one of energy and thrift. She bore her trials with the fortitude that characterizes a true Christian life; was never impatient in her afflictions, always hoping to be better soon. For a few days before her death she was stronger, and retired feeling as well as usual, but never to awake in this world. Mrs. Valliant leaves two sons, eight grandchildren, several great-grandchildren, one great-great-grandchild, and many friends to mourn her loss. Our hearts go out in love and sympathy to the bereaved ones. May they look to Christ as their comforter.

A. FRIEND.

A TRIBUTE.

(Written for and adopted as the sense of the W. F. M. S. of Yazoo City, Miss.)

At the last monthly meeting of our society, we felt keenly the loss of one of our most faithful and efficient members, Mrs. F. G. HUDSON (nee Madie Fearn), who passed away January 6, 1913.

Mrs. Hudson had been identified with this society for many years, and had served loyally and lovingly in every capacity, the last of which was as the agent for The Missionary Voice.

Hers was a strong and valiant character; and for those who knew and loved her best she had a wealth of affection that gave itself out in loving words and deeds. From her noble example, we may learn "How sublime it is to suffer and be strong."

In far-away China there is a missionary brother, Dr. J. B. Fearn, who mourns the loss of this dear sister, whose influence, no doubt, helped in a great measure to mold and fit him for his great life-work. But with this dear brother we do not grieve as those who have no hope, for, while she has joined the angel choir, the memory of that sweet voice here on earth and that pure, consecrated life will help to bring us nearer "the land that is fairer than day," where we hope to meet her in the "sweet bye and bye."

Tidings From the Field

Mooringsport, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: Since coming to this charge I have received 16 members and raised $1000 toward building a new church at Vivian, La. Congregations are large and the interest manifest at both places is encouraging. We are just beginning a meeting at Mooringsport, with the assistance of my good friend, Rev. R. M. Brown, the efficient pastor of the Algiers (La.) Church. We expect to send you a list of new subscribers to your splendid paper in the near future.—C. M. Morris, P. C.

Sidon, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our work here is moving along nicely. The water is fast receding to within the river banks; farming has begun in earnest, and our people are hopeful. Recently I organized a Junior League at Cruger, with 17 members. This gives us a Junior League at Tchula, Cruger, and Sidon, and a Senior League at Sidon. We have three fine Sunday schools. Our attendance, both at the preaching services and prayer meetings, is good. We recently put in an individual communion service at both Tchula and Cruger. Dr. and Mrs. Armistead presented the congregation at Sidon with a beautiful individual communion service, which was greatly appreciated. Our people are looking forward to the District Conference as a time of spiritual refreshing. Our protracted meeting will follow the District Conference here in May. We will begin in Tchula the second Sunday in April and at Cruger the fourth Sunday in April. Our people are ever mindful of their pastor.—O. P. Armour.

Buena Vista, Miss.

We were pleasantly surprised again last Saturday at the parsonage. The good people of Pleasant Grove Church and community gave us another big pounding. We were the recipients of hams, sugar, coffee, molasses, lard, canned fruit, and many other good things to eat, among which was a nicely dressed fat hen. They believe that preachers are fond of chicken, you know, and don't you think they are right? I am sure they are. I take this method of thanking them for their thoughtfulness and kindness. The Lord has been good to us. There has been but one death among our membership since Conference, and the people are generally in good health. My health continues to improve. I have met all my appointments since I returned from Hot Springs. We were rained out last Sunday afternoon at Ebenezer. I went to the church, but it was too rainy for the people to turn out. Things seem to be running smoothly here, and we are praying and trusting for a great year. Our church at Egypt is in good repair, and we have the money to pay for painting it. We have not the language to express our appreciation of the many deeds of kindness that the good people here have done for us this winter, but our prayer is that we may be sufficient in God's hands to make of this a great year.—T. J. Durrett, P. C.

Pollock, La.

Dear Brother Meek: We have recently held our first quarterly conference. We had a most delightful one. Rev. H. W. May, our presiding elder, came and preached for us at 11 a.m., and immediately after the service the quarterly conference was held. He also preached at 7:30 p.m. on the subject of "Love," which was greatly enjoyed by all present. Brother May has endeared himself to our people. His visit among us and the soul-stirring sermons he preached while here were a great blessing to the whole community. Already the church seems to have taken on new life. It has been my privilege to serve the people on a part of this charge for two years, and I do not hesitate to say that I have as fine a people as you will find anywhere. But I must confess that I believe the Church and people generally are now awake to some things which, perhaps, they have never been before. Brother May seems to have every interest of the Church at heart. I predict that great improvement along all lines will be accomplished on the Alexandria District under his wise and careful leadership. I ask all the Advocate readers to pray for me and my people, that we may experience the best year of our life.—C. B. Powell, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God, our Father, Almighty, has in his infinite wisdom removed from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. M. E. LESSEL, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Woman's Home Mission Society has lost a faithful worker, the M. E. Church, South, a devoted member, and one more has been added to the vast throng assembled around the "Great White Throne."
2. That this Society extends deepest sympathy and condolence to the bereaved relatives and friends; and that these resolutions be spread on our minutes and a copy be sent to her granddaughter, Florence, and to the Pelahatchie Democrat.

MRS. J. M. ROSS,
MRS. C. K. JONES,
Committee.

A CORRECTION.

"Just to keep the record straight," allow me to call attention to one slight error in the Minutes of the last session of the Louisiana Annual Conference. In the financial table, the report from Mansfield shows a deficit of $4 in the assessment for Church Extension. The table should have shown that the assessment was $87 instead of $91, and was paid in full. Mansfield not only paid every assessment in full, but paid $184 in excess of the Orphanage assessment, increased the salaries of pastor and presiding elder, and paid nearly $3,000 on church and parsonage indebtedness. Mansfield is all right. So far as I can see, the Minutes are otherwise full, accurate and attractive in form. The Secretary and Editor are to be congratulated.
THOMAS H. MORRIS.

THE KIMBALL 88-NOTE Player-Piano

THE IDEAL INSTRUMENT for every member of the family, because it meets all requirements of both the piano and the player. The player mechanism is contained within the compass of the ordinary piano case and in no way interferes with the regular playing of the piano.

THE ADVANTAGES of the Kimball 88-Note Player are manifold in the simplicity of mechanism and the ease of operation, but of the greatest interest to music-loving people is its wonderful efficiency in musical effects.

COME AND SEE IT hear it. Let us demonstrate its wonderful possibilities, and at the same time tell you how you can own one of these celebrated instruments on almost your own terms.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT FOR FOR AN ELECT LADY.

"Once more the silver cord is loosed,
And the golden bowl is broken;
And the spirit wings its flight,
And the last farewell is spoken."

Whereas God, in his providence, has seen fit to remove from our Association Mrs. A. A. WILKINSON, whose earthly pilgrimage has ended a valued and useful life, one whose memory we delight to honor; therefore, be it resolved, That we, the Hernando (Miss.) Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, indorse the following:

We are called upon to chronicle the departure of our beloved sister, Lucy Wilkinson, who bade her last farewell to her large family of children and friends on Feb. 22, 1913, and winged her way to the heavenly repose. Sister Wilkinson's life was an open book. Looking back along the line of her pilgrimage, we see good works and sunshine on each side of it, making the way clear and plain, so her children and others can, without mistakes, follow in her footsteps the safe way to the promised land.

Few women have ever had a more elevating and ennobling influence upon the Society in which she spent her long and useful life. Hospitality marked her household. The Church and Sunday school felt the holy influence of her pure Christian spirit, and her children are bowing under loving sorrow at the loss of her whose heavenly influence always hovered about them, in whose heart they could always find comfort and consolation.

She was no ordinary woman, but one who possessed fine judgment and a well balanced mind; who was refined and gentle in her nature. No allurements ever drew her away from duty; no selfishness ever closed her hand at the call of charity; no whispering evil ever had entrance to her ears; no cruel gossip ever framed words upon her tongue; her heart was always full of love for mankind and her Savior.

At last the messenger came and said to her: "You have kept the faith, you have fought the good fight, you have won the victory, and I now place a crown of glory upon your brow. Your Savior says: 'It is enough, come up higher; he has room for you in his heavenly mansion.'" The messenger then took her and wafted her to the aerial domes of the eternally blessed.

Resolved, That a copy of this paper be strend upon the minutes and copies be furnished the New Orleans Advocate and the Times Promoter.

Signed, Mrs. R. L. Redding, Mrs. W. S. Weissinger, Mrs. R. C. Clifton, Mrs. C. D. Williams, Committee.

Say Goodbye To Pimples

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Will Drive Them Away. Creams Will Never Do It; They Can't.

No need for any one to have a complexion disfigured by pimples, blotches, liver spots, or black heads. Just clear the blood of impurities and they'll go away.

All My Friends Marvel at the Way
Stuart's Calcium Wafers Drove Those Ugly Pimples Away.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers cleanse and clear the blood, driving out all poisons and impurities. And you'll never have a good complexion until the blood is clean.

These little wafers may be used with perfect freedom. Science knows no more powerful blood cleanser. They are entirely free from harmful drugs or opiates. Your doctor prescribes these hundreds of times a year.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers go right into your blood. Their purifying beneficial effect upon the blood is felt throughout the body, not in a year or a month, but in a few days. You feel better all over because your blood, the life-giving fluid, is doing its work properly.

No matter how bad your complexion is, Stuart's Calcium Wafers will work wonders with it. You can get these little wonder-workers at your druggist's for 50 cents a package.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE METHODIST HOSPITAL BOARD.

The Board of Commissioners of the Tri-State Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., met in the First Methodist Church, at Memphis, Thursday, March 20, at 10 a.m., with Mr. J. H. Sherard, President; Mr. L. M. Stratton, Secretary; Mr. J. C. Ottinger, Assistant Treasurer; Mrs. St. John Waddell, Rev. H. B. Johnston, Rev. W. G. Hefley, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, Mr. J. R. Bingham, Colonel J. F. Smith, Mr. J. G. Sudbury, Rev. T. W. Lewis and H. M. Ellis present.

All actions of the Executive Committee were approved by the Board.

The report of the Field Secretary, H. M. Ellis, showed that $40,000 had been raised in cash and subscriptions during the year, bringing the total subscription to $75,000.

The Board heartily endorsed the plans of the Field Secretary for the coming year, namely: The enlistment of all the Sunday schools in the erection of an ample and thoroughly modern Children's Department, something greatly needed in these three or four States; and the apportionment of the total cost of the hospital to the various Conferences, districts and charges, with the hope of having these apportionments accepted as their proper share.

The Board took up this second suggestion at once and determined to ask for $300,000 to be paid within the next two years, and this was apportioned among the four Conferences as follows: Memphis Conference, $150,000; North Mississippi Conference, $75,000; Mississippi Conference, $50,000, and White River Conference, $25,000. The Commissioners from each Conference were asked to apportion this to the districts, and the presiding elder will be asked to apportion his amount to the several charges in his district. This is not by any means to be considered an assessment, but it is simply saying, "In our judgment, this is your share of this Church institution, and we ask you to accept, and pay it." We are confident that, when our people know what their duty is, they will do it.

The name Tri-State Methodist Hospital was found to be too restricted, as several large counties of Kentucky are in the Memphis Conference, and, hence, share in the enterprise. In justice to these, as well as because of preference for the shorter and more comprehensive name, the name of the institution was changed to Methodist Hospital. This excludes none, but embraces all.

The Executive Committee was instructed to proceed at once to employ an architect and secure plans for a building. The Board expects to be able to begin actual construction as soon as the lot is paid for and $75,000 is in hand in good subscriptions. That time is not far distant. Let our people pray that it make haste, and let their liberality toward this blessed enterprise prove the sincerity of their prayer.

H. M. ELLIS, Field Secretary.

Years of Suffering

Catarrh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarrh."

Liver Sluggish? Go To Your Doctor

"How are your bowels?" This is generally the first question the doctor asks. He knows what a sluggish liver means. He knows that headaches, bilious attacks, indigestion, impure blood, are often promptly relieved by a good liver pill. Ask him if he approves of Ayer's Pills. Then follow his advice.

The Size and Number of the Bolls You Harvest Depend on How You Feed the Plants

Whatever the nature of your soil, its natural supply of available potash will not meet the full demands of a big cotton crop.

POTASH

A fertilizer should contain at least 3 to 4 per cent. of actual potash for heavy soils, and 5 to 7 per cent. for light soils. Goods with 1 or 2 per cent. potash are out of date. Provide early for your Kainit requirements for side dressing, and thus insure against blight and rust.

Potash Pays, especially in rotations with cotton, corn and peas, where the potash demand is much heavier than with cotton alone. We sell Potash in any quantity from one 200-pound bag up.

NOT A DAY IN BED.

Gramling, S. C.—In a letter from Gramling, Mrs. Lula Walden says: "I was so weak before I began taking Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Since taking it, I do all the housework for my family of nine, and have not been in bed a day. Cardui is the greatest remedy for women, on earth." Weak women need Cardui. It is the ideal woman's tonic, because it is especially adapted for women's needs. It relieves backache, headache, dragging feelings, and other female misery. Try Cardui. A few doses will show you what it can do for you. It may be just what you want.

ATTENTION!

First Vice-Presidents of Mississippi Conference.

Mrs. T. B. Clifford, Conference First Vice President, has a few pertinent remarks to make to the auxiliary officers. She says that 20 auxiliaries failed to report during the fourth quarter, and that in the future she will publish the names of all delinquent societies so they may know that no report from them reached her office. If there is no financial report, send a statistical report. Only 40 Baby Rolls out of 32 reported any money from mite boxes. Of the 37 Jeveville Societies, only 11 sent money to the Conference Treasurer. First Vice-Presidents must send children's money to both Treasurers and divide it according to our By-Laws and Constitution. This matter is not optional but obligatory. Mrs. Clifford has organized a good Mission Study class at McComb City, which has 14 members. We know our children's work is advancing along all lines, but there is room for improvement. At our Annual Meeting at Hattiesburg, April 25-30, the Children and Young People will have charge on Saturday, April 26. We hope that our First Vice Presidents will keep that in mind and try to get the children present on that day.

Mrs. Clifford's address has been changed from Yazoo City to McComb City and she urges each District Secretary to send her a correct list of children's societies in each district, so that she can see if their lists tally with hers.

Silver City Auxiliary.

We are indebted to Mrs. W. E. Campbell, Press Superintendent of the Silver City Home Mission Society, for a most excellent report of the work done by that auxiliary since its organization in 1905. The first undertaking was the erection of a parsonage. Our women always find a way to raise money and these women proved to be no exception, for $485 was the result of their labors. Giving their notes for the balance needed, a house with 4 rooms was soon erected. Since 1906 they have spent $910 on their church and parsonage. Of this amount $225 was received from the Woman's Board. They have sent a cash offering of $1 per month for three years to the Orphanage. One year they sewed for the orphans, making six dozen shirts. The church has been painted and plankwalks put around both the church and parsonage. Two years after building the parsonage two rooms were added and some furniture bought. The average membership of this society has been eighteen, and there are not more than thirty-five homes in this little village. All of this work has been done under the wise leadership of our president, Mrs. C. T. Partie. This shows what a consecrated band of women can accomplish.

Don't Forget the Meeting of the Missionary Council!

We again call attention to the date and place of meeting of our Woman's Missionary Council. The date is April 9-17, and the place is the First Methodist Church in Birmingham, Ala. The women of the Council need your most earnest prayers. Don't forget them in your daily petitions. Pray mightily that God's will may be done in our great Council meeting.

The "Daily Council" will be edited by Mrs. A. L. Marshall, and subscriptions for the "Daily" should be sent to her at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Marshall will be assisted by Mrs. F. F. Stevens of Columbia, Mo., and Miss Estelle Haskin, of Nashville, Tenn. The price is only 25 cents, and it is greatly desired that all subscriptions be in the hands of the editor before April, in order that a complete mailing list may be compiled before the annual session of the Woman's Missionary Council.

Indianola Auxiliary Falls Into Line.

The Indianola Auxiliary has made a fine contribution to a worthy cause through one of its members. The member wished to undertake some special work, so she wrote, through the Corresponding Secretary, for instructions as to how to assume the support of a Bible woman or a scholarship. These two specials are now obsolete, having been superceded by the "State Plan," which can be used in any of our foreign stations. The next letter stated that Mrs. Grider would take shares to the amount of $50 for the enlargement of McTyre Institute, and the money has been sent for that purpose. The Conference Pledge has been increased by that amount and the general work advanced, whereas by a scholarship neither of these purposes would have been served. Should the women learn that our missionary schools are sought after now, and that inducing patronage by means of scholarships is not so necessary as it formerly was, then they will be willing for their special contributions to go to enlarge the general work.

COR. SEC., FOREIGN DEPT.

Auxiliary Presidents.

Have you appointed an agent to secure subscriptions for the Council Daily in your auxiliary? Time is short. Let us act quickly.

Noel Memorial, Shreveport, La.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the J. S. Noel, Jr. Memorial Methodist Church have sent out original invitations for an Easter "Towel Shower." Having been in Baton Rouge attending the Louisiana Annual Meeting, we overlooked this communication, which explains its failure to appear before Easter. We are very sorry this occurred and hope even though the date of the "shower" has passed, that donations will still be acceptable. "Large or small, or thick or thin," they say.

"Receiving then this small request, Do not a moment dread it; But promptly send the towel along, And you shall have the credit."

Sent by Mrs. Vesa Russell, 409 Egan Street, Shreveport, La.

Jennings, La.

Mrs. A. P. Holt and Mrs. R. H. Wynn are planning to visit Jennings in the near future. The Home Mission Society of the Methodist Church will tender a reception to the women of the congregation and these two consecrated, enthusiastic workers will address those present. May it be a large gathering. After this visit we expect to hear that the Jennings society has "taken on new life." Our women need to be enthused and stirred up, and it takes women like these to do it.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mr. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn., Chairman of our General Sunday School Board, says that the biggest room in most Sunday schools "is the room for improvement." This room can be filled by any school, more or less rapidly, that will go at it. Some of these rooms may be filled by the pastor, some by the officers, some by the teachers, and some by all combined.

Mrs. J. W. Langford, of Gibsland, has her class of Junior girls to come to her home on week-days to do the supplemental work that cannot be so well done at the regular recitation periods for lack of room and time. All acknowledge that thirty minutes a week is a very limited time in which to teach a whole scheme of Bible knowledge and to give an adequate system of religious training. Mrs. Langford's plan suggests one way of solving the difficulty.

Mrs. Minnie Ruffin recently organized a new adult class of ten in Monroe. Only one of her class was ever a Sunday school scholar before, and one of its members is 75 years old and has never been a church-goer except to hear special noted preachers. Mrs. Ruffin has been a member of John R. Pepper's Sunday school, and teaches in the public school in Monroe. She is, therefore, qualified to magnify the work to which she has been so recently called, and we shall expect to hear good things from this class.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Rev. O. G. Halliburton, of Holly Bluff, has organized a new Sunday school at Lindsay with twenty-four scholars, five officers and teachers, and has already raised $13.27 for expenses.

A most cordial note from Dr. Featherstun, presiding elder of the Newton District, says: "The date of our District Conference has been changed from April 8-11 to April 15-18, so as not to conflict with the State Sunday School Convention at Gulfport. The Sunday school interests must have special attention. Arrange a program for Wednesday night. Make it live and strong!" We thank you, Dr. Featherstun, both for the change of date and for this invitation.

There is also a card on our desk from the newly-appointed presiding elder of the Jackson District, Brother Hardin, asking that a program for his district conference be prepared, and that the speakers also be selected. These items are gratifying, as they indicate that the presiding elders fully recognize the great importance of this work. If 85 per cent of all our church members come from our Sunday schools, surely we are short-sighted if we do not give it first place in our thoughts and plans. Thanks to Brother Hardin!

A few days ago there was held in Brookhaven a most interesting service. The Graded Union, presided over by Miss Emily Jones of that city, held a public meeting in the Peripatetic Hall. About fifty ladies and every pastor, save one who was out of the city, were present. Mrs. Sue Brame, of Jackson, Elementary Superintendent of the State Sunday School Association, was the speaker of the occasion. Various phases of the Elementary work of Sunday schools were discussed, questions asked and answered, light refreshments served, and a new impetus given to Sunday school work in Brookhaven. The value of such conferences cannot be estimated.

Rev. Robert Selby, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, has been in consultation with the chairman of the Board, arranging a tour of his district in the interest of the Sunday schools. The plan is to select strategic points in the district and concentrate the Sunday school workers for a two days' institute. A most capital idea! Brother Selby is new in this office, but he "knows a good thing when he sees it." We anticipate that this will be the most successful year in the history of the Brookhaven District.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

An Adult Bible Class Federation should be a simple, flexible body of organized classes, definitely related to the Bible Study movement. It should (1) Promote the organization of other classes; (2) improve; (3) strengthen those already organized; (4) compel the keeping of statistics and make helpful reports; (5) keep a permanent record of the work of all classes; (6) make social surveys of the field; (7) inaugurate plans for publicity; (8) cultivate Christian brotherhood; (9) conduct evangelistic work, home visitation campaigns, and engage in social service reforms and activities; (10) awaken a larger interest in Christian conquest. The next question is—the value of such a federation to a State or Conference.

Many requests are being made for programs for Adult Bible Class Day on March 30. The real reason that programs have not been prepared is the intense desire to bring out all the latent resources and fineness in these classes by leaving them to make an original program. We also desire that every program, with a report of its results and enthusiasm, be sent to the Field Secretary. What would be finer for such a program than a social service survey of the town and suggestions as to the way the class can help improve conditions? Might not some class have a great Foreign Missionary program, and perhaps tie that class to some of our needy mission fields? How appropriate and helpful would be a "Big Brother" program! How happily appropriate would be a real Adult Bible Class program, giving the story of its work, its future, its methods, and its personal evangelism! Our Conference has more than a few great classes, and many eyes are watching the personal touch they will give to this, their day. All the Adult Classes in the school might celebrate the day together, and thus begin in a small way the federation that we hope will be in full sway by this time next year.

For several weeks Rev. Jas. H. Felts, a busy pastor, has been arranging for a Boys' Class, comprehending the tenets of the faith of the best boy ideals and methods in the country. He has taken several "hikes" with his class and the interest is at white heat. They have organized themselves as a Junior Wesley Adult Bible Class and have their officers, button, yell and pass-word. Taylor Bynum is president, and Dudley Wilson, secretary. One fine boy, Boothe Delp, will make a suitable class table with his own hands and present it to the class. Mr. Felts was the originator of the Young Men's Bible Class in his former pastorate and if he crowns this year's work with a boys' class of equal magnitude, he will have left for himself a monument more lasting than the stately marble shaft. To further this initial effort the Young Men's Bible Class gave an oyster supper at the Waldron Hotel, February 25, 1913, each man taking a boy. Short, to-the-point speeches were made and there was a fine feeling of friendship between "The Oakes" and "The Acorns." The banquet was a genuine success in every way. The only way to have the boys is for each man to look after a boy, love him, and lead him, and to remember that boys need models, and not critics.

CLARKSDALE METHODISM.

Dear Brother Meek: I am glad to report that things Christian and Methodist are on a better basis, by far, than ever before here in Clarksdale. The fact is there have always been good, true, and loyal men in Clarksdale, though many have thought to the contrary.

When I came to Clarksdale, some three years ago, I soon saw that the great trouble with Clarksdale lay in the fact that many of her citizens had cut God out of account and were living as though there were no superior authority above themselves. Even many church members, who where they had hailed from had been faithful in their support of the institutions of the Church, after coming to Clarksdale, became so submerged in the spirit of worldliness prevalent here, that they apparently forgot the existence of God. Having thus diagnosed the case I could easily understand why Brother Duren's effort to build that $35,000 church did not succeed. Under the circumstances any man would have failed, or if he had succeeded in building the church, would have left such a debt and so much dissatisfaction, after the first flush of enthusiasm had gone, that the last state of the church would likely have been worse than the first—that is, for some eight or ten years after.

Realizing the above facts I have had but little to say about building that church, and when I have mentioned it, I have done so by impressing the fact that God needed the church to adequately carry on his business here in Clarksdale, rather than by appealing to the pride of our people to get them to build. My supreme effort has been to build up a spiritual church here in Clarksdale, for, whatever worldly-wise men may say to the contrary, that is the supreme need, not only of Clarksdale, but also of every other town or city it has been my pleasure to know anything about. We have also had pastors of other churches who recognized the same need and who worked and prayed for the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit upon our town.

When I came to this people they had been paying a salary of $1350 to their pastor. Though they made the assessment for my salary but $1350 the first two years of my stay here, they paid me $1500 yearly. This year, with an assessment of $1500, it is the purpose of the board to pay me $1800, and then next year make this an $1800 appointment.

Our Sunday school is on the best basis ever known for Clarksdale. The year previous to my coming, there was an average attendance of about 55 at Sunday school. Since then two Sunday schools have been organized out of our Sunday school, which took about 50 of our pupils; still on last Sabbath we had an attendance of 100. Our attendance at the church services and at prayer meeting is also on the increase. On last Sabbath we used, for the first time, an individual communion service presented to our church by our Board of Stewards.

Our Women's societies are doing better work than ever before. The fact is, everything of a religious nature in all the churches of our little city seems to be taking on new life; for renewed interest in things religious is not manifest in the Methodist church alone, but it is apparent in all the churches.

Beginning with the first Sabbath of April, Brother J. B. Culpepper and son will begin a meeting with us. We are praying for and expecting large results from this meeting and we crave the prayers of all God's people that we may be blessed with a season of spiritual power and refreshing.

A WORLD-WIDE BLESSING.

Since 1820, when Dr. W. F. Gray of Raleigh, N. C., first introduced Gray's Ointment to the public, the use of this truly excellent salve has continued to spread until it is now relieving suffering humanity in nearly every civilized country on the globe. It is now considered by prominent physicians everywhere to be the quickest, surest and safest cure for boils, bruises, burns, carbuncles, cuts, poison oak, old sores, ulcers and skin diseases of every nature, and most efficient in preventing blood poison. Dr. Jas. R. Phelps, Dorchester, Mass., says: "Gray's Ointment is my sheet anchor in cases of carbuncles, unhealthy granulations and blood poison. I use Gray's Ointment in my practice." A free sample of the ointment can be had by anyone addressing Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn. 25c a box at druggists or direct by mail from the manufacturer.

THE WAY TO THE SPIRITUAL HEIGHTS.

One of the most luminous parables spoken by our Lord is that of the Talents. Its main teaching is that every man is endowed with capacity and opportunity for service to God and humanity, and that he is under a law of accountability for the use that he makes of them, from which there is no escape. There is but one way for a person to increase his talents, and that is to "trade with them," to use them in harmony with the divine will. To misdirect them is, in effect, to bury them. Any sort of life that finds its aim and end in self is worse than wasted. Not only are its energies and possibilities irrecoverably lost, but it also leaves the soul at last face to face with the day of reckoning, bankrupt and ruined.

The only life worth living is that which spends its strength for others. Such a career brings the highest attainable satisfaction on earth, ennobles and expands the soul, and fits it for loftier ministries in the sky. Literally true, though hard for human beings to accept, is that paradoxical statement to which the Master more than once gave utterance: "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." As some one, in substance, has said, the brightest names in the history of the Christian Church are those who forgot themselves into an earthly immortality. And these also are they who shall be the most exalted and honored among the countless hosts of the redeemed.

DISASTROUS STORMS AND FLOODS.

Within the past two or three weeks disastrous storms and floods have occurred in several States of the Union. The commonwealths most stricken have been Nebraska, Illinois, Ohio, and Indiana; but our own section has by no means escaped. Both Louisiana and Mississippi have been visited by destructive tornadoes which have left ruin and suffering in their paths. The aggregate loss of property over the country will foot up millions of dollars, while the loss of human life, though not as large as was at first indicated, has been sufficient to attract national attention. We deeply sympathize with those who have in any way been touched by these disasters, and it is gratifying to see that many of our people are seeking to render them financial assistance. The beautiful spirit of philanthropy called forth by such misfortunes is, in some measure at least, a compensation for the injuries that they inflict.

But why should there be any such occurrences in a world in which, we are told, there is no such thing as chance? This we cannot know in the present life. Man's intellectual sky is overcast by no darker cloud than the problem of moral and physical evil. Despite all their boasted learning, our philosophers have not been able to pierce it through with a single ray of light. And Revelation enters upon no explanation of this perplexing question. It is left for the future. The utmost that we can do is to trust in God, believing that the final outcome of all earth's confusion and struggles and tragedies will fully vindicate the divine wisdom. Of one thing we may be sure: nothing can really harm the sincere Christian. Even death can only bring him blessings. Perhaps it is because, with his larger outlook, he sees how comparatively trivial these temporal misfortunes are in the eternal career of his children, that the Heavenly Father does not intervene to avert them.

UNBROTHERLY CRITICISM.

From an editorial in the Baptist Record of March 27, we take the following:

"Last week there appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate a notice of 'An Essay on Baptism,' by Rev. Jno. D. Ellis, a Methodist preacher, of Jackson, Miss. Immediately a copy of the book was secured. On the fourth page is found this sentence: 'It is also true that in the two places in the Old Testament where baptizo occurs, it is translated wash at one place (2 Kings 5:14), and affright at Isa. 21:4.' On turning to the first passage referred to, in the King James version and the English Revised and in the American Revised Version we found these words: 'Then went he down and dipped himself seven times in the Jordan.' If a man deliberately misrepresents what the Bible says in this way, how can you believe anything that he says about the Bible? How can a man be tolerated in the ministry who is guilty of saying a thing that anybody who can read at all can disprove by turning to the place referred to and seeing for himself?"

The Editor of the Record is technically correct in the statement that the word "dipped" occurs in 2 Kings 5:14; but three times in the immediate context the word "wash" is used in describing the action that Naaman was to perform in order to be cleansed of the leprosy. The passage as a whole fully sustains Brother Ellis' contention that the idea of ceremonial cleansing or purification was outstanding in that memorable occurrence. His error was an insignificant one, which does not at all affect the strength of his argument. Concerning this passage, the scholarly Dr. Thomas O. Summers, in his work on Baptism (page 224), says: "In 2 Kings 5:14, our translators render the word 'dipped'; but as the action expressed by 'tabal,' 'baptizo,' in the 14th verse, is what Elisha commanded in the 10th verse, by the use of the Hebrew, 'rahats,' 'louo,' to wash, 'Go wash in Jordan seven times and thou shalt be clean,' there is no necessity of supposing that Naaman plunged himself in the river, but, rather made a seven-fold application of the water to his person; and so Jerome understood the text, rendering it, 'lavit in Jordane.'"

But our purpose in referring to this matter is not to take the discussion out of the hands of Brother Ellis. He is abundantly able to take care of himself. Our object in noticing it is to call attention to the unjust character of Brother Lipsey's criticism. We submit that there was nothing in Brother Ellis' inconsequential error, which was manifestly merely an oversight, to warrant our confrere in accusing him of 'deliberate misrepresentation' and of insinuating that he is not fit to be 'tolerated in the ministry.' When men are designedly trying to mislead others they usually deal in general statements and do not give specific references to which any one may turn in a moment, as Brother Ellis does in his pamphlet. Moreover, his years of service and high character as a Christian minister should have given him exemption from so quick and unbrotherly an impeachment of his motives. Indeed, in view of all the circumstances, the unjust and unkind attack of the Editor of the Record recoils upon himself, and shows that when he made it he was lamentably lacking in that charity that "thinketh no evil." Surely a preacher of one denomination ought to be able to debate with the representative of another even the irritating subject of baptism, without classifying him with untruthful and unprincipled men and reading him out of the kingdom. We are inclined to think it must have been an off-day physically with our gifted college-mate when he penned this unchristian editorial.

WHEREFORE THIS PAPER?

We have lately received a copy of The Dixie Methodist, a paper issued bi-monthly at Milton, Fla., and edited by Rev. J. C. Harrison, a member of the Alabama Conference. The question that naturally arose in our mind when we picked up this journal was, Why should it be published? The Methodists of Florida, who number approximately 35,000, have an official organ, The Florida Christian Advocate, which they carry an assessment of $2500 to maintain. The Alabama Conference also has an official organ, The Alabama Christian Advocate, which is published at Birmingham, and which is in urgent need of a larger patronage and support. What justification, then, is there for a privately owned and published Methodist paper within the territory of either of these Conference organs?

It is unusual in such cases for the person behind the independent paper to say that he has no purpose to injure the circulation of the authorized church journal, but notwithstanding his disavowal of any such intention, the influence of an additional publication unavoidably has that effect. We dare say that the subscription files of our church periodicals will show that when any kind of a paper is started under Methodist auspices within the territory of one of our Conference organs, it loses patronage in the locality where the new journalistic venture is undertaken.

The truth is, we need some wholesome legislation regulating our general publishing interests. Before a Methodist congregation can build a church, it must go to the quarterly conference and obtain permission. Before a person can establish a Methodist school, he must have the approval of our Boards of Education and the Annual Conference within whose bounds it is to be located. But the field is wide open for any person, upon his own initiative, to start a Methodist paper. Surely we have been running loose in this important department of our work long enough, and it is high time that we were taking steps to remedy the present chaotic condition of things.

Dropped balm of love in many an aching heart;
Now, stirless, folded like wan rose leaves pressed
Above the snow and silence of her breast.
In mute appeal they told of labors done,
And well-earned rest that came at set of sun.

From the worn brow the lines of care had swept
As if an angel's kiss, the while she slept,
Had smoothed the cobweb wrinkles quite away,
And given back the peace of childhood's day.
And on the lips the faint smile almost said,
"None knows life's secret but the happy dead."
So gazing where she lay, we knew that pain
And parting could not cleave her soul again.

And we were sure that they who saw her last
In that dim vista which we call the past;
Who never knew her old and laid aside,
Remembering best the maiden and the bride,
Had sprung to greet her with the olden speech,
The dear, sweet names no later lore can teach.
And "welcome home" they cried, and grasped her hands,
So dwells our mother in the best of lands.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

(The information given below has been gathered from authoritative sources, and is, we think, reliable. That which relates to the States of the American Union was furnished by the Education Bureau at Washington, D. C., which obtained it from the various State Superintendents of Public Instruction, to whom should be credited any comments that are made. We shall give in the next issue of the Advocate some information as to the methods employed for imparting moral instruction to students in the schools of other foreign countries. We regard this matter as one of vast and far-reaching importance.—Editor of the Advocate.)

UNITED STATES.

District of Columbia.—Bible read and Lord's Prayer repeated.

Kentucky.—Generally read.

Tennessee.—The Bible is our rock of public safety.

Alabama.—Custom in our schools neither enjoins nor forbids.

Maine.—Bible read in schools for 270 years.

New York.—Read daily for 250 years.

New Hampshire.—Read daily since 1623.

Vermont.—We encourage Bible reading in the schools.

Mississippi.—The Bible is not excluded, and is generally read.

Michigan.—Ditto.

Arkansas.—Read in part of the schools.

Texas.—Read in some schools.

Oregon.—Ditto.

West Virginia.—No law prohibiting Bible-reading.

Florida.—Ditto.

Delaware.—Bible reading universal.

Pennsylvania.—The Scriptures must not be omitted.

New Jersey.—Read in nearly all schools.

Georgia.—The Bible cannot be excluded.

Connecticut.—The Bible has always been read.

Massachusetts.—For 278 years the Bible has been read in the schools. The State law says: "A portion of the Bible must be read daily, without note or oral comment." Many schools repeat the Lord's Prayer.

Maryland.—Read daily in our schools.

South Carolina.—Generally read.

Rhode Island.—Universal custom to read the Scriptures.

Indiana.—The Bible shall not be excluded.

South Dakota.—May be read without sectarian comment.

Virginia.—Read in nearly all schools.

Ohio.—We thoroughly believe in it, as it has a good influence upon our children.

Missouri.—Optional; character-building is an important factor with us.

Nebraska.—Encourage moral culture; generally read.

Kansas.—Read in part of our schools.

Wyoming.—Left to local boards to decide.

Colorado.—Read in some schools.

New York City.—Rule for Bible reading, a custom which has probably been observed for three centuries: "All the schools of this city (New York) . . . shall be opened with a reading of the Holy Scriptures, without note or comment."

West Virginia.—No law to prohibit Bible reading in schools.

North Carolina.—Bible generally read; Lord's Prayer said.

Iowa.—Bible not to be excluded from any school or institution in this State.

North Dakota.—May be read without sectarian comment ten minutes daily.

Philadelphia.—Ten verses of the Bible shall be read daily without note or comment, to the pupils by the principal.

CANADA.

Quebec.—There are Roman Catholic State Schools and Protestant State Schools, each supported out of taxation on their own respective properties and Government grants. The Bible is read compulsorily in Protestant Public Schools.

Ontario.—The Scriptures shall be read daily and systematically; the portions used may be taken from the book of Scripture Selections adopted by the Department for that purpose, or from the Bible, as the Trustees by resolution may direct. The Ten Commandments are repeated once a week.

New Brunswick.—May be read by teachers at opening or close of school; no instruction, simple reading of a chapter without comment.

Saskatchewan.—The local Boards may permit religious instruction in schools.

EUROPE.

Great Britain.—Religious Instruction is regularly given in school hours, and the objection to any children attending such instruction is one of theory, not of practice. Few are withheld from such instruction—a percentage certainly not worth recording.

Under the London School Board religious instruction is given for half an hour every day, but it has been recently resolved that a thorough and detailed examination in Scripture knowledge should be held in each school once in three years, conducted by the Board's Inspectors.

In Birmingham, the original home of purely secular instruction, the Bible was for some years excluded by the Board from their schools, but has since been re-introduced, and is now read daily.

Edinburgh.—Optional; syllabus used, read 30 minutes daily. No conscience clause for teachers, but for scholars.

Glasgow.—Religious Instruction daily; Board provides syllabus. The Ten Commandments and precepts in Book of Proverbs, etc., committed to memory.

Ireland.—Either Douay or Authorized Version is read, and each school furnished with a "Ten Commandments Tablet," to be hung on the wall.

Austria.—Two hours per week are devoted to religious instruction.

Belgium.—Two hours are given to moral instruction per week.

Prussia.—Four hours per week.

Berlin.—Ditto.

Hamburg.—Two hours per week.

Germany.—Banished the Bible from her schools, but has now restored it.

France.—Moral instruction is given for three hours per week.

AFFAIRS AT VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

The supplementary lectures this year on the Cole Lectureship Foundation of Vanderbilt University were delivered March 19-22, by Edward J. Banks, a noted archaeologist, whose wide travel and work in the Far East have rendered him well fitted for the lectures he is giving. Dr. Banks illustrates his lectures with pictures, and this secures him the most careful attention and interest on the part of his audience. These lectures were generally attended by those in the University community and outside circles, and were pronounced thoroughly instructive and entertaining. The following subjects were discussed: "Turkey and the Turks," "To the Summit of Mt. Ararat," "Palestine, Old and New," "Bismya, or the Lost City of Ahab," "Assyria and Its Ruins," "The Long-Lost Hittites."

The Cole Lectures proper will be delivered May 3-8, by Dr. G. A. Johnston-Ross of the Union Theological Seminary of New York City, the youngest man that has ever delivered this course at Vanderbilt.

Dr. B. E. Young, Professor of French in Vanderbilt University, is attending a meeting of professors of French of the universities and colleges of the United States, held in New York City. The meeting is to be presided over by Mr. Jusserand, the Ambassador from France, and a number of delegates from France will be present. On Saturday, the 29th, Dr. Young will attend the meeting of the general Federation de L'Alliance Francaise in that city, and at this meeting there will be representatives from all parts of the United States and Canada.

M. Alcee Fortier, a professor in Tulane University and Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur, lectured Thursday afternoon before the Alliance Francaise of Nashville. Some of the University community had the privilege of hearing the lecture. His subject was the Chateau de Chambord.

There has never been such interest in various literary activities at the University as at the present time. In addition to the Calumet Club, which has been in existence for several years, and which is composed of those who are especially gifted in writing, there have been organized this year the Spectator Club, composed of those who are looking toward journalism as a career, and at least three other clubs for the special study of literature—standard and current. The Hustler and the Observer, student publications, give evidence of the influence of these organizations.

The spring holidays this year will be given April 3-5. During this season, on April 5, comes Concor Day, when from a list of sixteen competitors will be selected eight speakers, four to compete for the Young Medal on April 11, and four to compete for the Founder's Medal in Oratory on May 27.

Acting Registrar.

WHICH IS THE BETTER EXPLANATION?

By Rev. J. H. Holder.

Was Jesus "three days and three nights in the heart of the earth" as he himself stated he would be (Matthew 12-40), or was he there only one day and two nights, according to tradition? This statement has puzzled me much, the Oriental explanation as to the manner of reckoning time notwithstanding. Had there been no other statement but that "he would arise" on the third day, that might seem plausible. But shall we "make void the words of Christ by our traditions?" If Christ's words are to be accepted, that "the Son of Man must be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth," and if he arose on Sunday, the first day after the Jewish Sabbath, then it seems there can be no other conclusion but that he was buried Wednesday, and not Friday. Such seems to be the teaching of the Scriptures.

The Bible neither says that he was crucified Friday, nor that he arose Sunday morning. From what we are told we know that he arose sometime between sundown Saturday and daybreak Sunday. The women found the tomb empty "very early in the morning" (Luke 24:1; Mark 16:2); Matthew uses the expression "as it began to dawn" (28:1), and John says "when it was yet dark" (20:1). If we count back we shall find ourselves between sunset Wednesday and daybreak Thursday, when, according to Christ's own words, he must have been buried. (Matt. 12:40.)

Our difficulty has arisen from Mark 15:42, where he tells us that Christ was crucified on "the day before the Sabbath." But he does not say what Sabbath. As the Jews had other sabbaths than the weekly Sabbath, we need to enquire further into the matter. We are told (Exodus 12:16; Numb. 28:16-18; Lev. 23:7) that the first and the last days of the Passover were sabbaths. John and other writers tell us Christ was crucified at the time of "the preparation of the Passover" (Matt. 27:62; Mark 15:42; Luke 23:54; John 19:14, 42). Notice the expressions, "the preparation of the Passover," and "the preparation for the Sabbath drew on." It would certainly be no straining of meaning to say the preparation for the Passover Sabbath drew on. We are told that the Passover this year did not fall on the weekly Sabbath, the 15th of Nisan.

Again we read (John 12:1) that he came to Bethany six days before the Passover, and that his "triumphal entry" into Jerusalem was the next day; that tradition asserts was "Palm Sunday." Bethany was a "Sabbath day's journey" from Jerusalem. If the traditional view be correct, he came up to Bethany on the Sabbath, was given a feast on the Sabbath, and entered Jerusalem on the day following the Sabbath, neither one of which suppositions seems to accord with the facts. If he came up to Bethany on Friday there were six days to Thursday, the Passover day, Nisan 15th. (John 12:1.) Friday, six days before, would be the ninth of Nisan, the lamb would be taken up on the tenth of Nisan (Ex. 12:3). Christ's entry into Jerusalem was on that day, which was the Jewish Sabbath (our Saturday). The lamb was to be slain on the 14th, which would be Wednesday, "the day of preparation for the Passover." The Scriptures state that Christ was crucified "on the day of preparation" and three days and three nights "before the resurrection." It therefore seems clear that he came up on Friday, and that six days later he was in the grave, being crucified on the day before; that he lay in the grave three days and three nights (Wednesday night and Thursday, Thursday night and Friday, Friday night and Saturday); and that some time between the close of the day, Saturday at six o'clock, and Sunday morning, Jesus arose from the grave. Read all the accounts with these things in mind, and see how perfectly prophecy and historical fact harmonize. Then, why strain to reconcile apparent discrepancies by the methods of "Orientalism." Okolona, Miss.

A WORD IN REPLY.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

My Dear Dr. Meek: Your effort in the Advocate of March 13 to show "What the Real Historians Say," is by no means convincing. I have not the time (nor have you the space) to go into a minute examination of the passages which set Mommsen against Gibbon. You did not prove that Mommsen was a truer historian than Gibbon. I believe it was John Stuart Mill who said that in Imperial Rome a male slave had more privileges than his master's wife; for the slave could cultivate his mind, but the wife could not. Really, Doctor, do you know of any literature produced by any woman of Imperial Rome? Please cite me to one great poem or history, or anything that a Roman woman ever wrote. I read that in Rome-ruled Alexandria, at a later time, one woman named Hypatia essayed the role of philosopher, and for her daring forfeited her life at the hands of a mob. In contemporaneous Greece another named Sappho dared to write poetry; and her name comes down to us almost a synonym for unchastity.

Yes, Doctor, there were SOME "chaste Roman matrons," but what was the Roman standard of chastity? What concept of it must have been held by a people whose god was Jupiter, whose goddess was Venus, and whose literature was so foul that it must be expurgated before it is put into the school rooms of to-day? Do you not know that Jupiter's story is unfit for any family circle? that Venus means vileness? that Horace and Juvenal and even Virgil could not be fully translated in any American school?

Yes, Doctor, there was a time when some Roman women did "lord it over their so-called husbands; but what were they? real wives? Read Sienckewicz and Barrett, and Juvenal unexpurgated (it will be in Latin—it could not be printed in English in this country); read Tertullian and any Latin historian of that age and see. And what were the men?

I challenge PROOF that Rome's moral degradation and downfall came about because her women were in any sense enfranchised. Her bedizened, coarse and unchaste women were the result rather than the cause of her immorality.

No, Doctor, the five statements, with which I close my article, to which you give attention, are not statements merely of my opinions, but they are a challenge for PROOF. Excuse me if I decline to accept the opinions of Mrs. Townsend, or Dr. Bledsoe, or my friend and brother, Dr. Meek, or Prof. Seeley, or Mr. Lecky. I want not OPINIONS, but PROOF. Your reference to woman suffrage in Norway is unfortunate. Increase of divorce there, as I understand it, came before suffrage and not as a result. Other conditions—intemperance of men, for instance—brought about the divorce evil and others. Woman suffrage was resorted to as one of the means to remedy the evils.

But let us not lose sight of the real issue: I insist that the polluted palaces of ancient and pagan Rome, with their coarse and impure worshippers of Zeus and Venus (nor yet the harems of modern Turkey), do not furnish the least argument against the plea of our splendid Southern Methodist women that they be not hindered in their church work by senseless sex restrictions. This is my contention.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO GALLOWAY MEMORIAL FUND.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Treasurer of the Conference Endowment Fund, reports to me the following contributions received by him from the charges that observed Galloway Memorial Day, the first Sunday in November, 1912:

Hazlehurst, $12.29; Wiggins, $4.02; Bucatunna Circuit, $2.65; Sageville, $4.35; Logtown, $5; Sharon, $1; McHenry, $4.05; Collins, $3.36; Biloxi, $14.50; Sanford, $2; Carlisle, $1.50; Whynot, $1.60; Independence, $2.20; Port Gibson, $10; Poplar Springs, $18.75; Carson, $3.26; Laurel, First Church, $10; Saucier, $3.20; Johns, $5; Canton, $7.46; Shubuta, $11.50; Gulfport, First Church, $7.75; Flora, $6; Meridian, South Side, $13.64; Coalville, $3.16; Seminary, $1.85; Matherville, 60 cents; Lyman, $2.27; Bay St. Louis, $2.50; Sumrall, $4; Morton and Pelahatchie, $4; Learned, $2.10; Wesson, $2; Jackson, Capitol Street, $300.

The following personal contributions were made: Rev. L. J. Jones, $1; Mrs. Lou Martin, $2.50; W. J. Dawson, $1.

The total amount contributed for 1912 is $482.56.

The following resolutions were passed at the last meeting of the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference:

"Resolved, That this Board hereby endorses the action of our Executive Committee in joining hands with the Trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund in an effort to raise $25,000 to be known as the Galloway Memorial Fund, the interest of which is to be applied to the benefit of the claimants on this Board.

"Resolved further, That we endorse the action of the Trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund in the selection of Rev. T. J. O'Neil as Financial Agent of that Fund."

After a brief discussion of the above resolutions on the floor at the last session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, they were unanimously adopted by the Conference.

The Committee in charge of the Galloway Memorial Fund, after consultation with the Agent, hereby announces the fourth Sunday in April as the Galloway Memorial Day for the current year, 1913.

Memorials in honor of our sainted Bishop are being erected in various parts of the Church. We urge now that the entire Conference rally to the collection of this Galloway Memorial Fund by the observance of an annual Galloway Memorial Day. The movement last year was confined to the Sunday schools; but this year we shall ask that both the Sunday schools and churches observe it by a collection. What memorial could so honor the name of Bishop Galloway as the creation of a fund to aid the superannuate preachers who have worn themselves out in the same work to which he dedicated his brilliant talents and his entire life? Brethren, let us hope that the contributions for 1913 will mount up into the thousands.

The Conference Endowment Committee receives interest annually from the following bequests, memorials and gifts, which may be seen in the Annual Conference Minutes as printed annually:

Van Houton bequest	$1000
P. A. Johnston bequest	500
Henderson bequest	500
C. D. Cecil memorial	1000
W. M. Thornton memorial	1000
J. T. Vickers memorial	1000
E. H. Easterling gift	500
R. B. Downer (real estate)	2000

We believe we owe it to the memory and long-distinguished service rendered by Bishop Galloway to the Mississippi Annual Conference to add to our list of memorials, Bishop Chas. B. Galloway memorial, $25,000.

We believe that of all the memorials being erected in honor of Bishop Galloway, none would be so pleasing to our sainted Bishop as this one, projected in the interest of our old preachers. Let us make the fourth Sunday in April a great day by taking a great collection in honor of this great Methodist divine. To be strictly accurate, possibly we had best add that the R. B. Downer $2000 real estate is not at present bearing interest. The grand total holdings of the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund amounts to $18,914.09. If we shall add to this a $25,000 Memorial Fund, our old preachers can be retired upon the sum of $500 annually. The highest amount now paid them is $275. J. M. MORSE,

President of the Joint Board of Finance.

Church News

Bishop W. A. Quayle (Northern Methodist) has a book recently off the press. Its title is "The Climb to God."

The Commencement sermon of Wofford College (Spartanburg, S. C.) will be preached by Bishop E. D. Mouzon, who is one of its Alumni.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix spent Sunday, March 16, in St. Louis, preaching at the University Methodist Church at 11 a. m. and at St. John's Church at the evening hour.

Dr. W. L. Dudley, Dean of the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University, because of his unfavorable physical condition, has been forced to leave off his work.

The Baltimore Annual Conference met in Staunton, Va., on Wednesday, March 26. Besides Bishop Kilgo, who was to preside, Bishop Wilson and Bishop Denny were also slated to be present.

The Southern Methodists of Oklahoma have decided to open an "Assembly" at Sulphur in that State. It is expected that several meetings of interest will be held there during the present year.

The fourth volume of Dr. R. N. Price's "Holston Methodism" has made its appearance. The Midland Methodist says: "It covers the period of the Civil War and Reconstruction, and is interesting to the point of sensational, though it is sober history."

Rev. R. G. Pearson, who formerly was a useful and widely known evangelist of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, died on March 13. For a number of years Dr. Pearson's health had been such that he could not continue his labors as a revivalist.

Rev. S. B. Turrentine, D. D., has been elected President of the Greensboro (North Carolina) College for Women, to succeed Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, who had tendered her resignation. Dr. Turrentine will assume the duties of his new office in June.

Ex-President W. H. Taft was one of the speakers at the Livingstone Centenary exercises held in the St. James M. E. Church, South, of Augusta, Ga., on Sunday, March 16. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, was also present and delivered an address.

The Y. M. C. A. Hall at Hendrix College (Conway, Ark.) is being overhauled at a cost of about $500. The Commencement sermon of this institution will be preached by Rev. Paul H. Linn of St. Louis, Mo., and the evening discourse will be delivered by Rev. L. M. Broyles, of Fort Smith, Ark.

St. Paul's Church, St. Louis, has recently been blessed with a gracious meeting, in which it is reported that there were 110 professions of faith in Christ. This is a good showing for a church located in the South's greatest metropolis where the tides of worldliness and immorality are strong.

Our church at Lafayette, Tenn., was destroyed by fire on Sunday, March 16. The loss was about $6000, and the insurance was about $2500. The pastor of this congregation is the Rev. Carroll Varner, who was reared in North Mississippi. It is stated that a new house of worship will be constructed at an early date.

The first number of "The Constructive Quarterly," which Mr. Silas McBee, formerly the editor of the Churchman (New York), has established, will make its appearance this month. As has been stated in the Advocate before, it will be a non-sectarian journal devoted to the discussion of important religious questions. Both an English and American edition will be issued. The George H. Doran Company, of New York, will be its publishers in the United States.

The Memphis District of the M. E. Church, South, is said to be enjoying a large degree of prosperity. At a recent meeting of the pastors held in the city of Memphis, an increase of 140 in membership was reported for the month preceding, about 60 of them being on profession of faith. Dr. H. B. Johnston, the accomplished leader of our forces in this district, is one of the ablest and most resourceful presiding elders in the Connection.

The Randolph-Macon Woman's College, of Lynchburg, Va., has been placed by the United Commissioner of Education, the New York Board of Education, and the Managers of the Carnegie Foundation in "Class A" in their grouping of American colleges. This institution had nearly 600 young ladies in attendance last year, 436 of whom were from the Southern States, 70 from the Middle West and Far Western States, and 58 from the Eastern and Northern States. This great school is one of the best assets of the Southern Methodist Church.

The Southern Christian Advocate has a way of saving the original poetry sent in during the year and publishing it all in a single edition. Its collection was given to the public in its issue of March 20, and from the amount of it, it would seem that not many of the Methodists of South Carolina are in touch with the Muses. Brother Nettles has very generously notified his brethren of the press that there is no copyright on these verses, and that they may quote them at will. Here is an opportunity for editors who have a contempt for the things that are old and who want to give their readers the latest output of the modern mind.

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Dear Advocate: Since my last report the following subscriptions to the fund to buy the old Methodist church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College have been received:

W. E. Allen, Monroe$10.00
S. L. Allen, Monroe 10.00
C. W. Blair 10.00

Total 30.00
Previously reported 382.00

Balance needed $588.00

I wish I had some way of impressing our people with the idea that the offer of my church was wholly unselfish in this matter. As Brother Joyner said through the Advocate, the local church had to buy another lot, still owes for it, has been paying interest for years and allowing the College to use the old property, and now offers it for less than half the amount it would bring if put up for sale in the open market. This liberality is almost unprecedented, and if our church can give $1000 on the property, surely all the Methodists in the State could give the other $1000! The College is Conference property, and to use local building enterprises as an excuse for not helping, is in effect to refuse to help "connectional" enterprises because of local expenses. No first-class church or individual Methodist can afford to take that position. We are giving our part, with our debt hanging over us, and with interest charges included, incurred in part by holding the property in question for Methodism.

Send in your subscriptions.

DR. MOTT BEING URGED TO ACCEPT.

Some days ago it was announced that President Wilson had tendered to Dr. John R. Mott the position of Ambassador to China, and that he had declined to accept the place. Dr. Mott, who is a Methodist layman, is widely known as a Y. M. C. A. worker, and is regarded by many as the world's greatest missionary leader. His home is at Montclair, N. J., but at present he is in the Orient. Of course, no one but himself can decide whether Mr. Mott ought to accept the important diplomatic post which has been offered him, but certainly the position would give him an opportunity to render a great service to his own country, to the Chinese people, and to the cause of Christianity.

In this connection, the following telegraphic communication, which was sent out from Washington, D. C., on March 26, will doubtless be read with interest:

"A delegation of ministers and American missionaries on furlough from China called on the President to-day, voicing their appreciation of the administration's policy toward China, and especially their thanks for the selection of Mr. Mott. They declared that if Mr. Mott did not accept, they hoped 'a man of his type' would be selected. The President informed the visitors that men of Mr. Mott's type were rare, and that he hoped they would join in sending a cable to Mr. Mott urging him to accept. The President said he realized the influence that the missionaries had had in regenerating China, and looked upon Mr. Mott as a man especially well fitted to serve the purposes of the administration, because of his knowledge of the mission world. The delegation immediately cabled Mr. Mott at Seoul, Korea, and later called upon the Chinese minister."

From the foregoing, it is obvious that President Wilson puts upon Christian missions quite a different estimate from that of Mr. Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The Seashore District will convene in conference session at Bay St. Louis, on Wednesday morning, May 14. A preliminary service will be held Tuesday night, with preaching by Rev. W. B. Jones, pastor at Lumberton. Pastors will observe the dates, and arrange protracted meetings accordingly: let us have a full delegation. Send names of those elected, to Rev. T. B. Cottrell, our host at Bay St. Louis. Rev. C. F. Reid, one of the Missionary Secretaries, writes that he will spend a day or more with the conference. He will conduct mission services. W. H. Of the population of the United States, 31,954,325 were born in the South; all of whom but 2,258,851 still reside there.

When Congress convenes next Monday it will have 290 Democratic and 145 Republican members. There will be 158 new members.

The Rockefeller Sanitary Commission last year treated 238,755 cases of the hookworm disease in eleven States of the South, according to the recent report sent out by that Commission.

There are said to be $115,000,000 on deposit in the United States Treasury, and assets to the amount of $1,400,000,000. This vast sum of money is now being counted by experts. It will take five months to complete the count.

Prof. J. D. Eggleston, Jr., who served two terms as Superintendent of Education of Virginia, was last week elected to the Presidency of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He is a native Virginian and an educator of high rank in the South.

The New York American has compiled figures to show that the rate of divorce in America is seven times greater than it is in Europe. More than 100,000 divorces were granted in the United States last year.

The United States purchased $15,000,000 more of foreign goods during the month of February this year than during the same month of 1912, and sold to foreign countries $5,000,000 less of American produced goods.

The faculty of Southern University, a Louisiana State institution for colored students, have issued an ultimatum to Governor Hall to the effect that unless they receive the six months' salary now due them at once, they will close the University and take legal steps to secure the money due them. The Southern University has been in a sea of trouble for several months.

On account of the restrictions placed upon its members by the Roman Catholic Church and other Churches during Lent, which causes many to abstain from eating meat for the forty days preceding Easter Sunday, there was a decline of 25 cents a cwt. in the price of fat cattle. It is estimated that there was a direct loss to farmers in the United States because of this decline of $1,250,000.

Official figures given out place the daily expenditure of American people on motion picture entertainments at $500,000. The average daily attendance at the 20,000 picture theaters is said to be 5,000,000, and the average time spent by each person attending is one hour. Thus it is seen that approximately 600 years of human life is literally wasted on this one class of amusements in the United States every day.

Dr. M. H. From four to six weeks are required to effect his cure. His discovery has received the endorsement of prominent physicians of New York City.

President Woodrow Wilson was the first Chief Executive to use the Bible that was furnished by the Supreme Court of the United States during the inauguration ceremonies since President Harrison. Grover Cleveland used a little red Bible that was given him when he was a boy by his mother; William McKinley used a huge family Bible that was given him by the Bishops of the African Methodist Church, and Theodore Roosevelt used a Bible that was given him by a special friend in New York.

The first vessel of the Chicago and New Orleans Transportation Company will weigh anchor at La Salle, Ill., on April 30, and begin its maiden voyage through the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway channel to New Orleans. The arrival of the first vessel will be the occasion of a celebration in the Crescent City. The cargo aboard this first steamer will be Chicago-made goods, and they will be transported from Chicago to La Salle on barges and be transferred to the steamer, thus making the entire trip by water.

The State of Arkansas has two men who are maintaining offices in Little Rock and trying to exercise the authority of Governor of that State. Last week Governor J. T. Robinson resigned and, there being no Lieutenant Governor, Senator W. F. Oldham, the President of the Senate, succeeded him to the office. The Senate then elected Hon. John M. Futrelle President of the Senate to fill the place made vacant by Mr. Oldham, who had thoughtlessly resigned. The Constitution, which states that the President of the Senate is the Governor of the State in the absence of the Governor, fails to make provision for another Senate President, hence Mr. Futrelle at once declared himself Governor of Arkansas. Such is politics, not statesmanship.

An organization known as the "Association of Commissioners of Agriculture of the Southern States" was effected in New Orleans on March 26. The Association was organized for the purpose of bringing the leading agriculturalists of the South into closer relations in order that better methods of farming and marketing farm products may be enjoyed by the whole South. The organization embraces all the Southern States, including Oklahoma, Missouri, and Kentucky. Its first officers are: W. A. Graham, Raleigh, N. C., President; R. F. Koib, Montgomery, Ala., Vice President, and J. W. Newman, Frankfort, Ky., Secretary-Treasurer. Mr. E. O. Bruner is the Louisiana representative, and Mr. H. E. Biakeslee is the Mississippi representative.

DAVIES ON THE WOMAN—A REPLY.

There lies before me an article entitled "The Woman and the Church," written by Rev. S. J. Davies, which appeared in the Advocate on March 27. The writer attempts to make three points: (1) That women should have official position in the Church from a historic standpoint; (2) from a Scriptural standpoint, and (3) from a standpoint of simple justice and fair dealing.

It is not my purpose to take up each item of his article and combat it, but to notice a few of his allusions to certain passages of Scripture that he cited and see if he uses the Word of God in its true sense, or whether he misconstrues it.

He says that St. John wrote an epistle to an "elect lady" and that, therefore, she must have been an important person in the Church. The opening sentence of the Second Epistle of John is addressed to "the elect lady and her children." If the reference to the lady is an argument in favor of laity rights for women, then the reference to the children is in favor of laity rights for children. He says that the women were made deaconesses and evangelists. A brief reference to Acts 6:2 will convince one that the business or office of a deacon in the days of the Apostolic Church was that of a server of tables. I can see no objection to any woman becoming an artist in that line. The word "evangelist" did not originally have reference to a preacher, but to a bearer of good news. The word evangel means good news, or a gospel.

Again, he says that Paul said that there was neither male nor female in the Church, and that he antagonized anything that looked like caste. He certainly did not set himself against everything that looked like caste. He urged even slaves to keep their places, and gave specific instructions to masters, rulers, etc. Now what does that phrase, "neither male nor female," have reference to? The same verse says that "there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free." Paul simply stated that there is one condition of salvation and that condition is the same for all classes, races, and sexes. He says, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." Read it for yourself in Galatians 3:22-29.

He says that the fact that the Church is called the "bride" of Christ has some significance. So it has, but that significance, rightly understood, is not in favor of the point for which he is contending. If the Church is the bride of Christ, and women should have equal privileges with men in the management of all affairs, both religious and secular, then are we to believe that Christ has no more authority than has the Church? Of course we shall be heirs with him and shall be like him, but he will ever be over his redeemed and will shine forever in resplendent beauty. He will be the object of our adoration, and the bride shall ever fall down before him and give him praise and honor. The Church the bride, and that an argument for laity rights for women! Then the Church is the equal of Christ in every respect, should he given an equal place in the hearts of men, and equal rank with him in the salvation of the world. God forbid! The bride of Christ is dependent upon him. Read Revelation 21, especially the 9th and 10th verses and the 23d verse. The first passage says that Jerusalem—that city beautiful—is the Lamb's wife, and the latter says that Christ is the light thereof.

Once more: Brother Davies believes that by granting women equal privileges with men, the chasm of sexual antagonism will be bridged. I think not. Sexly antagonism will never be bridged by bringing men and women into unrestricted contact with one another. Has the Salvation Army wrought wonders in that line? It has almost unrestricted sex association. Has the Independent Order of Holiness movement calmed the troubled waters of sexly antagonism, or made a great contribution to the morals of the world? There you have unrestricted sex association. Parhamism has the bars laid down, and what has been the result in communities where that sect has made headway? Nothing less than home degradation. The very morals of this age demand the restriction of sex association. Grant such association in the Church, and the world will grant it to the extreme. The Church should lead, not follow, and the more so, when to follow means to incorporate a policy that is a direct menace to home life.

A LOUISIANA PASTOR.

THE NEW ORLEANS Y. M. C. A.

The annual meeting of this organization was held on Thursday evening, March 27. After an impressive address by Prof. M. A. Honline, of the International Y. M. C. A. of New York, an election of officers for the ensuing year was held, with the following results: President, A. T. Terry; Vice President, N. Watts Mattux; Secretary, A. F. Godat; Treasurer, E. S. Ferguson. The report of Mr. Robert Ringer, the Active Secretary, showed that the work during the past year had been, in many respects, gratifying. It was stated at the meeting that $10,000 will be spent in the near future in improving the property and increasing the facilities of the New Orleans Chapter of the Association. A thousand dollars will be spent upon the gymnasium, and the remainder in rearranging the floor space of the upper stories of the building so as to provide more ample dormitory accommodations, and in a general refurnishing of the lodging department. It is thought that by a judicious adjustment of the available space it will be possible to secure forty-three additional rooms.

CONCERNING THE MEMPHIS METHODIST HOSPITAL.

Dear Brother Meek: The Tri-State Methodist Hospital Commissioners met in Memphis on March 20, and everything connected with that important enterprise was thoroughly discussed and carefully considered during an interesting and prolonged session. The awkward word, "Tri-State," was dropped from the name, and hereafter the institution will be known as The Methodist Hospital. (If members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who propose changing the name of our Church to "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America," really want to change the name, let them propose changing it to "The Methodist Church.")

Brother Ellis has secured $74,000 in cash and subscriptions. We have a desirable lot on the best residence street in the city. In order that the co-operating Conferences may have a definite amount toward which to work, the Commissioners apportioned to them the sum of $300,000. The Memphis Conference promptly and generously offered to raise one-half of the whole amount. The North Mississippi Conference is asked to raise $75,000. The Commissioners from that Conference will at once apportion that amount to the several districts and ask each presiding elder to apportion the amount assigned to his district to the charges which it embraces. Each charge is to be credited with the amount which it has already paid.

Let all take notice that the Commissioners have not assumed to make an assessment. We only suggest that the amount of money, if paid in by the patronizing Conferences during the next two years, will build and equip a better hospital than any in this part of the country. We further request and earnestly urge every charge to accept the apportionment as the minimum amount that it shall raise as a voluntary contribution.

IS IT FAIR?

Mr. Editor: In the issue of the Advocate of March 20, there appears a communication from our Conference Board of Missions. It is a communication which is well worth a careful reading. But there is a quotation credited to Dr. John M. Moore, our Home Mission Secretary, which I think deserves attention. The paragraph which contains the quotation is as follows:

"Our assessment for Domestic Missions for 1913 is $13,200, the same as last year. Of this amount $3,500 is due the General Board for connectional home missions, the whole assessment on our great Church for the work carried on by our Home Mission Department at Nashville being only $125,000. Dr. John M. Moore calls attention to the fact that the Southern Presbyterian Church, with about 300,000 members, sets its goal at $300,000 for home missions, while the Southern Baptist Mission Board has at its disposal $320,000 or more for general home mission work, and $465,000 or more for State home mission work."

This makes our contribution look small indeed, and reflects greatly upon our liberality and loyalty. Do these figures properly represent us? If not, should they be so published to the world? In making comparisons, I think ALL the facts should be given, and I am unalterably opposed to depreciating Methodism, even though it be done unintentionally, as I believe was the case in this instance.

The facts in the case are as follows: Last year we raised for Home and Conference Missions $411,453, and for Church Extension (which is as much home missions as the first item) $207,229, making a total for Home Mission work of $618,682. That looks better. But again, these denominations have nothing corresponding with our Conference Claimants' Fund. For this fund we raised last year $281,159, or a total for the support of our home work of $899,841, lacking only $159 of being $900,000. This looks much better. Where these denominations concentrate, we scatter. But it is unfair to compare until we have gathered up the fragments.

But now this question: Do we stimulate by discouraging and disparaging? I think not.

"HE IS A FINE PREACHER AND HAS RELIGION."

In the Advocate of March 13, I notice that the above sentence was used by that noble woman, Mrs. Fannie Clark, of Okolona, Miss., in speaking of her pastor, Rev. J. H. Holder. I am writing this short article just to emphasize the last three words in her sentence—"and has religion."

I sometimes fear that the good old-time religion is on the decline. I am of the opinion sometimes that the average congregation has come to admire a preacher, not so much for his genuine religion as for his mental ability, and I am at times led to wonder if some of our preachers, realizing that fact, have not put too much emphasis on their ability to "preach" and not enough on their power, through God, to "save that which is lost." I have been made to blush when I have, in a conversation, heard pastors relate with some degree of pride, how, during their pastorate at certain places, they had built a new church, raised the pastor's salary, and increased the church collections quite materially, and never for once say how many sinners were saved or how the spiritual interests of the church had been built up. I have heard others go over the same field and after everything else had been commented on, as if of necessity, refer to "how many members had been taken in." If the preachers, or some of them, have fallen into this evil (for an evil it must be), let us lay the blame on their members because they have preferred scholarship and fine pulpit ability to genuine religion.

"Give me that old-time religion" is not heard now as it once was. Power with God is not sought as much as power with men. I hope that this little squib may simply make a punctuation point, a period if you please, at the expression "and has religion." In my humble judgment a man who could do no more than to read the Lord's prayer and pronounce the benediction, but who has religion, is to be preferred to the finest pulpit orator and most scholarly gentleman, who is trying to preach the gospel without having "shore nuff" religion. I am one of those who believe that if one has real religion, has been genuinely converted, he ought to be able to point to the time and place when he "passed from darkness into light." If he can not, then I fear that there was not much of the real "passing" done.

I know Brother Holder and can vouch, if it were at all necessary, for what Sister Clark says of him. "He is a fine preacher." I agree with her on that entirely. "And he has religion." I thank the Lord for it. Such a man will always have "power with God."

"Religion is the chief concern,

SOUTHERN SUNDAY SCHOOL AND EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

True to their mission to the young people, the Sunday school and the Epworth League are planning something unusually attractive for August. At the very height of the heated term, and approaching the end of the vacation period, the event will take place. The scene will be laid in a region like that of which the Psalmist sung, as "the highest part of the dust of the world." And added to what the all-loving Father has provided in mountain and meadow and forest and stream, there will be the marvels of beauty and convenience fashioned by the ingenuity of man. The pure air of the uplands will give soothing refreshment to overheated blood, and the pulse-beat will register many a thrill of lofty inspiration.

Lake Junaluska, the home of the Southern Assembly, will begin during the coming summer to afford some of those associations that will be celebrated in song and story fifty years from to-day. First, from June 25th to 29th, the Laymen of Southern Methodism will gather by the Lake in a remarkable Missionary Conference of tremendous proportions. It will be the christening time of the Assembly. Then the great auditorium will become a temple. Then the spacious mansion standing on a bluff overlooking the Lake will become an inn where the saints of the Lord will for a time sojourn in holy fellowship.

It is meet that the children should follow in the steps of their fathers. The hosts of Sunday school and Epworth League workers will take possession of the grounds on August 13. Ten days will be occupied with giving instruction, conducting conferences, and hearing uplifting addresses. Each day will be begun by holding a great assembly for worship. Then three periods will be given to institute features. There will follow an hour with the Bible, under the leadership of some foremost man in our Church, enjoyed in common by all the people. An afternoon of repose and recreation will follow; vespers each evening in the clear twilight of the elevated spaces, and after that a message of truth and of hope from a prophet sent from God, will round out the hours in which men should work.

On the Saturdays, two of the institute periods will be conducted alternately by Sunday school and Epworth League authorities, thus bringing the workers in both organizations to share in the best that the leaders have to offer.

It is too early yet to announce the personnel of the program. The Sunday school will have practically its full staff present, as will also the Epworth League. The program committee is seeking to engage the very strongest men available to speak from the platform and to impart wisdom in council.

Consider that this Conference is to be one of the initial meetings on grounds that are destined to be as famous as Chataqua in New York; that it is for all the Church, from the Carolinas to California, and from Kentucky to the Gulf; that it will be held at a period of the summer when the mountains are especially inviting; that the cost will be reduced to the lowest possible figure, and that the compensation will be incalculably valuable.

Begin to get ready to come to Junaluska Lake in August!

FLOSSY'S WAY.

Our little Flossy, through one term of school, observed, without a single break, the rule forbidding her to whisper.

"Oh," said she, in speaking of it afterward to me, "it seemed at first I never could succeed—A whole long term! It did look hard, indeed, but, when I came to think about it, I saw all I had to do was just to try one minute at a time to keep on guard. And after that it wasn't very hard."

I think that Flossy's reasoning would be, for all of us, a good philosophy.

WELL-NIGH SPOILED.

"Oh, I just love cake, and it's awfully nice!" cried little Dorothy, regarding her chocolate frosted dessert with high approval.

"You should not say you 'love cake,' reproved her mother; "say you 'like' it; and don't say 'awfully'; say 'very.' Don't say 'nice,' but 'good.' And, by the way, the word 'just' should be omitted, and also the 'oh.' Now, my dear, repeat the sentence correctly."

"I like cake; it is very good," repeated Dorothy. "That is much better," said her mother.

But Dorothy was far from being satisfied. "It sounds as if I was speaking of bread," she said, with an air of disgust.—Youth's Companion.

(The above incident illustrates how tame proper language is apt to seem after one has acquired the habit of using slang. A person ought studiously to guard against becoming addicted to such a practice. This desire for strenuous speech also possesses the profane swearer and accounts for his indisposition to express himself in ordinary terms. It is a sort of verbal inebriation.—Editor of the Advocate.)

A VERY PARTICULAR ORANGE.

"I want you to do three things for me, sonny boy."

"Yes, mamma." Dick's face fell a little. He was strapping on his skates. There was a fellow waiting outside for him, too.

"Take the big waste-basket out and empty it, dear, and be sure you don't scatter any trash in the yard."

"Yes, mamma." Dick tried to look cheerful, for mamma was smiling up at him from the sock she was darning, and something in the smile seemed to say: "Dear little lad, I know you are in a hurry, but I need you just a little while."

The big basket was heavy, but he carried it carefully, and there wasn't a mite of trash spilt on the lawn—not even a speck of paper.

"Now get grandpa's newspaper from the front door—the boy left it nearly ten minutes ago—and take it up to his room."

"Yes'm." The little black legs were off in a twinkling, almost as fast as if the skates were under them, and again Dick presented himself and breathlessly awaited orders.

"Now, look in the big bag in the left-hand door of the sideboard and get that very large orange—you can't miss it."

"And what must I do with it, mamma?"

"Eat it, to be sure. What are oranges made for?"

"But you said you wanted me to do three things for you."

"So I did, to be sure. But you see, Dick, when papa brought those oranges home from market, that big one just popped his head out of the bag and said: 'Now, Mrs. Mamma, you see I am much bigger and sweeter than the rest of these fellows, and I am not to be eaten by any ordinary person.' 'Indeed, Mr. Orange, and what sort of a person may eat you?' I answered. 'A very unselfish person,' said Mr. Orange, 'a person who is willing to put off going skating to empty waste baskets, and doesn't grumble a bit.' So you see, Dick, I think he must have meant my little boy, don't you?"

And Dick just grinned and dug a little dirty finger in the orange to make a sucking place. Somehow mamma always talked that sort of foolishness when he was particularly good, and it certainly made Mr. Orange taste sweet.—Mrs. C. N. Wiley, in Christian Observer.

TOO CHEAP.

A collier came to me at the close of one of my services, and said: "I would like to be a Christian, but I cannot receive what you said to-night."

I asked him why not.

He replied: "I would give anything to believe that God would forgive my sins, but I cannot believe that he will forgive them if I just turn to him. It is too cheap."

I looked at him and said: "My dear friend, have you been working to-day?"

He looked at me, slightly surprised, and said: "Yes, I was down in the pit as usual."

"How did you get out of the pit?" I asked.

"The way I usually do. I got into the cage, and was pulled to the top."

"How much did you pay to come out of the pit?"

He looked at me astonished. "Pay? Of course, I didn't pay anything."

I asked him: "Were you not afraid to trust yourself in the cage? Was it not too cheap?"

"Oh, no!" he said. "It was cheap for me, but it cost the company a lot of money to sink that shaft."

And without another word the truth of that admission broke in upon him, and he saw if he could have salvation "without money and without price," it had cost the infinite God a great price to sink that shaft and rescue lost men.—A Correspondent, in the British Weekly.

THE WORK AT ST. MARK'S HALL.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's City Mission Board, of New Orleans, was held at St. Mark's Hall on Wednesday afternoon, March 26, with a good attendance. The various reports submitted by the workers showed the several enterprises under their direction to be in a healthful and encouraging condition.

Miss Roberta Baker stated that the interest in the cooking and sewing classes is on the increase, and that the workers in the mission had made about 400 visits to the poor during the preceding month. Miss Buckley, the nurse in charge of the clinic, announced that a larger number of patients had been treated than in any equal period of time since that department of the work was started.

One of the new features of St. Mark's is an alumnae class made up of former pupils of the Hall from the stenography, sewing and cooking classes. This class is led by Miss Dorothy Wilmot and Miss Marion Monroe, who have charge of the reading and fancy work at the Wednesday afternoon meetings, held at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. McHugh, president of the Woman's Club connected with St. Mark's, made an interesting report of the club's activities. A penny party will be given for the benefit of the clinic and a reception given to Dr. Kling, who gives his services to the clinic.

Mrs. Jay, said to be 92 years old, donated an embroidered centerpiece she had made in St. Mark's Hall, which will be auctioned off at the next meeting for the benefit of the work.

The chairmen of the committees are: Mrs. H. L. Baker, cooking; Mrs. Munford, sewing; Mrs. Dicks, clinic.

John Paganl, the janitor, and Rev. W. E. Thomas, who leads the religious services, reported encouragingly as to the attendance of men, there being an average of seventy-five every Sunday evening for the services.

Miss Annie Ragland, reported on the music lessons given, and the Board's committee chairmen on work they were directing.

Mrs. Gibson, of Algiers, was elected to take the place of Mrs. J. B. Parker as recording secretary. Mrs. Parker will resume her old place as corresponding secretary.

The announcement that Miss Margaret Ragland, who has been the head deaconess at St. Mark's Hall for a number of years, will have to give up her work because of ill health, was heard with much regret, and a letter of appreciation and sympathy from the Board was ordered to be sent to her. An effort will be made at once to secure some one to take her place.

A letter was read from the General Board of Missions, which is soon to convene in Dallas, Texas, in which promises were made to give the mission work in New Orleans special consideration. The Woman's City Mission Board obligated itself to pay $30 a month for the support of one deaconess at St. Mark's Hall, $40 a month for the support of Mrs. Lily Meekins at the Mary Werieln Mission, and $10 a month for the relief of the needy. Though already one of the greatest mission fields in the South, with the opening of the Panama Canal and the construction of the new Immigrant Station here, the pressing problems that will confront New Orleans Methodism will assume even larger proportions. It is, therefore, to be hoped that the Church at large will promptly lend our local workers a strong helping hand in their efforts to prepare for the heavy tasks to which they will soon have to address themselves. Nor is it duty alone which here calls to Southern Methodists—they are also challenged by an inspiring opportunity.

THE FRUIT OF ATHEISM AND ANARCHY.

It has been stated in the press dispatches that Aleko Schinas, the assassin of King George of Greece, is an atheist and anarchist, and that he was intoxicated when he fired the fatal shot. It is not surprising that a man with such beliefs, filled with strong drink to inflame his passions, showed himself capable of committing so dastardly a crime. Take away from a human being faith in a hereafter and the sense of his accountability to a Higher Power, and what foundation is left for worthy character? What remains to restrain him from yielding to the bad impulses of his nature, or to incite him to noble, self-sacrificing action? What guiding star can he have but the wandering and uncertain one of fancied expediency? Make such a person a slave of King Alcohol, and you have an emissary for evil that hell itself might envy. Any religion is better than no religion. Indeed, without some sort of faith in a future existence in which virtue shall be rewarded and vice punished, earth doubtless would soon become like "the bottomless pit."

THE EDITOR'S FINAL REJOINDER TO DR. FEATHERSTUN.

We shall not tax the patience of our readers by reviewing in full the latest output of Dr. Featherstun's fecund pen, which appears upon another page. As we feared would be the case, though our good friend brought them forward, Mommsen has been sent to the junk heap and poor Gibbon is well-nigh forsaken. In their stead, new fugitive authorities now hold the stage. We do not doubt that these also would be just as readily repudiated, if they were shown not to harmonize with the one and only standard that the Doctor recognizes in the intellectual realm, namely: his own opinions.

We refuse to discuss with our brother the literary productions of woman in the days of Imperial Rome or in any other age. That is a matter which has nothing to do with the question at issue. The Doctor sweepingly affirmed that the Roman women of that period were extremely and well-nigh universally ignorant. Mommsen affirms that quite the contrary was true, and upon his rebuttal we are perfectly willing to rest our case. Our friend will have it that all the women of Imperial Rome were followers of Venus, though Christianity had existed in the Empire for nearly five hundred years, though Christian emperors had sat upon the throne, and though the Christians in the Roman dominions were numbered by the hundreds of thousands and Pliny the Younger referred to the heathen temples as "almost deserted." All the authorities are against him on this point, but what cares this modern Ephraim, joined to his idols, for authorities or logic?

The Doctor says that the increase in divorces in Norway antedated the existence of woman suffrage in that country. But it did not antedate the woman's rights movement, of which the suffrage question is only a single aspect. The trouble with our literary friend is that he wants to discuss great principles and movements by piecemeal instead of considering them as a whole.

The questions pertaining to the lady-likeness of certain ladies, which our good friend has propounded, we must still decline to discuss. We have not forgotten that, having served as the chaplain of a State Suffragette Convention, our esteemed friend is quite an authority in regard to such matters. We would not be so presumptuous as to contend with him in this field of his pre-eminence and glory. We confess that, with our confused notions of propriety, it is somewhat difficult for us to see the "lady-likeness" of women "hiking" over the country and parading astride of horses up and down the streets of the National Capital in the presence of coarse and jeering multitudes; but, of course, the Doctor, with his superior knowledge and clearer vision as to female doings, can easily discern the grace, beauty, and modesty of such performances.

We feel sure that our readers will be pleased to have us state that the disputation between Doctor Featherstun and the Editor of the Advocate on the woman question is now, for some time at least, at an end. Others are asking for space to discuss this and other issues, and it seems only fair to give them a chance to be heard.

SHALL WE LET THEM OVERTAKE US?

In a recent issue of The Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.), Rev. W. A. McComb, who is leading the movement among the Baptists of Mississippi to increase by the amount of $300,000 the endowment of their College at Clinton, wrote as follows:

"Mississippi College was chartered in 1826, and was run as a Presbyterian school for twenty-four years. For sixty-three years it has been owned and operated by the Baptist State Convention as a college for boys. During that time it has done a great work with very inadequate buildings and equipment. Twenty years ago Major Millsaps is reported to have said that the Methodists were fifty years behind the Baptists in their educational work in Mississippi. It was just twenty-one years ago that Millsaps College began its first session. To-day it has buildings and equipment valued at $50,000 more than Mississippi College. It also has an endowment just three times as large as Mississippi College. When the Mississippi Baptists secure the $300,000 of endowment for which they are striving, Mississippi College will be on a par in equipment and endowment with Millsaps College."

We have been pleased to note this forward educational movement upon the part of the Baptists of the Magnolia State, and we are gratified to see that of the $200,000 that they must raise in order to obtain the $100,000 promised by the Rockefeller Board of Education, more than $65,000 has already been secured. They have not had a Millsaps to help them in their work, and they are struggling nobly. And that they will succeed in this undertaking, we do not at all doubt.

But while the Baptists are bent upon forging ahead, we regret to say that the Methodists of Mississippi seem too much disposed to stand still. The needs of Millsaps College are large and pressing. Its dormitory facilities are lamentably deficient and there is an urgent demand for expansion in many directions. This centennial year of Mississippi Methodism challenges us to do something worthy of the splendid past of our Church in that State and prophetic of a still more glorious future. But the months are swiftly passing, and little, if anything, is being done to take advantage of this inspirational occasion. If our great sister denomination overtakes us and outstrips us, we shall have only ourselves to blame. The place of leadership rightly belongs to those who worthily seek and win it.

Do not dare to live without some clear intention toward which your living shall be bent. Mean to be something with all your might.—Brooks.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The various Christian denominations of Jackson, Miss., have recently been co-operating in taking a religious census of that city.

A dispatch to the Times-Democrat a few days ago stated that our new church at Grayson, La., has been completed, and that the first service in it was held on Easter Sunday.

Rev. R. O. Brown, our popular pastor in the historic town of Holly Springs, Miss., favored us a few days since with 11 renewals and three new subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Brown reports his work as moving on nicely. He serves an excellent people.

By request we publish the following notice: "For Sale—a very rare volume of the General Minutes of the M. E. Church, 1773-1828. It contains much valuable original and historical data, not elsewhere found. Apply to Mrs. S. H. Whatley, Rayville, La."

Easter Sunday was a great day at the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss. The decorations were beautiful, the congregation was large, and Rev. W. W. Woollard, the pastor, is reported to have preached a sermon of remarkable strength and power.

Brother Wlster D. Bennett, of Cedar Hill, Miss., writes hopefully of the Master's work in his community. He states that the Bethesda Church, to which he belongs, which was placed on the Duck Hill charge last year, is well pleased with the present pastor, Rev. J. D. Wroten.

Rev. J. W. Thompson, of Meadville, Miss., has been the recipient of many kindnesses at the hands of his people, and is pleased with the outlook in his charge. Rev. G. H. Galloway, of Hattiesburg, will be with him in a tent meeting at Bude, which is to commence on April 14.

The Louisiana Sunday School Association will hold its 27th Annual Meeting in Alexandria, April 22-24. An excellent program has been arranged and many noted specialists from both within and out of the State will be on hand. It is to be hoped that there will be a large attendance.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of the Washington Street Church of Vicksburg, reports his work as progressing favorably. He thinks that the movement to construct a new church will begin in due time. Brother Saunders' success in his present field has been a source of gratification to his many friends.

Rev. Jasper L. Smith, of Gallman, Miss., sends the following message concerning affairs in his charge: "We feel that we are making some progress. We have a choice people to serve. Our prayer meeting here at Gallman is well attended. We were given a most generous 'pounding' a few nights ago."

The work of the Church is prospering in the Seashore District of the Mississippi Conference under the leadership of Dr. W. H. Huntley and his efficient corps of assistants. We have in hand some interesting notes pertaining to affairs in that part of the field which will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

From a recent issue of the Simpson County News, we take the following: "Rev. J. W. Ramsey, pastor of the Methodist Church at this place (Mendenhall), has accepted an invitation from Prof. Jones to preach the Commencement sermon of the Mendenhall Graded School." It speaks well for a minister when his home people press him into service for such an occasion.

Brother W. E. Upchurch, the Secretary and Treasurer of our Sunday school at Ruston, La., sent us a copy of the record made by that school on Sunday, March 23. The following are the figures: Teachers present, 33; officers, 4; scholars, 372; new pupils, 38; visitors, 41; total attendance, 482; collection, $89.70. This is, indeed, a fine showing. Brother Upchurch states that Easter was a great day with the Ruston congregation.

Brother W. R. Davis, of Houston, Miss., in a business note to our office, written on the 24th ult., gave the following interesting news item: "We are in the midst of a great meeting at this place. Rev. J. A. Bowen is preaching some splendid sermons. A class of 12 was received yesterday and there are more to join the Church later. All Christians have been greatly revived, and the interest is still growing."

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary for the Memphis Methodist Hospital, was expected to spend last Sunday in Greenwood, Miss. We dare say that the Methodists of that growing city showed in a substantial way their interest in the noble enterprise which Brother Ellis is seeking to carry forward. It has long been their habit to do things upon a large and generous scale.

The Young Woman's Christian Association of the Industrial Institute and College, at Columbus, Miss., held its anniversary conference on March 21-23. Among those who were on the program, we noted the names of Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., of Starkville, Miss.; Miss Helen Wier, the accomplished granddaughter of Dr. T. C. Wier, of the

The above exhibit in the form of a two-color chart, 28x42 inches in size, together with three other striking missionary charts, may be secured from the Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Twenty-five cents in stamps or silver pays for all four. Order to-day.

North Mississippi Conference, and Dr. Thomas Carter, of Nashville, Tenn.

Plans are being perfected for the organization of a City Church Extension Society in New Orleans.

Dr. S. H. Werlein spent Monday and Tuesday of this week in New Orleans and favored our office with a call. He was looking splendidly, and spoke most encouragingly of his work at Alexandria.

Last Sunday was Cradle Roll Day at the McDonoghville Church of this city, and the pastor, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, preached a special sermon to the children. About twenty Cradle Roll Certificates were given out and four infants were baptized.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, the pastor, is holding revival services at Ruston, La., in which he is being assisted by Dr. J. W. Moore, the efficient pastor of First Church of New Orleans. The meeting has been in progress for ten days, and reports from Ruston indicate that much good is being accomplished.

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have sent in two or more subscribers within the past few days: Rev. J. C. Price, Lisbon, La., 6; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss., 3; Rev. W. D. McCullough, Ruleville, Miss., 3; Rev. J. W. Thompson, Meadville, Miss., 2.

Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Wendel of Pontotoc, Miss., have issued invitations to a dinner to be given on Brother Wendel's birthday, next Saturday, April 5th, complimentary to his Official Board. Bishop Murrab is expected to be present, and will remain over the Sabbath to preach for our Pontotoc congregation.

A news dispatch from Saucier, Miss., to the Poyune, dated March 28, stated that our church at that place recently closed the greatest revival that has been held there for many years. Rev. L. F. Alford, the pastor, was assisted by his brother, Rev. J. M. Alford, of Standard, La. There were 17 accessions to the Church.

Under date of March 30, Rev. R. H. Harper, of Natchitoches, La., writes: "The presiding elder, Rev. H. W. May, authorizes me to state in the Advocate that the Preachers' Institute of the Alexandria District, announced to be held in Natchitoches, April 10-11, is postponed, and will be held in connection with the District Conference at Columbia."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey was in New Orleans last Saturday and Sunday, and on Monday morning attended the meeting of the New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Association. He has large plans on foot for the advancement of the Sunday school interests of the Louisiana Conference. Among other things, his plans include another series of District Institutes such as those which were held last week and a State Convention of Methodist Sunday School Workers.

Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamill, of Nashville, Tenn., spent last Saturday and Sunday in New Orleans in the interest of our Sunday school work. An institute was conducted at the Rayne Memorial Church Saturday afternoon and night, and a general Sunday school rally was held at the First Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon. Dr. Hamill also preached an able sermon to the Rayne Memorial congregation on Sunday, at 11 a.m. The splendid service which Dr. and Mrs. Hamill have lately rendered the Sunday school cause in Louisiana is much appreciated.

We are indebted to Dr. Gross Alexander, our brilliant Book Editor, for a copy of his lately issued pamphlet, entitled "The Resurrection of Jesus from the Dead." It is a fresh and suggestive study of that great event in the earthly career of our Lord, and it was a happy thought to give it to the Church at this Easter season. This able discussion appears in the April number of The Methodist Review Quarterly.

We have had on our table for some days the Annual of the Louisiana Conference for the year 1912. It is well edited and arranged, and the mechanical work is of a high order. The pamphlet is adorned with excellent pictures of Dr. C. W. Carter and Dr. S. S. Keener, two Louisiana ministers who passed to the Church Triumphant last year. Dr. F. S. Parker excels as a secretary, as well as in many other things.

President C. M. Chapman, of the Port Gibson Female College, writes: "We are closing one of the most successful sessions of the College. The outlook for the future is good. Rev. C. F. Emery, of Vicksburg, will preach our Commencement sermon, and the annual missionary sermon will be preached by Rev. J. Y. Bowman, of Utica, Miss. Rev. J. S. Purcell, of Rolling Fork, Miss., will deliver the Commencement address."

Rev. H. G. Roberts, who a little more than a year ago transferred from the Mississippi to the North Mississippi Conference, is having a successful pastorate at Crenshaw. Of his work, he says: "We are moving forward. We paid off our church debt of $1000 last fall, and have now purchased a nice little home for the pastor in a most desirable part of the town." We make grateful acknowledgment to Brother Roberts for a club of 13 subscribers to the Advocate.

We regret to learn that the father of Mrs. W. W. Jones, the wife of our pastor at Carrollton, Miss., was seriously injured in the storm that recently swept across Northeast Mississippi, but are pleased to know that he is at present doing well and that the indications point to a prompt recovery. It was also reported that Sister Jones, who was visiting the home folk, had been hurt, but we are happy to be informed that this report was not true.

Just as we are closing our forms, we are in receipt of the following dispatch from Rev. W. W. Woollard, our pastor at Columbus, Miss.: "Mrs. Tailulah H. Lipscomb, the mother of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, died last evening, March 31. A saint has gone home to God." Sister Lipscomb was, indeed, a rare woman, who wrought nobly for the Master, and whose influence will long abide. We extend heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

A note from Rev. B. P. Jacob, the presiding elder of the Winona District, brings the sad news of the death of James McCoy, the youngest son of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Haifaere, which occurred in the parsonage at Kilmichael, Miss., after a week's illness, on March 27. We deeply sympathize with this stricken father and mother in their sore bereavement, and pray that God may have them in his gracious keeping. A memoir, which was received too late for this issue, will appear next week.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., who is in much demand among the brethren for revival work, writes us as follows: "Please state that I still have one week in August (including the 5th Sunday) and also a few dates in September and October open for evangelistic engagements. If any of the brethren can use me, I should be pleased to have them let me know. I should like to give the date following the fifth Sunday in August to some pastor on the Gulf coast who needs assistance."

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the accomplished President of Whitworth College, occupied the pulpit of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church of this city at both the morning and evening hour last Sunday. It was the Editor's pleasure to hear him at the 11 o'clock service, and the discourse was a charming one, eloquent, spiritual, and really helpful. Dr. Cooper is an able preacher, but even better than his intellectual gifts are his sunny disposition and his warm-hearted brotherliness. He is deservedly one of the most popular and genuinely loved Methodist ministers in this section.

Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Sherman, Miss., in a note to the Editor, says: "At two places on my charge—Chesterville and Belden—the people suffered considerable loss from the cyclone which passed through this section on March 13. Our church at Chesterville, an excellent two-story building, was blown off its pillars and damaged a good deal. We hope to get it fixed at an early date." We regret to hear of the misfortune of the people in these localities, and we trust that a favoring Providence may enable them to recover soon from the disasters which have come upon them.

We are indebted to Rev. E. K. Means, of Arcadia, La., for a copy of the program of his Easter exercises, which was issued in the form of a beautiful pamphlet—by far the most attractive that we have seen this year. The congregations on Easter Sunday were large and attentive, and a good collection was taken for the Ruston Orphanage. Referring to his work, Brother Means says: "I find Arcadia delightfully pleasant, after a pastorate of three months. I am the only resident pastor, and, in consequence, I find plenty to do. The outlook is most encouraging."

Mr. W. E. Gorham, of Jennings, La., sends us the following item of news: "On Tuesday, March 18, Mr. Ellis A. Hoffpauir, the son of Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, of the Louisiana Conference, and Miss Clara Mae Mabry were married in the Methodist Church at Woodsboro, Texas. The groom is employed as one of its bookkeepers by the Calcasieu Trust Company and Savings Bank, of Lake Charles, La., and the bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. R. M. Mabry, a prominent citizen of Woodsboro, Texas." We extend to the contracting parties our congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. J. B. Fulton, our pastor on the St. Francisville (La.) charge, in a note to this office, says: "Our second quarterly meeting convened at the Star Hill Church, on Saturday, March 22. The congregation was good, and the sermon was excellent. The business session of the conference was an occasion of profit to all who attended. The Easter service the next day was a beautiful and impressive one. We also had a fine Easter service at Wilheim, and an impressive discourse in the evening at St. Francisville." Manifestly Brother Coleman, the able presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, is magnifying his office, though nothing less was expected of him.

Information has reached us of the death of Rev. G. H. Jacobs, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, which occurred on March 26. We know none of the particulars of his illness and decease, and we hope that some one familiar with the facts will at once furnish them to the Advocate. Brother Jacobs was admitted into the traveling connection in 1835, and for a number of years rendered faithful service in the itinerancy. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved. (Since writing the above we have received the following message from Rev. T. H. Porter, our pastor at Olive Branch, Miss.: "We buried the remains of Rev. G. H. Jacobs here at Olive Branch on Thursday, the 27th ult. He died in the full triumph of a Christian faith at his home in Memphis, Tenn., on the day preceding.")

The Lake Charles American Press states that the marriage of Mr. John Stockwell and Miss Lou Howell in that city, of which mention was made in last week's Advocate, was an occasion of much interest. The church was beautifully decorated and the attendance was unusually large. The groom was accompanied by Mr. A. M. Mayo, and the bride by her father, Mr. R. P. Howell. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. K. W. Dodson, who was assisted by Rev. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Lafayette District. The local paper speaks in the highest terms of both the bride and groom. Brother Stockwell has been selected by Bishop Lambuth as the industrial missionary among the band of workers which he is soon to carry to Africa, and he will at once enter upon a course of training at Nashville for his labors in that distant field. A notable feature of the wedding of this happy couple was that it took place on March 19, the anniversary of the birth of David Livingstone, the greatest of African explorers and missionaries.

The little village of Oloh, Miss., was made sad on Easter morning by the death of Grandmother Collius, as she was called by many. She was about 60 years old and was connected with the Baptist Church for 25 years, during which time she was a consistent member. Because of the absence of her pastor, the writer conducted her funeral service, which was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. She leaves eight sons, three daughters, about thirty grandchildren, and many other relatives to mourn her death. She lived to see all her children grown and eight of them married. Six of the boys and two of the girls are members of the Methodist Church.
 A. H. STEELE.

Mrs. ANNIE M. PUTNAM, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. HARVEY, was born Nov. 12, 1833, and died March 21, 1913. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1888, under the preaching of Rev. T. J. O'Neil. She was married to J. L. Putnam on Apr. 27, 1905. It is said of her that from the time of her conversion until her death, she lived a consistent Christian life. She expressed herself just before her death as being very happy and ready to go. She leaves her husband, three children, a father, mother, three brothers, three sisters, and a host of friends to mourn her departure. Surely, they mourn not as those who have no hope.
 Her pastor, J. T. ABNEY.

On March 10 the Angel of Death entered the home of Brother and Sister Gossett and took their little daughter, NELLIE, to dwell in heaven. She was only 5 months and 2 days of age. While she was so young, yet all who knew her were charmed by her beauty and angelic brightness, which ever illumined her sweet face. She was such an affectionate child, and it is so hard for us to be compelled to give up such a jewel. But God, who doeth all things well, will not fail to keep us in mind during this sad hour. To submit to his will at this time is the only thing that we can do to bind up the wounded heart. While little Nellie's death is a great loss to the home, it is a gain to heaven.
 W. F. McCORRY.

Our heart was made sad on the night of March 17, when on our return from Sunday's appointment we were informed of the death of Brother M. M. CRUSE. He was a little past middle age, but had been a sufferer for some time, though we never heard him complain. He was a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, and was always willing to do anything that he thought would build up his church or the community. He leaves a wife, four daughters, three sons, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his death. He was the superintendent of the Sunday school and the leader of the choir, and as such will be greatly missed. However, we believe our loss is heaven's gain. May God bless the bereaved ones, and may they be so consecrated to his service that they will meet their departed loved one on the banks of that river where no parting words are spoken.
 A. H. STEELE.

EDWARD LUCIAN COWAN was born in Pass Christian, Harrison County, Miss., Sept. 22, 1833. He was the eldest son of R. G. and Belle Gertrude Adams Cowan. On April 5, 1906, he was happily married to Miss Susie Belle Fullilove. They shared the joys and sorrows of life together until Feb. 10, 1913, when, after many weary months of suffering from a dreadful malady which had baffled medical skill, he passed away. He stood the storm of life bravely and laid himself down without a murmur to await the final call. He leaves a father, three brothers, four sisters, a wife and child, and a host of friends and loved ones to mourn his death. But they are not without hope. Brother Cowan was a true friend, a modest Christian gentleman, and an acceptable member of the M. E. Church, South. He died in the faith and we know where to find him.

 C. J. STAPP, P. C.

On March 22 the oldest member of the Daleville Church, and one of the oldest Mississippi Methodists, crossed the river, when Sister M. P. MORROW gladly answered the call of her Heavenly Father to come home. She was born in York District, South Carolina, July 28, 1822. She joined the Daleville Methodist Church in 1843. Sadness filled the hearts of a large crowd at Andrews Chapel Sunday, when her body was buried. For many years she had been as a mother to that congregation. There have been few soldiers of the Cross who have been permitted to fight in the Master's cause as long as she. For nearly seventy years she had been a member of our Church and a diligent worker in her community. Although we regret much to lose her and extend our deepest sympathy to her two sons and daughters in their loss of such a mother, and to her two sisters in their bereavement, yet we know that her reward was merited and that she was worthy of a better world.
 W. N. THOMAS.

Brother HOLLIS H. WILLIAMS was born July 31, 1859, near Bethesda Church, in Montgomery County, Miss., where he lived practically all of his life, and died at his father's old homestead on March 13, 1913. His death is mourned by a wife, several children and grandchildren, besides a host of other relatives and friends. Brother Williams was a life-long member of the Church, and had all of its interests at heart. He was always trying to do something that would help some one to a higher life. There was no compromising with him on anything that was not right; for he hated shams and formalities, and believed in pure, Holy Ghost religion—an experimental religion. The church will miss him, but we feel that though he is dead, he yet lives. As a citizen he was patriotic. He always tried to cast a ballot for the man who would best serve the people in office. As a father and husband, he was truly devoted. In his home he seemed to be one of the kindest and most thoughtful men I ever knew. Weep not, fond relatives, for your loss is his gain.
 WISTER D. BENNETT.

For nearly a century the days of the earthly pilgrimage of Mrs. S. A. PERRY continued. She was born at Meden, in West Tennessee, May 17, 1813, and died in the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Whiting, in Coahoma County, Mississippi, March 8, 1913. In early childhood she joined the Methodist Church, and throughout her long life—in young womanhood, as a wife, as a mother, and as a grandmother—she adorned the gospel of Christ, her Savior. It was my privilege to know her, as pastor, in the later years of her life. Her Bible was her constant companion, and even in her last illness it lay upon her bedside. While a great sufferer, she never complained, but was ever cheerful, trustful, and feared no evil, for God was with her. Surrounded by a large concourse of relatives, friends, grandchildren, and her daughters—Mrs. Whiting and Mrs. Campbell—themselves faithful members of the Methodist Church, her body was laid to rest on March 9, appropriate services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Ward of Friar's Point. Her spirit has returned to God, who gave it. The memory of the blest is precious.

Lisbon, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am just in from famous old Arizona, the place that has turned out so many boys and girls that have graced our country. The good work there still goes on. We had four delightful services. Dr. J. A. Parker preached our Easter sermon. It was good to sit and listen to such an eminent divine preach.

Alexandria (La.) District.

Dear Doctor Meek: The outlook on the Alexandria District is bright and hopeful. The District will assess for support of the preachers, about $1200 more than the assessments of last year. Two of the preachers are living in new parsonages built since Conference—S. L. Riggs at Oakdale, and B. H. Sheppard at Carson. New churches will be built at Oakdale and Colfax. The new church at Natchitoches will be ready for use in a few months. The slogan of the district is a revival in every charge, and an increase in the collections for missionary and benevolent work.

H. W. MAY,
Presiding Elder.

Siden, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am glad to report that our church here is on the up-grade in every respect. Our mid-week prayer meeting is very well attended, though there is still room for improvement. At the prayer service we study the Sunday school lesson for the ensuing Sunday, and after Brother Armour makes a talk on the lessons, any one desiring to do so has the privilege to ask questions, make suggestions, etc. The meeting is altogether informal. The Sunday school and Epworth Leagues are doing fine work. The young folks take a great deal of interest in them. Brother H. C. Morehead has charge of the Bible Class in the Sunday school and his talks are helpful and instructive. I am sorry to report that he and his most estimable wife have been on the sick list for some time and, therefore, not able to be with us much. However, as the weather improves, we hope to have these servants of God with us every Sabbath. We certainly do miss them. Our congregations are good and Brother Armour gives us earnest and helpful sermons. This is his second year with us and he is growing. His sermons show that he spends much time in preparing them. He visits his people, too. I have heard no one complain that the preacher "does not come to see us."

South Side Church, Corinth, Miss.

I feel that I should write, briefly, something of the work at South Side, Corinth. We have a membership of about 160, and a Sunday school of about 75. The average attendance at Sunday school for the past three months was a little more than 67 per cent. We have a good prayer meeting, composed mostly of the young people. The regular Sunday services are well attended; we don't believe in empty benches up here. The official board is made up of men who love the Church, and they are loyal to their preacher. They are ready to undertake anything that will advance the interests of the Kingdom. It is, indeed, a pleasure to be associated with such men. Financially, this seems to be a banner year with the South Side Church. We make regular monthly contributions to our Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss., the Sunday school contributes monthly to missions, and at our first quarterly conference, March 17, pastor's and presiding elder's salaries were reported over one-fourth paid. We use the weekly offering plan. Our women are true and loyal and have an excellent W. M. S. They are doing a grand work. I never saw women more enthusiastic in their work than these. They never knock, either, but they sometimes pound the pastor's family without mercy. They have done this twice already this year. My local preachers—Brothers W. D. and S. Q. Bass, and R. H. Kemp—are men who love the Church, and they are a great help to me. Happy the pastor with such moral support as this! We hope for a great revival this year, and will have a meeting the last of April with Brother W. M. Campbell, of Minter City, to lead us. We are hoping for a great season of refreshing—a genuine revival. Pray for us.

TO EPWORTH ERA SUBSCRIBERS.

The editors of the Era find themselves called upon to make an unusual apology. The occasion of the apology is the failure of many new subscribers to the Era to receive the March number of the magazine. The explanation is unusual in connection with a religious periodical. The subscription list expanded so rapidly during the month of February that all the calculations of the publishers were totally upset. Not enough copies of the Era were printed to go round. From the time the forms were put on the press until they were taken off the mailing list grew beyond the estimate of copies needed.

The editors exceedingly regret the disappointment that came to so many new friends in not receiving the Era containing the Easter program. But, on the other hand, they feel a justifiable pride in the popularity of the magazine which caused the disappointment, and they are confident that the new subscribers to the journal will have all the keener appreciation of the Era because of this evidence of its increasing acceptability.

THE JACKSON (MISS.) DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The district conference of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, will be held at Flora, May 13-16, 1913. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. R. P. Fikes on Tuesday night, the 13th inst, and the conference proper will convene Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. Wednesday afternoon will be devoted mainly to the consideration of Sunday school and Epworth League work, and Thursday afternoon to Missions.

The following committees are appointed: License to Preach—A. F. Smith, R. E. Rutledge, and O. S. Lewis. Admission on Trial and Readmission—N. B. Harmon, J. D. Ellis, and W. A. Terry. Local Deacons and Elder's Orders—C. N. Gulce, J. B. King, and R. A. Sibley, Jr.

The pastors will please see that the delegates are elected promptly, and send their names, together with the names of local preachers and others entitled to attend, to Rev. G. P. McKeown, Flora, Miss. Let us pray earnestly for the power of the Holy Spirit to rest upon our meeting.

THE IDEAL INSTRUMENT for every member of the family, because it meets all requirements of both the piano and the player. The player mechanism is contained within the compass of the ordinary piano case and in no way interferes with the regular playing of the piano.

THE ADVANTAGES of the Kimball 88-Note Player are manifold in the simplicity of mechanism and the ease of operation, but of the greatest interest to music-loving people is its wonderful efficiency in musical effects.

COME AND SEE IT hear it. Let us demonstrate the wonderful possibilities, and at the same time tell you how you can own one of these celebrated instruments on almost your own terms.

ABSORBINE JR

EFFECTIVE IN Dental Surgery

For Pyorrhea, Spongy Gums, Abscesses, Sinuses and all ulcerative conditions affecting the mouth and gums.

Because it is a true germicide:

Chemical Laboratory examinations show that a 25 per cent. aqueous solution of Absorbine, Jr. destroys Streptococcus Pyogenes.

Because it is non-toxic:

Willard H. Morse, M. D., Consulting
Chemist, Hartford, Conn., reporting on Absorbine, Jr., says: "It is free from toxicity, irritating properties, or other harmful action."

Because it is non-destructive of tissue:
It gently stimulates capillary circulation and thus helps to heal.

For cleansing the teeth.

Absorbine, Jr. mixed with powdered pumice stone is very effective, and its sedative properties relieve irritation.

Absorbine, Jr. Acacia solution, compounded by the following formula:

1 Part Absorbine, Jr.
3 Parts to 4 Parts of Acacia, U. S. P.
1 Part Sterilized Water is recommended as a Mouth Wash, and will be found effective in relieving pain and soreness after teeth extraction. It destroys Diphtheria Bacillus in two minutes and should be an effective spray or gargle for any infected sore throat.

Dr. Elias A. Keith, D. D. S., 431 Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "After extracting an ulcerated tooth, I pack the socket with cotton, saturated with Absorbine, Jr. and leave for several minutes. For such a condition,
I know of nothing better."

Absorbine, Jr. is sold by leading druggists at $1.00 for 4-ounce bottle and $2.00 for 12-ounce bottle; or it will be delivered to you, all charges paid and safe delivery guaran-

EASY MONEY.

The attention of the pastors of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is respectfully called to the following short but significant post-card message, which explains itself:

"Rev. W. F. McMurtry, D.D., 1025
Brook Street, Louisville, Ky.

"My dear Brother: I mailed the full amount of our assessment on Church Extension to Brother Brown, Treasurer, to-day. Had very little trouble to get the money with use of those charts and folders.

"Yours truly,

"A. G. GAYLE, P. C.,

"Plattin, Mo.

"March 18, 1913."

The office of the Board stands ready to supply any pastor with charts and folders, as it did Brother Gayle, and believes that a judicious use of the same will secure equally good results in every pastoral charge in the Church.

MRS. POWELL ALMOST DEAD.

Dry Ridge, Ky. — "I could hardly walk across the room," says Mrs. Lydia Powell, of Dry Ridge, "before I tried Cardui. I was so poorly, I was almost dead. Now, I can walk four miles and do my work with much more ease. I praise Cardui for my wonderful cure." Cardui is successful in benefiting sick women, because it is composed of ingredients, that act specifically on the womanly constitution, relieving headache, backache, irregularity, misery and distress. Only a good medicine could show such continual increase in popularity as Cardui has, for the past 50 years. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic.

The "Council Daily" is the official organ of the Missionary Council which convenes at Birmingham, Ala., April 9-17. If you have not already sent in your subscription, do so now. You cannot afford to miss this opportunity of keeping in daily touch with this great meeting of ours.

Who Will Speak at the Council Meeting.

Much interest is centering about the public speakers for the Council session. We are fortunate in having secured Bishop Lambuth, recently returned from Africa, and Dr. W. W. Plinson, direct from the Orient. These will occupy the pulpit on Sunday. Bishop McCoy will consecrate the class of deaconesses on Monday night, April 14. Bishop Lambuth will consecrate the foreign missionaries on Tuesday evening, when the subject for discussion will be "The Qualifications for the Foreign Field." Dr. George Detwiler will conduct the devotional studies each day at noon. Those who have enjoyed the pastorate of Dr. Detwiler will know that a treat is in store for the Council members this year. Returned missionaries from the foreign fields will fill one evening, while deaconesses and home mission workers will fill another.—Missionary Bulletin.

The Press Work of the Woman's Missionary Society.

This is now destined to be a great arm of service to woman's work in missions. It does not receive the support it should from the auxiliaries. Not all women have an easy trick with the pen; others do not like to appear in print; still others are indifferent in the matter. It is too much trouble. The Council goes to great expense to organize a Press Bureau and sends out information broadcast which meets a cruel fate. Sometimes it is condemned to be burned—a martyr's fate; sometimes it is consigned to the seclusion of the waste-paper bag. Oftentimes the waters of Lethe pour over it, and it never reaches the missionary meeting. Arrangements have been made by the Council Press Superintendent with the various church papers to allow the women of the patrolling Conferences space in which to print items of interest and importance to their work. If an exchange could be agreed upon among the Press Superintendents, who write for these columns, so that each could see how the others do it, it might stimulate interest. This work requires that which all other church work does: "line upon line; precept upon precept; here a little, there a little." "The continual dripping of water will wear away stone;" so with patient, persistent effort this work will succeed against all odds.—A. C. Y.

Some Facts About Missions.

Last year an average of 400 souls per day were brought into the Church out of heathenism. This is an average of 2800 added every week. Bishop Lambuth recently visited a group of churches in Africa where one out of every ten members is definitely set aside to carry the gospel to others. In the churches in Southern Methodism we set aside for this purpose one in about six thousand.

It took modern missions one hundred years to win the first million converts out of heathenism. The next million was won in twelve years. The next million in six years. The day is coming when we are going to win millions every year; that is, if we measure up to the opportunities which God has given us.

The most aggressive churches and denominations along all lines are those that do most for missions. "The light that shines farthest shines brightest at home."

"Give of thy sons to bear the message glorious,

Give of thy wealth to speed them on their way;

Pour out thy soul for them in prayer victorious,

And all thou spendest Jesus will repay."

Auxiliary Presidents.

Have you appointed an agent to secure subscriptions to the Council Daily? Time is short; let us act quickly.

Attention, Third Vice Presidents of the Louisiana Conference.

As the first quarter was so far advanced at the time of our Annual Meeting, Mrs. D. C. Worrell, of New Orleans, the newly elected Conference Third Vice President, has asked me to attend to the reports at this time. So you will please send them to me prior to April 1.

In reference to the small number of leaflets sent out each quarter, I will say that if an auxiliary desires to use more than the number sent, it may order the additional number from either the Conference Third Vice President or direct from Miss Head.

If you wish to read a powerful message on stewardship, discussing the features of a standard missionary church, get a copy of "With You Always," by Courtland H. Fenn, from the Laymen's Missionary Movement, 1 Madison Ave., N. Y.; price 20 cents. It might be a good plan to present a copy to your pastor, with a request that he preach a special sermon on Christian Stewardship, if you have not had one during the quarter.

The answer to Question 4, "Have you made an appeal to all the women of your church for an offering of prayer, service, and material support for our woman's work?" will cover a great deal of personal work. In order to stress the power of prayer, and realization that each one of us is possessed with a certain personality which gives us a peculiar access to a certain other one, I have used in my local auxiliary the following plan, which I recommend to others: Make a list of the women of your church and congregation, and ask the faithful members to select one or more from this list for whom they will pray and with whom they will talk on this subject as God gives them utterance. This work should be done privately and tactfully, and ought to prove effective in developing our women, as well as winning the earnest co-operation of those who are now idle.

To those who are using C. H. Adams' "Studies in the Gospel of John," one of the books prescribed in our course of study, I would recommend "St. John, in the Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges," by Rev. A. Plummer. Price, $1.00. It is a condensed and helpful commentary for the study of the text.

With the intensely interesting book, "China's New Day," on our study tables, and that splendid book, "How to Use China's New Day," the number and efficiency of classes should be increased.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

At Leesville a Home department has been organized, with Mrs. P. L. Ferguson as superintendent; a Cradle Roll, with Mrs. J. G. Palmer as superintendent and Mrs. R. J. Oneil as assistant; and an Elementary department, with Mrs. Avis Jones as superintendent. Miss Mary Mitchell, one of the public school teachers, has been elected leader for the Teacher Training class.

Bishop Atkins makes it a rule to adjourn his cabinet meeting and carry the presiding elders in a body to the Sunday School Anniversary when one is held at one of his Conference sessions. This is a high tribute to the Sunday school work, by one who was a specialist in this line before he became a Bishop. It also indicates how important he deems the presiding elder to be as a Sunday school leader.

The pastor and church officials at Winnfield are now settling on a plan for a new church, which is to have a large auditorium and ample quarters for the Sunday school. The structure will cost about $15,000, and the pastor believes that they have the best plan to be found. Thus the good work goes on. A modern Sunday school cannot be run in a half-century-sgo "meeting-house."

In the past we have had pastor specialists, preacher specialists, church-building specialists, debt-raising specialists, and many other kinds of specialists, but seldom have we heard of a preacher being sent to a certain place to build up a fine Sunday school, as his specialty. But rare as such cases have been, such a line of leaders are now in demand and the Church must proceed without delay to produce them. Some of our pastors, who are in the same towns with pastors of other churches who have had special training in Sunday school work, have found this out in the school of experience, in seeing others outstrip them in Sunday school growth and efficiency. The colleges where our preachers are educated must make provision for this knowledge and training. The Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala., which is one of the schools that have been considering the matter, has put in a good, practical course on Sunday school work. And since the courts have settled the Vanderbilt University ownership in favor of the Church, it is high time that we were completing the endowment of the Sunday School Chair in the Theological Department of that institution, a work which was begun nearly eight years ago. Thirty per cent of our Children's Day collections go for this purpose.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

Did you get that Teacher Training class and Wesley Adult Bible class organized? One says, yes. That's good! I hear one say, no. What is the matter?

The Carthage, Taylorville, and Sartia charges will be the places visited next by the Field Secretary. Hurry up, country pastors, and get in your application for an engagement.

The Field Secretary was at Sandy Hook on Easter Sunday, and visited the Great Southern Lumber Company's camps. The people in these camps belong to several denominations, and they are out there without preaching of any kind and no Sunday school. The seed for the Master should be sown and Methodism should be planted there.

I notice in a report on home statistics, that 350,000 boys run away from home every year, and 70,000 of them become tramps. What is the cause of this? What is the matter with the homes of to-day? How many of these run-a-way boys went out of our Sunday schools and churches? Christ said, "Feed my sheep;" and again he said, "Feed my lambs."

Hickory Sunday school has three organized Bible classes, and a Teacher Training class of about a dozen members. The church is divided into Sunday school rooms by means of curtains, which can easily be removed for the preaching service. Mr. O. S. Hopkins, who is cashier of the local bank, is the superintendent, and he uses business sense in his Sunday school as well as in his banking work.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

May we not have 75 new Teacher Training classes at once?

May we not have 100 new organized Teen Age classes during 1913?

Rev. J. H. Felt's class of boys, now numbers 18, and 17 were present on a recent Sunday.

The goal for the Okolona Sunday school is 250. A progressive Adult Class could easily bring about such a result.

Rev. O. P. Armour always has good news along Sunday school lines to report, and each report indicates large improvement.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, Como, has a flourishing Sunday school. Great things will now be expected of him, as he has moved into his splendid new church.

I wonder why all Sunday school folk can't join the "Happy Life League." The only condition of membership is that every member shall endeavor to make one heart happier each day.

Have an extra paper, magazine or Adult Student for the stranger in your Sunday school, and have a man selected to give him a song book at the proper time, opened at the proper page—a little courtesy is of wondrous help.

Dr. Richard Warriner, of our First Church of Corinth, entertained his class of Teen Age boys very delightfully on Thursday night, March 20. Dr. Warriner has 18 fine boys in this class, and they and their "girls" made a merry party. Dr. Warriner takes his boys on a camping trip every summer and this they greatly enjoy.

Every class and Sunday school should belong to the T. I. U. Club—too many already belong to the T. I. D. Club. The T. I. U.s try to make everything in the Church and State a success, and the T. I. D.s are metaphors and literal mill stones around the neck of progress. T. I. U. stands for "Talk it up" and T. I. D. stands for "Talk it down." Each one can place himself.

Mr. Vanderbilt once said, "I'd rather travel with an engineer with a Bible in his pocket than to carry heavy accident insurance. A Bible in the pocket of any man or woman, boy or girl, is a safeguard, an inspiration, and an education." We all agree to this; then why, oh! why don't we carry and use them?

No class is so dull that it usually does not have some acknowledged or potential talent developed in some of the members. Note the success of a class which had a thoroughly equipped stenographer, photographer and electrician. These men said to the teacher and to the superintendent of

A NOTE FROM RULEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: Our church at Ruleville was totally wrecked by the wind storm of last Thursday night. There was no insurance. Our parsonage also was damaged, but not destroyed. One chimney was blown down, one room was craned some, and the columns of the front gallery were moved at the bottom, leaving them craned. The roof of one room was damaged slightly. None of my family were hurt. Many homes were damaged in the town, and several were badly wrecked. The families were in them, but escaped unhurt. One house was turned over with the family in it, but no one was injured aside from a few scratches and bruises. The property loss from the storm is variously estimated from $150,000 to $200,000, but no lives were lost.

On the Sunday night following the storm, which occurred on Thursday night, a fire alarm was given at midnight. A block of brick stores was burned to the ground. In these were a garage, "The Ruleville Record" plant, two millinery stores, a picture show outfit, and a pressing club. All but two autos were saved; 2 trunks and a few goods were saved from the millinery stores, and the pressing club rescued about all its property. All the rest went up in flames. The property loss was anywhere from $60,000 to $100,000. The buildings were insured.

The people are busy repairing their homes, stores, lights, telephones, banks, hotels, etc. We hope to replace the old wrecked frame church with a nice brick building as soon as we can get on our feet. We shall need and expect liberal help from our Board of Church Extension.

The Baptist pastor and people tendered us the use of their church on the second and fourth Sundays of each month. So we will have preaching in their church, and Sunday school in the Masonic Hall, by the kindness of our Masonic brethren. The indications are now that we are to have a disastrous flood from the Mississippi. May the good Lord spare us.

I have announced a meeting to begin here on the 4th Sunday in April. Brother L. W. Cain has promised to be with us. W. D. McCULLOUGH.
March 28, 1913.

A TORNADO AT LOUISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Mr. Meek: At 1 a. m. Friday of last week, March 18, a cyclone struck Louisville, Miss., from the west, passing directly to the east. It passed through the residential portion of the town, just one block north of the business street. It was only about 150 yards in width at any place, but it destroyed everything in its path. About fifteen residences, some of the best in town, were wrecked, beside some 30 negro cabins and a like number of barns and outhouses.

The Presbyterian church, U. S. A., and the Catholic church were completely demolished. The Methodist church, which stood just one block south of the storm's path, was moved about eight inches to the east at the front end and badly craned. It is not safe for services in its present condition, and it will cost perhaps $100 to put it in repair. We are using the school building for our Sunday school and will occupy the Baptist church for preaching services till our church is ready.

Several persons were slightly injured, and three were seriously hurt—one fatally. Mrs. J. Tabor, living two miles east of town, received injuries from which she died the following Monday. That many were not killed seems miraculous, and while the town is badly damaged—about $15,000 in property being destroyed—we are grateful to God that it is not worse with us.

Asking an interest in the prayers of the brethren, I am

Yours fraternally,
S. B. MYERS.

A SELECT SUMMER CLUB.

Located high up in the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina, one mile west of the picturesque town of Hendersonville, and overlooking that city by some two hundred feet, is what is proving to be one of the South's most popular, attractive and exclusive summer resorts—South Carolina Club, a summer club for select Southerners, organized by a party of progressive South Carolinians.

This Club is truly richly favored with those features which go to make an inviting summer place. A cool, bracing climate, unrivaled view of all the high mountains in the Blue Ridge, a tranquil lake bed fed by bold mountain streams; cool springs; lovely drive and walkways, rhododendron, oak and chestnut groves, and a commodious and inviting Club House. It is also fortunately located within a few minutes trolley ride from the shopping district and railroad station of Hendersonville.

The management of the South Carolina Club has spared no pains to maintain a select club for Southern families of refinement and culture, and the plan upon which it is operated not only accomplishes this, but reduces the living expenses of members to a minimum. Membership can only be obtained through the purchase of a share of stock, which participates in the earnings of the Club and gives the holder the privilege of all Club benefits, as well as meals at the Club House at a very low rate. Excellent cottage sites are reserved for members, and the erection of the building looked after by the management if so desired. Both the Club House and the cottage enjoy all modern conveniences, electric lights, baths, telephones, etc., while the Club grounds are easily and quickly reached from the railroad station and shopping district of Hendersonville, by trolley.

The Club is not an experiment, but a proven success, demonstrated by the fact that the best families from several Southern States have chosen it as their summer homes since it first opened in 1911, and that new members are expected from practically every part of the South the coming season. Full particulars and illustrated booklet may be had free of charge by writing the Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. Howard Caldwell, Columbia, S. C.—Advertisement.

FROM RAYVILLE-DELHI CHARGE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Plenty of work for the Master on this charge! And the people are willing to do it if they are put at it. Their motto seems to be one used by Mr. Wesley—"At it; all at it; always at it." The brethren of Delhi have furnished their church with modern, sanitary chairs, at a cost of $206. They will hold their spring revival April 10, with Rev. J. J. Kelly as preacher, and Prof. R. N. Jeffrey as gospel singer.

The Rayville church is making steady progress. The enrollment of the Sunday school has increased 100 per cent since January 1. Dr. and Mrs. Hamill have just closed a fine Sunday School Institute here. The Epworth League is growing every week. The Woman's Society is vigorous and spiritual. They are a real blessing to the community. After having finished the study of "The Church in Open Country," they are deeply interested in "Mormonism—The Islam of America." Rayville will entertain the next Annual Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society, next March. The Conference for Laymen and Preachers, Monroe District, will be held in Rayville, April 3.

Rev. Brisco Carter, presiding elder of the Ruston District, has just closed a seven days' meeting at Rayville. His series of sermons was a practical and devotional exposition of Paul's First Epistle to Timothy. His style is unique, original, and convincing. He drives his Gospel nails and then clinches them. As one said of Bishop Candler's preaching, "What he says, has both teeth and claws—it bites and scratches." Carter knows how to reach the conscience. The church was greatly blessed and aroused. Several applications for church membership were made. Nine children were dedicated to the Lord by baptism. Through the generosity of a layman, doctrinal tracts will be distributed. The outlook for the year is hopeful and encouraging. These people are alert and responsive. A. INMAN TOWNSLEY, Pastor.

This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully. A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"Despise not little sins:
The gallant ship may sink,
Though only drop by drop
* * *

The old preachers were wont to dwell upon the wickedness of human nature: it seems to be the disposition of the up-to-date later ones to expatiate upon its goodness. The message of the latter is undoubtedly more pleasing, but the important question is, is it more Scriptural?

We recognize the importance of attractive methods in our Sunday school work, but we are inclined to think that some of the expedients that are being resorted to are, to express it mildly, of questionable value. Having class yells and whistling contests in the house of God is, in our humble judgment, going a bowshot too far. Let us progress, but not at a runaway pace.

It is reported that there has been inaugurated among the employees of one of the big Western railroads what is termed a "cheerfulness campaign." The following is an extract from a statement recently issued by those who are promoting this movement: "A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. Learn how to keep your troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills. Meet every one with a smile. A good-humored man or woman is always welcomed. Above all, give pleasure." This is good advice not only for railroad employees, but for everybody.

We occasionally see in some church paper a discussion as to what is the proper posture of the body in prayer. We confess that we feel comparatively little interest in such disputations. When a person prays the thing of consequence is not whether he stands, or sits, or kneels, but what the attitude of his soul is. True worship is spiritual—it has to do with the inner man. It is not to the spoken words of the lips, but to the undertone of the heart that God listens. When the human spirit bows in humility, penitence, adoration, and supplication before the Heavenly Father, there is no need to stickle about outward forms and ceremonies.

A lady decorator has come to the relief of a disturbed Chicago pastor, who has been troubled with sleeping members in his congregation. The minister feared that he was growing dull and that his sermons were having a somnoient effect; but the decorator declared that the fault is in the color scheme of the church. Here are her words: "How can a person listen to an address when the decorations of the church are inharmonious? The curtains are pink, the cushions red, and the decorations are yellow and blue, and as a result, the emotions of the audience are affected and drowsiness follows. What is needed is a different system of colors." We pass this information along that possibly it may comfort other brethren who have nappers in their pews.

THE DAY FOR REVIVALS NOT PASSED.

We sometimes hear it said that the day for revivals has passed and that this is an era of cultural Christianity. But such a statement has little to support it. Nearly two-thirds of our population are not connected with a religious organization of any kind. How are they to be reached except through evangelistic efforts. Revival meetings have done too much to build up the Church in days ago for men to speak carelessly of them as antiquated and no longer necessary. Put almost any congregation to the test, and you will discover that an overwhelmingly large per cent of those composing it were converted when a series of special services were being conducted.

Nor is there anything in the claim that the Gospel has lost its power and no longer reaches the consciences and stirs the hearts of men. Proclaimed with faith and with a proper note of urgency, it produces results to-day, just as it has always done. The noted evangelist, Billy Sunday, recently closed a seven-weeks' meeting in Columbus, Ohio, in which there were more than 18,000 conversions, and from which the Methodist Churches of that city received nearly 7000 members. It will not do to try to sneer at this great work as superficial and unenduring. After careful investigation and study, the Methodist pastors of Columbus officially gave it their hearty and enthusiastic commendation.

At the recent session of the Holston Conference Bishop Kilgo sounded loud and clear the evangelistic note; others caught it up and began to preach and work earnestly for the salvation of souls, and we are told that revival fires are now blazing throughout that section. God has not forsaken his Church, but is still ready to co-operate with us. Let us strike boldly out in the work of calling sinners to repentance, and he will not fail to send the Holy Spirit to re-enforce us. A sweeping revival is the crying need of Southern Methodism. No argument to prove this is required. When a Church of 1,900,000 members reports an annual gain of approximately 32,000, about 1.6 per cent, or about one new member for every fifty old ones, it is high time that we were falling upon our knees and calling upon the Heavenly Father to help us. It has been said that "God had all there was of General William Booth," and that this was the secret of his marvellous achievements. Would that he had all there is of every Methodist preacher! Speaking to the Baltimore Conference, which has just adjourned, Bishop Wilson uttered the following words which we wish that we could ring, like a trumpet blast, throughout all the borders of our widely extended Connection: "Whatever else you may do, you are a failure if you fail to have the Spirit save souls through you."

THE FADING CRESCENT.

The bow of peace grows brighter in Southern Europe, and the indications are that the cannons will soon cease to roar. After one of the most memorable sieges in modern history Adrianople has fallen before the Allied Armies; the city of Scutari is hard pressed, and the Turks have been beaten along the Tchataidja lines. Indeed, if the struggle were to continue much longer there is little doubt that even Constantinople would be menaced by the Balkan forces. But the Ottoman Government has appealed to the European Powers to intervene, and already they have taken up the task of mediation. To their entrance upon this role all the States at war with Turkey have given their approval, though Montenegro has declined to obey some of the orders issued by the Powers, and their warships are now blockading her chief port. But unless the unexpected should happen, we look for an early adjustment of the various points in dispute and the cessation of strife. And though Turkey will retain a foothold in Europe, we think there is little doubt that henceforth she will be almost exclusively an Asiatic power. We do not rejoice in the sufferings of her people, but we are glad to see "the fading Crescent beat back to its native East." The cruel oppression of the Moslem Government has long been one of the reproaches of the civilized world, and it is nothing more than retributive justice which has overtaken and humiliated the "unspeakable Turk." It is certainly to be hoped that the Great Powers, which claim to be Christian, will not seek to deprive the States of the Balkan Confederacy of the fruits of their well-won and costly victory.

HISTORIANS CONFIRMED BY THE SPADE.

We have no disposition to prolong in our columns the discussion of the issues raised in the brilliant paper by Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe which was recently published in the Advocate; but the following relating to discoveries in the city of Pompeii which was destroyed in the days of Imperial Rome (A. D. 79), and for which we are indebted to "The Christian Guardian" of Toronto, bears so pertinently upon the contentions made in that article that we cannot refrain from letting our readers see it:

"London 'Nature' tells us that the recent excavations of Prof. Spinazzola in Pompeii reveal the fact that the women were stirring things up politically in the city at the time of the great eruption. Evidence accumulates that when the catastrophe overtook the city, Pompeii was in the throes of some political agitation in which the women bore a leading part. The political inscriptions surrounding the bars in the saloons are in some cases signed by women. There are invitations to the voters to vote for feminist candidates. One candidate for office is indicted in a manifesto for opposing the demands of the women employees of the Thermopolion. It seems clear from the wording of the sentences that women did not have the vote, however. We wonder if they smashed windows, and if they had a Lloyd George to blow up."

"There is a pride which apes humility."

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

II.

AUSTRALIA.

New South Wales State.—The school teacher in school hours gives selected Bible lessons from a book provided for the purpose, but is not allowed to give sectarian teaching. Any minister of religion is entitled in school hours, on days to be arranged with the School Committee, to give children of his own denomination, separated from others, an hour's religious instruction. Any parent may withdraw his child from all religious teaching if he objects to such religious instruction being given. The Scripture lesson text-books have been used in New South Wales schools since 1848. There are a series of set questions in the end of each lesson; also valuable footnotes with a list of words and phrases to be explained.

Queensland.—Scripture lesson books prepared by the Department of Public Instruction are used. Clergymen have the right of entry to teach children of their own persuasion on certain days; a conscience clause is provided.

Tasmania State.—Instruction in sacred history is imparted.

West Australia State.—Scripture lessons are given orally to impress the value of the Scriptures as a basis of moral instruction.

THE EAST.

Japan.—Morals and industry are taught.

India.—The Mysore Government has just adopted a scheme for the introduction of moral and religious instruction in the State Schools and colleges, by which Hindu, Mohammedan, or Christian pupils may be taught in their respective religions, provided their number is not less than twenty in each case.

Egypt.—Nine-tenths of the population of Egypt are Moslem. In Government schools, one hour a day, or five hours a week, are required for studies in the Koran. The teachers are Moslem. Scholars are taught the necessity of religion to man.

Most New Zealand Education Boards approve of the Ten Commandments being displayed on the walls of each class room.

In Ontario and West Australia the Ten Commandments are taught in the State schools.

THE HISTORY OF FRIENDSHIP CHURGE.

By Rev. E. S. Lewis.

That greatest of all our Methodist Historians, Bishop McTear, has declared that whenever the Lord would do a work in the earth, a man is got ready, and that the study of that man and his providential preparation is a fit introduction to the work. Paul declares that "every house is builded by some man." Some less distinguished author than St. Paul has said "The Lord built him a Solomon that Solomon might build him a house." The Temple that crowned Mt. Moriah, pronounced by Tacitus "one of the wonders of the world," and referred to by Josephus as a "mountain of snow," was built of immense white stones, 40 to 60 feet long, while great pillars of Parian marble, 40 feet in length, supported some of the porches. Thirty tons of gold was used in ceiling the Most Holy Place. This Temple was as truly Solomon's monument as is St. Paul's Cathedral the monument of Sir Christopher Wren.

Spurgeon pronounced a very high eulogy on Wesley when he said that when Wesley died "he left behind him two silver spoons in London, two in Bristol, a teapot, and the great Methodist Church." Methodism is not the whole of Wesley's monument. The revival spirit, of which he was the embodiment, was a larger thing than the Methodist Church, though Methodism to-day is a vast empire upon which the sun never goes down. "It is historically certain," says Dr. Fitchett, "that English Deism helped to produce the French revolution." He further says, "If Wesley had been an English Voltaire, corroding all belief with the acid of his wit, and distilling the gall of his bitter spirit into the blood of the nation, there might have been a 'Reign of Terror' in London as well as in Paris." England escaped a bitter political revolution because she had undergone a spiritual revolution. Wesley did more than any other man to save England from the skepticism and outright athelism which shook to pieces the very foundations of France. Lecky, the eminent historian, bears witness to the same mighty fact. The largest thing Wesley bequeathed to the world, viewed from a perspective of more than a hundred years, was that revival spirit which has made Methodism "a savor of life unto life." No wonder that Methodism was called "Christianity in earnest."

Only in one respect was John Wesley an ordinary man. Like Zaccheus, he was little of stature. He was only five feet, five inches high, and weighed 122 pounds, but great achievements and trusted leadership are not the vested rights of men of large bodies. Goliath fell before David, and the late Mr. Taft before the slender, slenewy leader of democracy.

In the case of the little church in the Southern part of Chiclasaw County, 10 miles south of Houston, Miss., it is not the history of one man that this narrative concerns itself about, but it is the story of three or four good men and their families. They were all what the world would call poor people. There was never a rich man who resided in that community. But if they were poor, they were in every sense respectable:

"Let not ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys and destiny obscure;
Nor grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor."

Emerson, America's greatest philosopher, says: "Every revolution was first a thought in some man's mind, and when the same thought occurs to another man, it is the key to that era. Every reform was once a private opinion."

In the latter part of the fifties, Moses D. Foster came with his family to the community where Friendship Church was afterward located. He had lived in Fayette County, Alabama. He was an earnest Methodist exhorter and class leader. He would occasionally invite his few scattered neighbors to come to his house and they would have religious service. His brother, the Rev. A. J. Foster, who was a tower of strength as a local preacher for so many years and who died in Texas recently at the great age of more than four-score years, preached frequently to the scattered settlers, as did also the Rev. Wiley Lewis. The Methodist circuit rider, who like the disciples of old went everywhere preaching the word, found his way to this isolated community, and in 1850 organized the little band into a Methodist Society in the residence of Moses D. Foster, and they called their church Friendship. Rev. J. A. Fife was the preacher in charge. This congregation is one of the many instances in our Methodism which indicate the value and the necessity of the local preacher. Those who laid deep and strong the foundations of Methodism in many of the isolated communities in the early days were oftentimes the consecrated local preachers who served the church with no stipend, save the joy of doing service for the Lord, and the promise of a crown in the far-off time when the redeemed shall walk with Him in white. Though the local preacher is fast joining the ranks of "Lo, the poor Indian," yet he made a very large and a very worthy contribution to the greatness of Methodism in the early days.

In the summer of 1860 the neighbors came together and built a brush arbor, and there followed one of the greatest revivals ever held in that country, when more than fifty persons gave their hearts to God. Revs. Wiley Lewis and A. J. Foster, Sr., did most of the preaching. In 1865, the year which marked the close of the awful struggle between the North and the South, the few who remained after this struggle was over, came together and erected a large log meeting-house which served them well till 1879, when a neat, frame house was built nearer the center of the community. This log church was the center of the social and religious life of a large community. It served as a schoolhouse for a number of years. From an early day there was a Sunday school there, poorly equipped it may have been, as compared with the requirements of the present day, but it did something in the right direction and was a great blessing to the community. The school was presided over by J. A. Lewis, the writer's father, who for forty gracious years served as superintendent, receiving no compensation therefor, save the consciousness of duty well done. This old church was a commodious affair, built after the ancient pattern, with a box pulpit in the end which was reached by a couple of steps. Such congregations as they had there during the seventies! Such singing, with the all-day accompaniment, and dinner on the ground! Such preaching and such preachers—Gilderoy, Amos Kendall, J. P. Dancer, Wiley Lewis, G. D. Wade, Thos. J. Lowry, W. C. Green, A. C. Allen, and others more or less conspicuous!

In 1879 a nice frame church was erected nearer the center of the growing community. The school house soon followed and found its rightful place hard by. The sacred "God's acre" was just in the rear. This new house was built out of good material and painted white, with green trimmings. At the time this house of worship was erected it was thirty miles to the nearest railroad line. Being thus far in the interior, the little white "church in the wildwood" made a pleasing impression upon the passer-by, especially so upon strangers who did not expect to find so nice a house that far out. This new Friendship was dedicated on the 5th Sunday in April, 1880, by Rev. Wiley Lewis, assisted by his grandson, Rev. T. W. Lewis, who had been licensed to preach only a few months before. Here in the new church the Sunday school flourished; congregations grew till the monthly preaching service was an occasion of signal interest. The entire community, almost to a family, regardless of church affiliations, was gathered into the Sunday school, and everybody came out on preaching day. What tremendous forces for good were generated here! How the leaven of the gospel worked for righteousness and peace and good will! Years passed by and this community was as free from the ills and sorrows of a sordid and selfish world as one could find. That matchless picture drawn by the master hand of the poet, Gray, in his "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" was fairly reproduced by this community, when he said:

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learned to stray;
Along the cool sequestered vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way."

I give here some results in figures which cannot be gainsaid. These results are as marked as the results which follow settlement work in the large cities, and are as noteworthy as the work of Jane Addams in Chicago. These figures constitute an argument in behalf of the Christian religion, and of the Christian Church, and of the Sunday school, that no man can refute. Here is only a partial list of those started right by this church and Sunday school, and who were encouraged by precept and example to walk in the highways of righteousness and truth, and to live so that the world would be richer on their account: Eight preachers of the gospel of Christ have gone out from this church; some of them have achieved distinction, and none of them have ever brought reproach upon the good name of their church; some of these have gone on "to the general assembly and church of the first-born which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect." One lawyer, one doctor, sixteen teachers, and a host of others have been sent out by this little church to bless mankind by holding up high ideals, and rendering unselfish Christlike service. A remarkable fact is that during the forty years of my father's tenure of office as superintendent of the Sunday school, there was not a murder in the community, nor a suicide, nor a divorce. During these forty years no indictment was ever found against any regular member of this Sunday school for any violation of the laws of his country.

In writing a sketch like this it is impossible to mention all the causes that conspired to bring about such rich results, and it is just as impossible to know all the causes. Some things, however, are so patent that you can not mistake them. One of the largest contributing forces to the high moral and religious tone of this community was the splendid character of the man in whose home the church was organized. His good wife is as deserving of honor from the historian's pen as any other. She lived to a ripe old age and served her generation well by the will of God, and "fell on sleep." Her sacred dust sleeps in the little cemetery just in the rear of the church, and with many relatives and friends, she awaits the resurrection trump.

Rev. A. J. Foster, Sr., and Rev. Wiley Lewis did more, perhaps, to establish Christianity in that country than any other two men. All honor to these apostolic men! May God raise up more like them!

And now to those of us who remain on this side the flood, the memory of our early days, the hallowed associations, the lofty examples of virtue and honesty, are a priceless heritage, for the leaders of those days were of heroic mold. I thank God for the simple teachings of those days, that Jesus Christ is the world's only hope and that men ought to serve him and love him. They taught us of heaven, the far-off home of the soul, of the blessed immortality awaiting the finally faithful, and that a life of humble service in the Master's name will surely bring us to the gates of peace where we shall hear the "well done" of our Father. We can join Robert J. Burdette as he sings:

"Somewhere out on the blue seas sailing,
Where the waves dance and spin;
Beyond the reach of my eager hailing,
Over the breakers' din;
Out where the dark storm clouds are lifting,
Out where the blinding fog is drifting,
Out where the treacherous sand is shifting,
My ship is coming in.

"Oh, I have waited till my eyes are aching,
Day after weary day;
Oh, I have hoped till my heart was breaking,
While the long nights ebbd away;
Could I but know where the waves had tossed her,
Could I but know what storms had crossed her,
Could I but know where the winds had lost her,
Out in the twilight gray!

"But though the storms her course have altered,
Surely the port she'll win;
Never my faith in my ship has faltered,
I know she is coming in.
For through the restless ways of her roaming,
Through the mad rush of the wild waves foaming,
Through the white crest of the billows combing,
My ship is coming in.

"Breasting the tides where the gulls are flying,
Swiftly she is coming in.
Shallows, and deeps, and rocks defying,
Bravely she is coming in;
Precious the love she will bring to bless me,
Snowy the arms she will bring to caress me,
In the proud purple of kings she will dress me,
My ship that is coming in.

"White in the sunshine her sails will be gleaming,
See, where my ship comes in;
At mast, bow and peak her colors streaming,
Proudly she is sailing in;
Love, Hope and Joy on here decks are cheering,
Music will welcome her glad appearing,
And my heart will sing at her stately nearing,
When my ship comes in."

WORDS OF LIGHT AND EXPLANATION.

By Rev. Jno. D. Ellis.

The sentence in my "Essay on Baptism," page 4, paragraph 3, which the Editor of the Baptist Record went into spasms over, should read: "It is also true that in the two places in the Old Testament where baptizo occurs, its meaning is wash at one place, 2 Kings 5:14, and affright at Isa. 21:4."

Written "it is translated" instead of "its meaning is," the statement is misleading, but not a "deliberate misrepresentation," as the Baptist Record affirms. The phrase, "It is translated," was used by me several times on the same page, and it is easy to account for its creeping in again. This admission, which is frankly made, most positively does not weaken or destroy a single argument in the "Essay."

I should have preferred, however, for a tract containing so much truth, and so completely destroying the immersion theory, not to have been marred by even anything inconsequential or trivial. In the ones I am now mailing out, the correction is being made, and I feel sure it will be difficult for any one to overturn its arguments. All who have read the tract will admit that I do not discuss either 2 Kings 5:14, or Isa. 21:4, but merely allude to the passages in passing on to my arguments. The passages in the Bible which I discuss, prove that "baptizo" means purification by sprinkling. I started out with the aim to prove that the instances of sprinkling in the Bible are called baptism, and proved it. Thus the Baptist contention that "immersion only is baptism" is destroyed. The Baptist Record casts aside as unworthy of notice the overwhelming evidence of the tract, simply because of a mere slip of the pen, or a typographical error, in the prelude. That was all the comfort the Editor could get out of it, and because of it, he thinks I have no "conscience" at all, and ought not to be "tolerated."

In two of my works on the mode of Baptism—published in the years 1904 and 1902—I show that while the King James Version reads that Naaman dipped himself (Greek "baptizo") he did no such thing for several reasons. This ought to refute the charge that I ignorantly or deliberately wrote "it is translated." I wrote immediately to the Editor of the Record explaining the matter, calling attention to his unchristian spirit and outrageous language, and asking for a little space in his paper to prove that "baptizo" in 2 Kings 5:14 means to wash by sprinkling, but as he may not give or sell the space, I will make a few arguments now.

1. Hebrew scholars tell us that when the prophet told Naaman to "wash seven times in the Jordan" (verse 10), he used a word (rachats) which means to pour, to drip, and never to immerse, dip, or plunge. The Septuagint (Greek Bible) interchanges the Greek word "louo" for "rachats" (Verse 10) which means to wash, lave, or sprinkle the human body or its parts.

Hebrew scholars also affirm that the word "tabal" of verse 14, represented by "baptizo" in the Greek, is translated by "nipto" at Gen. 18:4 where Abraham would have water brought to wash the feet of his celestial visitors; in Gen. 43:30, where Joseph washes his face and orders bread set before his brethren; by "Cheo"—literally to pour—in Job 29:6, and in many other places. In the Bible, and out of it, one may baptize himself without washing all over, and by applying the fluid to certain parts of the body only. (I am frank to admit, however, that it would not be amiss for some folk to wash "all over," especially if it will improve their spirit.)

2. The leprous Naaman came to Elisha to be cured. He was told to go "wash seven times," because he had in mind the law as found in Lev. 14:7, which reads: "Sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed (washed) from the leprosy, seven times."

This "baptizo" at 2 Kings 5:14 stands for cleansing by sprinkling. The prophet did not tell Naaman to dip seven times; he had no authority to change the divine law. The King James Version reads that Naaman dipped himself seven times, but the prophet told him to wash (rachats—louo), to apply the water seven times to his person; or the part of his body where the leprosy had appeared. Elisha prescribed the legal formula. He sent him to the Jordan for several reasons, not only to test his faith, but to "running water," living water, as the law required.

3. That Naaman did not dip himself is self-evident. He did not do it for the good and sufficient reason that he could not do it—the thing is impossible!

It is true he could have stood on the bank and dived seven times, but such an idea is absurd. Diving is not dipping.

If he waded in and squatted seven times, the "squattin" would not have dipped his feet and legs, when he did the "squattin."

If he jumped up and down seven times, each time jumping clean out of deep water, and falling in again "kerchug," then he was a remarkable jumper. According to the immersion theory "baptizo" at 2 Kings 5:14 of necessity means to dive, squat, or jump up and down, something lexicographers and reasonable people do not admit. The only reasonable conclusion is that Naaman made a seven-fold application of the water to his person. If it could be shown that the law says, "Immerse him in water seven times that is to be cleansed from the leprosy," immersionists would have an argument, but the law says "sprinkle". For this reason, and others, "baptizo" at 2 Kings 5:14 does not mean to dip.

BROTHER MORRIS' EFFORT.

I have been following with interest the effort Brother Morris, of Mansfield, is making to get the Church in the State to purchase the old church property at Mansfield and present it to the College. It will be a pity if his effort fails and the property should fall into other hands. It would mar the college grounds beyond repair; for the fence behind the church (those of the laymen and preachers who have seen the location will understand where the fence was that divided the church from the College) was not on the dividing line. I have never measured it off to see just where it will run, but am told by those who are in a position to know, that the grave of Dr. Thweat, instead of being on the college lot, is on the church lot. So you can see what a slice will go from the campus, and how we will be handicapped, should the property be bought by somebody and a residence backed up in front of the new or annex part of the building, with outhouses and the back yard paraphernalia right under the windows of the annex where the girls room.

Let us all help in this undertaking. We have hardly enough campus as it is, using as we now do all the church lot. How cramped we will be, if we fail to avail ourselves of the generosity of the local church in offering us the property for less than it could be sold for in the open market, as I am reliably informed. In my local bailiwick I am going in to help Brother Morris, and I am calling on all my friends throughout the State to help us in this matter. Friends, please heed this call, and if you possibly can, raise the limit above his call of ten dollars. BRISCOE CARTER.

Church News

Dr. H. C. Morrison, the well known evangelist, who is also the Editor of the Pentecostal Herald, recently assisted Dr. Streeter, the pastor, in an interesting meeting in the historic old John Street Church of New York City.

The Western North Carolina Conference, after a two weeks' campaign in which a series of institutes was conducted, pledged for missions $15,000 above the assessments. This was $5000 beyond the goal that the leaders had hoped to reach.

It is stated that Bishop W. A. Candler, who has had charge of our work in Cuba since the close of the Spanish-American War, has visited that country seventeen times. Much of the success that our forces operating there have achieved, has been due to his wise and inspirational leadership.

Bishop H. C. Morrison recently spent a Sunday with Dr. H. G. Davis, our pastor at Miami, Fla., and raised more than $15,000 for our new church enterprise in that city. The house of worship which Dr. Davis and his progressive flock propose to construct will cost above $70,000.

The Western Methodist of March 27 says: "There have been twenty bright conversions in Galloway College within the last thirty days. This is the character of work that a church school ought to do." Our contemporary is right. A Christian college should concern itself with heart culture as well as head culture.

The Commencement sermon of the University of Georgia this year will be preached by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, formerly president of the Wesleyan Female College, but now one of the most efficient pastors in Southern Methodism. We dare say that Dr. Ainsworth will give the university students and the Athenians a message well worth hearing.

It is reported that a new paper, consecrated to the advocacy of laity rights for women in the Southern Methodist Church, will be started in Nashville. If such a journal is established, it is to be hoped that it will be made to stand on its own merits and that the machinery of our Woman's Missionary Societies will not be used to circulate it. (Since writing the above we notice that the first number of this paper has made its appearance.)

Rev. P. C. Fletcher, the pastor of Winnfield Memorial Church of Little Rock, Ark., received a class of 60 into the Church on Easter Sunday. This makes over 80 additions that he has had since Conference, and swells the number of members he has received during the three and a quarter years that he has been the pastor of this congregation to more than 500.

Rev. T. J. Ramsey, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but who is now stationed at Batesville, Ark., is having a most successful pastorate in that city. His Sunday school, including the Home Department, has an enrollment of 850. He has a Baraca class of 150, and the Epworth League numbers 130, with an attendance of 75 to 100. Work has also been begun upon a handsome new house of worship which will cost approximately $40,000.

The Memphis Conference Committee on Evangelism, of which Dr. J. L. Weber is chairman, has arranged for a Conference Revival Rally, which will be held at Brownsville, Tenn., in July, including the third and fourth Sundays. Bishop Kilgo has been engaged as the chief preacher for the occasion. The object of this meeting is both to reach the unsaved in the community where it is conducted, and to enthuse the preachers and send them back to their charges aflame with spiritual life and power. We think that such a gathering is calculated to do a vast amount of good, and we should like to see a similar one held in every Conference in the Church. The recovery of her former evangelistic spirit is undoubtedly today one of the most urgent needs of Southern Methodism.

Mr. H. A. Hayes, who for some time was the Superintendent of the Children's Home of the Western North Carolina Conference, at Winston Salem, but who recently was succeeded by Rev. H. K. Boyer, has been discovered to have been short in his accounts. It is reported that Mr. Hayes has been pronounced insane by the physicians and that he has been taken to a sanitarium for treatment. Mrs. Hayes and her two sons have issued a public statement, pledging themselves to make good all deficits. Mr. Hayes was several years ago the superintendent of the public schools at West Point, Miss.

Representatives of the Boards of Trustees of the Wesleyan, Andrew, and LaGrange Female Colleges met in Macon, Ga., on March 20, and agreed upon a plan of correlation for these schools. The scheme is to make the Wesleyan the central school, and give it a twenty-year lease of the other two institutions. Andrew College is owned by the South Georgia Conference; LaGrange by the North Georgia Conference, and the Wesleyan by these two bodies and the Florida Conference. These Annual Conferences will have to approve of the action of the Trustees before the proposed plan can be carried into execution.

PRESIDING ELDERS IN CONFERENCE.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference met in the pastor's study of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, at 10 a. m., on March 26, 1913, and organized the Presiding Elders' Council of the Mississippi Conference by electing J. T. Leggett Chairman and P. D. Hardin Secretary. A communication was read from W. H. Huntley, the only absentee, expressing regret at not being able to attend. We were gratified to have Bishop W. B. Murrah present, who made some appreciated remarks, giving his hearty endorsement to the meeting.

The purpose of the meeting, as expressed by T. W. Adams and endorsed by the other members, was that we might discuss certain questions which are of vital interest to the entire Conference, thereby securing a clearer understanding among ourselves, that we may be better prepared to lead the forces of righteousness into a mighty campaign for God and his Church.

H. W. Featherstun and R. Selby were appointed a committee to prepare an address to the preachers and laymen of the Conference, urging them to greater evangelistic efforts, and requesting the pastors and presiding elders to preach upon the subject of Tithing during the month of May.

G. H. Thompson and H. W. Featherstun were appointed a committee to consider the advisability of recommending the appointment of an increased number of evangelists to labor within the bounds of our Conference.

It was ordered that the College of Bishops be requested to appoint the date for the meeting of our next Annual Conference not later than the first Wednesday in December.

Attention was called to the needs of the Orphans' Home, and the presiding elders were urged to use their efforts in its behalf. The plan of apportioning to the Conferences and districts the amount necessary to build the Methodist Hospital in Memphis was endorsed, and our co-operation in collecting the same was pledged.

Prof. G. L. Harrell, Conference Leader of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, was present, and addressed the meeting in the interest of his work, calling especial attention to the coming General Missionary Conference to be held at Waynesville, N. C. The advisability of recommending a change in the date of holding the Sea Shore Divinity School so as not to conflict with the Conference at Waynesville was discussed. Rev. R. Selby stated that the Directors of the Divinity School had considered this matter, and while they would be glad to make the change, yet they find it impracticable to do so. A number of other questions relative to greater efficiency on the part of our ministry were discussed, and the following resolution offered by R. Selby was passed:

"Resolved, That we the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference agree that we will be scrupulously careful regarding the passage of the character of either local or itinerant preachers where there is manifest indifference regarding debts or moral character involving their efficiency as preachers; and that we hereby pledge ourselves to stand together in this action."

On motion the Council adjourned to meet again at the call of the Chairman. P. D. HARDIN, Secretary.

REV. C. McDONALD DEAD.

A note from Rev. J. T. Abney, of Morton, Miss., informs us that Rev. C. McDonald, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, passed away at Pelahatchie, Miss., at 1:30 o'clock a. m. on April 1. As was stated in a recent issue of the Advocate, he had been critically ill for some time, and his death was not unexpected. He realized his condition and confronted the future without any fear or misgivings. His obsequies were conducted in the Methodist Church at Pelahatchie in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The following ministers were present to attest their interest and pay respect to his memory: Dr. J. M. Weems, Dr. H. W. Featherstun, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. J. M. Morse, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Rev. C. C. Griffin, Rev. O. S. Lewis, and Rev. J. T. Abney. Brother McDonald had lived a long and useful life, having served in the itinerant ranks with faithfulness and efficiency for many years. He has left behind a worthy and unsullied record, and we doubt not that he has passed to a rich reward. Brother Abney has promised to furnish the Advocate a memoir of the deceased at an early date. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that they may be comforted and sustained by the Holy Spirit. When our loved ones fall asleep in Jesus, they are only 'lost awhile.' Soon we may overtake them in the glorious land where partings and farewell words are unknown.

TO THE FRIENDS OF GOD'S CAUSE.

The tornado of March 20 destroyed our Methodist and Presbyterian Churches at Sallis, Miss. Both congregations are anxious to rebuild, and will strive to the utmost of their ability to do so. But assistance is urgently needed; so, who will hear our cry and help us? Under such circumstances, this is a most urgent call. Address all communications to Mr. R. W. Simpson, Cashier of the Bank of Sallis. If intended for the Methodists, write on the envelope, "in care of Mrs. Lella C. Brown;" if intended for the Presbyterians, "in care of Mrs. Lizzie Boyd."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S MEETING.

The First Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference will convene at Grenada, Miss., May 3-7, 1913. The presence of Miss Belle Bennett will add greatly to the interest of the meeting. The names of delegates should be sent promptly to Mrs. Ludie M. Stokes, Grenada, Miss.

MRS. W. W. SCALES, JR.,
President.
MISS MAMIE BUCKLEY,
Recording Secretary.

WILL CHAPERONE MUSIC PUPILS.

I have planned to go to the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music early in June to be with my 13-year-old daughter, and I will chaperone gratis any young student or teacher who would like to go for summer study. Address Mrs. Rebekah Ellison-Johnston, Centenary College, Shreveport, La.

A PHYSICIAN WANTED.

The citizens of a growing town of Northwest Louisiana are anxious to have a reliable physician make his home among them. A first-class practice awaits the right man. If any are interested they may communicate with W. F. Rogers, R. F. D. 1, Shreveport, La.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

There are only 10,384 Federal positions to be filled by executive appointment. Recent statistics place the number of applicants for these places this year at 131,530.

On April 21 the State of Alabama will offer for sale more than 16,000 acres of public school land. This land will be sold to the highest bidder, and the proceeds of the sale will be used in forwarding the educational interests of that State.

Mainz, a city in Germany, voted last week to give $10,500 for the relief of flood sufferers in the Ohio Valley. The thoughtfulness and benevolent spirit of the Council of that city, thus manifested towards foreigners, are to be much commended.

The game season ended on April 1, and Louisiana sportsmen will now be forced to idle away their time at something else than shooting ducks and quails. A license to hunt in the Pelican State costs $1, and the income of the State Game Commission from the sale of licenses last year was $25,000.

The Commission to study the cause and cure of pellagra, which was supported last year by Mr. J. H. McFadden, of Philadelphia, and Col. R. M. Thompson, of New York, at a cost of $15,000, will continue its work for another year on the same terms. It will take up its headquarters at Spartanburg, S. C.

There have been found less than 100 bodies of persons who perished during the recent floods in Dayton, Ohio. The first news paper reports that more than 3,000 had perished have given way to the statement that the total number of deaths from all causes throughout the entire flood-stricken section was less than 500.

In a column in a Southern newspaper devoted to woman's work there was mention made of eighteen instances in the United States where women were making an effort to obtain positions now mostly filled by men. Two of the instances cited took place in the South—one in New Orleans and the other in Montgomery City, Mo.—and the other sixteen in the North.

Mr. J. P. Morgan died in Rome, Italy, last week. He was rated as the greatest power in the financial life of America. He was not America's richest man, but, on account of his reputation as a safe financier, he was permitted to control more of other people's money than any other American citizen. His own fortune is variously estimated to have been from $75,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Mr. W. H. Page, Editor of the World's Work, and a member of the firm, Doubleday, Page & Co., publishers in New York City, has accepted the post of Ambassador to Great Britain. This is by far the most important post in the American diplomatic service, and the South feels honored that one of her sons has been called to fill it. Mr. Page has achieved fame as an author and publisher in New York, but was born and educated in the South.

The Louisiana State Teachers' Association will hold its annual convention in New Orleans on April 17-19. One of the most important questions to come before that body is one that pertains to the organization of a Department of Sex Hygiene and Moral Prophylaxis. That the State educators see the necessity of adopting preventive measures to stay the moral degradation of children is notable, but how such measures can be effectually carried out, with the Bible, mankind's highest authority on morals, forbidden even a nominal place in the public schools, is a question. A Department of Moral Prophylaxis without the Bible is not, in our judgment, calculated to accomplish a great deal.

Governor Park Trammell, of Florida, recently sent a message to the Florida State Legislature requesting that body to enact legislation abolishing the present law that demands unanimous verdicts by juries to convict in criminal cases. One by one the time-tried bulwarks of American freedom and safety are being attacked by modern innovators. The very fact that it is hard to convict a criminal renders the liberty of innocent men more secure.

Mrs. Catherine W. McCullough, in an address before the Mississippi Valley Suffrage Association, recently advocated chaperons for lady marchers in parades and workers for "the cause." She cited the fact that "the cause" had been injured by women who were lobbying for woman's rights legislation in Springfield, Ill., sitting on sofas with legislators and permitting themselves to be flirted with. We regret to note that there has been criticism of this character.

Hon. James Hamilton Lewis and Col. Lawrence Y. Sherman were last week elected to the United States Senate from Illinois, the former for the long term and the latter for the short term. Mr. Lewis was born and raised in Savannah, Ga., and began the practice of law there. He went from Georgia to Seattle, Wash., in 1884, and soon rose to fame in the Far West. Ten years ago he moved to Chicago; he has had many public honors conferred upon him, that of the Senatorial toga being the last one.

A DISTINGUISHED CITIZEN AND CHRISTIAN.

Judge Leroy B. Valliant died at Greenville, Mississippi, March 3, 1913, at 2:40 p. m. He had reached the advanced age of nearly seventy-five years, and was in possession of his vigorous mental faculties to the last. His mind was a veritable storehouse of information on many subjects. His career was remarkably "full of glory and honor."

He was born in Alabama, and moved with his parents to Holly Springs, Miss., where they died when he was seven years old. His thirst for knowledge and studious nature had him ready for college at the age of fourteen. He entered the University of Mississippi, and took the four years' course and graduated at the age of eighteen. He entered the Lebanon (Tennessee) Law School, and graduated before he was twenty-one. He went to Greenville, Mississippi; but the West attracted him and, en route to that section, he went by the way of Washington, D. C. After consulting with Hon. Jacob Thompson, of Mississippi, who then was in public life, he accepted a government position in Washington. Being advised that he would have difficulty in reaching Mississippi "if war broke out," which was then inevitable, he returned to Greenville within a year, and helped to organize a company, which became a part of the 22nd Mississippi Regiment, and served as its captain. While in the Army he displayed the courage and fortitude of a true soldier. Ill health, however, disabled him, and he had to relinquish his army duties. From that day until his death he was handicapped by bodily infirmities, yet his march through life was steady, firm and onward. Everybody knew where to find Judge Valliant. He was always "in the middle of the road," with a forward step. His mind was always bent upon duty, and his spiritual eye ever set upon his God. He was a consistent Christian and a Methodist without guile or deviation.

The seventy-five years of his pilgrimage were an object lesson to mankind. He was good to his fellowmen and loved them. And they returned his affection, as was evidenced by the honors which they conferred upon him for thirty years. He was a lawyer of great ability, and a Judge renowned and learned. He rose to the top of the bar in Greenville, Mississippi, and served four years as Probate Judge. He moved to St. Louis, Mo., about forty years ago, and was soon elected judge, holding the office for twelve years. He was then elevated to the Supreme Bench of his adopted State and was connected with that tribunal for fourteen years; and during the last four years of his incumbency he was Chief Justice. He was also a Mason of distinction and the highest honors of that fraternity were bestowed upon him. He had been Grand Master of the State of Missouri and was a 32nd Degree Mason.

It was my privilege to know him and love him for fifty years, and it does my heart good to bear testimony to his fidelity to his fellowmen and to his God, to the purity of his character, to the honesty of his purposes, and to the nobility of his soul. He was singularly free from all vanity and all desire for vainglory. He never dallied with duty. He was never reckless with time. His beautiful character resting in its delicate mold was grand to behold. He felt that the surest way to make the world better was to begin with himself, and his actions and aims were set high. His ideals steadily advanced for seventy-five years, and they had reached a sublime height.

The last weeks of his earthly sojourn were in keeping with his nature. He contemplated death without a quiver of fear; without a murmur or complaint; he combatted every inch of the approach of the great enemy who finally won a stubborn victory. Well might he have said: "Oh! death, where is thy sting?" He saw and realized that death was coming, and patiently awaited the end. Quietly, serenely, bravely he viewed the situation. He was prepared to go, but kept his mind in its usual placid state, evidencing a willingness to stay, but no unwillingness to depart. "Thy will be done" was his inspiration in life, and his mainstay in death. Verily, death had no terrors for him!

THE GRACIOUS ANSWER.

By Henry N. Coble.

The way is dark, My Father! Cloud upon cloud
Is gathering thickly o'er my head, and loud
The thunder roar above me. See, I stand
Like one bewildered! Father, take my hand

And through the gloom
Lead safely home

Thy child!

The way is dark, my child! but leads to light.
I would not always have thee walk by sight.
My dealings now thou canst not understand.
I mean it so; but I will take thy hand,

And through the gloom

Lead safely home

My child!

The way is long, My Father! and my soul
Longs for the rest and quiet of the goal:—
While yet I journey through this weary land,
Keep me from wandering. Father, take my hand;

Quickly and straight

Lead to Heaven's gate

Thy child!

The way is long, my child, but it shall be;
Not one step longer than is best for thee;
And thou shalt know, at last, when thou shalt

Safe at thy goal, how I did take thy hand,

And quick and straight

Lead to Heaven's gate

My child!

The path is rough, My Father! many a thorn
Has pierced me, and my weary feet all torn
And bleeding, mark the way. Yet thy command
Bids me press forward. Father, take my hand:

Then safe and blest

Lead up to rest

Thy child!

The path is rough, my child! But oh! how sweet

Will be the rest, for weary pilgrims meet,
When thou shalt reach the border of that land
To which I lead thee, as I take thy hand;

And safe and blest

With me shall rest

My child!

The cross is heavy, Father! I have borne
It long, and still do bear it. Let my worn
And failing spirit rise to that blest land
Where crowns are given. Father, take my hand;

And reaching down

Lead to the crown

Thy child!

The cross is heavy, child! Yet there was One
Who wore a heavier cross for thee—my Son, My well-beloved. For him bear thine; and stand

With him at last; and from thy Father's hand,

Thy cross laid down

Receive a crown.

My child!

SEASHORE NOTES.

Many ex-pastors and some readers outside our boundaries will find interest in a short account of present conditions in this field. With the first round come probably the clearest impressions to the new superintendent (he is occasionally vaguely nominated "beloved"—but is he really, genuinely that to the nominators?). My impressions are quite distinct, and they are here offered with the hope of their making helpful reading as well as supplying news.

First Church, Gulfport, is finishing the cathedral temple of the coast. Rising in gray pressed brick, to be trimmed with white stone facings, surmounted by a dome the match to one of great art and beauty in First Church, Houston, Tex.—this structure brings to the city the best and surest evidence of its permanence. Brother Burton is at the helm, painstaking and thorough. His architect tells him of this being the first church built on real business principles in the architect's long experience. As a monument to his and his people's devotion to Methodism, half a century hence the organ will lead worship for a congregation who will remember to admire the fathers who built for them.

W. W. Moore reports the completion of a neat church at Lyman, and a busy people there. His steady-going qualities have already brought his prospects for a fruitful year to hopeful prophecy from his helpers.

The new pastor at Howison and Saucier, L. F. Alford, is stirring for a fresh parsonage, and has recently concluded a refreshing revival at Saucier. His brother gave efficient assistance. More than a dozen came on profession of their faith into membership.

J. J. Golden begins his pastorate for Brooklyn and Bond. His zeal is noticeable, and he has a people who know much in the principle of loyalty to our Church. They are there to answer when he calls to arms and action.

Out twenty miles or so, unknown to many, are several congregations grouped under the circuit name Mentor—east and southeast from Wiggins. Down strong creeks towards the Pascagoula River, the men of that country have guided logs for years. S. E. Flurry is pastor, and has developed since first I met him, 17 years ago, into a faithful, much respected minister. He begins his fourth year, promising to make it his best.

H. J. Moore is in his second year at McHenry and Wiggins. The former congregation has suffered from depleted forests, and other causes of late years, but they maintain the right spirit toward their church. Wiggins, with growing population, is taking steps to have a parsonage of its own—to complete the plan this year. A brother said he would prefer Brother Moore for his pastor, whether he preached or not, appreciating the sterling character and influence of the minister.

Paul Daniels is in demand from a number of preaching places: Handsboro, Mississippi City, Wesley House, Biloxi (situated in front of the canning business), and other points, one or more of which his energies have developed. We may with reason look for a valuable return from the life of this young pastor.

Connected by the coast trolley with Gulfport, the Biloxi church is close also by token of a fine building which its fine membership through a decade has been bringing to completion. Within a month or so they have ascended into the upper room from the basement (heretofore used), where a pleasing auditorium seats them. All is clean and inviting. This double-storied brick edifice, cement trimmed, shows what Methodism has done in this ancient Spanish city (or settlement). Our influence is fixed and responsibilities now deeply pronounced. W. L. Linfield realizes all this, and is giving the strongest year of his life to his work this year.

R. F. Witt takes up the third year's march at Long Beach, at the head of a very loyal and steadfast people. With his parsonage cleared of burden, he will have reason to feel the pride he will deserve, as his year closes. His members are going to stand with him in what he plans.

Moss Point has opened kind arms to W. M. Sullivan this year. Its people bear a name for careful promptness in all that relates them to their Church. Who has called upon them for assistance without sensing the sympathy and quickness of response to every worthy call? And Brother Sullivan, with sunny spirit and vigor in his service, opens the morning of his second year there.

Americus—Columbus made more than one attempt, trying to locate America. The attempt I made, a blizzardy 7th of February, to find Americus, failed. A. P. Cox, the pastor, did all he could to soothe the disappointment in those coming to hear the "new elder." (He is numerously so called inland, and will close his fourth year's service this year.) He has been kind in his attentions.

W. G. Roberts, notwithstanding his sad losses from fire at Woodville last year, with remarkable cheerfulness took the swing across the Conference, and calls out "here!" and is ready for duty, at Escatawba. He will do his very best for a great year, and has a good people to serve with him.

Serene, courtly, substance of the Alabama pastorate abiding upon him, L. A. Darsey is finishing a quadrennium at Ocean Springs and Pascagoula. Let me add "saintly," the more meaning and not less descriptive term, for this veteran. It is good to be associated with a brotherly man. Brother Darsey has a people who stand by him, and they will not depend upon their really great harbor, but do good service this year of grace.

David Ulmer! It is a name a writer in fiction would enjoy—not that Ulmer is a fiction in any way whatever. A big, hearty, ex-engineer, with the best energies of his life devoted to the humble service of his loved Church. He is honored by his people, and will bring up a good report.

W. H. HUNTLEY.

LOUISIANA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Sunday school workers of the State will gather in their 27th annual convention in Alexandria, April 22-24, and the coming together of these workers will mean a great deal to the Sunday school cause in Louisiana. Meeting annually, this gathering makes the interest and efficiency in Bible study greater; secures better methods for Sunday school management and Bible teaching; tends to link more closely the home with the Church, and to extend the benefits of the Sunday school to every man, woman and child so that they may be won for Christian service. All Sunday schools in the State are invited to send delegates and they will be entertained by the Sunday School workers of Alexandria during their stay at the convention. Mrs. E. H. Henning is chairman of the Committee on Entertainment, to whom all names of those desiring entertainment should be sent. Quite an attractive program, full of interest and value, will be presented. Discussions by persons who have had training on their subjects will be one of the special features of the gathering. Let every Sunday school worker who has the upbuilding of his parish at heart make some special effort to have every Sunday school represented at this State Convention. The railroads, having granted a one-and-a-third fare for the round trip to Alexandria, we are expecting 500 delegates to be present. Mr. J. Shreve Durham will be the International representative, and Rev. John C. Carman, of Colorado; Dr. Chas. T. Alexander and Bishop W. F. Thirkield, of New Orleans, and some fifty other Sunday school workers will have part in the program.

BABY'S LOGIC.

To-day I asked my mamma if I could whittle,
Yes, I did.
"O no, my girlie," said she, "you're too little,"
So she did.

But Tom stepped so hard right on my toe,
I cried, I did.
She said, "O, you're too big a girl to cry out so,"
That's what she did.

Why can't I cry if I am little?
Or, if I'm big, why can't I whittle?

A CLEVER COOK.

Jack returned from college, where he had won high honors as a student of ancient languages, but he pleaded ignorance one day when his younger sister asked him to translate a sign she had seen at an optician's, which read thus, "Con sultu sabo utyo urey es."

Jack struggled manfully with it for several minutes and gave it up.

"It isn't good Latin," he said. "There are some words in it that are Latin. The others aren't anything. It doesn't make sense."

"That is what I said," replied his sister, "but cook translates it without any trouble. She says it means, 'Consult us about your eyes.'"—Christian Union Herald.

ROSE, BIRD AND BROOK.

"I will not give away my perfume," said the rosebud, holding its pink petals tightly wrapped in their tiny green case. The other roses bloomed, but the selfish bud withered away.

"No, no," said a little bird, "I don't want to sing." But when his brother soared aloft on joyful wings and sang with all his might, the little bird looked sorry and ashamed.

"If I give away all my wavelets, I shall not have enough for myself," said the brook; and it kept all its waters in a hollow place, where it formed a filthy little pool.

A boy who loved a fresh, wide-awake rose, a singing bird, and a leaping brooklet, thought on these things and said, "If I would be loved, I must share with others all that I have."—Kind Words.

THE LAME PLOVER.

It was a beautiful June morning, and Uncle John was obliged to drive out to his farm.

"Would you like to come with me, Toddy?" he asked as the horse was brought round to the door.

"Yes, sir!" Toddy answered. "I just guess I would."

The sun was bright, and the country road was green and sweet with delightful odors, and Toddy made believe in his mind he was a little colt he saw running round in the fields. Uncle John was driving along at a smart trot, when all of a sudden he stopped the horse quickly and cried out:

"Toddy, do you see that?"

And there, right under the pony's feet almost, were a whole family of little plovers.

Toddy was so delighted that he could not speak for a minute.

The tiny birds were just as quiet as could be, for their mother had taught them not to make a noise when any danger came near them. But they were dreadfully frightened, for you see they had been nearly run over.

"You may get out, Toddy, and run along the road for a piece," said Uncle John.

And then Toddy saw that the little plovers were not alone, but that their father and mother were with them. The minute Toddy's feet touched the ground the old birds began to make a fuss. Probably they thought he was a cruel, bad boy that was coming to steal their birdies.

The mother "cheeped," and all her little family followed her into the grass at the roadside, but the father bird ran along in front of Toddy, back and forth, and seemed to want the little boy to play with him.

Uncle John smiled.

"Try to catch him, Toddy," he said.

Toddy tried, but found it was not an easy thing to do. It was queer, too, for the plover dragged one wing along in the dust and seemed to be quite lame, but just as soon as the little boy would get near the bird and think he could put his hand on it, he would find it was a little ahead of him all the time.

He followed it along the road for three or four minutes, Uncle John driving slowly after him, till all of a sudden, when the father plover thought the mother bird had had time to get their wee family through the fence into the field and to hide them safely in the long grass, he rose straight up into the air, and away he flew back to them before Toddy had time to think.

"Wasn't it too bad to fool a little boy like that?" Uncle John said, as Toddy climbed back into the buggy. "You see, the father bird was only pretending he was lame so you would think you could catch him, and then while you were chasing him, he knew the mother plover would be hiding the little ones. If you were to go back now you couldn't find them anywhere."

"Oh," said Toddy, "but I wouldn't have hurt them. Why did they want to hide from me?"

"Well, you see," said Uncle John, "they didn't know you had an Aunt Anna, who has taught you to be kind to every living thing."

"That's so," said Toddy, soberly, and he wondered if he would ever know as much as Uncle John did.—Elizabeth C. Buckham, in Youth's Companion.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

Great principles are involved in being happy, but these aside, here are a few little suggestions that may help some reader:

1. Form the habit of doing something for somebody every day. This will enlarge your knowledge of human conditions and increase your capacity for happiness.
2. Look for something cheery every day if nothing more than a flower to see, a good word to hear, a bright thought to consider. Such acquisitions will enrich your mentality.
3. Add a mite to memory's store. Commit to heart a fine motto, a radiant text, a beautiful verse, or a helpful phrase, if not more than three words. Some day when you are ill or lonely or sad or dying, these memorized passages will come back to you like whispers of peace from heaven's throne.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

WHEN MAN IS STRONGEST.

It might be reasonably argued that since a man's muscles develop greatly with use, the older he grew the stronger he would become, but such is not the case.

Not long ago experiments were made with some 800 men to show that the muscles of the average man go through their stages of successive increase and decline and that whether he uses them much or little does not seem to make much difference.

It was found that the average boy has a lifting power of 280 pounds. By his twentieth year, if his development is normal, his power should be increased so that he could easily exert a lifting power of 320, while his maximum power is generally reached in his thirtieth year and is 365 pounds. After that it begins to decline, falling off eight pounds by the time he is forty. From forty to fifty the decrease is more rapid, the average lifting power at fifty being 330, only a little greater than at twenty. After fifty the decrease is so rapid and so varied that any accurate average is nearly impossible.—Chicago Tribune.

"It was the saying of a learned man that he got more knowledge by his prayers than by all his studies."

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE DOING WELL.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please inform the public that it was the Mississippi levee and not the Port Gibson Female College that broke, and that this break was last year. Put this in a lime-light column, as the rumor that our college is losing out is not true. It is agreed that it was never in better condition as far as work is concerned, nor is it losing any ground in the hearts of the people. Our girls are from Illinois to the Coast, and all parts of the State, and are doing well. A visitor, who is a member of our Conference, was here the other day and said that we have as high an average of girls as he has ever seen anywhere.

Our concert band has been on the road and made good, and will go out again soon. As long as we feel our brethren approve it, we will allow our girls the diamond of dramatic art, with music and song. These concerts are uplifting and entertaining.

Our financial agent will be in the field all the year. The present session will close one of the most important years in the history of the college.

Yours truly,

C. M. CHAPMAN, President.

Editorial.

THE LYNCHING EVIL.

The following are said to be the lynching statistics of the United States for the past twenty-eight years:

"1885, 84; 1886, 138; 1887, 122; 1888, 142; 1889, 176; 1890, 127; 1891, 192; 1892, 255; 1893, 200; 1894, 190; 1895, 171; 1896, 131; 1897, 106; 1898, 127; 1899, 107; 1900, 115; 1901, 135; 1902, 96; 1903, 104; 1904, 87; 1905, 66; 1906, 60; 1907, 63; 1908, 100; 1909, 87; 1910, 74; 1911, 71; 1912, 64. The number of lynchings in the various States in 1912 were as follows: Alabama, 8; Arkansas, 1; Florida, 5; Georgia, 11; Louisiana, 8; Mississippi, 6; Montana, 1; North Carolina, 1; North Dakota, 1; Oregon, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 7; Tennessee, 5; Texas, 3; Virginia, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wyoming, 1. Cases of race rioting or killing by mobs are not included in the list. Of the total number 60 were blacks and 4 whites, three of the former being women. The crimes for which they were killed were as follows: Murder, 34; rape, 10; murderous assault, 6; complicity in murder, arson, insults to white women, 3 each; attempted rape, 2; assault and robbery, 2 each; race prejudice, refusal to pay note, and unnamed cause, 1 each."

It is gratifying and encouraging to note that there has been a general, though not a steady, decrease within the last quarter of a century in the number of victims of mob violence in our country. We only wish that the reduction had been upon a more uniform and decisive scale. Indeed, there ought to be no such occurrences at all. They are a positive reproach to us as an enlightened and Christian people. We are fully aware that crimes are sometimes perpetrated which are unspeakably horrible and which outrage the nobler instincts and feelings of humanity; but in such cases severe and summary punishment should be administered by the State, and not by private individuals wrought up into a pitch of frenzy. Is it said that the courts are too slow and uncertain? Then let us make them swifter and more dependable. We have the right of self-government, and if our methods of judicial procedure are not what they ought to be, the fault is our own. It might possibly be well to have in every State judges with special jurisdiction who, when crimes of an extremely aggravated character are committed, could go at once to the scene and try the accused parties without delay. It is true that a trial under such circumstances might not harmonize with fine-spun theories as to calm and deliberate justice, but it would be vastly better than no trial at all.

In our opinion, the lack of public confidence in our courts—the slowness with which they move and the uncertainty that even-handed justice will be dealt out—is largely responsible for the disposition of the people to take the punishment of those whom they adjudge to be criminals into their own hands. But it is also true that as citizens we are too fiery and high-strung. We need to cultivate the spirit of orderly self-control, which is a source of strength to a community as well as to an individual. A mercurial and excitable population is not of the best type. The English people who have built up an empire and civilization that have been called the miracle of history are noted for their composure and steadiness of character. They are not panicky, nor do they quickly lose their heads in the face of disturbing or exasperating circumstances.

It is noticeable, (and we greatly regret to observe it) that a large majority of the lynchings of 1912 occurred in the Southern States. Of the question as to why this was true, we shall not now undertake anything like a full discussion.

It is, however, quite suggestive that of the 64 persons who were illegally put to death, 60 of them were black. This would indicate that race prejudice was an influential factor in the making of this bad record. We would in no sense condone such lawlessness upon the part of our people (on the contrary, we deeply deplore it); but, at the same time, it is due them to say that their situation in living side by side with a dissimilar race which they formerly held in slavery is more trying than that of their fellow-citizens of other sections. It is doubtful if the Northern people under like conditions would do any better. Indeed, where they have been put to the test they have shown in some respects even greater hostility to the colored man than the people of the South. It is well known that there are towns and villages in some of the commonwealths across the Ohio in which a Negro is not allowed to live, and we read only a few days ago of one being hanged to a telephone pole and his clothing set on fire in far-away Montana for having killed a sheriff in that State.

We do not desire in what we have said in this connection to be understood as intimating that there is any less culpability in lynching a black man than a white man. All human life is sacred, and it should never be taken by an individual except to protect life, or by organized society except when acting in a legal manner for its own preservation. It would seem that the very ignorance and helplessness of the Negro ought with a Christian people to plead in his behalf and mitigate his guilt as compared with a white person who, with a larger intelligence and better training, has committed the same crime. We do not believe in the least social intermingling of the two races; we believe that it is best for each of them that its integrity should be strictly maintained, and, under present conditions at least, we believe it is best for the Negro to keep out of politics; but the protection of his person and property should be as securely guaranteed under the law as that of any other citizen beneath our flag. More than once we heard the great Senator J. Z. George, of Mississippi, who as an authority on the race problem had no superior in the nation, make, in substance, this very statement. It is clearly the duty of every good citizen to do what he can to suppress the spirit of lawlessness amongst us, that this reproach against our fair section may be wiped out.

In conclusion, we will say that we do not believe that the maulin sentiment that decries the infliction of severe penalties for grave crimes will help to cure the lynching evil, but that, on the other hand, it will tend to foster and encourage it. The abolishment of capital punishment would, in our opinion, exert a hurtful influence. What we need in the United States to-day is to make every person who lives on our soil understand that if he commits a crime he will be certainly, adequately, and promptly punished, as is the case in Great Britain. And when this is done we may expect to see criminal violations of the law become vastly less frequent and mob violence reduced to a minimum.

DR. LEE IN NEW ORLEANS.

Dr. J. W. Lee, the pastor of St. John's Church of St. Louis, was in New Orleans Wednesday and Thursday of last week, and, while here, delivered two brilliant lectures to large and appreciative audiences—one at the First Methodist Church, and the other at Parker Memorial. The latter, which we had the great pleasure of hearing, was on "The Value of Life," and we dare say that none who heard that informing and impressive utterance will soon forget it. Distinguished as a scholar, author, platform speaker, and minister, Dr. Lee is one of the celebrities of Southern Methodism—a star of the first magnitude. He does not make any attempt at oratory; there is scarcely a superfluous word in any of his sentences; neither his presence nor voice is remarkable; yet by the power of truth, simply stated, by the eloquence of thought, he grips and holds an audience as but few men can. And, best of all, he is genial, approachable, and brotherly—unspoiled by the honors which have been heaped upon him. Though he is still vigorous physically, we could discover that time had left its marks upon him since we saw him at the Millsaps Commencement at Jackson, Miss., several years ago. From a human standpoint, it is a pity that such men have to grow old; especially so, since we do not seem to be producing many of such caliber in these latter days. We pray that Dr. Lee may long be spared to bless the Church and the world with his wealth of learning and extraordinary powers.

OUR COLUMNS HAVE ALWAYS BEEN OPEN.

At the recent session of the Louisiana Conference the following resolution concerning faulty rights for women was passed: "In order that the fullest publicity may be had, and that the Committee of Investigation herein called for may have all the information available, we request our Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, to open its columns to those who may desire to discuss this question in a calm, judicious, and non-personal manner."

With this action of the Louisiana Conference we are in hearty sympathy, though it was unnecessary, unless it was intended to give some indication as to the kind of discussion that is desired. We have never refused any Methodist in our patronizing territory the right to be heard on the question of faulty rights for women, and have had no thought of doing so. The only copy that we have excluded has been syndicate matter which was prepared and sent out for campaign purposes by persons outside of the Conferences that our paper serves. We have not deemed it proper to make the New Orleans Advocate a vehicle for an organized propaganda of such character. Indeed, it has been our rule, except in the case of official statements made by some board or constituted authority of the Church, to reject duplicate matter bearing on any subject. We have sought to fill our paper with original articles, instead of making it a mere echo or counterpart of some other organ. And to this policy we shall continue to adhere.

Any Methodist in Louisiana or Mississippi wishing to write (we do not desire clippings) on the subject of woman's rights in the Church will find our columns open to him, as they have always been. Of course, the space that we can devote to such a purpose is limited, but it will be impartially divided between those who hold opposing views. Upon one thing, however, we shall rigidly insist: the discussion must be kept upon an elevated plane.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the presiding elder, has announced that the Corinth District Conference will be held at Sherman Miss., June 12-15. Bishop W. B. Murrah will preside.

Bishop J. H. McCoy's recent visit to Mississippi to dedicate churches at Calhoun City and Pittsboro was much appreciated. He is a great favorite with the pastors and people of the North Mississippi Conference. Indeed, he seems, without effort, to win the hearts of those to whom he ministers wherever he goes.

Rev. Martin Hebert has recently assisted the Rev. J. H. Hoffpaur in a meeting at Pecan Island, La., which resulted in 15 additions to the Church on profession of faith, and in securing 5 subscribers to the Advocate. There were a number of bright conversions.

The Baton Rouge District Conference will be held at Wilson, La., June 5-8. With so alert and active a presiding elder as Rev. W. H. Coleman to arrange for this gathering and direct its proceedings, we dare say that it will prove to be a most interesting and profitable one.

Rev. A. M. Bennett, our pastor on the Pleasant Hill (Miss.) charge, is meeting with gratifying success in his labors. He does not forget the Advocate amid his many duties, as is attested by the fact that he sent us a club of 5 subscribers on the 2nd inst. He serves a worthy and appreciative people.

Our long-time friend, Rev. S. A. Brown, of Booneville, Miss., favored us with a nice list of subscribers from his charge last week. As is usual with him, Brother Brown is proving himself to be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" in his present field. He has uncommon gifts as a preacher.

Rev. T. W. Adams, the accomplished presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, is not unmindful of the Conference organ in his rounds. He sent us some subscriptions a few days since. Brother Adams is both an excellent preacher and an able administrator, and he is magnifying his responsible office.

The campaign to extend the circulation of the Advocate, which Brother J. M. Morse, the efficient pastor of our Capitol Street Church of Jackson, Miss., has been conducting, has added several names to our mailing list. We are grateful to him for the good service which he has rendered the Conference organ.

On Easter Sunday, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of Crowley, La., received 47 members into the Church, a large percentage of them coming from the Sunday school. Ninety per cent of the Sunday school pupils of this growing charge are members of the Church. We congratulate Brother Atkinson upon the large measure of success which continues to attend his labors.

The Times-Post, of Houston, Miss., pronounces the revival meeting recently conducted at that place by Rev. R. P. Nebbett, the pastor, and Rev. J. A. Bowen, Conference evangelist of the North Alabama Conference, one of the best held in that community in many years. When we last heard there had been 48 additions to the Methodist Church, many of them on profession of faith. We are much pleased to chronicle this good news.

It should be kept in mind that the forms of one side of our paper are closed Monday at noon, and that of the other side Tuesday at noon. We cannot guarantee to get in notices which reach us later than early Tuesday morning.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, in a note to the Advocate office, says: "The people of Wilson remembered us again on April 1, with a good 'pounding.' We greatly appreciate their kindness. May the blessings of God rest upon them."

See this notice from Mrs. T. B. Clifford, of McComb City, Miss., concerning the Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference which appears upon another page. It bears upon a matter of much importance.

The Epworth Leaguers of the Carrollton Avenue Church will give a musicale at their church on Tuesday evening, April 15, at 8 p. m., with musicians of other congregations assisting. The Methodists of the city and the general public are cordially invited. Refreshments will be served.

Rev. B. T. Currie, of Edenton, La., writes that he has just closed a successful meeting at Lee Landing, near Pontchartroula, La., in which there were seven accessions to the M. E. Church, South. A fuller account will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. John Paul, of Meridian, Miss., writes: "Please say in your notes that if any one of our pastors expects to be away from his work during the summer months, I am prepared to recommend as a supply a minister who is an elder in our Church, and who has done successful work as a pastor both in city and country charges."

Dr. J. W. Beeson reports another excellent revival meeting at the Meridian (Miss.) Colleges. It lasted ten days, and was conducted by Rev. C. W. Ruth, a noted evangelist of Indianapolis, Ind., of whom Dr. Beeson says: "Ruth is a fine preacher, logical, clear, convincing, and full of life and humor. He wins young people."

A Bogue Chitto (Miss.) correspondent sent us this latter part of last week, without giving the date, the following noteworthy item: "Married—at the Methodist parsonage in Bogue Chitto, Miss., Mr. Joseph M. Berry and Miss Lizzie Foreman, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Foreman, Rev. Robert Selby officiating." We extend congratulations and best wishes.

The Monroe District Conference will meet at Bastrop, La., on June 3. Rev. Wm. Schuhle, the resourceful presiding elder, is planning to make the occasion a memorable one. A writer from that section states that all the pastors are keeping busy in the Master's service, and that, as yet, they seem to be little disturbed by the news of the approaching high water.

A correspondent from Northwest Louisiana says: "Both the pastors and laymen in attendance were greatly stirred by the addresses of Mr. Vick Fulton, the Louisiana Conference Lay Leader, at the Missionary Institute held at Monroe on April 3. Brother Fulton is bubbling over with facts, figures, and fire on the subject of missions. He is a blessing wherever he goes."

Rev. W. J. Wood, of Sweatman, Miss., is delighted with his present field of labor. He declares that the Methodists not only at that place, but throughout the Mars Hill charge, are equal to the best to be found anywhere. He thinks that the indications point to a good year. We extend thanks to Brother Wood for being mindful of the Advocate in his rounds.

Miss Ethel Kirkwood, a member of the Epworth Church of New Orleans, and a successful teacher in the New Orleans public schools, has been granted permission to conduct a kindergarten school at the Seashore Camp Ground next summer. Miss Kirkwood is a kindergarten expert, and will no doubt conduct an excellent school.

We learn that Rev. C. V. Breithaupt is now speeding over his Terrebonne and Lafourche territory on a motor cycle. He appreciates very much the contributions that were made for its purchase. These are modern inventions made to contribute to the spread of the gospel. Who knows but that in the near future we may have gospel sirships?

We regret to be informed that Rev. J. G. Snelling, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city, has for the past few days been quite unwell, but are pleased to state that at this writing he is considerably better. Brother Snelling filled his pulpit last Sunday at 11 a. m., but at the evening hour was relieved by Dr. J. T. Sawyer, who preached an interesting and helpful sermon.

Methodism is flourishing in Lake Charles, La., where Rev. K. W. Dodson is the acceptable pastor. Thirty-nine persons were recently received into the Church. A new pipe organ is due to be installed about May 1. The action of two Epworth Leaguers of this church—Mr. and Mrs. John Stockwell—in offering themselves for service in Africa, is stated to have quickened greatly the interest of the entire congregation in missions.

Mrs. W. L. Doss, wife of Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., pastor of the Epworth Church of New Orleans, underwent a serious operation at the Presbyterian Hospital last week. We are glad to state, however, that she stood the operation well and is now thought to be on the road to recovery. Brother Doss is also on the sick list, being confined at home with an attack of measles.

We are pleased to learn that the work of erecting a church at Picayune, Miss., is now going forward. This structure, when completed and furnished, will cost about $2000. Much credit for this enterprise is due to our energetic young pastor on the Carriere and Picayune charge, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr. We make grateful acknowledgement to Brother Lewis for a club of six subscribers to the Advocate which was received a few days ago.

Mrs. J. M. Henry, the Secretary, requests us to make the following announcement: "The wives of the Methodist ministers of New Orleans, who compose the M. M. W. Club, will hold their regular monthly meeting on April 17, at the home of Mrs. Gearheard in McDonoghville. All of our preachers' wives, living in the city and any who may be visiting here, are most cordially invited to attend."

Dr. Theodore Copeland, of St. Louis, writes as follows: "The New Orleans Advocate of March 27 made me say that the St. Louis District Conference was to be held in Washington, Mo. This is a mistake. It will be held in my church in this city—Cabanne—this month. What I meant to say was that Bishop Hoss would go to Washington to spend a few days this month (he is there now)."

We make grateful acknowledgement to Rev. W. W. Perry, of Haynesville, La., for 13 additional subscriptions sent on March 31. This makes 40 subscriptions that Brother Perry has secured since the Annual Conference. All the echoes that reach this office from the Haynesville charge indicate that this stirring pastor is doing a fine work and that he is held in high appreciation by his people.

It was a beautiful testimonial of appreciation upon the part of the Methodists of Charleyville, La., to erect a monument over the grave of the late Rev. H. O. White, who last year fell on sleep while serving as their pastor. In honoring this faithful itinerant, the members of this worthy flock have reflected much credit upon themselves. See Brother Lowrey's reference to this commendable action in his Sunday school notes of this week.

A card from Sister T. S. Randle, of Brundage, Texas, states that she and Brother Randle are pleased with the Lone Star State, but that they greatly miss their friends in Louisiana. We regret to learn that the condition of Brother Randle's health is still such as to interfere with his work, and we earnestly hope that he may soon recover sufficiently to take up his "loved employ" with his former vigor.

In forwarding a list of seven names for our subscription files, Rev. O. S. Lewis, our gifted young pastor in the historic town of Brandon, Miss., adds the following item of interest: "Our revival meeting is to begin here on April 7, and will continue at least ten days. My three brothers in the Mississippi Conference are to assist in the work. We are expecting a gracious season of spiritual refreshing. The prayers of the brethren are desired in behalf of this meeting."

Dr. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder, is planning to hold one well-attended quarterly conference. He has asked all the pastors of churches in New Orleans to bring their official members to First Church on a date to be announced later, and he will hold the second quarterly conference of each charge at the same time. The secretaries of the several quarterly conferences will, of course, keep the records of each charge separately. Dr. Henry believes that a joint quarterly conference will stimulate increased interest among the official members of all the New Orleans churches.

The Jacksonian, of Jackson, Tenn., of April 6, announces that Rev. H. G. Hawkins, who since last fall has been the Acting Associate President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, was at a recent meeting of the Board of Trust chosen President of that institution. The Jacksonian further says: "Dr. Hawkins came to Jackson with the highest recommendations and has lived up to them since he has been at the head of the College. The Trustees are thoroughly pleased with the service which he has rendered." We are gratified, but not surprised, to know that this worthy son of Mississippi is keeping up his fine reputation in his new field.

Gov. and Mrs. G. D. Shands have recently again taken up their residence in New Orleans, being located at number 500 Walnut Street. They have placed their membership in the Rayne Memorial Church. Their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. P. H. Saunders, and their family are now also living in the Crescent City. Mississippi is much the poorer for having lost these choice citizens, and Louisiana is most fortunate in having them added to her population.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., preached a strong and helpful sermon to a fine audience at the Rayne Memorial Church of this city last Sunday at 11 a. m., after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to a large number of communicants. Dr. Hill is a student and a thinker, and he also has a most pleasing and impressive manner of presenting his thoughts to an audience. It is a genuine pleasure to listen to a minister who is so entirely free from any sort of pulpit artificiality.

We are indebted to the following brethren, to whom acknowledgement has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscribers recently sent in: Rev. T. E. Gregory, Tyro, Miss., 6; Rev. Charles E. Downer, Foxworth, Miss., 5; Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Hermanville, Miss., 5; Rev. J. M. Brown, Haughton, La., 7; Rev. W. M. Langley, Valden, Miss., 4; Rev. T. H. Porter, Olive Branch, Miss., 5; Rev. J. T. Abney, Morton, Miss., 5; J. T. McCafferty, Eupora, Miss., 6.

"The Methodist Hand Book" for the current year is now off the press. It is an indispensable compendium of useful information on Southern Methodist matters which no intelligent pastor or layman can afford to be without. Send 25 cents to Rev. G. W. Bachman at Winona, Miss., or to Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or Dallas, Texas, and procure a copy. Read the statement of the faithful colporteur of the two Mississippi Conferences which appears in this issue of the Advocate.

Rev. B. P. Jacob, the capable presiding elder of the Winona District, in a personal letter to the Editor written on March 29, among other things, says: "I enjoyed my visit to Greenwood, Miss., last Sunday and Monday. I doubt if Brother Cunningham ever more completely plunged himself into the activities of a charge than he has done in that progressive and growing city. He is going thoroughly into every phase of church life and work. And his efforts are meeting with fine results."

The Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Rayville, La., writes as follows: "The second quarterly conference of my charge, which was recently held by the presiding elder, Rev. Wm. Schuhle, was characterized by a note of deep spirituality. The love feast conducted was a blessing to all. Boys and girls, and young men and young women, mingled their voices with aged saints in personal testimony and in old-time hymns. The financial reports showed everything paid in full at the end of every month."

Rev. R. W. Tucker reports an upward trend of things at Leesville, La., where he is the esteemed shepherd of our flock, but the status of the work there is yet far short of what he hopes to see it. Both as a preacher and pastor, Brother Tucker ranks with the best in the Louisiana Conference, and the Leesville Methodists are fortunate in having secured him as their spiritual leader. Along with the other causes committed to his hands, Brother Tucker is taking care of the interests of the Conference organ.

We were favored on last Thursday with a call from Mr. N. D. Ivey, a son of Dr. T. N. Ivey, the accomplished Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, who is now a resident of New Orleans. Mr. Ivey was formerly connected with the Hearst newspapers of New York City, but is now the general representative of the Simms-Beauvais Advertising Agency, which has its home office in this city, and which is located in the Canal-Louisiana Bank building. We were delighted to form the acquaintance of this interesting young son of the Old North State.

Our worthy young friend, Rev. T. M. Bradley, of Rosedale, Miss., obliged us by sending in some names for our subscription files a few days since. We were pleased to note in his letter that the health of Brother H. D. Chaney, who has long been one of the truest and most useful of our laymen in the Mississippi Delta, has improved. The congregations at both Rosedale and Hillhouse are reported to be excellent, and the finances are in full up to date. Brother Bradley was recently elected Chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Mississippi—an honor worthily bestowed.

In a business letter to the Advocate office, which brought us a club of 7 subscribers, Rev. C. J. Stapp, of New Augusta, Miss., makes the following reference to his work: "This is my second year on this charge. A most cordial reception was given me upon my return from the Conference at Hazlehurst, and everything is moving along harmoniously. Our congregations are good, and signs of progress are not wanting. Many nice presents have found their way to the parsonage during this Easter-tide. These people know how to treat a pastor."

On March 14, 1913, the death angel saddened the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ransom G. Ashford by claiming their darling baby to adorn our Father's throne. EDNA CORIN was twenty months and one day old. She left a mother, father, two half brothers, one sister, two grandmothers, one grandfather, and a host of uncles and aunts. Weep not, dear ones, for little Edna has gone to make the way more bright for our coming. She is not dead, but sleepeth. Her presence and her babyish prattle are sorely missed, but she is safe in the loving arms of Jesus. May we all live more closely to each other and to our Father in Heaven. May the Lord Jesus Christ be with us, guard and direct us through life, and, when our work on earth is done, gather us all home to rejoice forever more!

GRANDMA HART AND AUNTIE.

JAMES MCCOY HALFACRE was born at Kilmlachal, Miss., Feb. 5, 1911, and died there March 27, 1913. He was the youngest son of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Halfacre. The little fellow was seized with a violent attack of catarrhal pneumonia and suffered very much for one week. Able and attentive physicians did all they could, while friends and loving parents lost no opportunity of tenderest watch-care, but none of these could preserve the life of this very bright and promising child. So on March 28, we dressed his precious body in white and placed it in a beautiful white casket, carried it to church, and held service over it in the presence of hundreds of friends, and then laid it to rest on the bosom of mother earth, beneath a mound covered with lovely flowers, to await the power of the resurrection through Jesus Christ. While on earth his life was a light and treasure in the home; now his spirit is one of God's jewels, and shall be a star to call father, mother, brothers and sisters up higher. BEN P. JACO.

Winona, Miss., March 29, 1913.

Mrs. MINNIE ETHELIA McLELLAN, daughter of Mr. John A. and Mrs. Sarah Hamilton, was born near Black Hawk, Miss., Oct. 8, 1869. From her earliest infancy she was surrounded by Christian influences, both in the home of her parents and in the community, and as a result, when quite young she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South. She attended school at Acona and Black Hawk, and later was a student in Grenada Female College and in the Memphis Conference Female Institute at Jackson, Tenn., graduating at the latter institution. On January 20, 1891, she was married to Mr. R. F. McLellan, then of Holmes County, but who later moved to Philipp, in the Yazoo Delta, which was the home of the family at the time of her decease. Of this union three children were born, none of whom are living. At the time she was stricken with illness the deceased was visiting her sister, Mrs. Stella McLellan, of West, Miss., but was carried to Durant, where it was thought that better medical treatment would be available. All that skillful physicians and loving hands could do, was done, but nothing could arrest the progress of the dread disease, and after battling for life for about a week, she fell into the last long sleep on Aug. 19, 1912. Having been a disciple of Jesus practically all her days, and having lived above reproach, she was not afraid to die. She told the grief-stricken loved ones around her good-bye and bade them to meet her in heaven, stating that she felt that the first one to greet her upon her arrival there would be her mother. Thank God for a religion that can make peaceful the dying bed and give to fading eyes a glorious vision of the heavenly home and familiar faces waiting at the pearly gates! After appropriate obsequies, the remains were laid to rest at Durant, Miss., on the day succeeding her death. Besides her husband, Mrs. McLellan is survived by one brother, Mr. W. A. Hamilton, of Pine Bluff, Ark., and six sisters—Mrs. J. W. Porter and Mrs. Laura Vance, of Grenada, Miss.; Mrs. B. T. Herbert, of Belzoni, Miss.; Mrs. Mattie McRae, of Doddsville, Miss.; Mrs. Lella Walton, of Acona, Miss., and Mrs. Stella McLellan, of West, Miss. May the Holy Spirit help each of them to be faithful, that the family may at last be an unbroken one in the Father's house on high. A COUSIN.

Mrs. IDA B. JONES, wife of W. B. Jones, departed this life on March 10, 1913, aged 39 years and 14 days. She united with the M. E. Church, South, early in life; was married to Mr. W. B. Jones on August 17, 1902, and moved to Red Banks, Miss., in 1903, where she resided until called home. She had no children of her own, but became a good mother to her husband's three children by his first wife. The youngest girl preceded her to her rest nearly three years. The son was taking a course in pharmacy in Atlanta, Ga., and was preparing for his final examination, which was but 11 days off, and in order to get his diploma could not leave his class. He was, therefore, absent at the time of his mother's death. He sent messages of sympathy to his father and of love to her during her last illness. The remaining daughter, Mrs. Jeffries, of Memphis, Tenn., hastened to her bedside and nursed her as devotedly as any daughter could have done. The deceased leaves a devoted husband, a step-son and daughter, two grandchildren, a father, a mother, and several brothers and sisters to mourn their loss. To the bereaved husband we would say, grieve not for your loved one, for she has gone to rest. Be consoled in knowing that you did all you could for her; that her sufferings are over, and that she will be waiting for you on the golden shore. May God's grace sustain you in your sore trial. To the son and daughter, we would say, your mother has set you an example; follow it and meet her in heaven. The following poem was selected by her sorrowing husband, as appropriate to her closing days:

"Feeble and slow thy once light foot-step grew;
Thy wasting cheeks put on death's pallid hue;
Thy thin hand to mine more weakly clung;
Each word spoken fell fainter from thy tongue.
I knew that we must part—no power could save
Thy quiet goodness from an early grave.
Those eyes grown dull, though kind each glance they cast,
Thy voice—alas! thou could'st not speak—
All told thy doom; I felt it at my heart;
The shaft had struck—I knew that we must part.

"And we have parted, dear one; thou art gone!
Gone in thine innocence, meek, suffering one.
Thy weary spirit breathed itself to sleep
So peacefully, it seemed a sin to weep.
To those fond watchers who around thee stood,
And felt e'en then that God was good.
Then like tired breezes did thou sink to rest,
Nor did one pang the awful chance confess;
Death stole in softness o'er that lovely face,
And touched each feature with a new-born grace.
On cheek and brow unearthly beauty lay,
And told that life's poor cares had passed away.

In my last hour, be Heaven so kind to me!
I ask no more than this: to die like thee."

Tidings From the Field

Benoit, Miss.

We have a good people to serve on the Benoit and Beulah Circuit—as good as can be found anywhere. They have been especially good to us. Our congregations have been large. We have a nice home at Benoit and all denominations take an interest in us. We could not love any people more. We have only two Sunday schools and one prayer meeting, but hope to have more soon. If the water would let us alone and quit inundating our fertile fields, we would all be busy and happy. We are praying for a real spiritual revival meeting on our charge. Pray for us.
E. M. SHAW, P. C.

Jennings, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: It is very encouraging the way our work here is moving along. The Sunday school has doubled in numbers and interest. Brother Mitchell makes a good sterling superintendent and is making improvements on several lines that will cause greater interest in the school. Our congregations are fine and increasing all the time. A good choir has been organized under the leadership of Mrs. M. C. Holt and Dr. Morgan Smith, who are pushing the music and singing to the top. We have organized our ladies into a live Woman's Missionary Society, with Mrs. Morgan Smith as its president. She is very zealous in pushing the work of the Society. There is a parsonage fund started, and if we see our way clear during the year, there will be a parsonage erected. The church has long needed one. When we moved here a house was rented by the Board of Stewards, and $125 worth of furniture was bought by them and placed in it, so when we moved in, it seemed like a real parsonage. Eight new members have been added to the Church. We had an old-fashioned pounding last week, which brought in coffee, sugar, meats and lots of other things too numerous to mention, but which are in evidence in the larder yet. Well, Doctor, these things make us love our people better. They are a good, big-hearted and loyal Methodist people. We are expecting great things this year, the Lord being our helper. LASTIEN, HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

Calhoun City, Miss.

Sunday, March 23, was a great day with Calhoun City charge. Bishop McCoy's sermon at the eleven o'clock hour was a masterpiece from every standpoint. His oratory, logic, and profound knowledge of the Holy Bible, together with his beauty of language, made his sermon one of the ablest I have ever heard in my life. All classes declared it to be, by far, the greatest sermon ever delivered in Calhoun City. In thought and pathos it was sublime. From the beginning of the sermon till the end there was a death-like stillness and heaven-born attention, and the great Bishop "piled" climax on climax, till we were made to cry out, "My God! I wish I could preach." I count it one of the great pleasures and profits of my life to have had Bishop McCoy in my home with my family. I am a better man, and I shall strive to be a more painstaking Bible student and press forward to the highest in the scale of efficiency, after having heard this masterly sermon.

In the afternoon of the same day, the Bishop, Rev. J. W. Bell, our presiding elder, Brother Zack Powell, and myself rode six miles to Pittsboro, Miss., where Bishop McCoy preached another great sermon and dedicated the church. Our beloved presiding elder, Brother Bell, was with us in all of the services of the day, and, at night, preached an able and instructive sermon to a large congregation. Our hearts and home are always open to Brother Bell. He is a great and good man, whose counsel is always safe. We regret very much that we did not have all the former pastors with us. Only one of them, Brother W. A. Bowlin, came, and we were glad to have him. In raising money for and working on our parsonage, we are going forward by leaps and bounds. The Lord is with us, and we expect to have the best year of our life.

Yours in his name,

J. E. GAULT, Pastor.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

I have just returned from visiting among friends in the Delta at Dublin and Tutwiler, where was my field of labor in 1864-65, when there were but few settlements and most of the country was a waste, howling wilderness.

The third Sunday in March I had the privilege of preaching for Dr. Price and his people at Cherry Hill, the oldest church in all the region between old McNutt and where Clarksdale is now located. None of the old parishioners or friends were present—most of them are gone to their eternal abode; but some of their children remain, who, with others, are maintaining the church in good style and are building up a fine community. After a delightful week with them, by request of Brother Price, who was sick, I went to Tutwiler for him and preached on Easter Sunday. We had a good morning service, but were rained out in the evening. The church there is in a growing and prosperous state. They need a new house of worship, which they purpose building in the near future. They were kind and hospitable to the visiting brother and showed their appreciation of his work by supplying themselves with many books. Here, as also at Cherry Hill, several sets of the Methodist Library, Jones' History of Methodism in Mississippi, The Little Hymn Book, and various others were taken.

In passing through Greenwood, I had delightful entertainment in the good parsonage home of Brother J. E. Cunningham and family, and was glad, but not surprised, to find that they are well received and are hopeful for a good year.

We are glad to say that Dr. Ivey's "Southern Methodist Hand Book for 1913" is ready; the price is 25 cents postpaid. Of course every preacher and layman who would be up-to-date in the knowledge of the current work and status of his Church wants this indispensable book. Send us your order at once. It is going rapidly.

WHOSE SERVANT?

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

Whose servant am I? Am I serving the Lord and doing those things that please him, earnestly endeavoring daily to let my influence be for the building up of the kingdom of Christ, and for the good of my neighbor; or am I a servant of the evil one, drifting with the ways of the worldly-minded, being overcome of evil, instead of overcoming evil with good and letting my influence be for that which may cause some one to stumble and fall when it should be such as to cause the coming of the Kingdom of Heaven in his heart? These are questions that should be of more concern to each one of us, than anything else we could possibly think of.

The Apostle Paul says (Rom. 6:16): "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or obedience unto righteousness?" We can not serve two masters. We are servants of one and free from the other. There is no middle ground. "Ye can not serve God and Mammon," said the Savior. Happy is the man who has chosen to be a servant of the Lord, and who is trying to do those things which please him in everything, and which will be helpful to his neighbor. To such, the words of the Apostle (Rom. 6:22) are addressed: "But now being made free from sin and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life."

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT ORA, MISS.

On Monday night, March 24, we began our revival at Ora. The meeting continued through Tuesday night, April 2. Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Monticello, did the preaching. For nine days he preached searching and convincing sermons. He is a true pastor-evangelist. His words are not minced, but are hurled forth expressing rugged and sympathetic truths. He is a workable helper. We visited, talked, sang and prayed with the people.

The church was built up and many professed conversion. There were 31 accessions to the Church—29 to the Methodist, and 2 to the Baptist. I baptized a number of fathers and mothers and several precious children on Tuesday night. Some of the most substantial people in the town were converted and came into our church.

While the preaching was an important feature, yet it was not the only effective agency. The united effort among the Baptists, Presbyterians, and Methodists was beautiful.

Then, too, the godly life of Dr. W. W. Davis, who is our steward, and the Company's physician, has a most wholesome effect upon the town. His constant fidelity to the best and unswerving and intelligent loyalty to Christ and the Church is a mighty good sermon. Many of the Lord's chosen dwell in this little mill town. Brother J. C. Chambers aided us by his sermon, presence, and prayers.

All glory to God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. Amen. J. LOYD DECELL, Pastor. April 4, 1913.

SAUCIER AND HOWISON.

Dear Dr. Meek: I wish to enlarge on the clipping in last week's Advocate relative to our meeting at Saucier. I believe it was a providential meeting, as it was not planned or announced until a few days before it began; then it rained us out for three days; but the Lord was with us from the first service. The preaching was plain, Scriptural, and evangelical. Our congregations, on account of rain and mud, were not large, yet a signal victory for the Lord was won. The meeting lasted eight days. At its close we had a great service. The following are some of the visible results: A quickening of the spiritual life in the Church, several family altars being erected; the Epworth League and Sunday school were blessed; a prayer circle was organized, and 17 were received into the Church. This makes 24 additions that we have had since Conference. We had our second quarterly conference on the 22nd of March. The reports were encouraging. On Sunday night last we had with us the Hon. T. M. Evans, of Gulfport, our District Lay Leader, who gave us a strong address on the Laymen's work in the Church. We have some fine people to serve and a model Board of Stewards who keep things in a good condition from a financial standpoint. To God be all the glory. LOUIS F. ALFORD.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER COLEMAN.

Dear Brother Meek: Please state in the Advocate that the Baton Rouge District Conference will be held in Wilson, La., June 5-8.

We have in the Baton Rouge District a corps of earnest, diligent, efficient pastors, and I am finding in every charge a number of faithful laymen; and notwithstanding a general spirit of material discouragement and financial depression, we are praying for, working for, and expecting a year of genuine revival that shall not only bring a spiritual awakening, but also that spirit of optimism that all our people so much need at this time. Pray for us. We are trying to increase the circulation of the Advocate, recognizing it as one of the potent factors in our work.

Fraternally yours,
WM. H. COLEMAN.
Hammond, La.

A GOOD MEETING AT ACKERMAN.

My Dear Brother Meek: We closed a good meeting here last Wednesday night. I began regular services on Sunday, March 23, preaching morning and evening. On Wednesday morning Brother V. C. Curtis reached me and did the preaching for us. He earnestly presented the gospel of our risen Lord with great force, marked clearness, and with drawing persuasiveness. His faithful labors with us were effective and highly appreciated. Nearly all church members of the town were quickened by the visit of the Holy Spirit, refreshed by a conscious presence of our God, and gladly renewed their covenant with the Lord of Hosts. We had five accessions on profession of faith. I regard it as a revival worth while.

Our people are enjoying our new church. Curtis says that it is the best for the money he has seen. He is a wise man and a close observer. The ample, convenient and well-arranged building is a pride and inspiration to the people. Most cordially yours,
J. M. WYATT.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Brookhaven District.

Dear Brethren: Please send to me at once the names of all delegates to the District Conference to be held at Georgetown, Miss., on May 6th, and the names of all the local preachers. It is especially desired that all delegates and preachers be present on the first day, May 6, as the N. O. G. N. north-bound morning train will be held at Wanilla until the arrival of the east-bound Mississippi Central train, provided not less than twenty passengers to Georgetown be assured. Those going to the Conference via the Mississippi Central Railroad after the 6th will have to wait at Wanilla from 9:50 a.m. until about 1:10 p.m. A full attendance is desired; and let us pray for and expect great things of the Lord. Cordially, J. V. BENNETT. Monticello, Miss.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

(Adopted by the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Washington Street M. E. Church, South, of Vicksburg, Miss.)

Whereas, the good Lord has seen fit to call to her eternal reward, in the many-mansioned house above, Mrs. Sophie J. Lindsey, the grandmother of Mrs. Daisy Cook, one of our much esteemed members, therefore be it Resolved:

1. That this Society extends to Mrs. Cook and her family our heart-felt sympathy in their sore bereavement, and pledge to them our prayers to the good Father that he may replenish their hearts by the ministries of his grace, as constantly as she ministered to her loved ones. We fully believe that, in the end, she will hear the words, "Well done," "thou hast been faithful," and "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes and a copy be sent to the family, and that they be published in the town papers.

Mrs. W. H. Saunders, Mrs. H. C. Green, Miss Elsie Tucker, Committee.

ATTENTION.

To the First Vice-Presidents of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, and Junior League Superintendents.

Saturday, April 26, of the Mississippi Woman's Missionary Conference, at Hattiesburg, will be devoted to the Young People's and Children's work. A demonstration of the correlation of the Junior League and Juvenile Missionary Society will be given; also a "Missionary School Program" bringing out the most important items of children's work. All managers of children's work, both in Leagues and Missionary Societies, are specially urged to be present on that day. Please send the names of your delegates to Mrs. Emma McGregor, P. O. Box 225, Hattiesburg, Miss. "The Young Christian Worker" will be on display in a novel way.

OLD LADY'S SAGE ADVICE.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mamie Towe, of 102 W. Main Street, this city, says: "If you had seen me before I began to take Cardui, you would not think I was the same person. Six doctors failed to do me good, and my friends thought I would die. I could hardly get out of bed or walk a step. At last an old lady advised me to take Cardui, and now I can go most anywhere." All ailing women need Cardui, as a gentle, refreshing tonic, especially adapted to their peculiar ailments. It is a reliable, vegetable remedy, successfully used for over 50 years. You ought to try it.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Centerville, Miss.

Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

Notes from the North Mississippi Conference.

The following items pertaining to our work in the North Mississippi Conference were culled from the monthly Bulletin issued by Mrs. A. C. Yeager of Water Valley:

The pastor's wife at Lambert, Mrs. E. H. Row, has done a splendid work at that place; she has organized an adult missionary society with 26 members, and a Junior society with 20 members, the first children's organization in that place. It would be fine to have many such interested workers.

The fact that Mrs. Bennett intends to be at the Annual Meeting at Grenada should be an inducement to every auxiliary to send a delegate. It is such an inspiration to see and hear this great and good woman and feel that she is "our very own." She has largely made us what we are, her hand having welded the union between the Home and Foreign Missionary interests.

A letter from Mrs. J. J. Rogers, of Tupelo, gives an account of fine work in their "Reading Circle." They had studied two books of the prescribed course, and only twenty-two copies of the Voice were taken in a united membership of 130. She adopted the plan of using the Voice as a text book and now 61 copies are taken. The ladies enjoy the study and are developing into fine students under her methods. They intend to raise their pledge of $200 for the foreign work and hope to raise that of $100 for the home work.

The Press Superintendent of the Carrollton Adult (united) Society reports a list of 23 renewals to the Voice; study books, "Uplift of China," ordered for the Study Class; expect to send delegate to Grenada; are going to remodel and enlarge their church, but do not propose to withhold their pledge of scholarship dues. At the March meeting, a committee was appointed to meet with a like committee from other denominations in the community, to plan home mission work in their own town.

The Helen Finlay Scholarship at the Scarritt Bible and Training School has been receiving small donations for the past three years from the Foreign Department of the North Mississippi Missionary Society, which is trying to complete it. Quite recently a check was received from Mrs. M. V. Jones of Highlandale for $35. Sixty-five dollars will complete the scholarship. Would it not be fine if some other woman of means, or a number of women, each giving a small amount, would finish it, and let our Foreign Department go to Annual Meeting, the proud possessor of a scholarship which would then be open to some girl who wants to prepare for the foreign field?

A Message from Our Louisiana Conference Secretaries.

The annual meeting of our Conference Society, held at Baton Rouge, March 11-13, was the best meeting we have had yet. In order to get the work of the committees to the auxiliaries before the minutes can be edited the secretaries were authorized to have printed the items needing early attention—these to be sent to each auxiliary for the April meeting. Let us as one give our best effort to carry out these recommendations, endeavoring by continued prayer and faithful works to reach the goal set.

The resolution referring to the Mormon practices passed upon by the Conference Missionary Society is of utmost importance to every woman in our State. There are several Mormon settlements within our borders and an attempt is being made to make this State one of the strongholds of that sect. The only way to blot out this evil is by national legislation. Get signatures from your church and forward them to the legislators from your district, asking them to petition the Congress of the United States to legislate against this evil.

The Finance Committee recommended that the apportionment of the pledges for the Foreign Department of $2,400, and for the Home Department of $2,025 be made by districts, and that the District Secretaries apportion the amount for each district to the auxiliaries. By districts these pledges are as follows:

District—	Foreign	Home
Alexandria	$ 200	$ 200
Baton Rouge	175	100
Lafayette	225	225
Monroe	100	100
New Orleans	400	200
Ruston	300	200
Shreveport	1000	1000
	$2400	$2025

The foreign pledge is to pay on missionaries' salaries, and the home pledge for St. Mark's Hall and our French Mission.

The Literature and Press Committee recommended that all literature formerly sent out by the Conference Corresponding Secretaries be sent to the Conference Press Superintendent, for quarterly distribution to the District Secretary, who in turn will send to the auxiliary presidents monthly.

A Correction.

In Advocate of March 20th appears: "Fourth Quarter's Report, Mississippi Conference." It should have been: "First Vice President's Fourth Quarter's Report, Mississippi Conference." We also stated in Advocate of March 27, that 10 Baby Rolls out of 32 and 11 Juniors out of 32 had sent money to the Conference Treasurer during the fourth quarter. It should have been to the Home Mission Treasurer, as the Mississippi Conference has two separate treasurers.

Conditions in China as told by Centenary's (Winston-Salem, N. C.) Missionary.

The following extracts are from a letter written by Charles W. Rankin of Soochow, China:

"Trying to be as observant as possible of conditions here, I have been much impressed by the wisdom of the course pursued by our Board of Missions. The Chinese city is dirty and unsanitary. The houses of the middle and lower classes, as I am informed, are dark, uncomfortable, not clean, and are equally as unsanitary and unhealthy as homes, as the streets are as streets. Their mode of handling and preparing their food and their water supply are rich sources of disease and epidemics. When I came on the University campus I was struck with the beauty of the grounds and the attractiveness of the buildings and equipment. With small expense everything is kept clean, neat and trim. The contrast, therefore, between the Christian methods and the old Chinese ways are instantly and forcefully brought home to the Chinese student as soon as he enters the campus gate. Outside and all around the University are the dirt and repulsion of the old Chinese customs, with over half a million people in the midst of it. Inside the gate are beauty and cleanliness and substantial buildings. The very bringing of the visiting Chinese onto the campus—those who do not attend the school—must exert a powerful educational influence. And when the boys come from all the surrounding territory and spend from one to eight years under the influence of University surroundings, it is impossible but that they should go away dissatisfied with their old ways and determined to change them.

"Just across from the University is the Laura Haygood Memorial School for girls, under the management of Miss Pyle. They have about ninety girls this year. Adjoining Miss Pyle's school is the Woman's Hospital, under the management of Dr. Margaret Polk, who is doing a splendid work. Adjoining this hospital on the west, is one of the oldest institutions here, the General Hospital, under the care and directions of Drs. Park and Snell. This hospital does a wonderful work. It is always crowded, not to its capacity only, but to its limitations.

"Then there is the splendid school for girls and industrial work for women and kindergarten—all under Miss Atkinson's management. She has built up a system which reaches and gives instruction to about 275 women in the industrial work, in addition to the girls. The Sunday school at Miss Atkinson's place, having in attendance almost wholly those from the plants of Miss Atkinson and Miss Farant, had present 546 last Sunday (Dec. 8). The system in the Sunday school was equal to that of any American Sunday school I ever saw.

"There is also Miss Rogers' splendid work among the women, and the kindergarten work of Miss Park and Miss Anderson, carried on by them with the help only of Dr. Park and his wife.

"This is a great day for China. There may be changes unforeseen and unexpected; but there will never again be the old China of centuries past. Her people are awake. The voting last week in the elections with reference to the new government was quiet, orderly, and enthusiastic. It was a wonderful sight to see the thousands of men pouring in a constant stream into the polling place to exercise that sovereign right for the first time. Some day—not far hence—they will astonish the world more than they did when the republic was put in place of the monarchy."

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Prof. A. W. Breeder, principal of the Gibland High School, has been elected missionary superintendent of the Sunday school at that place, and has entered upon his work with enthusiasm.

Rev. J. F. Foster has organized a new Sunday school at Grabow, the site of the recent labor troubles among the timber workmen of West Louisiana, and maintains a regular preaching service there. We are informed that the Sunday school is of a union nature.

At the beginning of the summer season, we suggest that some of our pastors run a regular revival for increasing the efficiency and enrollment of their Sunday schools. In addition to ministerial help, laymen could be used. The Field Secretary would be glad to help plan such a meeting.

As far as the records are known, the Sunday school at Mansfield had the largest attendance ever recorded on Easter Sunday, there being 170 present. Following the Sunday school session, the pupils of Mrs. Logan's Primary department rendered a well prepared program in connection with the regular Easter services in the church.

A feature in a recent Sunday school program that we enjoyed was the whistling of "Old Black Joe" by the boys and girls, first together, and then separately, and to our surprise the girls ran the boys a very close race for the best whistlers. With the piano leading, this was quite a pleasant diversion, and was thoroughly enjoyed by young and old alike.

One of the interesting things about our Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church in Washington, D. C., is the class of foreigners taught there on Sunday afternoons by consecrated Sunday school workers. The classes are small, some only having one pupil, which argues well for the teacher who is willing to give a whole recitation period to so small a class. Here is a practical way of doing mission work at our very door, and the door is already "open."

At Charleyville, where Rev. H. O. White died and was buried, the church has erected a monument over his grave, bearing the inscription: "Erected in loving remembrance by the members of his church." This is a worthy tribute to one of the most faithful pastors of Louisiana Methodism. Brother C. M. Noble, our leading layman at this place, has recently been appointed to fill the vacancy on our Sunday School Board from the Monroe District caused by the death since Conference of Prof. T. J. Petty.

In a letter inclosing a check to pay a subscription to make out a needed amount for the Monroe District Sunday School Institute Fund, Rev. Robt. Randle said: "I enjoyed the services very much, and not a little because they were our own. Let me commend your perseverance, and may God's blessings be upon you." Of course, this is refreshing to a "son Timothy" from one with so honorable a record of studious and faithful ministerial integrity, and we thank Brother Randle both for the liberal contribution and for his fatherly benediction.

Mr. J. H. Thatcher, who recently became the superintendent of the Mansfield Sunday school, starts off (1) by buying and reading the best books on the Modern Sunday School; (2) by dropping business long enough to attend every session of the recent institute at Mansfield, and (3) by calling a council of his Sunday school workers. And one of his individual inventions is an Executive Committee of his Council, whose members are to be his chief counsellors, and who are to aid in arranging a program for the regular council meetings. We commend such a program to all superintendents.

A MOTHERS' DEPARTMENT MEETING.

After canvassing for six weeks for the Mothers' Department of our Sunday school, we organized on February 27 with a membership of 55, and with 35 of that number present. The superintendent of the Sunday school was present for the opening exercises and gave the Mothers a hearty welcome as a new department of the Sunday school. After the opening song, Bible lesson, and prayer, the superintendent of the department explained the object of the organization and the obligations of its members. It was decided to have the monthly meeting on the fourth Thursday of each month at 2 o'clock, at the church. Our pastor, Brother Snelling, then gave an address on "The Religious Training of our Children," which suggested an outline of the necessary features of a sound religious training. Mrs. Charles Ervin read an article entitled "Cheerful Religion," and was followed by Mrs. Snelling, on the topic, "At What Age and How Shall I Teach My Child to Pray?" She gave us a splendid talk on this subject. By the courtesy of Mrs. Thos. McCormack, one of our members, the ladies had three group pictures made—under the palm-tree on the lawn—and then dainty refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served by two of our number, Mrs. D. C. Worrell and Mrs. J. Cohen. The mothers lingered a while to meet one another and get acquainted. One of the features of the meeting was our auxiliary of young ladies, who looked after the babies and the children while the meeting was going on.

MRS. J. H. CARTER.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"The supreme need of the average Sunday school teacher is not a method of work, but a motive for work."

Rev. W. C. Carlisle took Adult Bible Class Day to organize his adult forces and means to keep them well in line. All his work is in good order.

One pastor in a small charge, Rev. Anderson Bennett, is developing manhood and womanhood in his locality by investing in good books for boys and girls and using them as a circulating library.

A suggestion-box is a useful accessory to class work. Let any pupil who has a suggestion to offer drop it into the box, as the days go by, and many really good things will be secured in that way.

A critical Frenchman says that what ails France is that she has lost her soul. "What shall it profit America if she gain the whole world—commercially, industrially, financially—and lose her soul?"

"Perhaps the most fundamental mistake we make in the training of our children, so far as the effect upon character is concerned, is in setting before them the idea that religious training is a thing distinct from other education."

The Cllshy Class, at West Point, had 92 present on a recent Sunday; it also has its new piano paid for. Mr. Fisher, Chairman of the Membership Committee, is doing a great work. The superintendent and pastor in this city feel that the entire school is in a splendid and growing condition.

Sweatman has three good live Sunday schools and will start another soon. A great Rally is being planned for July 4th, with good speakers and a day full of the really uplifting things.

Rev. H. G. Henderson wrote that his Sunday school superintendent would observe Adult Bible Class Day, and we feel sure it was a great success.

A LETTER FROM REV. H. P. LEWIS, SR.

Dear Brother Meek: For the past two weeks I have been visiting my son, H. P. L., Jr., at Carriere, Miss. I have preached for him here, and at McNeil and Placune, which are two other appointments on his charge. I shall (D. V.) preach here again next Sunday, April 6. My health is fine, appetite good, and I sleep well.

I preached at Byrd's Chapel on April 1, which was my 77th birthday, to a large and attentive congregation. I was pastor there 54 years ago, and presiding elder there 45 years ago. It was there I licensed Brother L. Carley to preach in 1869. It was there I baptized 37 children during a quarterly meeting occasion 44 years ago. There were people present to hear me last Tuesday who heard me in 1859.

At Byrd's Chapel they have a live prayer meeting and Sunday school, both of which are well attended. Brother R. A. Breeland, their pastor, is doing a good work and is a popular preacher and pastor.

I spent a pleasant night with Brother Peter Harvey, one of the leading members of Byrd's Chapel. His father was killed by the Copeland clan of robbers more than 65 years ago. I received his step-father, Elijah Byrd, into the Church 55 years ago, my first year in the ministry. About 100 joined the Church under my ministry that year.

A VISIT TO A FORMER FIELD.

This scribe had the privilege a few days since of preaching to a remnant of a congregation of persons to whom he ministered thirty-six years ago. A few of the older people still occupy their places in the sanctuary, but most of them have passed over the stream of time; while those who were young then are now getting old, many of them following in the footsteps of their fathers, working for God and humanity. It was an inspiration to speak to these descendants of my former congregation, on a topic suggested by Job 21:15—"God and Prayer."

I am within the bounds of the Lisbon Circuit, and I find the people in hearty co-operation with Brother Price, the new pastor, but not forgetful of Brother J. B. Williams, who for four years so faithfully and with great profit ministered to them in holy things. To me, it was always a source of pleasure to follow a man of whom the people were fond of speaking in expressions of love; and I suppose it is so with Brother Price.

My wife and I are waiting here with a son (who is a lover of the Advocate and a steward in the Church) for spring to open before starting on a long hoped for visit to loved ones whom we have not seen for a quarter of a century. Though I cannot read what is written on this paper, I trust that you may be able to do so.

All Such Corns

Can be Ended in Two Days

Apply a little Blue-jay method is now employed on a million corns a month.

Right from that moment the corn becomes comfortable. No pain, no soreness, no discomfort. The way is gentle and results are sure.

Then the B & B wax begins to loosen the corn, and in 48 hours the whole corn comes out. Don't pare corns. Don't apply liquids. Don't use ancient methods in these scientific days.

The chemist who invented Blue-jay studied forever in this simple, modern way. Try it on one corn.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

PIANO CLUB

In fact, the Club was formed especially for YOU and for YOUR family and friends. Every feature was especially planned to meet YOUR needs, serve YOUR interests and gain YOUR approval. The enthusiastic letters of commendation which the Management of the Club receives by almost every mail, and the total absence of complaints makes us absolutely sure that YOU would prove no exception to the rule.

The Management seeks YOUR interest, investigation and indorsement. We want YOU to fully understand the objects of the Club and the manner in which those objects have been so successfully attained. Read the brief statement of the objects of the Club printed on this page, then write for YOUR copy of the Club's catalogue which will give you the particulars in full.

THE OBJECTS OF THE CLUB

1. By uniting our interests in a Club of one hundred buyers, to secure the lowest wholesale price for each Club member, thereby saving approximately one-third on high grade pianos.
2. To obtain for its members the most convenient terms of payment.
3. To remove every possible objection to the easy payment plan, and to protect the widow and the orphan, by providing that in the event of death of the buyer all further payments are canceled and your family is given a receipt in full, provided the simple and easy rules of the Club have been complied with.
4. To insure the highest quality of instruments, fully guaranteed by an old and reliable House, thus avoiding the disappointment which often results from dealing with irresponsible firms.
5. To enable Club members to exchange their old pianos for new ones or for self-player pianos.

Every piano furnished to Club members is fully guaranteed and is backed by the reputation of Ludden & Bates, one of the oldest, largest and most reliable piano companies of America.

JUDGE THE CLUB BY ITS MEMBERS

They are the best people in every community, educated, refined, cultured, the most competent critics of quality and values in musical instruments. Many of them are music teachers, others are lawyers, ministers, physicians, college professors, successful farmers, merchants and business men. Their judgment of the Club is worthy of YOUR consideration.

These members unanimously express themselves as "delighted." They describe the quality of the instrument as "superb." They speak of the Club plan as "ideal." They refer to the big saving in price as "wonderful." They say that the plan of payment is "liberal," "safe," "convenient." They refer to the Management's dealings as "honorable," "courteous," "considerate." They express their cordial good wishes for the success of the Club and assure the Management of their interest, support and approval.

And now we want to hear from YOU. If YOUR home needs a piano, or a better piano, or a self-player piano, that all can play, write for your copy of the Club's Catalogue to-day. Address

Editorial

To become an editor is 'to take up arms against a sea' of errors, and to be often overwhelmed by them.

A current writer begins an article with the query, "Are you a negative or a positive?" This is a good question for every church member to ask himself.

The Midland Methodist pertinently says: "It is hard to have a revival in a church in which the family altars are broken down in the homes of its members."

The proper place for a self-seeking or position-seeking preacher is the mourner's bench. Ambition for a conspicuous or an easy-going career is the Delilah which has shorn many a minister of his spiritual strength and stained his character.

Those who talk so much of new methods of work need not fancy that they have a monopoly in that field. Satan himself is a past-master when it comes to new expedients. Read the following as an illustration of his resourcefulness in meeting changed conditions: "In one State where it has been made against the law to give a free lunch with every drink, the saloonists have reversed their method and now give a free drink with every purchased lunch."

It has frequently been affirmed that there is no connection between the woman suffrage movement and that to secure laity rights for women in the Churches. But notice how the New Orleans Era Club referred to one of its announced speakers in the Times-Democrat a few days ago: "Mrs. Mary E. Cragie, of Brooklyn, New York, Chairman of the CHURCH WORK COMMITTEE OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION," etc. This lets out the secret and shows whence came the unhappy agitation that is now disturbing the peace of our religious bodies. Henceforth let no person who would be truthful deny that the two movements are in reality one. It is never creditable for a child to try to repudiate its parentage.

THE VOICE THAT THE WORLD HEARS.

We are inclined to think that self-deception is by no means rare. It is not unusual to find a person who seems to imagine that he is quite consecrated, but who is largely dominated by some subtle form of worldliness. It is sometimes both amusing and pitiable to hear a man making high claims to personal disinterestedness and a passion for unselfish service, when it is perfectly patent to others that he is actuated by wholly different purposes. To know one's self thoroughly is no easy task. The estimate that an individual's associates form of him is often more correct than his own; they seldom fail to take accurately one's moral measure. This explains why some men, whose lives are above reproach as to their outward conduct, have so little religious influence. Back of all their pretensions (in which they themselves may possibly believe), the people discover a lack of genuineness—the regnancy of wrong motives—the absence of that which David said God desires, "truth in the inward parts." However much it may seem to be drowned by the prattle of the physical tongue, the 'still small voice' of one's true character speaks, and the world hears it.

A SCHOLAR'S VERDICT AFTER FORTY YEARS OF INVESTIGATION.

Mr. Edward Alexander Guy, who is reputed to have been a great scholar, passed away a few days since in New York City. The story of his life, as given in the secular papers, is a most interesting one. He is reported to have graduated with honors at Miami University in 1867, after which he studied theology at Princeton, and later in a seminary in Geneva, Switzerland. While there he conceived the idea that the King James Version of the Scriptures was not a literal translation, and that it probably abounded in errors. Having been left independently rich by his mother, he determined to devote his life to a study of all the extant ancient documents that might aid in securing an exact and unaltered text of the original Sacred Writings. This course of study took him to the most famous libraries of the world. He spent a number of years in London at the British Museum, where the Codex Alexandrinus is kept. He then went to Paris, where, in the Royal Library, he found and studied the Codex Ephraem; thence he went to Rome and in the Vatican Library examined the Codex Vaticanus, and finally to St. Petersburg, where in the library of that city he pored over the Codex Sinaiticus. These four manuscripts, coming down from the early centuries of the Christian Era, show the Bible as it existed soon after apostolic days. (None of them was accessible when the King James translation was made in 1611.) Nor did Mr. Guy, as he prosecuted his work, fail to give attention to other ancient papers of less note; nothing he could find that was thought to be calculated to throw any light upon the problems with which he was wrestling, was overlooked. For forty years he addressed himself to this laborious research, and his final conclusion as announced by his brother, Mr. William E. Guy, who is the executor of his estate, is that the King James Version of the Holy Scriptures is substantially correct throughout, containing no errors of consequence.

Our readers will be interested to know that Mr. Guy is said to have made provision in his will for the publication of a book in which will be set forth the results of his life of assiduous and painstaking study. It is stated that in this volume there will be four translations in parallel columns: first, the Codex Sinaiticus (considered the best of the Codices); second, the Modern Greek Translation; third, the King James Version; and fourth, Mr. Guy's Version. The last two will be in English. This publication will be quite expensive, and will not be expected to be a paying one, since it will interest only scholars. It is claimed that no printing house in the United States has the type necessary to do this work, and that it will have to be done abroad.

We have not written of this matter because we are a stickler for any particular translation of the Bible, though we confess that for beauty and impressiveness of language we think the King James Version far surpasses any other. Nor, in our judgment, is it likely soon to be displaced in the popular esteem by any of the later publications. Yet the other versions have their value. They serve pretty much the function of a good commentary, not infrequently making clear obscure passages in other renditions of the Divine Word. The chief and important lesson to be learned from Mr. Guy's reported experience is that the Scriptures have been wonderfully and accurately preserved, and that they are thoroughly trustworthy and authoritative as they have come down to us from the fathers. The gentlemen who have been making so much noise over so-called new truths that they have discovered by going back to the original sources of authority have in reality little of value to offer us. The Revelation that God made to man has not been allowed to perish from the earth; it contains no admixtures of error such as to vitiate or impair it, and its essential teachings are easily understood. True, it is the world's noblest piece of literature, and the keenest intellects may study it for a lifetime, and yet find beauties that charm and problems that challenge; but these things do not affect the fundamental conditions of human salvation, any more than new discoveries in the realm of higher mathematics can alter the multiplication table or the binomial theorem. No hidden cipher within the Book of Inspiration, or Rosetta Stone without, will ever give a new interpretation to its principal message. It has been variously attacked, but "nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure." The way into the kingdom has been one in all the ages, and will continue unchanged until the end of time.

BISHOP KILGO'S ADVICE.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist of April 3, refers to Bishop Kilgo's presidency over the Baltimore Annual Conference as follows:

"Bishop Kilgo emphasized the evangelistic note in all his utterances, urging the preachers to keep in touch with the Spirit as the source of all power, and to look for conversions not only at the regular services, but also when engaged in the work of pastoral visiting."

Manifestly our North Carolina Chief Pastor knows what Zion needs. And if his golden advice were heeded, Southern Methodism, with its present superior equipment, would doubtless soon be flourishing as never before in its history.

Every absurdity has a companion to defend it.—Goldsmith.

THE CHURCH NOT FOR ENTERTAINMENT BUT FOR EDIFICATION.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

President Woodrow Wilson is the master of an uncommonly clear style in writing and speaking. The clarity of his style grows out of the clearness of his thinking; and he thinks clearly on moral and religious matters as well as upon economic and political subjects.

Recently he was reported as saying the following wise words about turning churches into places of entertainment instead of holding them as houses of worship designed for the achievement of spiritual ends:

"When we say that the way to get young people to the church is to make the Church interesting, I am afraid that we too often mean that the way to do it is to make it entertaining. Did you ever know the theater to be a successful means of governing conduct? Did you ever know the most excellent concert or series of concerts to be the means of revolutionizing a life? Did you ever know any amount of entertainment to go further than hold for the hour that it lasted? If you mean to draw young people by entertainment, you have only one excuse for it, and that is to follow up the entertainment with something that is not entertaining, but which grips the heart like the touch of a hand. I dare say there is some excuse for alluring persons to a place where good will be done them, but I think it would be a great deal better to simply let them understand that the church is a place where life is dispensed, and if they want life, they must come to that place."

This is a most timely utterance, which both preachers and people will do well to lay to heart. There is a rather general impression abroad that the pulpit of to-day speaks with less authority than did the pulpit of the past, and that the Churches have lost power over men. If this impression is justified by the facts in the case, we need not go further than the widespread disposition to use the churches for purposes of entertainment to find an explanation of the diminished influence of the preachers and the Christian organization. When the pulpit enters the field of entertainment and bids for the patronage of amusement-loving people, it cannot speak with authority, but it must speak to please; and a world-pleasing preacher or Church can never exert a spiritual influence over men. On the contrary, such a Church or pulpit is treated querulously and whimsically by its pleasure-seeking patrons, who will neither dance when it pipes nor mourn when it laments. The command of the Lord to the apostles was, "Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life;" and this is the will of God concerning the men in all ages who claim to be ambassadors of Christ. The pulpit is no place for merely entertaining lectures and addresses—no, not even for worthy and elevating discourses on literary, scientific, or social questions. However useful and proper such discussions may be at other times and places, they are utterly out of place in the Church of God upon the day set apart for worshipping our heavenly Father and drawing religious refreshment from the fountain of spiritual life. The gospel of Christ by its very nature does not admit of treatment for ends of entertainment; it is too solemn and serious for such uses. To undertake to amuse or divert with the gospel of a crucified Redeemer is to do something worse than committing a blunder—it amounts almost, if not quite, to profanity.

Even men of the world feel that a Church is to be censured which seeks to gain the patronage of the world by playing the part of a purveyor of amusements. When the Church ceases to speak with authority and begins to court the favor of men rather than to call them to repentance, it loses the respect of all sensible people and provokes their derision.

The comic periodical called "Judge" cannot set up a just claim to a religious character, but recently that paper satirized the amusement-making church in the following piece of broad and bitter ridicule:

"The Church of the Near Future.

"The Rev. E. Lycurgus Gabb will preach Sunday morning, at 10:30, on the topic, The Progress of the War on Tuberculosis. His evening topic will be The Best Seller in Recent Fiction. The topic of the weekly prayer meeting will be Peter the Great, illustrated by fine moving pictures. There will also be a moving picture show in the church on Monday evening."

"On Tuesday evening the Athletic Association of the church will have a prize drill and a contest for a silver cup, in which the young men of a sister church will take part. A good time is expected."

"On Wednesday evening there will be an interesting and exciting basketball contest in the gym of the church, followed by a supper, to be paid for by the losing team."

"On Thursday evening two teams will each try to do the other up in a bowling contest, which promises to pack the bowling alley of the church to the limit. After the contest, some of the experts in the swimming line will do some fancy swimming stunts in the church swimming pool."

"On Friday evening the young people of the church will have a ragtag and hoh-tail social, which promises to be a very hilarious affair. A prize will be given to the person attending in the most ridiculous costume."

"On Saturday night there will be a baked-bean supper, to be followed by a pleasing entertainment."

"It is in this way that the church is opening its doors every day in the week and seeking to create Christian character among its adherents. Let the good work go on."

Some may regard it as highly improper to transfer this bit of coarse derision of the churches from the pages of "Judge" to this column, and may consider blameworthy any seeming approval by copying it. But the very extravagance of the thing may serve as a warning against a prevalent tendency in the Church which has gone already to disgusting and dangerous lengths.

Recently the press dispatches reported the case of a church in Chicago which had opened "a dance hall in the parish house to compete with the vicious institutions of this character that comprise such a problem in Chicago." This church which has gone into the dance-hall business was described in the secular press as "a most fashionable church," whatever that may mean. To apply the word "fashionable" to a church smacks of a spirit, however, that one might expect to manifest itself in routs and hails; but it suggests nothing akin to the spirit of the Church whose birth and growth are recorded in the Acts of the Apostles.

If such a question be not too profane for Christian people to frame, let us ask how it would look in the Book of Acts if we read there the statement that Paul opened a dance hall in the city of Corinth to compete with the "vicious institutions" which made the moral problems of that dissolute commercial metropolis which flourished and festered in the first century?

But the great Apostle to the Gentiles cannot be conceived of as a preacher resorting to such degraded and degrading methods to catch the patronage of a lost world. He has left us a description of the means upon which he relied to redeem Corinth from its foul sins. In his first Epistle to the Corinthians he says, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. * * * And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." (1 Corinthians 2:1-5.) What would a man with a program and purpose of that sort think of a proposal that he should enter the field of competition with alluring dance halls?

The truth is, the Church of God cannot hope to compete with worldly institutions in offering such attractions. If one undertakes the business of amusing people, he must prepare to change the play-bills often, and with each change he must make the next bill a little more sensational than the last, until at last he reaches a point at which he dare not go further in that direction and cannot go backward. It is then his patrons turn away from him, and go elsewhere to seek some new thing. The theater exists under this irresistible law of degeneration, and this fact explains the oft-repeated cry, "Let us reform the theater." The vain proposal has been made again and again for more than a thousand years. In every age of its history all men have agreed that the theater should be reformed, but nobody has ever been able to reform it. Like mortal man, "It never is, but always to be blessed."

But if the theater, operating the business of amusing people, cannot withstand the inevitable gravitation to evil, how can a Church hope to escape degeneration when it undertakes to compete with the playhouse or the dance hall? The proposition is as senseless as it is sinful.

The one business, and the exclusive business, of the Church is to produce and promote spiritual life among men, to make converts and edify believers. It has wandered from its work when it undertakes to engage in the business of diverting people. It cannot without discrediting itself beg the world for its patronage, and it never dishonors itself more than when it offers men the premium of an amusement in order to get them to subscribe to its support. Our Lord is reproached when his Church offers to give a theater ticket or dance hall privileges to any one who will accept them. O the shame of so much as thinking of such a wretched proposal!

IS IT WHAT WE NEED?

By Rev. S. H. Werlein, D. D.

Rev. J. M. Moore, D. D., Secretary of the Department of Home Missions, informs the public that he was requested by the Board of Missions to prepare a Little Hymn Book composed of a selection of hymns from the Methodist Hymnal. He states that the object is to provide a book "to meet a recognized need in our country and village churches"—for "communities where the learning of hymns has been neglected and where the singing of the few that are familiar, by reason of repetition, is monotonous and dull, if not dreary, while the singing of gospel songs, many of which are frivolous and fantastic, has become the established usage." His selections embrace "one hundred and sixty-five hymns and thirty-five spiritual songs which have been thoroughly tested in the experiences of God's people," etc.—This is his justification for editing and publishing this book. Any one acquainted with the hymnology of the Church will notice at once that he selected the oldest and most familiar tunes, with the exception of about forty-five which will be to most Methodist congregations new; while the forty-five unfamiliar ones contain some of the best melodies in the Church Hymnal, a number of them are inferior to others which might have been selected. It is doubtful whether a Methodist congregation can be found in any part of the country which is not perfectly familiar with the majority of the numbers Dr. Moore has chosen. Indeed, I doubt not but that most of these songs can be found in the gospel song books which Dr. Moore seems to condemn. These latter books have the advantage of the Little Hymn Book in that they are quite as cheaply sold and contain airs and melodies which are in many instances exceedingly pretty, animated, and quite as devotional as those that are favored with Dr. Moore's imprimatur.

Country people, and, indeed, all Methodist people, should be encouraged to use the new hymns as well as the old ones. What we need is not revised or abridged hymnals, but the publication of the Methodist Hymnal prepared by the joint commission, at the lowest possible price. This book should be placed in the hands, of our people in cheap form, and the unfamiliar tunes, many of them exceptionally fine, should be taught our people. Congregations that shall be encouraged to purchase the Little Hymn Book will naturally see no reason why they should use the Standard Hymnal. Thus they will be indirectly and unintentionally encouraged to remain in ignorance of the great excellence of the Hymn Book which the Church has provided.

In all our congregations there are persons who resent the substitution of new tunes to old familiar words. They look upon it as almost a sacrilege. From a sentimental standpoint the old melodies are very dear, but from an artistic standpoint many of them have become stale and wearisome. Why any one should discourage the use of the finest melodies, the most uplifting musical compositions, is inexplicable except on the ground of the absence of musical taste and discernment. Music progresses as well as science, literature and theology. Many songs which were very popular fifty years ago are out of print now, and we can almost detect the age of any one who persists in this day in singing these out-worn effusions. I do not say that many of the old songs are not beautiful and worthy of immortality—many of them can never be excelled—but that is no reason why people should refuse to sing new songs which evince the finest creative power. While some people associate with the old hymns some of the happiest experiences of their life, there are others who were brought into the Kingdom during the singing of some of the newest and freshest songs which should be in common use among all Christians. There is such a thing as a singing rut. We all know something about the prayer rut. To people who enjoy music the singing rut is tedious and almost excruciating.

Music is educative. Our Church Hymnal has been of incalculable benefit to our people in tuning up their singing. It has delivered many from a sense of utter surfeit with old songs and has invested the song service with an entirely new interest. Some of these songs, new and unfamiliar to our own people, have been used by other Christian bodies for centuries. They come to some of us with the freshness of a new creation. Thus we become sharers of the musical triumphs of some of the greatest musical geniuses. Some of the Churches that have existed for centuries employed musical artists to enrich the musical part of their service, and the use of their best melodies improves and stimulates the musical taste and culture of our people. There was a day when the songs we used were peculiarly Methodist. Few other denominations used them, and our fathers seemed to steer clear of the songs used by other Churches. We ought to be grateful that that day is passing away. I am as averse to certain hymns being stamped Methodist as to a certain kind of garb advertising the wearer as a Methodist. Church music should be ecumenical.

For practical purposes there should be a course of music taught in the theological seminaries. I have noticed that where two melodies are adapted to well-known hymns, the tune is generally selected which is the more familiar. The new tune may be far more musical, but the older one is chosen "because the people can sing it." As a general thing the preachers themselves exclude the less known compositions, and so from age to age and from generation to generation the music-loving people have been forced to hear over and over the limited repertoire of songs with which we are all familiar. What wonder that the singing in some of the more ambitious churches attracts people who otherwise would attend our churches? I would plead for better music in our churches and deprecate any device that will discourage the largest familiarity with our Methodist Hymnal. If Dr. Moore and the Board of Missions desire to effect some signal improvement in the singing of our people, let them use their influence in cheapening the publication of our standard Hymnal.

SUNDAY SCHOOL STATISTICS.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D., Sunday School Editor

The Sunday school record of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the last year, as shown by our recently published General Minutes, is in one important respect sadly disappointing. The net increase in enrollment, which ought to have been at least 100,000, was in reality a little less than 15,000. Some of the Conferences made substantial gains. The North Georgia Conference led with a gain of 6,677. Next to this came the South Carolina Conference with a gain of 4,452. Little West-Virginia took third place with a gain of 3,006. Other Conferences showing an increase of a thousand or more are: North Carolina, 2,434; Tennessee, 2,369; Louisiana, 2,302; South Georgia, 2,230; Alabama, 1,468; St. Louis, 1,370; White River, 1,339; Mississippi, 1,310; Louisville, 1,309; West Oklahoma, 1,149; West Texas, 1,112; Kentucky, 1,041, and Florida, 1,017. The following had increases of less than 1000: Arkansas, Brazil, Cuba, China, Columbia, German Mission, East Oklahoma, Holston, Mexican Border, New Mexico, Northwest Texas, South Brazil, and Virginia. In loss the Little Rock Conference comes first with a decrease of 5,272. Western North Carolina is a close second with a decrease of 5,241. Other Conferences showing losses of one thousand or more are Central Texas, 4,651; Japan, 2,968; Texas, 2,530; Memphis, 2,140; and Illinois, 1,047. Those showing a loss of less than a thousand are Baltimore, Central Mexican Mission, Denver, East Columbia, Korea, Los Angeles, Missouri, Montana, North Alabama, North Mississippi, North Texas, Northwest Mexican Mission, Pacific, and Southwest Missouri.

Out of nine Conferences in the foreign mission field, four show a loss in Sunday school enrollment, while Brazil, China, Cuba, and the Mexican Border Mission made small gains. All the Conferences in the Far West except New Mexico and Columbia show a loss. The great State of Texas had a net loss of 5,651.

There are indications that these figures in some instances may not be trustworthy. For instance, the Illinois Conference reports a gain of 5 schools and 602 officers and teachers, but a loss of 1,047 pupils; the Little Rock Conference, a gain of 16 schools, but a loss of 159 officers and teachers and 5,272 scholars; the North Alabama Conference, a gain of 9 schools and 319 officers and teachers, but a loss of 181 pupils, and the Western North Carolina Conference a gain of 7 schools and 156 officers and teachers, but a loss of 5,241 pupils. About the only reliable information to be gained from such contradictory reports as these is that some of our Conferences are still the victims of a good deal of careless and inaccurate bookkeeping.

But after making all reasonable allowance for errors, there is still enough in these statistics to provoke us to serious consideration. It is well known that the Sunday school is at present the chief source of our increase in church membership. What about the volume of the stream when the fountain begins to fail? Another fact to be seriously pondered is that more than half of our population under twenty years of age are not in the Sunday school and are receiving almost no religious instruction. If these millions are not won for Christ within the next few years, the probability that they will ever be won is exceedingly meager. But if the reports given above are even approximately correct, we are doing almost nothing for them, since it is evident that we have not even kept pace with the normal increase of children in our own Church.

What is the matter? Is it possible that, in spite of all our talk about the importance of the religious training of the young, we are not really giving to this department of our work the intelligent and emphatic attention which it ought to receive? Or are we lacking in agencies needed for extending and improving the Sunday school work? Perhaps there is some ground for affirmative answers to both of these questions. It is not easy for a great organization to make a radical change in its viewpoint. Adult evangelism has so long had the leading place in our thinking and planning that we find it exceedingly difficult to put the child first and the adult second.

It is generally assumed that our presiding elders and pastors are to be held responsible for Sunday school extension and development, and this is largely correct. But most of the great denominations are finding it expedient to put special Sunday school workers in the field to supplement the efforts of their regularly established agencies. For instance, the Methodist Episcopal Church has twenty-five Sunday school field secretaries working under the direction of the General Sunday School Board, while the Southern Baptist Association has more than thirty, and the Northern Presbyterian Church more than one hundred. Possibly we need to increase our force of Sunday school field workers.

But whatever the trouble may be, it is clear that the situation calls for serious attention. We cannot afford to permit our Sunday school work to lag. Whatever is necessary in the way of time and money for its larger success must be given.

A SUGGESTION.

To the Preachers and Laymen of the North Mississippi Conference.

Owing to the extreme emergencies at this time I feel it expedient to call attention to this matter:—Many of our churches and parsonages have been damaged, and some entirely destroyed, during the recent cyclone period. This will necessarily increase the demands upon the Church Extension Board this fall. A few expectant applicants have already spoken to me. Some have received assistance through private donations, but the majority will expect aid to come from the Board. Let us take this collection without any reference, whatever, to the assessment. Let us raise all we can. We who have not suffered should seize the opportunity of expressing our gratitude in this way.

Sometimes there are applications before the Board for help when it is not necessary—these cases are, of course, rare. We are glad to help all; but, brethren, let us not this fall make any unnecessary demands. The real necessities are going to be great. I know what it is to see a small congregation stand over the ruins of a recently finished house of worship, when it seemed that all that was possible had been done to build. I know how a little help saves the day in such cases. Let us arise with courage to meet the emergencies confronting us and save the day for all.

Church News

The gain of the Christian Churches of Japan in membership during the past year is reported to be 7,334.

Among those who called on President Wilson at the White House on Wednesday, April 9, were Bishops Hoss and Denny and Dr. R. S. Hyer, President of the Southern University, at Dallas, Texas.

Dr. Charles W. Gordon—"Ralph Connor"—the most famous of ministerial novelists, has lately given the public a new book, entitled "Corporal Cameron, of the Northwest Mounted Police."

The Fleming H. Revell Company is now printing the third edition of Dr. J. W. Lee's latest book, "The Religion of Science." We are pleased to know that this admirable work is having a large circulation. It well deserves it.

The Central Methodist Advocate claims that Louisville, Ky., leads all other American cities of over 200,000 population in its percentage of church affiliation. Still there are said to be 100,000 people in the Kentucky metropolis who are connected with no religious denomination.

Bishop W. A. Candler spent the last Sunday in March with the Eleventh Avenue M. E. Church, South, of Birmingham, and took a collection of $8,000 to meet an outstanding debt and provide for other needed improvements. At the evening hour he preached a ringing missionary sermon.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "Last year the preachers admitted on trial, re-admitted, and received from other Churches throughout our connection numbered 373—the largest number included under these heads for several years. The itinerancy is not losing its power over men."

The Superannuate Endowment Fund of the M. E. Church, South, now amounts to about $350,000, of which more than $235,000 is in cash assets. Dr. J. R. Stuart, the agent of this fund, states that it is steadily growing, and that the cash receipts for it are becoming larger every year.

The figures tabulated in the office of the Book Editor in Nashville show that the Memphis Conference last year had a decrease of 748 in the number of church members within its bounds. We doubt whether there was really such a loss. One of the difficult problems of our Church is how to get the pastors to fill out the statistical tables correctly.

It is reported that the two leading Baptist churches in New York City—Fifth Avenue and Calvary—may be merged into one. The former is popularly referred to as "John D. Rockefeller's church." It is stated that if this union is effected Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, now connected with the Fifth Avenue congregation, will continue in charge.

The Baltimore Conference at its recent session in Staunton, Va., appointed a committee of seven laymen to consider the feasibility of placing the entertainment of the members of the Conference during its annual meeting upon a business basis. It is stated that free entertainment for those attending public gatherings is becoming increasingly difficult in that section.

Miss Estella Hefley, a daughter of Rev. W. G. Hefley, presiding elder of the Jackson (Tenn.) District, has been elected Principal of Boscobel College at Nashville. Miss Hefley is a graduate of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College and has also studied at Oxford, England. She was the Principal of Centenary College, at Cleveland, Tenn., for several years, and is regarded as a notably brilliant educator.

At the late session of the Baltimore Conference a resolution to constitute a committee of seven preachers and seven laymen to study the question of laity rights for women and submit a report when that body next convenes, was introduced by Rev. J. B. Henry. Dr. H. P. Hamill thereupon offered the following substitute, which was adopted: "That the paper be respectfully received, and that it be held until next year, and then submitted to the Committee on Memorials at the General Conference."

The Avera Bible Lectures at Trinity College (a biennial course) were due to be delivered last week by Dr. Thornton Whaling, President of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C. Mr. Walter H. Page, Editor of The World's Work, who has recently been appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. James, is also booked to deliver three lectures on "How To Improve Rural Life in North Carolina" at Trinity this spring. Whether Mr. Page's entrance into the Government's service will necessitate a cancellation of this engagement, we are not informed.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL,

Possibly a statement as to the conflict of the Divinity School with the Missionary Conference at Waynesville, would be a good thing for the information of those who are interested in both occasions. The date of the Divinity School was decided upon last summer while in session, and the date of the Missionary Conference was not announced until some time in January, after the announcement of the Divinity School had been made to all the patronizing Conferences.

It was some time in February that I received a letter from Bishop Candler, asking if it was practicable for us to change the time of the Divinity School so that he might be at the Missionary Conference. After getting his letter, I received an urgent request from Doctor Cook to change the time of the Divinity School so as to permit the Conference to have Bishop Candler preach the Conference sermon on Sunday, June 29. I immediately took the matter up with the Directors of the Divinity School, requesting an expression from them as to a change of date. The opinion, generally expressed, was that it could not be changed except at a loss to the institution in several respects. I also had a letter from Bishop Candler, saying that he could not say whether he could be with us or not, in case we changed the date. We considered ourselves very fortunate in securing Bishop Candler some time last October, and he being so heartily in favor of the work we are trying to do for the Church in this school, and all other matters being considered fully, we could not see our way clear either to change the date, or call the school in for this year.

Many of the patrons of the Divinity School would be delighted to attend the Missionary Conference, but we believe in the work we are doing, and regret the conflict of dates more than we can express; at the same time, it is not our fault. We do not blame any one, since the managers of the Conference did not realize that we were in existence down by the Gulf.

It is the desire of the Directors of the Divinity School that all the undergraduates of the four patronizing Conferences read the Course of Study and be prepared to take the course at the Divinity School this summer. We are anxious that the graduates shall avail themselves of the books of the Reading Course, as well as of the other advantages of the school.

Those who know Doctor Rice and Doctor Cope feel assured that we have not made a mistake in securing them for this session. I am glad to note that the Managers of the Missionary Conference were wise enough to secure Doctor Rice for an address, though we "got him first." Where he is known he is greatly appreciated as a man in full sympathy with the forward movements of the Church in all its enterprises, and he proves himself to be a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed" in his own pastoral charge.

With this explanation, let all the ministers of the four patronizing Conferences do their best to be present the first evening of the school—June 24—and remain to the close. The Announcement Brother Ellis is sending out is a very attractive card, giving in detail all the advantages of the program.

ROBT. SELBY, President.

NAMES AND ADDRESSES WANTED

To the Alumnae of Grenada College.

Monday, May 26, will be Alumnae Day at Grenada College. Rev. J. A. Hall will deliver the annual address. All graduates of Grenada College are cordially invited to be present. Many graduates have not enrolled in the Alumnae Association and their present names and addresses are unknown to the president.

Will all graduates who see this announcement please write to Mrs. Ludie W. Stokes, Grenada, Miss. Both Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of the College, and I would like to have the name and present address of every girl who has graduated from Grenada College since 1885, including the class of that year. MRS. A. W. STOKES, President of the Alumnae Association.

ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS REPORTED.

Dear Advocate: Since my last report the following subscriptions to the fund to buy the old Methodist church property for Mansfield College have been received:

J. H. McNeely, Colfax La. $10.00
Dr. M. M. Bannerman, Grand Cane, La. 10.00
Mrs. Lillian L. Clarke, New Orleans. 10.00
Miss Elizabeth McVoy, Brookhaven, Miss. 10.00

Total $40.00
Amount previously reported $412.00

Balance needed $548.00

I appreciate the promise of help from two of the presiding elders—Brothers Brown and Carter. If these brethren, together with the other members of the cabinet, will help just a little; and if the Conference Board of Education and the Board of Trustees of Mansfield College would lend a hand, the matter could soon be closed. I cannot but feel that if our people understood that the College really needs this property, and that the local church, though in debt, is offering to do the liberal part, that the money would be subscribed in another week. Many seem to regard the whole effort as one to get outside help for a local matter, and say they have local church enterprises requiring their money. Still hoping and expecting the full amount to be sent in speedily, I am,

Very truly,

THOMAS H. MORRIS.

During the first three months of 1913 steamship companies reported a total loss of more than $7,000,000. It is said that this has proven to be the most unfortunate year for deep-sea vessels of any during the last fifty years.

Few people, doubtless, know that Prince Alfonso of the Asturias, heir of the Spanish throne, is deaf and dumb. He has been so since his birth six years ago. Helen Keller, the deaf and dumb and blind prodigy of Boston, has been engaged to teach the young prince to speak.

It is reported that the United States government is to take over the vast landed estate of Mr. Vanderbilt near Asheville, N. C., with the exception of the Bltmore Mansion and about 12,000 acres of land. The entire tract composes about 100,000 acres, and includes the Pisgah Forest which will become a part of the great Appalachian Park.

On April 8, the Connecticut Legislature ratified the amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by the direct vote of the people. This makes a total of 36 States—the necessary three-fourths majority—that have acted favorably on the amendment, and it is therefore now a part of the Constitution.

Mr. Harold F. McCormack, a business man of Chicago who lives at Forest Lake, about 25 miles distant from the city, has purchased a Hydroaero for his personal use. The machine is a combination boat and flying machine, and travels about 50 miles an hour on water. He is said to have found the machine thus far perfectly satisfactory and a safe means of travel.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels has announced that the Government will not consider the resignation of midshipmen before the expiration of their first eight-year term. The first four years of a naval cadet's term is taken up in Annapolis in training at the Government's expense, and Secretary Daniels holds that the young men owe at least four years of service for the four years of free schooling.

The first Parliament of the world's youngest republic convened in Peking, China, on April 8, with about 700 of China's leading citizens, dressed in European fashion (wearing frock coats), present. The first business of the new Parliament will be to effect its own organization and then take up the task of completing the organization of the youthful republic. It is said that when this task is finished the United States and other leading powers will recognize the new government.

A tract of land, known as the "Laird of Skibo," and located in the heart of Jackson, Miss., has been declared by the Mississippi Supreme Court to be the property of the State and, therefore, not under the jurisdiction of the Jackson city government. The decision was rendered as a result of opposition to an effort to secure it as a site for a Carnegie Library. The "Laird of Skibo" will continue to be a promenade park until such a time as the State may desire to use it for public buildings.

President Wilson has chosen the home of Winston Churchill, the novelist, at Windsor, Vt., as his summer home. The Harlakenden House, as the Churchill mansion is called, is a two-story brick structure overlooking the Connecticut River and in full view of the Green Mountains. The 600 to 700 acres that compose the Churchill estate are divided into groves of pine trees and fields of rolling farmland. Near by is the famous Artists' Colony, where such men as Maxfield Parrish, Kenyon Cox, and Augustus St. Gaudens spend their summers.

On last Monday Belgium became the scene of the first nation-wide political strike known in history. A year ago the Socialist party led a fight before the Belgium Parliament for the right of manhood suffrage, which measure was defeated. Not willing to submit to defeat, the Socialist leaders threatened to call out every Socialist laborer in the nation if their request for the ballot was not granted. The Parliament answered that the Belgium Government would not be intimidated by threats. As a result the strike was called, which virtually stops every commercial enterprise in that country.

It is stated that Dr. Friedmann, the discoverer of an alleged cure for tuberculosis, has determined to patent his formula. He has been conducting extensive experiments in this country and seems to have met with some success. However, there are many who believe that if he has really discovered a cure for this dreadful disease, he owes it to humanity to release the secret of his cure to the medical profession. It is certain that the world would think more of a man who would bestow such a benefaction upon humanity than of one who would take advantage of an afflicted people to make a fortune.

"OUR HOME."

Whose home? The home of the Methodist orphans of Mississippi. Who are responsible for the support of this home? The Methodists of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences. How many churches or congregations has this denomination in this territory? Something more than 1200. How many members in the entire territory? I had rather not answer this question, as it might have the appearance of braggadocio. I will say, however, that our Church is well represented from almost every point of view, though it now appears that there are exceptions.

About what does it cost a month to support the Orphanage? It is rather difficult to say definitely what amount is really needed to properly conduct the Home—that is, to fully meet the requirements and needs of the children and to care for the property in a generous and satisfactory way. Brother Williams, in his broad, sensible way, has supported the Home through the months of January, February, and March of the present year on $2576.82 in cash and by making a debt of $2065.41—an average monthly expenditure of $1547.41. I would judge from the above figures that Brother Williams could handle the affairs of the Home admirably at a monthly expenditure not to exceed $2500. And I really believe that with that the boys and girls would have shoes and stockings to wear to Sunday school and church services, and that they would soon learn to invoke God's blessings upon the Southern Methodists for the generous support given them.

With over 1200 churches to draw on, how do you account for the shortage in accounts for the first quarter of 1913—especially when we consider that the expenditure per month is only $7.23 per child, when we can not support a person in our own homes for less than from $15 to $20 per month? Well, it is something like this: If one has anything, he uses that which he has; if he has little he gets along with that little, etc. This accounts for the Orphanage still being in existence. In looking over the list of those who remitted as published in the March number of "Our Home," I was pained to note that only 100 out of a possible 1200 churches were represented as having remembered that we have an Orphanage to be supported by our Church. There were remittances from some few towns and cities in our State, and some very handsome remittances by individuals and Sunday schools, but where were the ELEVEN HUNDRED? Talk about financial systems and methods! Who on earth would buy stock in a concern that has no more interest manifested by its stockholders than appears to be shown in our Home and its success and progress by our church members? Why, no one, to be sure. Neither will the public at large take much stock in the religion of any people who are unmindful of their duty in caring for our poor, unfortunate orphans.

I am certain that the whole trouble lies in the fact that we, as individuals and churches, have not taken the matter seriously, and decided what amounts we could give monthly. Brother Williams is a man of large faith; he has spent much time in prayer. God has answered his petitions, but have you noticed that God's way of answering prayer is through human instrumentalities? Maybe this is your time to answer some of Brother Williams' prayers. Is it possible that God is waiting on some or all of the 1100 delinquent churches to answer prayer? Will you permit 214 orphans to go hungry and unclothed? Be serious, please, and stop right here and talk to God about this matter.

Now since you have prayed over the matter, suppose we consider something worth undertaking for our King. Brother Williams has recommended for years that each church in Mississippi adopt a policy of paying at least $1 per month to the support of the Orphanage. Of course, it would take more than that amount now for its support.

As a layman, who has never owned at one time very many thousands of dollars, but who as a representative of other business men handles interests that reach into very large sums, I am going to outline a "financial system for Mississippi Methodism to use in financing its Orphanage." I am going a step further: I will guarantee, provided, of course, that all the churches will adopt the plan, that the result will be as outlined; in fact, I will furnish bond to that effect. Please pray and think while you read.

Taking the number of churches in Mississippi at 1200, suppose we obligate ourselves to pay $5 per month per church, or $6000 per month, allowing $2500 per month for current expenses in our Home, we would have as a surplus $3500 per month, or $42,000 per year. Place this $42,000 at 4 per cent interest; add the yearly increase, $42,000, plus the interest, and allow the entire accumulation of surplus and interest earnings each year to go untouched, and at the expiration of 15 years we would have accumulated an endowment fund of $874,650, with an annual earning capacity of $34,986. We would thus have the Orphanage off our financial schedule, self-supporting, a great honor to our Church, and a vast amount of subsidiary good would have been accomplished in achieving this result.

Who will help make this possible? Will you drop me a postal card endorsing this plan and saying that your church will fall in line at once?

One other suggestion of a plan to pay off the present indebtedness of more than $2000: Suppose we have an extra "Work Day," say the fourth Saturday in April, and that all Mississippi Methodists give their earnings for that day, sending the same to the Orphanage prior to May 1; or should any be late in observing work day, send same when collected.

All pastors, presiding elders, laymen, women, boys, and girls of our Church in Mississippi are invited and urged to take an active interest in promoting the plans set forth herein. God bless you! Your servant in Christ, Z. Z. LINTON. Fernwood, Miss.

SEASHORE NOTES.

Columbia and M. B. Sharbrough are fitting well to one another. The one will become a great city on the Pearl; the other will give our people food for fine thought, whose delight in preparing a sermon is worthy the emulation of us all.

At Lumberton I am always willing to stop and hide a while. Nowhere in my knowledge will one find a truer, more upright and church-loving corps of men and women, than here. Their fortunate pastor, W. B. Jones, for four years held leadership upon this district. Now, with wife and four children, he makes plans for a strong pastorate among this choice people. We will hear from them.

G. A. Guice, with the bearing of a veteran, and the heart of a good fighter for his Lord, serves Poplarville for the third year. Thus far his report is the best of the three, and his people rightly appreciate him.

R. A. Breeland established a propaganda of his own, with Derby modestly heading his see. With permit to gather congregations as he could, he covers a space of miles. Two local assistants live on his farm with him, and every Sunday finds the trio holding services at different locations, school-houses and churches. Indefatigable Breeland!

Picayune is preparing for a church building, with Henry P. Lewis, Jr., as pastor. This place, with Carriere, composes a growing charge, and Brother Lewis is giving it his customary care.

C. C. Gibson, out east of Lyman, among levels up which tide streams push clear currents, settled by those who raise sheep, burn coal, and run timber, has an interesting pastorate, with some true Methodists peopling it. Pecan orchards are frequent, and the future of the country is surer than in better known localities. Gibson is true to his obligation as pastor, and will finish well this year.

T. B. Cottrell, in old Bay St. Louis, closes a four-year term with this year, and has set out at a good preliminary pace. He will be host to the district conference, to meet there in May. His reputation has worn well, and his community will regret when he leaves it.

At Logtown, the pine mill is the aorta, from which a fine circulation runs throughout the people—a stable institution, where most of the employees are old inhabitants—unusual with a saw-mill community. H. Mellard, retiring and warm-hearted, studies to show himself approved, and makes a good start upon his third year. Of his membership much that is complimentary can be sincerely and truly spoken.

Louis Fayard is an institution among the citizens and denizens of his country. His enjoyment, ex-Roman as he is, of his reception within a Roman home where he can preach or offer prayer, his prompt answer to every frequent call for the baptism of children, and his enthusiasm which does not flag here amongst his 70 and odd years, mark him the exceptional man. Along Wolf River, clear and swift, and out among pines above and below it, Brother Fayard is closing a long and useful life.

Vancleave is prosperous, with J. M. Lewis in his fourth year. Signs point to the best of the years for this one. He is inland fifteen miles north of the Gulf. His people ship coal down the tide streams, into the Gulf and the city of New Orleans. Many sheep graze the quiet pine woods. Brother Lewis has some splendid people, who are taking care of their pastor with loyal spirit.

In official connection with First Church, Gulfport, and to become organically so at early date, is an enterprise of Methodism to commend its beneficence to all who give thought to the men who go down to the sea in ships—our Gulf Coast Mission, branching to Biloxi and rooted well there. Rev. W. T. Griffin is in his 5th year, and exhibits his fitness for his very trying work by saying, as recently he did, that he is as much interested now as he was when he began. It is a long cry from a cup of water, a cot in a room, a home paper, to far Denmark and Norway, or England, or Boston. Yet, now and again, from a poor man at such distances comes a note to Brother Griffin, to thank him and the church around him for hospitality, for a copy of the Testament in his tongue, whose reading, whose influence, warms and impresses physically the Christ who inspires the course in this service.

At Biloxi a Christian woman, Miss Long, and a bright Georgia assistant, Miss Stubbs, form a corps for collecting those who work at canning oysters and shrimp. They have a Sunday school with a membership of more than 60 pupils and 7 devoted teachers. A day school which opens industrial instruction to half-grown girls, needing much of learning, is also maintained. The reach and permanent color-fixing for future generations, from this work, can slightly be measured.

The Seashore Camp Grounds, since the early seventies, a beacon aflame with revival power, has now, closing its first session, a school under Rev. H. W. Van Hook's administration. Pleasant buildings, with first-grade conveniences, have been erected. Almost supporting the expense of its initial and trial flight, Brother Van Hook's report shows a bottom solidly promising to support a continued and larger patronage. Health, cheerfulness, fine esprit de corps, and perfectly conscientious work mark strongly and will successfully attract increasing numbers to our Training School.

It has been a loving labor to pen the above. The condensing, however, hurts. Not easily can a sentence or two satisfy the writer who has a volume in mind. Nor was it easy to go round the fronting temptation to name laymen, great and true, who people the field like pines amidst undergrowth. There is much of pure religion and undefiled, in the Seashore District. God bless it!

MODERN MOVEMENTS AND MISSIONS.

(Written for the Preachers' Institute at Shreveport, La.)

I realize that it would be a useless expenditure of time, thought, and energy, in this presence, to attempt anything like an elaborate argument for the necessity or opportunity of the Church in our immediate missionary territory. For the Church has but one expression of its active, aggressive life. Its one mission is missionary.

Our study at this hour, as I understand it, is to know how we may best marshal our human and God-given energies to the fulfillment of the Divine purposes in us and through us.

The rapid tide of industrial and commercial progress sweeping through the channels of our daily life has borne into our spiritual kingdom new questions and problems for our consideration. Like all new things, these are attractive and sometimes perplexing. But as the spirit of the Christ, "whom we preach and in whom we believe," has been adequate and sufficient to meet every exigency in the development of his kingdom in the past, so can we by his grace meet the measure and need of the present.

Just now we wish to discuss this momentous subject of home missions in its relation to the vast numbers engaged in the lumber industry of our State. First, we bring to your attention the people who are employing their capital and labor in this industry, that we may thereby gain a clearer conception of our duty toward them.

As a class the leaders and managers of our saw mills and lumber factories are favorably disposed toward the Church in any effort that she may make to bring the gospel to their communities. Most of the men who own and operate these plants are Christians and some of them are forces for righteousness. The great majority of the operatives are distinctively Protestant in church relation, and many of them are members of our evangelical bodies. The plants present to us all the advantages of rigid organization throughout their departments, and the managers wish to see the religious work predicated and carried out on this principle. Careless, superficial work is not tolerated by these captains of industry, and is looked at askance when attempted by church and religious organizations. Efficiency is the well known standard of acceptability and advancement among these men.

These are the advantages of the situation; but let us now consider the problem from another viewpoint. It is altogether impracticable and futile to attempt to bring all these people into the Methodist Church, and yet this Church, with its flexible polity and breadth of doctrine, is peculiarly fitted for the task of bringing the message of life to these waiting hundreds. Here is the very crux of the question. Methodism is broad enough, but Methodism as understood by these people, and unfortunately as too frequently seen by them, fails to fulfill the necessary conditions. John Wesley would have easily and quickly met them in his day. Can we—are we—meeting them in ours? We say this, for the immortal John ever regarded the interests of Christ's kingdom as paramount to, if not above, ecclesiastical interests.

We are meeting the problem in our immediate community by operating a federated church and preaching a gospel of "free grace and full salvation." In this church—which we call simply "The Church"—the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper are duly administered according to the wish of the communicant. Disputed points of doctrine are kept in abeyance, and if a man wants an argument on these points he finds himself alone.

As to results, there is no trouble about finances—right organization takes care of this. We have a young, active Sunday school, an active Woman's Society, and cottage and church prayer-meetings. The attendance upon the regular services is creditable, and we have good music and singing; and there is a vital personal interest in the church and its work. But this paper is not a report—it is only intended as a suggestive study of a condition confronting us. Shall we enter in and do the work?

WHAT A LITTLE GIRL DID IN THE WAR.

By Mary Marshall.

Every old soldier has his favorite story—some tale of the war that, as the years pass by and the Memorial Days come and go—he remembers over all the other incidents and episodes of the campaigns he has been through. Strangely enough the favorite story of one brave old soldier, General Nathan Bedford Forrest, had to do not with soldiers, nor drummer boys, nor horses, nor cannon, but with a young girl.

This young girl was named Emma Sansom and she lived in a humble farm house in Georgia fifty years ago. Emma's brother, whom she loved and admired more than any one else in the world, had entered the army of the Confederacy. Other farmers' sons as young as Emma's brother had entered the army, and that seemed right to Emma, but to have her own dear brother, her playmate, and school fellow, go off alone to the cruel war seemed more than Emma could stand.

"Never mind, little sister," the brave young soldier said, as he kissed Emma goodbye. "The war will soon be over and we boys probably won't see any real fighting. Cheer up, sis; you know you wouldn't like it if I were a cowardly stay-at-home."

Emma tried to smile, but really and truly her little heart almost broke at the parting.

Well, the war went on, as you know, and Sansom was soon engaged in desperate enough warfare, and before many weeks had passed word came that he had been taken captive by the Northern forces. Little Emma didn't dare ask what this meant, but she knew from the way people looked when they talked about it that she would probably never see her brother again in this world.

If the young soldier could have seen Emma then he would have been prouder of her than ever, for while her heart was almost breaking with grief, she tried to keep up her spirits and took as great an interest as ever in the cause which he had given up everything to serve.

One day, not long after Sansom's capture, Emma heard with delight from a neighbor that the brave General Forrest was close upon the enemy's heels, and though she knew that this would probably not help her brother, it would mean encouragement for the cause he was serving. General Forrest had been pursuing the enemy all day, said the report that was circulated around the country side, and might any minute be upon them. The general and his army might even pass near the Sansom farm, they said.

Emma was all excitement as she went about her work that sunshiny morning. She heard a clatter of horses' hoofs coming down the road and, dropping her work, she hurried out to see what was the matter. She stood on the little porch in front of the house, peering excitedly up the road and before she could catch her breath what seemed to her like a whole army of cavalry was stopping before the house.

Emma's mother by this time had been attracted to the door, and Emma, recognizing the uniform of the Confederate soldiers, ran down to see what she could do for them.

It was General Forrest, then a fine, stalwart man of about forty, who headed the men, and, leaning from his saddle, he asked Emma whether there were any ford or passage of any sort across the swift running creek that flowed not far from Emma's house.

As Emma answered the general her bright young eyes took in the unusual scene before her. The brave general before her, with his legs carelessly resting across the pommel of his saddle, and around him his staff of dusty, weary soldiers, some of them as they stopped actually dozing in their saddles from the fatigue of the long march—it was enough to interest the little girl whose thoughts were ever with her soldier brother.

The general told Emma briefly that they had been pursuing the enemy and were not on their heels, till just now when they had discovered that the Northerners had burned the bridge which he was going to cross in his pursuit. The banks of the stream were so steep and wild that they could not cross on horseback and it would take valuable time to get his men across by boat.

"I know the way to a small, hidden ford, through the woods, a mile or more away," said Emma. "It is hard to find—"

The general had no time to spare.

"Come, my child," he said gently. "Come mount behind me, and lead us to it. I cannot afford to miss it."

Emma, with eyes sparkling with excitement and eagerness turned to her mother and gave her a look of entreaty.

The mother quite naturally hesitated to let her little girl ride off with the soldiers, but Emma insisted.

"Mother," she begged, "I am not afraid to trust myself with the brave General Forrest."

"But folks will think it's queer," objected the mother. "The neighbors will say I shouldn't have let you go off alone."

In spite of these objections Emma could see that her mother admired her pluck and with a hurried farewell Emma started to mount behind the general. There was a fallen tree near the road and, without stopping for hat or wrap, she jumped upon this and told the general she was ready. He drew his horse near to this improvised mounting block and, reaching down with his strong arm, lifted her up behind him in his saddle.

Away went Emma behind the brave general, riding at the head of the galloping horses. She tingled from head to foot with excitement and pleasure. What would her brother say when he heard of it. He would hear of it, thought Emma as she rode along, even if he never saw his little sister again.

From time to time as they rode on Emma would tell the general which way to turn, and just as she directed he and all his men would go. They rode through brake and bramble, across swamps where the horses sank up to their knees and across pebbly streams.

Just then Emma heard a hissing whistle in the air.

"What was that, General Forrest?" she asked eagerly.

"Bullets," said the general calmly. "Are you afraid?"

"No!" said Emma, and indeed she wasn't, for as she rode behind the brave general it seemed as if nothing could harm her. But the general feared more than did Emma, for with his keen sight he had spied the northern sharpshooters, dodging from tree to tree on a ridge, at no very great distance across the creek.

Now the way to the ford lay through the densest sort of undergrowth, but the little girl who had ranged through this wild country often with her brother, was not for a second uncertain of the way. After they had gone a few paces General Forrest saw that he could not proceed any further on horseback. He had the utmost confidence that Emma was leading him the right way and he was determined to continue as she directed. So he gave orders for his men to halt, and then, dismounting, hitched his own horse to a tree and told Emma that she would have to lead him the rest of the way on foot.

At first Emma took firm hold of the general's hand to lead him through the thicket and then, hearing another hissing bullet pass near by, she stepped in front of the general.

"They wouldn't fire on a girl," she said, "so if I take the lead we will surely be safe."

The general smiled in spite of the danger, but insisted on taking the lead himself. He walked along with Emma behind him to tell him which way to turn. Presently they came to the ford—a broad place in the creek where the water was shallow enough for the horses to pass over without danger of losing their footing.

The general scanned the opening with a critical eye, and then silently he returned with Emma to his waiting men. Then he remounted, with Emma, who insisted on staying by his side, and ordered his axe-men to advance with him and clear the road. In a wonderfully short time the work was completed and then with splendid military order that made Emma's heart beat with pride, the brave general led his entire column across the ford, her ford, as Emma called it, unharmed and unscratched.

Emma's services as a guide were at an end, and before the general would go on to pursue the enemy he insisted on sending one of his horsemen back home with her through the road they had cleared so speedily.

"And now, my brave young lady, what may I do for you to repay you in part for the invaluable service you have done me and the Army I serve?" General Forrest had no idea that Emma would have any request to make, but he asked her as a matter of courtesy.

Emma looked up at him with eagerness dancing in her pretty eyes.

"The Northern soldiers on ahead have my brother prisoner," she said, "Please, good General Forrest, go ahead and gain a victory and set my brother free."

The general smiled grimly at this request, which was not easily granted. He took his watch from his pocket and looked at it thoughtfully.

"It is just five minutes to eleven," he said. "To-morrow at exactly the same time, at five minutes to eleven, your brother shall be returned to you."

The brave girl breathed a sigh of joy, and never for a second doubted the general's ability to keep his promise. Some of the soldiers who heard Forrest's speech started with surprise at his confidence. In a moment more Emma was on her way back home and the general and his men were galloping on to victory.

At exactly ten o'clock the next morning, after one of the bravest and most remarkable cavalry pursuits the world has ever known, General Forrest captured the entire Northern detachment in which Emma's brother was captive.

In fifty-five minutes—at exactly five minutes to eleven—the young soldier returned unharmed to his little home and to his sister who had earned his freedom.—New York Weekly Witness.

Editorial.

AN INTERESTING DISCUSSION.

In the March number of the "Health Bulletin," published at Jackson, Miss., Dr. E. H. Galloway, the Secretary and Executive officer of the Board of Health of that State, discusses the subject of tuberculosis as it relates to the commonwealth of Mississippi in a most informing and interesting manner. Basing his estimate upon information furnished by the Department of Vital Statistics, he states that the number of deaths occurring in Mississippi annually is about 30,000, and that of these about ten per cent, or 3,000, are due to tuberculosis. He says that the average age of persons dying with this disease is 34.2 years, and taking the average value of a human at that age, which is placed at $4100, he figures that the total loss sustained by the State of Mississippi yearly as a result of "the great white plague" is $12,300,000. He calculates that the burial expenses of its victims alone, when placed at $30 each, foots the sum of $90,000. The object that Dr. Galloway has in view in adducing these figures is principally to show that even when considered entirely from an economic standpoint the task of trying to abate, and if possible to wipe out, the tuberculosis plague is well worth earnest and persistent effort upon the part of the people of Mississippi. He holds that the appropriation of public moneys for this purpose, aside from all humanitarian considerations, is a wise and paying investment which tends to enrich and build up the State.

Dr. Galloway argues that it is usually unsatisfactory, as well as somewhat hazardous, for consumptives to remain at home while undergoing treatment; he also calls attention to the fact that the law does not permit any boarding house to receive and lodge them, and that there is no public institution in the commonwealth that will now receive them except the State Insane Hospital. Touching upon the question as to what ought to be done to remedy the present unfortunate situation, Dr. Galloway says:

"A state institution for the care of these patients is not feasible or desirable. On a basis that for every death from consumption there are four other cases in existence—and this estimate is too low—we have now in the State 12,000 cases. It would be an utter impossibility to handle properly such a vast horde of people with this disease in one institution and they could not be treated as well as when in smaller numbers. My suggestion is that each county take care of its own consumptives, or perhaps where counties are measurably free from this disease, groups of counties might maintain an institution of this kind. A plot of ground centrally located should be acquired, the proper kind of shacks or tents built thereon, and a competent physician employed for the care and treatment of these unfortunates."

We hope that Dr. Galloway's able and timely paper will be widely circulated and that the issues raised and so forcefully discussed therein will be accorded the attention which their importance deserves. The State which does not in this day look well after the matter of sanitation and prevention of disease will soon be left behind in the general march of progress which is going on throughout the country.

THE EMORY AND HENRY ADJUSTMENT.

The Trustees of Emory and Henry College have secured an amendment to the charter of that institution, with a view to tying it more securely to the Church. According to the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, under the new arrangement the Board of Trustees will elect their successors, subject to confirmation by the Conference Board of Education. Let it be observed that this right to confirm is a charter and not a mere by-law right. Though this plan will give the Church a secure grip upon the College, we think it is far from satisfactory. The deficiency of it is seen in the fact that the Church will have no power of initiative. We do not contend that the Church should always elect the trustees of her educational institutions without any outside co-operation, but merely that she should have the right to do so in case she should deem it necessary. We have little sympathy with the notion which some of our leaders seem to have that our preachers and people as a whole cannot be trusted, and that they need to have their affairs managed for them. Such an undemocratic spirit ill befits the present age and bodes no good for the future.

OBITUARIES—THE UTTERANCE OF A TEMPORARY.

Some of the brethren have occasionally written us rather sharply for not allowing more space for obituaries; to them we have invariably replied that no journal in the Church is more generous in the free space given for this purpose than the New Orleans Advocate. We have the tenderest feeling for our sainted dead, but serving so large a constituency, we cannot avoid imposing a limit upon the length of the tributes that may be paid them in our paper, without cost. To show our readers that we are not unreasonable in our management of this department, we quote, in part, a recent editorial in the St. Louis Christian Advocate, which appeared under the caption, "Overwhelmed," with the request that they compare the terms therein set forth with the rules published weekly above our obituary columns:

"Fulsome praise, prayer, poetry, and exhortations should be left out of obituaries, and 3 cents sent with every word exceeding 100. All plainly written memoirs under 100 words will be published free. Extra copies of the paper containing obituaries can be procured if ordered when the manuscript is sent. Price, 5 cents per copy."

"Many of our readers noticed that a large part of the Advocate's space of last week's issue was occupied with obituaries. This necessarily displaces or excludes matter on living subjects that the writers are very anxious to see appear in The Advocate. If the writers of obituaries would confine themselves to 100 words, the number we give free, then all could be accommodated. "When we visited the tomb of Stonewall Jackson at Lexington, Va., all the letters we found on the tomb of this great man were: 'T. J. Jackson.' If this hero can rest serenely under a monument containing an inscription of nine letters, most of us should refrain from kicking much under a memoir containing 100 words. A proper memoir for publication in a paper is not an elaborate biography of all a man's great-great-grandchildren and remote ancestry."

Let it be particularly noted that our distinguished contemporary limits free tributes to 100 words and charges 3 cents a word for all excess, while we allow 200 words free and charge one cent a word for all above that number.

WILL THEIRS BE OPEN?

The Editors of "The Laity Advocate" justify the establishment of that periodical on the ground that the various church organs would not open their columns to their propaganda. We are a bit curious to know if "The Laity Advocate" will now be open to contributions from those who oppose the woman's rights movement in the Church. Consistency would seem to require that the directors of this new journal should adopt the policy which they think others did wrong not to follow, and thus set the official papers of the Connection a good example; especially so, since they say that they desire a full consideration by the Church at large of all the issues involved in this controversy. Will they do this? They need not wait until the next issue of their periodical to answer this inquiry, as the necessary space to do so is at their command in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

It is stated that Rev. C. D. Atkinson and his Building Committee have in sight $22,000 of the $30,000 that our beautiful new church at Crowley, La., will cost.

Mrs. W. W. Carre, of New Orleans, attended the Fourth Biennial Convention of the Young Woman's Christian Association, which met in Richmond, Va., last week.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Pontotoc, Miss., in a note to the Editor, says: "Bishop Murrah was with us Sunday and preached a great sermon. Everybody fell in love with him."

The Baltimore Conference at its recent session voted overwhelmingly against changing the name of our Church. Good for the brethren along our northeastern border line!

Gov. G. D. Shands, formerly of Mississippi, but now a resident of New Orleans, will have charge of an Adult Bible Class in the Sunday school of the Rayne Memorial Church.

We are informed that Miss Belle Kearney, the brilliant Mississippi temperance lecturer, will spend next summer on the Pacific Coast, filling engagements with chautauquas.

Rev. R. A. Tucker requests us to state that the Holly Springs District Conference will be held at Tula, Miss., June 17-19. The opening session will begin at 9 a.m. on Tuesday, the 17th.

Dr. J. W. Lee, of St. Louis, recently delivered a brilliant lecture at Carrollton, Miss. The Conservative, a paper published in that little city, speaks of the Doctor's effort as "an inspiration to the people."

Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder, states that the Meridian District Conference will meet at Quitman, Miss., on Tuesday, May 27. See his announcement elsewhere in this issue. Dr. B. F. Jones will be the Conference host.

We are in receipt of a neatly printed program of the meeting of the General Board of Church Extension and the Representatives of Conference Boards, which is to be held in Dallas, Texas, May 1-4. Dr. McMurry has certainly succeeded in arranging a feast of good things for that interesting occasion.

Rev. T. J. Durrett, of Buena Vista, Miss., has recently been looking after the interests of the Advocate in his charge with excellent results. He sent us a few days since a club of 18 subscribers. Brother Durrett's activity would seem to indicate that his health has greatly improved. At any rate, we hope that this is true, and that he may have a year of large fruitfulness in the Master's service.

In forwarding us another club of subscribers, Rev. R. I. Collins, of Cockrum, Miss., says: "I wish that every family on my work would take your paper. In getting up my Conference collections, I have no trouble with those who receive the Advocate." We are pleased to have this testimonial from a hard-working pastor as to the serviceableness of the Conference organ among his parishioners.

The first Sunday in May has been named by the Conference Executive Committee as Epworth League Rally Day throughout the North Mississippi Conference. It is expected that on this occasion a collection will be taken in place of the Ten-Cent Assessment. The Annual League Conference will be held at Pontotoc, June 10-12. A fuller statement concerning North Mississippi Epworth League matters will appear next week.

At the last session of the Louisiana Annual Conference there were two ministers appointed to serve as Conference evangelists—Rev. A. W. Turner and Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir—and one located to engage in evangelistic work—Rev. T. J. Norsworthy. Four months have elapsed since the Conference at Monroe, and at present the Louisiana Conference has no member engaged in exclusively evangelistic work. Rev. A. W. Turner has accepted the superintendency of the State Anti-Saloon League; Brother Lastie Hoffpauir is now the pastor at Jennings, La., and Rev. T. J. Norsworthy has moved to California.

In renewing his subscription, Brother F. B. De Wees, of Philadelphia, Miss., takes time to speak a commendatory word concerning the Advocate, for which we thank him. He reports that his pastor, Rev. G. P. Fikes, who has been ill, is much improved.

Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Rev. W. E. Thomas, pastor of the Second Methodist Church of New Orleans, attended the Woman's Missionary Council which met in Birmingham, Ala., last week.

We are indebted to Rev. D. W. Babb, of Charleston, Miss., for a club of five subscribers, forwarded on the 11th inst. There is no truer itinerant to be found anywhere than this beloved North Mississippian, who is the St. John of his Conference.

Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, of New Orleans, who is widely known for her good works, was present at the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, which has just adjourned, and made her influence strongly felt in behalf of our mission work in the Crescent City.

Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, Miss., writes: "We began a protracted meeting here yesterday. We have with us Rev. John B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., and his singers, Brother L. C. Smith and his wife. The services seem to have begun most auspiciously."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey passed through New Orleans last Saturday en route to Ponchatoula, La., where he spent Sunday in the interest of the Sunday school work. He returned to New Orleans Tuesday and attended the New Orleans District Sunday school meeting at Epworth Church.

Writing on Monday, the 14th inst., a Shreveport correspondent says: "Yesterday was a beautiful day here, though it was a little cool. In the Methodist Sunday schools of the city there were 1291 present, First Church leading with 854. How is that for attendance?" It is magnificent. Great is Shreveport Methodism!

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Eden, Miss., pronounces his people equal to any in the Mississippi Conference, and states that his work is moving on nicely. He thinks that all the indications point to a prosperous year. Brother Lane's letter brought us six names for our subscription files, for which we extend him our hearty thanks.

Rev. L. W. Cain, of Leland, Miss., is in much demand for revival work. He has engagements for six meetings between now and the 1st of August, and feels that he cannot take on any more dates until after that time, as he has a responsible pastorate of his own to look after. Brother Cain was expected to assist Rev. W. L. Stormont in a meeting at Shelby this week.

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not elsewhere been made, have sent two or more subscriptions since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. W. W. Jones, Carrollton, Miss., 5; Rev. Thomas L. Porter, Hickory Flat, Miss., 5; Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Shaw, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Porter, Bienville, La., 5; Rev. H. M. Johnson, Camden, Miss., 6.

We are indebted to Rev. T. H. Dorsey, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Water Valley, Miss., for a club of 7 subscribers, forwarded on the 8th inst. Brother Dorsey made no reference to his work in his letter, but we know from other sources that gratifying success is attending his labors. This, however, is not at all unusual with him.

Fine results are rewarding the efforts of the Rev. T. J. Halfacre on the Kilmichael, (Miss.) charge. Two good revivals have already been held on his work, and he has under way a movement to build a neat and comfortable parsonage in the town of Kilmichael. He expects to have this structure completed and ready for occupancy by the middle of June.

Rev. J. T. McCafferty, of Eupora, Miss., sent us two renewals and four new subscriptions to the Advocate, on the 5th inst. He is too modest to say much concerning his work, but we happen to know that things are progressing most favorably under his capable direction. The North Mississippi Conference has no truer or more faithful man in its ranks than this well equipped young worker.

The Commencement exercises of the Mississippi Conference Training School, at Montrose, Miss., of which Rev. T. J. O'Neil is President, will take place April 25-28. The Commencement sermon will be preached by Rev. G. H. Thompson, and the sermon before the Epworth League at the evening hour will be by Dr. H. W. Featherstun. The Baccalaureate Address will be delivered by Rev. H. F. Tolle.

Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Kosciusko, has given us an additional club of five subscribers, for which we heartily thank him. He states that he thinks there is a good prospect of building a new church at Kosciusko this year. This is, indeed, news worth chronicling. Kosciusko is one of the best business towns in Mississippi, and we ought to have there a house of worship scarcely second to any in the State.

Rev. J. D. Wroten, who is in charge of the Duck

Hill Circuit (North Miss. Conference), states that his second quarterly conference was held on April 5, and that it was an occasion of much interest. Rev. R. A. Tucker, the popular presiding elder of the District, was on hand and gave a good account of himself both in the chair and in the pulpit. Brother W. D. Bennett was recommended to the District Conference for license to preach.

At Hollandale, Miss., on the evening of April 10, Mr. John A. Cooper, Jr., and Miss Inez Scott were married at the residence of the bride's mother, Rev. L. W. Cain officiating. Miss Scott, who is a sister of Mrs. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., is a most attractive young lady, and has a wide circle of friends and admirers in the Mississippi Delta. The groom is a prominent young business man of Clarksdale, Miss., at which place the happy couple will reside.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Sidon, Miss., writes as follows: "I wish again, through the Advocate, to request the preachers of the Durant District to please send me as soon as possible the names of the delegates to the District Conference, which will convene here on May 14. So far, only two brethren have written me in response to my former call." The Editor extends thanks to Brother Armour for a kindly invitation to be present at this gathering.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, of Houlika, Miss., in a note to the Advocate office, says: "I am exceedingly busy now. I have two churches on the ground as a result of a storm that swept through this section in March: one in the country, which was completely demolished, and one in town, which was blown about seven feet and badly injured, though we may be able to repair it." We greatly regret to hear of these disasters, and we assure Brother Dodds and his good people of our sympathy.

Through the courtesy of Rev. H. M. Ellis, we acknowledge the reception of a neat card announcing the program of the Seashore Divinity School, which will be held at the Seashore Camp Ground from June 24 to July 2. This card also gives much other interesting information concerning this assembly and the attractions of the place at which it is annually held. Rev. Robert Selby, the accomplished President of this School, also has something to say relative to the approaching session in this issue of the Advocate.

Writing from Carriere, Miss., on April 7, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., forwarded us two additional subscriptions, and expressed himself as follows: "This makes 16 I have sent this year, but the end is not yet. I am off to be in a meeting at Brandon with my brothers for ten or twelve days, but when I get back I shall try to do more toward circulating the Conference organ." We appreciate the good service that Brother Lewis has rendered our paper, and always feel that we have a co-laborer upon whom we can fully depend in the field that he has in charge.

We have in hand some interesting notes concerning the work in the Newton District of the Mississippi Conference, from the pen of Dr. H. W. Featherstun, which reached us too late for this issue, but which will appear next week. The Doctor states that he was quite willing to have his disputation with the Editor over the woman question terminate, being perfectly content to rest upon the laurels already won. Whether one agrees with Dr. Featherstun's views or not, he cannot but admire his brotherly spirit as a controversialist.

From a Macon (Miss.) dispatch to the Memphis Commercial Appeal on the 26th ult., we take the following: "One of the heaviest sufferers from the recent tornado near Macon was Rev. N. G. Augustus, of the North Mississippi Conference, who at present is not in the active work. Mr. Augustus had four or five cabins on his plantation blown down and five of his tenants were killed. He has refused to accept any financial assistance from the relief committee or from friends. His loss will amount to about $1500." We regret to hear of our friend's misfortune, and assure him of our interest and sympathy.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, our capable young pastor at Myrtle, Miss., writes as follows: "Rev. J. H. Mitchell held our second quarterly conference recently. Though it was on a week day, the church was taxed to its full capacity, and Brother Mitchell gave us two helpful and inspiring sermons. There was a full attendance of the offerings, and the reports showed that the charge is making steady progress along all lines. Copies of the New Orleans Advocate were distributed, and the New Orleans Advocate was called to the excellence of our Conference organ."

Rev. W. M. Young, our efficient pastor at Amory, Miss., takes the lead this week, having favored us with a fine club of 17 subscribers, with a check to correspond. Referring to the status of things in his charge, Brother Young says: "Our work is moving on nicely. We have excellent congregations, good Sunday schools, and four good Epworth Leagues. Our Nettleton Church has just adopted a plan for taking a monthly collection for the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson. Our protracted meeting at Amory will begin on the fourth Sunday in June, and we will have with us Rev. J. H. Felts, of Corinth. We hope to have a great revival."

In sending in a club of subscribers, for which we thank him, Rev. M. L. Ward, of Ratliff, Miss., announced the death of Brother I. G. Young, one of his most faithful members, which occurred on April 5. We regretted to hear of this sad occurrence, and to the bereaved we extend sympathy.

Prof. J. H. Williams, a resident of Heury, La., and for some time the Superintendent of our Sunday school at that place, was recently elected Superintendent of the Parish Schools of Vermillion Parish. Brother Williams is an accomplished educator and a faithful Methodist, and the patrons of the public schools of that parish may rest assured that their educational interests will be well cared for in his hands.

Brother J. L. Bell, of Newton, Miss., by appointment of Rev. H. F. Tolle, his pastor, has been acting as agent for the Advocate in his community with fine success, as is evidenced by the fact that he sent in 12 subscriptions a few days since. Brother Bell is a jeweler and optician in his town, and manifestly is much interested in the work of the Church. We are grateful to him for so efficiently representing the Conference organ.

Dr. J. W. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, has accepted an invitation from Rev. J. M. Morse, the pastor, to preach a series of sermons in the Capitol Street Church of Jackson, Miss., beginning on Monday night after the second Sunday in May. Dr. Moore is one of the most evangelistic pastors in Louisiana, and the congregation at the Capitol Street Church may feel assured that there is in store for them a feast of spiritual truth.

From a personal letter written to the Editor by Rev. H. T. Carley, one of the accomplished professors at Centenary College, at Shreveport, La., we take the following: "We are getting along very well at the College. Commencement is just two months off, and we feel that we are on the home stretch now. We expect to have seven graduates this year. Three of them are members of the Louisiana Conference: H. T. Young, L. A. Sims, and H. W. Cudd."

Rev. W. W. Jones, of Carrollton, Miss., writes: "Last Sunday (April 6) was a good day with us here. The pastor had the privilege of sitting in the pew. To the delight and profit of all Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, Miss., filled the pulpit. He was greeted by a large audience of friends and some relatives. Both sermons given were excellent, and were delivered in a forceful manner. The prayers and best wishes of the people of Carrollton follow Brother Duren wherever he goes."

The secular papers state that the Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, is being generally mentioned as the successor of Judge Boardman, Federal Judge of the Western District of Louisiana. Mr. White is regarded as a brilliant lawyer, and being a man of most exemplary life and character, should he be named for this place, he would undoubtedly fill it not only satisfactorily, but with distinction. Brother White was a delegate to our last General Conference, which met in Asheville, N. C.

The Picayune of April 9, contained an announcement that Rev. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, had been elected President of Centenary College, at Shreveport, La. The Times-Democrat, of the 14th inst., represents Brother Wynn as saying that the report of his election is not true. Possibly this is a case "where a coming event casts its shadow before." At any rate, there is no doubt that Brother Wynn would fill admirably the position for which he has been mentioned.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle reports that he has been kindly received on the Arkabutla (Miss.) charge for another year, and that his work is moving on well. The seasons have been unfavorable for church activity, but his congregations are now growing and his Sunday schools are gaining in interest. He is serving a generous-hearted people, who some time ago remembered him with substantial tokens of their appreciation. We are grateful to Brother Carlisle for taking care of the interests of the Advocate in his rounds.

The Mississippi State Sunday School Convention, which met at Gulfport last week, was largely attended, and the exercises throughout were interesting and profitable. Mr. W. P. Lamp-ton, of Columbia, was chosen president for the ensuing year. Mr. W. Fred Long was retained as General Secretary, and Mrs. Long as Corresponding Secretary. A budget of $8,000 was made for the work of next year, and one-third of the amount was immediately subscribed. The next State Convention will be held in Meridian.

On March 25, 1913, at about 8 o'clock p.m., the hearts of mamma, papa, grandmother, and a host of friends were made sad when all that was sweet and cheerful of little MARY MILLSAPS RUCKER was hushed in death. Mary Millsaps, as she was known to us, was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Rucker, of Union Church, Miss. She was only 1 year, 2 months, and 22 days old, but had been with us long enough to be loved and petted and missed—oh, so much! May God, in his infinite mercy, comfort the hearts of Owen and Fannie! HER SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

A. G. OXFORD was born in Pigansville, Ala., Sept. 6, 1837, and died at his home in Jackson Parish, La., Feb. 21, 1913. By reason of strength he passed three score and ten by five years, five months, and fifteen days. His parents moved when he was but a child to Kosciusko, Miss., where he grew to manhood, moving from there to Louisiana in company with Rev. John F. Bellamy, a Methodist preacher. While en route he married Miss Mary L. J. Bellamy, in the town of Monroe, La., and settled in Jackson Parish. They lived happily together until death separated them. Brother Oxford served three years in the Confederate Army, and was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for twenty-five years. During the last several years of his life he was marked by a demeanor that seemed to recognize the nearness of his eternal home. The writer visited him a number of times during his protracted illness and heard him say, "I am ready." He leaves a wife, several children and a host of friends to mourn his death. We commend them to God and his care. H. M. BANKS.

ROBERT S. HENRY was born in Vermilion Parish on June 1, 1853, and died at his home at Henry, La., March 30, 1913. Thirty years ago he was married to Miss Anna Moss, and to them were born twelve children, ten of whom, together with his devoted wife, mourn his departure. Brother Henry joined the M. E. Church, South, very early in life, and remained a faithful member. He was a teacher in the Sunday school for several years. He found great delight in reading God's Word and in singing the hymns of Zion. He served in various positions in his church, and attended many conferences and conventions. Brother Henry was a devoted and affectionate father, and did all in his power to educate and provide for his children. He was a successful farmer and business man, interested in every worthy enterprise of his parish and State. In the death of Brother Henry the Church has lost a faithful member, the community an influential citizen, the wife a devoted husband, and the children a loving father. May God comfort the sorrowing ones and bring them all together again in heaven, where "we'll never say good-by."

His pastor, J. H. HOFFPAUIR.

After a lingering illness of more than two months, GEO. D. VAN HORN, 73 years of age, died at the family residence in Houston, Miss., on the evening of April 2, 1913. He moved here with his family from Paris, Tenn., about eight years ago. He was a jeweler and watchmaker, and was a typical Southern gentleman of the old style. He joined the Methodist Church at the age of 28, at which time also his wife joined, it being the third year of their married life. In his younger years he was quite a church worker, serving as steward, Sunday school superintendent, and choir leader. He was one of the most punctual and regular of our members in attendance upon the preaching service and prayer meeting. He will be greatly missed. He was quiet and unassuming, yet was always found on the right side of every moral issue. His devotion to his home and Church was tenderly beautiful. He was universally beloved. He left a widow, and five daughters and one son, all grown to maturity and living in different parts of the South. The funeral service was conducted from the church Thursday afternoon, April 3, at 3 o'clock. Interment was made in the Houston Cemetery.

R. P. NEBLETT, Pastor.

At McHenry, Miss., on the morning of March 23, 1913, the spirit of Mrs. NANCY A. LASSITER was released from the temporal and material and entered into the realm of the spiritual and eternal. She was a "Mother in Israel," having passed over a pilgrimage of 77 years. The body was tired and worn and ready for rest, and we believe that her long experience in the spiritual life had prepared her for the richer and better things of the heavenly kingdom. Sister Lassiter was a native of Alabama, but for many years had lived in South Mississippi; she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life, and remained a member of the same to the end. The New Orleans Christian Advocate was a constant visitor to her home and was prized very highly by her. In her last days she was a great sufferer. In her suffering she had the faithful and constant ministries of loving hands, but her pilgrimage was at its end. It must have been to her a blessed release. Those who sorrow because of her going, sorrow not as those who have no hope—they have the blessed hope and assurance of the resurrection and eternal life. There is a vacant place in the home circle, but a new tie binds them to God and heaven.

H. J. MOORE.

Mrs. SOPHIA J. LINDSAY (nee Campbell) was born near Hartford, Conn., Aug. 28, 1832. Her father, Mr. Gould Campbell, moved from Connecticut to Alabama when she was quite young, and there resided until the year 1849, when he moved to Kosciusko, Miss., being one of the first settlers there. Her younger days were devoted to teaching school, until she was happily married to David Lindsay, of Houston, Miss. Her life was one of constant activity in the church, as she was converted in her girlhood days and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she was a loyal member until her death. Hers was a spirit of meekness, kindness and sweetness which won the admiration and friendship of all with whom she came in contact. To know her was to love her. Her husband and three daughters—Flora, Mattie and Alice—preceded her to the better land. In all her sorrow she found peace and comfort in the Master's love, and evidenced in her life the power of the Gospel by being ever true to God and his cause. Though her latter days were darkened by bodily affliction, she wore a smile at all times and remained a staunch Christian, and was a source of joy and comfort to those about her. She lived in Kosciusko until the year 1907, when she moved to Vicksburg, Miss., with her granddaughter, Mrs. R. E. Cook, where she remained until her death, Feb. 20, 1913. She was laid to rest in her old home, Kosciusko, on Feb. 22, 1913. She leaves three grandchildren—Mrs. R. E. Cook and Miss Nettie Greaves, of Vicksburg, Miss., and Mr. L. C. Mitchell, of Kosciusko, Miss.; five nephews—J. D. Journey, G. W. Journey, C. C. Taylor, and Tom and Fred Campbell, and two nieces—Mrs. C. S. Jones, of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. S. E. Kellner, of Greenville, Miss. May God's richest blessing rest upon these bereft ones. J. H. BELEW.

Lee Landing, La.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just closed a fine meeting at Lee Landing, near Ponchatoula. I preached there twenty years ago. There were seven who joined the M. E. Church, South, one of whom was an old man nearly 80 years of age, and one was a lady who was up in years. The others were young people. They have a fine Sunday school there. Brother Minor, who is the leader of the Sunday school, is a man of God. Men and women said they were going to lead better lives and erect family altars in their homes. Yesterday, after we had taken the Lord's Supper, the Holy Ghost came down, and what a time we had! It was like the Day of Pentecost. To God be all the glory and praise!

W. T. CURRIE.

Camden, Miss.

From all appearances we have made a very good beginning on the Camden charge. The outlook for the year is most encouraging, and everywhere on the work we hear people saying, "Let us make this the best year in the history of the Camden Circuit," and we have begun with that end in view. Last Saturday and Sunday our presiding elder held our second quarterly conference at Thomastown, and the Thomastown people covered themselves with glory. Brother Hardin preached some very able sermons for us, and, by the way, we think him to be about the best preacher "what is." Our collections are good. One-fourth of our assessment for the presiding elder and preacher has been paid; also the greater part of a good sized parsonage debt. This speaks well for the charge, since the stewards raised the assessment this year over what it was last year. We are laying plans for a great year spiritually, and are working toward that end. Taking all in all, after travelling over the circuit, we find that about all the Camden charge lacks is a mistress for the parsonage, and the preacher is doing his part in that direction.—H. M. Johnson, P. C.

Oak Grove, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have been very much unsettled for the past few months on account of wind, and etc. At the last session of our Conference we were read out for Provencal, but on account of sickness did not reach our new place until about the last of January, and then only after about an 80-mile drive across the country. About the time we thought we were very comfortably located in the parsonage we were visited by a cyclone which completely destroyed our church and parsonage. Of the latter there was nothing left to show that there had been a house but some blocks, a well, a man, a woman, and a baby lying in the mud and water in the back yard. We were somewhat bruised but sustained no broken limbs. We were either blown out of the house or the house was blown away from us. I had the baby in my arms through it all, and she was scarcely scratched. Since the cyclone we have been transferred to the Monroe District, and assigned to the Oak Grove work. We are delighted with this place and expect to do some work for the Advocate. We desire to thank the people who have so generously helped us since the cyclone. With best wishes to you and the paper, I am, yours fraternally,

W. J. NEWSOM.

East Feliciana (La.) Circuit.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just had our second quarterly conference. It met in that old historic church, Olive Branch—the church that turned out our former presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, and other good men and women. We had present a goodly number of stewards, and they brought up something for the pastor, too. Doctor, if you had been here and could have seen that dinner you would have said, "These are a prosperous people, indeed." But wait: we had with us our little big presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Coleman—little in stature, but big in mind and optimism. He is small of body, but what he did for the aforesaid dinner was a plenty. He preached us two fine sermons. The eldership seems to fall fittingly upon his shoulders, and we like him as such. We are planning to do many things on this work. We are to have a Children's Day service at one or two places on the circuit soon. We are to meet in a few days and plan for the camp meeting this summer at Bluff Creek. We are looking forward to a good time there. There are many people on this work that take the Advocate, and they think a lot of your paper. We ask the prayers of the Advocate readers, that we may have a good year in this field.

Yours in Him,

R. H. BAMBURG, P. C.

Amite City, La.

Things are moving along nicely here in Amite. We have had so much rain (frequently on Sunday) that it has hindered the work of the church to a considerable extent. The congregations have often been prevented from coming. Yesterday (April 6) was a gracious day, as we had the monthly communion service. It was marked in the number of people who partook of the elements. We have an individual communion service which was installed the year before I came here. It was then large enough, but now only in rare cases will it accommodate more than one-third of the communicants. The ladies have the matter in hand and will see to getting enough trays to meet the growing need.

The Sunday school, under the superintendency of Brother H. P. Forshag, has a faithful corps of teachers and is forging ahead. The superintendent is wide awake and progressive, and the school must make advancement or he seeks to learn the reason. It is graded and uses the graded literature. We now have in the Sunday school a full-fledged athletic association including a basketball team that is looking for games with teams from other Sunday schools. Mr. L. Lefevre is the teacher of the young men and the manager of the team, while Harry Bassett is the captain. The organization of this league was authorized by the official board of the church, which recognizes the need of clean and wholesome sport for the boys under the control of the church. One thing more that is worthy of mention is our fine Bible class under the capable leadership of Judge R. R. Reid. It is a supplemental force to the pastor that can not be fully measured. If the pastor is called away from home, church service is conducted just the same as if he were present. This is as it should be. Come up to see us, Doctor, during this our fourth and last year at Amite.—H. W. Bowman, Pastor.

CURES HOG CHOLERA

Last spring cholera got among my hogs and one died before I really knew they were sick. Two others were very sick when I noticed them, and as I had bought two of your Brick for the horses, I decided to give it a trial. I dissolved half a Medicated Salt Brick in some swill, giving this to the two sick hogs and in a few hours I gave the other half to them. They seemed to improve so nicely, I bought several of the Brick and gave it to all my hogs and have not lost another one with any kind of disease. One of the sick hogs lost all of his hair, so this is proof that they had cholera.

JENA, LA.

A few words about Jena and its work. I was returned here last December for the second year, and was gladly welcomed by the people. We entered upon our year's work with more faith and zeal and, in consequence, have received a blessing from the Lord. Our Sunday school is doing good work; one notable feature is that the attendance of officers and teachers for the past year averaged about 95 per cent. On Easter Sunday we had a delightful service. At the evening hour a program was rendered that would have done credit to any Church. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, having the largest attendance in its history. We took up an offering for Conference collections and received $120, an unprecedented record for Jena. We have just had our second quarterly conference. Bro. May was with us to enliven and encourage us. He certainly does look well after the interests of the Church. On Sunday night he preached a powerful sermon on the "Character of Daniel." The house was full, the attention was good, and the influence of his utterance will long be felt. We have a loyal set of officers. They made a liberal assessment for pastoral support, and are beginning now to see that it is paid. Our prospect is bright for a good year's work. Pray for us.

Sincerely yours,

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT.

HOUSTON, MISS.

There has been held in our church at Houston a meeting of unusual interest and depth of spiritual feeling. Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., assisted the pastor. Not a single family of the local membership (and but few families in the town) was left out in having representatives present at the services and in showing visible signs of great benefit. And, in addition to the Church being wonderfully revived, perhaps 100 conversions and reclamations could be counted. There were 48 additions to the Methodist Church, with several yet to join. This brings the number we have received during the year up to 59. Eight joined other churches as a result of the meeting. The oldest citizens say Houston never before in her history had such a far-reaching and soul-searching revival of religion. A Men's Brotherhood Class has been organized, which meets every Monday night, where from forty to sixty men and boys spend helpful moments by praying for and encouraging one another. These meetings are led by the new converts. A woman's prayer meeting has been started, which meets Friday afternoons, and stirring times are had among the ladies. The Sunday school has almost doubled in attendance, and it has become necessary to secure additional chairs to accommodate the Young Men's Bible Class, which now numbers 141. One hundred and nine were present in this one class on Easter Sunday, and this in a small town of less than 2000 people. Though Brother Bowen left for Huntsville, Ala., Friday, March 28, there has been service every day—either preaching or prayer meeting—(sometimes twice daily) for more than a week. To God be all the praise!

TO NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

Dear Fellow-Workers: Your Executive Committee held recently in Okolona a very pleasant and successful meeting. They went over the League work in the Conference and planned for future work. Three things we wish to call attention to briefly:

1. The First Sunday in May is Epworth League Rally Day. Be sure to get programs at once and observe the day. Get your pastor to give you the evening hour. Take a collection and send half to Dr. F. S. Parker, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. (This will be in lieu of the 10 cent assessment.) Send the other half to Rev. J. B. Randolph, Como, Miss., to be used for the Conference work.

Our League Conference will be held in Pontotoc, June 10-12. Our program is made and will be in your hands in a few days. There will be very few set addresses and more informal conferences than heretofore.

A recommendation will be made to turn over the "Educational Loan Fund" work to the President of Millsaps College, or to duly accredited representatives that will carry it forward, and that the Leagues of North Mississippi "line up" on the Cuba Mission Special. Instruct your delegates as to your wishes in this matter.

Signed: J. H. Holder, J. B. Randolph, C. B. Baker, W. T. Boswell, Executive Committee.

THE TESTIMONIAL OF A COLLEGE MATE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I was very sorry, indeed, to hear of the death of Dr. Marvin Galloway through the Advocate. I roomed next door to Marvin at Millsaps College in 1902, and I wish to say that I never knew a more upright boy than Marvin. During the whole year I never heard Marvin say a word but that could have been uttered in the presence of the purest lady. If there are any persons who know each other, it is college boys, and I wish to assure his relatives that there is no doubt about Marvin's future. While he died young, he lived longer than most of us will in sixty years. May God help the bereaved ones to say that they are glad Marvin was permitted to live with them so long!

HAD A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

At the annual meeting of the National Mutual Church Insurance Company held in January, Mr. James B. Hobbe, who has been president of the company since its incorporation in the year 1899, declined to accept reelection, stating that he had passed his 83d birthday and desired to be relieved from the cares and obligations of the office.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors of the company Mr. Nathaniel M. Jones, who had previously held the offices of treasurer and general counsel, was elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. Frank P. Crandon was elected vice-president; Mr. Sampson Rogers, treasurer; Mr. Henry P. Magill, secretary and manager, and Dr. Frank L. Hart, assistant secretary. Dr. John Thompson, District Superintendent of the Chicago Western District, and Mr. I. N. Conard, President of L. A. Talcott & Co., wholesale fruit merchants, were named as new directors.

The annual report showed that the business of the company during the year 1912 increased over $125,000. The books and accounts were audited by accredited public accountants and the company was certified to be in excellent condition.

A FRIEND FOR FORTY-THREE YEARS.

J. F. Cherry, of Detroit, Texas, writes: "I have used Gray's Ointment for forty-three years, and can truly say there is nothing equal to it or like it, and I would advise anyone suffering from old sores to give it a fair trial and they will never regret it or be without it. I believe if it had not been for Gray's Ointment my leg would have killed me long ago. There is grateful relief for anyone suffering from old sores, cuts, boils, carbuncles, burns, bruises, festering wounds, ulcers, tumors, etc., in Gray's Ointment. In order to test the above statement write Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample postpaid. 25c at druggist or by mail from the manufacturer.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

We take this means of thanking our many friends who have written us words of sympathy, or have in any other way shown us kindnesses since the death of our precious son, James. Our hearts are very heavy, but we find comfort in the promises of God.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(On the death of Mrs. T. A. Lee, a member of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, Wesson, Miss.)

Whereas, our dear friend and sister, Mrs. T. A. Lee, has been called to her heavenly home, and since we realize that our loss is to her the greatest happiness in reunion with her loved ones, be it, therefore, Resolved:

1. That the Society of which she was a faithful and active member, has lost one of its best members.

2. That we deeply deplore her death, and shall ever miss her ever-willing service in aid of all our plans.

3. That we tender to her aged mother and children our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and invoke for them the consolation that can only come from God.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to our local paper, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that the secretary be instructed to place the same upon our Society records.

Signed, Mrs. J. A. Boyd, Mrs. B. F. Youngblood, Mrs. E. H. Cutrer, Committee.

A BEREAVED CHURCH.

We have lost from the Red Banks (Miss.) charge, within the last few days, three faithful members of our Church. Mrs. W. B. Jones, of the Red Banks Church, died Monday, March 10. She was the faithful wife of Brother Jones, one of my stewards. Hers was a quiet and beautiful Christian character. She was true to her friends, her Church and to God.

Miss Stella Cochran, who was a member of our Church at Wesley's Chapel, died Wednesday, March 26. She was a member of one of the happiest families and was the faithful and trusted "Older Sister" of that home. She was faithful to her church in its old days, when it needed her help. All who knew her loved her and will feel her loss.

Brother M. L. Patterson, our faithful Sunday school superintendent and steward at Mahon, died Friday, March 28. The church and community feel heavily this loss. Such a life as his must always be a gain and when it ends a great loss. But most of all the loss is felt by his wife and four sons and daughters. Brother Patterson was, indeed, a good man. During his long illness he murmured not; and though he was interested and longed to take part in the work for good around him, he was patient, willing, and ready to go hence and meet his God. J. M. CARPENTER, Pastor.

CHILDREN THAT ARE MISUNDERSTOOD.

In almost every community there is at least one child of deficient mental development, or in other words a feeble minded child. These children are almost universally misunderstood. Parents and relatives often think them stubborn and devoid of ambition and blame the child for its indifference. In school such a child is known as a dullard and becomes the target for the jest of its companions. The teacher sometimes refers to it as a "block-head" and a hopeless case. Thoughtless people sometimes speak of them as idiots. Even the family physician sometimes fails to appreciate the real condition.

All this is wrong!

These unfortunate children are not idiots. They differ as much from idiots as you do. They deserve and require a special system of physical and mental training at the hands of physicians and teachers who understand their infirmity. Don't send a feeble minded child to school with normal children. It only makes matters worse. Don't imagine that a private tutor can benefit such a child. It takes a life time of patient study to fit a teacher for this particular class of work.

Above all things don't give up the child to a hopeless fate. Act intelligently—give the child a chance. Much can be accomplished if it is placed in skilled hands. Don't imagine that anything can be accomplished at home. Home influences make improvement next to impossible. Parents who are interested in this subject may gain additional light from a booklet issued by the Stewart Home and School, Dr. John P. Stewart, Supt., Box 19, Farmdale, Ky.

MRS. JOHN DREW BETTER.

McLeansboro, Ill.—"About five years ago," says Mrs. John L. Drew, of this place, "I was afflicted with pains and irregularity every month. I suffered continually, was weak and despondent, and unable to do my housework. I took Cardui, and in one month, I felt like a new woman and worked hard all summer. I am now in perfect health, and recommend Cardui to all suffering women." Every day, during the past 50 years, Cardui has been steadily forging ahead as a result of its proven value in female troubles. It relieves headache, backache, womanly misery and puts fresh strength into weary bodies. Try it.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

I would be pleased if all the pastors in the Columbus (Miss.) District would send me the names of the delegates from their respective charges who expect to attend the District Conference, which will convene at Pheba on April 22. Address, T. J. Hopper, Cedar Bluff, Miss.

THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference will be held at Verona, Miss., June 18 and 19. The opening sermon, Tuesday night, June 17, will be preached by Rev. R. M. Evans. Representatives of the Woman's Missionary Society are invited. The following committees are appointed: For License—W. D. Wendel, R. P. Neblett, A. A. Martin. On Orders—W. M. Young, T. J. Durrett, W. N. Dodds. On Missions and Missionary Territory—A. W. Langley, J. H. Holder, L. T. Sargent. On Thursday morning two hours will be devoted to the consideration of Sunday school interests. JNO. W. BELL, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Georgetown, May 6-9, 1913.

This second announcement of the Brookhaven District Conference is made in the hope that the pastors will give heed to my request, formerly made, and send me the names of the delegates-elect, and all other members of the Conference, so that I may have plenty of time in getting the Membership Roll in good shape before we go to Georgetown on the morning of May 6.

I announce the following committees, and request that each person be ready to do the work committed to him: License to Preach—W. H. La-Prade, J. W. Thompson, T. H. King; Orders—J. H. Foreman, L. L. Roberts, J. S. Parker; Hospital—H. M. Ellis, W. B. Hogg, J. L. Smith; Evangelism—W. H. Lewis, C. A. Schuitz, J. T. McVey.

Other committees will be appointed in time for the members of them to study the situation regarding the several matters to be presented at the Conference. I am anxious that all the brethren do their best to help make this a great Conference in every respect. The representatives of the various Boards will be welcomed, and given an opportunity to present their claims.

We will arrive at Georgetown in time for a service at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 6th, and Rev. L. L. Roberts will preach.

Dr. LaPrade will preach the opening sermon at the evening hour, following which the Sacrament will be administered. The Conference will be called to order at 2:30 in the afternoon of the 6th of May. Let all the members be present on time, and give themselves to the work.

THE PRESIDING ELDER AND CHURCH EXTENSION.

The following letter from a Georgia presiding elder has just come to hand: Dr. W. F. McMurry, Louisville, Ky.

"Dear Brother: I have just finished reading 'Priming for the Pump.' Am so favorably impressed by it that I want a copy of it sent to each preacher in my district. I believe the reading of it by them will help them personally and help the collection for Church Extension much more than the cost of publication. Send each of them a batch of the little tracts sent me. I never saw my duty to this great cause with quite so much force as I now see it. I have all the time tried to be loyal to the Church Extension collection, and have not failed in fifteen years to get the assessment on my charge, but I now feel inspired to champion this interest with more enthusiasm. I use the back of this sheet for names and addresses of my preachers.

Wishing you abundant success and praying the blessing of the good Father upon you and yours, I am Faithfully yours,

The above message cheered the heart of the Secretary and needs no comment. W. F. McMURRY, Corresponding Secretary.

THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference will convene at Quitman, Miss., Tuesday, May 27, at 7:30 p. m. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. John Paul, and will be followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The pastors are requested to have their delegates elected at an early date, and forward their names to me, and to Rev. B. F. Jones, Shubuta, Miss. J. T. LEGGETT, P. E. Meridian, Miss., April 12, 1913.

FROM BROTHER CREWS.

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: First, let me extend my profound thanks to all who expressed to me sympathy or showed me and my family kindness in any way during our recent great sorrow. Having done this, I wish to say that I want to be at work, and that if any of the brethren feel that they can use me in their meetings, I should be delighted to serve them. I shall be happy to respond to calls from anywhere and at any time, and any who may feel that they need me, need not let money considerations stand in the way. What I want is to be at work for the Master. Sincerely yours,

B. T. CREWS.

Pellagra CAN Be Cured

---No Matter How Long You Have Suffered---By My

GUARANTEED TREATMENT

I'm so certain that I can cure even the most obstinate case of Pellagra, that I guarantee it—money back if I fail. Often the disease yields after a week of my treatment—seldom is it necessary to continue it longer than a few weeks. Think of it—you sufferers from this dreaded malady! No longer need you despair—to suffer without relief, with insanity and death staring you in the face!

Have you indigestion and diarrhea? Are your mouth and gums red and irritated? Are you losing flesh? Have you ugly eruptions on hands or face or feet? Are your nerves affected? If you have these symptoms DON'T DELAY. WRITE ME AT ONCE. YOU CAN BE CURED. MY FREE BOOK tells all about Pellagra—about my treatment—about me and my standing among my home people—gives the sworn testimony of THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN CURED after being given up to die by physicians.

Write me today. One month's treatment only $10 and you take no risk for my guarantee protects you. Any bank in Jasper, and the mayor of the city will give you any information you may want about me.

Are You Getting the Benefit of Your Ability

Are you going to be content to let some one else cash in your experience and ability when you could just as easily be working for yourself in a live, profitable business of your own?

There's a big opening for you right now—an opportunity to make $15 to $18 a day doing contract ditching for the farmers in your neighborhood. Get a

BUCKEYE TRACTION DITCHER

With it you can easily get the work that is now being done by slow, hand labor. You can dig ditches that are absolutely straight, clean cut, and perfect to grade. And you can do the work twice as fast as by hand labor.

The Buckeye Traction Ditcher will prove a mighty profitable partner for you—one that you can always depend upon. It will cut from 100 to 150 rods a day according to the soil and enable you to get work enough to keep busy 9 to 10 months in the year.

We shall be glad to send you Catalogue 33, which tells how you can get on the inside of this big, money-making proposition. Write to

EFFECT OF ONE BOTTLE.

Crandall, Tex.—"After my last spell of sickness," writes Mrs. Belle Teal, of this city, "I remained very ill, and stayed in bed for eight weeks. I couldn't get up, all this time, and though my doctor came to see me every day, he didn't do me any good. I had taken but one bottle of Cardui, when I was up, going everywhere, and soon I was doing all my housework." Cardui helps when other medicines have failed, because it contains ingredients not found in any other medicine. Pure, safe, reliable, gentle-acting—Cardui is the ideal medicinal tonic for weak, sick women. Try it.

Mississippi Annual Missionary Conference.

The time is fast approaching for the Missionary Conference at Hattiesburg, and it is to be hoped that the auxiliaries, if they have not already done so, will elect their delegates as soon as possible. The date is April 25-30, and may this conference go down in the annals as the very best in every way and from every standpoint. This will depend only upon the amount of individual interest and universal co-operation expended.

MRS. H. L. McCLESKEY.

A Sister in Sorrow.

Our Mississippi Conference Press Superintendent sends us the following beautiful little tribute to the life of Mrs. Watkins who recently went home to dwell with Christ forevermore.

The whole conference grieves with its beloved President, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, in the loss of her mother, whose death occurred recently at the family home in Jackson, Miss. Mrs. Watkins was one of those rare lovable characters who served faithfully her generation and her Church by the will of God, and who, being dead, yet speaketh. She will ever speak, not only through her influence for good, but through the noble children whom she gave to the world and the Church. To these she bequeathed the greatest heritage one can have upon earth—a good name, which "is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Who Distributes It?

Who distributes the missionary literature to the auxiliaries in the Mississippi Conference? This question seems not to be perfectly clear to some of the auxiliaries in this Conference; so Mrs. McCleskey sends the following notice for publication (Note its contents and in the future remember it is your District Secretary to whom you apply):

"Some of the auxiliary officers overlook the fact that the Conference Press Superintendent handles only the Bulletin in the way of literature, and that all leaflets, et cetera, are distributed by the District Secretary. This should be borne in mind by all needing literature, for the Press Superintendent is not authorized to supply it, neither does she keep a stock on hand."

Anniversary of a Study Circle.

The members of the Study Circle of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Church of Water Valley, Miss., celebrated its second anniversary on March 18. It was also the celebration of the natal day of the President of the united societies. Each member had been requested to "bring one," and many accepted the invitation.

The new book, which is being taken up, is "China's New Day," by Headland. As this was a gala occasion there was no lesson, but subjects were assigned for the next meeting. One new member from another denomination was welcomed. The program was brief but varied, consisting of short biographies and sketches of missionaries who were born in March, interspersed with vocal and instrumental selections by the daughter of the house and her visiting friend. Delightful refreshments were served and "the cup which cheers but not inebriates" warmed hearts and loosened tongues. "All went merry as a marriage bell," and all united in wishing many happy returns of the day.

Union in Columbus, Miss.

Mrs. E. C. Johnson, Press Superintendent at this place, gives a most encouraging account of the work accomplished since the beginning of the new year. She says: "The Home and Foreign Societies have united and this union has proven harmonious and encouraging in every department. The work accomplished in the last two months has exceeded any ever hoped for. The membership is yet small, as compared with the congregation, yet each meeting brings new members and the future appears bright in every particular."

"Our society has taken several obligations which require persistent work, but we feel that the supply is equal to the demand, and that God looks with approval upon those who undertake great things in his name."

"The Press Superintendent, Mrs. J. E. Thomas, and the corps of faithful, zealous officers, hope to make this first year of the united societies, one that will reflect due credit on the past, and, open the way to larger undertakings for the future."

Ruston, (La.) Auxiliary.

Mrs. A. C. McKinney writes of this auxiliary that it is increasing both in interest and membership. Social and literary meetings are well attended; one meeting held in February had between fifty and seventy-five women present. The attendance at business meetings is nearly double what it was before the societies united. She says: "Ruston ought to be the banner auxiliary of the State, having enrolled the names of three of the finest women in ten States, all preachers' wives—Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Fontaine, and Mrs. Carter." We'd like to add the name of Sister McKinney, for we are sure no auxiliary could ever "go to sleep" with her in its midst. She is an enthusiastic, ardent worker and is so imbued with the Holy Spirit that her presence is felt wherever she goes.

east. The way in which the people of Korea have accepted the gospel and turned to the Savior of men has seemed almost miraculous to us of America. But should it be so regarded by us, for has not the Master said that with him all things are possible? In looking over a leaflet, "Korea's Message to the World," by Rev. C. G. Hounshell, we were deeply impressed by some of the striking characteristics of the Korean Church. Mr. Hounshell says that the Church there is a Bible-studying Church, a praying Church, a witnessing Church, a liberal and self-denying Church, and a Church of high moral standards. Do these features characterize our churches? We fear there are not many who can measure up to this standard. Mr. William T. Ellis, a noted journalist, who witnessed the examination of a Korean class for entrance into the Church, said: "It is harder to get into the Korean Church than to enter the Church at home." Isn't it time we were learning a few lessons from the Koreans?

The Sunday School.

Mrs. P. E. Allen has given the church at Grand Cane a nice pulpit chair in memory of Mrs. Catenhead, who for many years was one of the most saintly members of that or any other church. When she was not able to go to church unsupported, she assisted herself by holding to the fence, and when she could not venture out at all she was a devoted member of the Home Department of the Sunday school. Outside of the pastor's visits, perhaps no member of the church visited her in an official capacity for some years, except the Home Department superintendent. Is it fair to one whose chief joy has been to render faithful service to the church and Sunday school, until worn out by old age, to be forgotten by the church she has helped to make? The Home Department of the Sunday school is the connecting link between such a member and the church.

The Louisiana Conference Last Year's Children's Day Collections.

By reference to the Louisiana Conference Minutes for 1912 it will be seen that the following amounts were paid to the Children's Day Sunday school fund:

Alexandria District.

Alexandria, $15; Loyce and Leconte, $17; Columbia, $8; Jena, $10; Standard, $5; Trout, $1. No contributions were reported from Bon Ami, Bunkie, Campti, Colfax, DeRidder, Elizabeth, Glenmora, Harrisonburg, Marks, Melville, Marryville, Natchitoches, Opelousas, Pollock, Provencal, or Selma. Total for 1912, $56; contributed in 1911, $35.

Baton Rouge District.

Baker, $5; Baton Rouge, First Church, $12; Second Church, $10; Clinton and Jackson, $8; Denham Springs, $3; East Feliciana, $16; Kentwood, $6; Port Vincent, $13; Zachary, $9. Amite City, Franklin, Hammond, Mt. Vernon, New Roads Mission, Pine Grove, Plaquemine, Ponchatoula, St. Francisville, St. Helena, Tickfaw, and Wilson made no contributions. Total for 1912, $82; contributed in 1911, $30.

Lafayette District.

Bell City, $2; Church Point, $4; Crowley, $16; Lake Arthur, $11; Lake Charles, $15; Morgan City, $12; New Iberia, $13; Patterson, $6; Rayne, $4. Eunice, Franklin, Grand Chenier, Gueydan and Abbeville, Houma Mission, Indian Bayou, Jeanerette, Jennings, Lafayette, St. Martinsville, Sulphur, and Vermillion made no contributions. Total for 1912, $83; contributed in 1911, $53.

Monroe District.

Bastrop, $6; Eros, $7; Lake Providence, $5; Mer Rouge, $13; Monroe, $17; West Monroe, $6; Winnsboro, $9. Bonita, Brooklyn, Calhoun, Farmer, Florence, Gilbert, Mangham, Oak Grove, Rayville, Tallulah, and Waterproof made no contributions. Total for 1912, $63; contributed in 1911, $75.

New Orleans District.

Algiers, $21; Carrollton Ave., $13; Epworth, $3; Felicity St., $13; First Church, $15; Parker Memorial, $16; Rayne Memorial, $17; Second Church, $6. Bogalusa, Donaldsonville and Vacherie, Louisiana Ave., Mary Weln, McDonoghville, Sildell and Covington, and St. Tammany Circuit made no contributions. Total for 1912, $104; contributed in 1911, $41.

Ruston District.

Homer, $6; Lisbon, $18; Minden, $11. Arcadia, Benton, Bernice, Blenville, Boyd Mission, Cotton Valley, Haughton, Haynesville, Haynesville Mission, Plain Dealing, Gibbsland, Jonesboro, Lanesville, Ringgold, Ruston, Simsboro, Vernon, and Winnfield made no contributions. Total for 1912, $35; contributed in 1911, $56.

Shreveport District.

Anacoco, $13; Bayou Lachute, $5; Grand Cane, $7; Greenwood and Dixie, $8; Ida, $5; Keatchie, $28; Leesville, $7; Mansfield, $21; Mooringsport, $5; Pelican, $3; Shreveport, First Church, $54; Noel Memorial, $10; Queensboro, $2; Zwolle, $15. Bosler City, Coushatta, Grand Cane Mission, Many, Pleasant Hill, Texas Ave., South Mansfield, Vivian, and Wesley made no contributions. Total for 1912, $183; for 1911, $26. Grand total for 1912, $606; contributed in 1911, $370.

From the above it will be seen that there was a gain in the income from the Children's day collections last year over the previous year of $236, but still the amount was wholly inadequate to finance the great Sunday school cause. Of the amount raised 10 per cent went to the General Sunday School Board and was used to aid the Sunday school work in our Mission fields; 30 per cent went to the endowment of our Chair of Sunday school Pedagogy in Vanderbilt University, and 60 per cent was used by our Conference Board to supply literature to needy schools, meet running expenses and to support a Field Secretary. It will be observed that churches which contributed liberally to education, missions, Church extension, the orphanage, and other things gave nothing or a mere trifle to our Sunday school work—not because of a lack of interest, we are persuaded, so much as because there was no assessment for the one cause and there was for the others. Colleges are endowed and public education is supported by ample taxation, but the Sunday schools, as important an educational factor as any, must not only take care of themselves but carry many other church enterprises, help "raise the assessments," etc. But we are sure that when our people see this and realize that our Board is trying to do something to advance the work which our Sunday schools ought to do, these figures will be changed, and our work will be better supported. As a result of Rev. P. M. Brown's personal interest, shown in one way by urging his pastors by mail to observe Children's Day, the Shreveport District was the banner one, having advanced the amount raised in one year between six and seven hundred per cent. The First Church of Shreveport was the banner church, having contributed $54. If to better our grade of Sunday school teaching, to put educational methods into our Sunday school management, and to extend our Sunday school interests is worth while, then in the record of this year our Children's Day collections should be quadrupled. P. O. LOWREY, Field Secretary.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

Brother Superintendent, don't forget to organize in your Sunday school a department for missionary study. It is your duty for two reasons: (1) The pupils have a right to be informed concerning the work being done in the foreign field; (2) we should help others to know the way of light and life—it is Christlike to do it.

Great things have happened at Newton under the leadership of Brother H. F. Tolle. Ninety have been added to the Church and the Sunday school has made a marked advancement. On January 1, it stood in the ranks 100 strong; it now has 217 enrolled, an increase of over 100 per cent. Four new classes and one Wesley class have been organized. Who can beat this record? If you can, write me.

The Field Secretary organized six new Sunday schools on the Buford and Carthage charges during the month of March, and also reorganized the school at Carthage. We are reaching the country every chance we have.

What we should teach is love, sympathy, loyalty, obedience, reverence, our Church doctrines and polity, and how to live a Christian life. Thus,

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Meridian District, requests us to state that the proper date for the quarterly conference of the De Soto charge, which will meet at Cooper's Chapel, is May 23. That of the Daleville work will be held at Andrews' Chapel, June 7 and 8, and that of the Porterville Circuit at Union on June 27.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Ruston District, has exchanged the dates of the quarterly conferences of the Bienville and Minden charges that of the former will be held at Bear Creek May 17 and 18, and that of Minden Station on June 7 and 8. The brethren will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Rev. J. A. Tucker writes that the second quarterly conference of the Lamar charge, Holly Springs District, will be held at Mount Hope. Brother Tucker, in speaking of the status of the work under his supervision, says: "The first round of quarterly conferences was encouraging. Every charge, except one, paid more for ministerial support the first quarter this year than it did the first quarter of last year. The parsonage at Grezuda is going up rapidly and will be the best one in the Conference, when completed."

A dispatch to the Times-Democrat from Gulfport, Miss., on April 11, reported the laying of the cornerstone of a Methodist church at Fifteenth Street and Twenty-fourth Avenue, in that city, the ceremonies being under the direction of Dr. W. H. Huntley. The principal addresses were made by Bishop W. P. Thirkield and Mr. W. C. Pearce of Chicago. Rev. J. M. Morse, of Jackson, was also in attendance and took part in the exercises. Our Church is fortunate in having as its representatives in Gulfport Rev. M. L. Burton, Rev. W. W. Moore, and Rev. W. T. Griffin, and it is not surprising that substantial progress is being made.

We take from a recent issue of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, the following reference to the condition of the work in our Cabanne Church of that city, of which Dr. Theo. Copeland is pastor: "At the quarterly conference 24 accessions were reported for the quarter. It was also stated that nearly all of the assessments for the Conference benevolences were in hand, and that the estimates for ministerial support were paid up to April. From some of the members we learn that Dr. Copeland is preaching great sermons and growing all the time. The congregations are said to be better than ever before in the history of the church."

Rev. J. B. Randolph, our beloved pastor at Como, Miss., favored us with four additional subscribers a few days since. This makes 21 that he has sent in this year. Brother Randolph and his people are entertaining the Sardis District Conference this week. His beautiful new church will be a magnificent meeting-place for the progressive Methodists of that fine section of country. We appreciate the numerous invitations that we have had to attend this meeting, and wish that we could do so. It would, indeed, be an inspiration to look into the faces and grip the hands of our splendid fellow-workers in that part of the field. But the distance and expense make it impracticable for us to be present.

In sending in an announcement concerning the Aberdeen District Conference, which appears upon another page, Rev. J. W. Bell, the presiding elder, says: "The work of the district moves on smoothly and fairly satisfactorily. The preachers are all in their places and hard at work. The storms have done us much damage, demolishing a number of our churches and bringing great loss to a number of our people. The pastors in the various charges are seeking to secure an enlarged subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate." We are grateful to Brother Bell for a cordial invitation to attend his District Conference, of which we shall be most happy to avail ourselves, if we find it possible to do so.

We greatly regretted to notice in the Commercial Appeal an account of the death of Mrs. Lizzie D. Elder, wife of Brother A. D. Elder, of Coldwater, Miss., which occurred at the Baptist Hospital in Memphis on Saturday, April 5. Sister Elder had been quite ill for some time, and about three weeks ago underwent a very serious operation, which for a while seemed to bring her relief, but the benefits of which proved to be only temporary. She was a noble Christian woman who both in her home and in the work of the Church made her influence strongly felt for good. To the devoted husband and six children who are so sorely bereaved, we extend our deepest sympathy, and pray that God may be their stay and comfort in this dark hour.

Brother W. A. McKennon, the capable superintendent of the Sunday school of our First Church at Shreveport, La., under date of March 28, writes as follows: "Our Sunday school is still progressing. We are engaged in a friendly contest with several of the leading Sunday schools of Southern Methodism for the leadership, and last Sunday (March 23) the attendance reported was as follows: First Church, Shreveport, 972; First Church, Memphis, 770; Centenary, St. Louis, 632; Travis Park, San Antonio, 525; Marvin Church, Tyler Texas, 559. We have only been beaten twice since the contest started—once by Centenary, St. Louis, and once by First Church, Memphis." Hurrah for Louisiana and Shreveport! We heartily congratulate Brother McKennon and Dr. G. E. Cameron, the pastor, upon this magnificent showing. Mrs. Cameron also has been an influential factor in the building up of this great school, which, so far as we know, has no rival in the State.

"THE LITTLE HYMN BOOK."

Here it is! What! Another hymn book? Yes, and a good one, too. Not a book full of frivolous and fantastic foolishness, but full of good, singable Gospel songs and hymns. "The Little Hymn Book" is compiled and edited by Dr. John M. Moore, one of our Missionary Secretaries, and published on the recommendation of the Board of Missions, of Nashville, Tenn. The book contains 165 hymns and 35 spiritual songs, all of which, except 16, are found in the Methodist Hymnal. This little hymn book will fill a crying need in our Methodism. We ought to make a bonfire out of some of the trashy stuff that we find in some churches and then order and use our own "Little Hymn Book."

Of course, the Little Hymn Book is not perfect. This is not to be expected. But it is about as near it as any hymn book I have seen. Among its many commendable items are the following: (1) The words of the hymns are printed in the musical staff. It might have added much value to our Methodist Hymnal if the editors had done this; (2) in the "Order of Worship" of the Little Hymn Book, is found the music of Gloria Patri and the Doxology (how much valuable time is lost while we are looking for "737" and the Doxology!); (3) another thoughtful suggestion of the editor is the number of the hymn placed at the right hand of each hymn, so that one may find it instantly in the Methodist Hymnal; (4) typographically the book is artistic and pleasing to the eye—the paper is not of the rough and cheap kind, but fine, white, and smooth; (5) twenty-five of the choice Psalms for responsive reading have been included; also the Ten Commandments; (6) the editor has happily not forgotten to add the dignified and devout "Amen" at the end of each hymn.

Here is something that pleases and delights me: "Amazing Grace" has at last found the long-lost and time-honored tune "Harp"—and the union is a hilarious one after a separation of many lonely years. Also, another happy meeting is "Children of Our Heavenly King" with its beloved companion "Cockham."

You might as well try to separate two hearts that have grown into one by a happy association of half a century of joys and sorrows, as to divorce some hymns from their tunes. Who can think of the words "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," without at once singing "Martyn;" or of "Rock of Ages," without the tune of "Toplady;" or of "Holy, Holy, Holy," without breaking forth in song on "Nicaea"?

More than once, have I heard a congregation try in vain to sing such hymns as "Take My Life and Let It Be," to the tune of "Consolation" or "Messiah;" or attempt to sing "Amazing Grace," to the tune of "Simpson" or "Fillmore."

The people called Methodists cannot too often read Mr. Wesley's directions concerning congregational singing: "How shall we guard against formality in singing? Answered. 1. By choosing such hymns as are proper for the occasion. 2. By suiting the tune to the words. In all our congregations let the people learn to sing, and use our own hymn and tune book. Exhort every person in the congregation to sing; not one in ten only."

AN APPEAL FOR AID.

I am writing this to the Methodists of Louisiana to beg them to help us maintain our Orphanage at Ruston.

Our expenses average nearly $800 per month, and the amounts received from the Easter offerings were less than $1300, so we are facing a serious situation financially. Our bills must be paid, and how are we to pay them without money?

Honor to whom honor is due. Brother Vaughan has sent in more than the assessment on the Mer Rouge charge. Brother Tucker has sent the amount of the assessment on the Leesville church, and Brothers Drake of First Church, Baton Rouge, and Holmes of Ruston have sent a large portion of their assessments. There are a large number of preachers in charge who seem to have forgot ten all about us.

Brethren, is our Orphanage worth maintaining? If so, help us right now.

We carry $22,000 insurance, and we have just paid the premium amounting to $597.15. We have to pay the interest on our debt of $6000, and meet our current expenses.

I have now in hand but $100, which is not enough to last a week.

Open your hearts and purses, and let us have the money we so much need. Please respond at once, so we can meet our obligations.

May God bless you, my brethren. I believe you will come to our assistance in this our time of need.

Sincerely yours,

P. H. FONTAINE, Sup't.

THE REMARKABLE REQUEST OF THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

The news comes that the Government of the infant Republic of China has formally requested the Christian churches within its borders to unite in observing Sunday, April 27, as a day of prayer for God's blessings upon it. This is nothing short of marvelous when the full significance of such action is comprehended. Up to the time that the revolution that overthrew the Manchu dynasty broke forth, of all the heathen nations China was regarded as perhaps the most perfectly contented with her customs and religious beliefs and the most unresponsive to Christian effort. For a considerable time the missionaries found the doors there closed and barred against them; and even after they had been opened, their self-sacrificing labors seemed to amount to little. The hope of Christianizing this vast empire of more than 400,000,000 of people—nearly one-third of the human race—seemed a vague and distant one indeed. But patiently the servants of God tolled on, trusting in Him who said, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost—teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Visible results came slowly and appeared meager, but the seed sown were taking deeper root than was dreamed of; and when suddenly the old monarchy went to pieces and a republic headed principally by Christian statesmen arose upon its ruins, the whole planet was startled and surprised. The coming into being of this new democracy, unheralded and unexpected, is the mightiest miracle of modern times. And undoubtedly the agency that has chiefly wrought it is the Gospel of Christ. We question whether in the more than nineteen hundred years of its history Christianity has ever achieved a nobler triumph, or one that will be more far-reaching in its influence, than that of awakening and unshackling this sleeping giant of the Orient.

We would not convey the impression that we think the Christianization of China has already been accomplished. Far from it. We have in reality but little more than begun the stupendous task. But there is no doubt that the leaders among this ancient people have been weaned away from their old faiths and their old ways and that they have caught a new vision. It means much that the inhabitants of this long-benighted land have adopted the Christian chronology and have begun to write "In the year of our Lord," and that those now in charge of public affairs feel that the Christian Churches have access to a Power whose assistance they need in this critical period of their country's history. Surely if the disciples of Jesus, both at home and abroad, will only faithfully do their duty in this time of widening opportunity, we may from now on expect such conquests for the Cross in the Far East as will thrill and inspire the whole Christian world.

We notice that some of the Mission Boards and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ have issued an appeal to the members of all denominations in America to join with the Christians in China in praying for the young Republic on the day designated, which is next Sunday. We earnestly hope that both in their public and private devotions our people will remember this fitting request. Indeed, it ought to be remembered by the Christian people of every race and clime. A volume of prayer ascending from every part of the globe would properly attest the deep interest of all Christendom in the future of the Chinese people, and would also helpfully accentuate the essential oneness of the followers of Christ in all lands.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL THEATRICALS.

We have recently noticed with regret that theatricals given by church societies and schools seem to be on the increase. Especially has it grieved us to observe that our Methodist people in some localities seem to be beginning to take to such things. As we have before had occasion to say, in our opinion the influence of such performances is not helpful, but harmful. Never in its long and discreditable history has the theater been more corrupt than it is at this time. As is well known, when a young lady enters upon a stage career in the generality of cases it means her moral ruin. Indeed, so bad is the general reputation of actors and actresses that many high-class hotels do not care to receive them as guests. The truth is, it requires a constant sacrifice of splendid young womanhood to keep the theaters going. Leaving wholly out of consideration the character and influence of the performances given, how can Christian people afford to patronize and thus aid in maintaining an institution which exists at the cost of such a wreckage of human lives and souls?

But it may be asked what has this to do with theatricals given by young people who are pure and upright? We answer that the amateur performance tends to whet their appetites for exhibitions given by professionals. When a passion for such amusements has been awakened, young people cannot be counted upon to discriminate between the church and school play and one performed by a traveling troupe in an opera house. Nor do they always stop by becoming patrons of the public theater. In some instances they become stage struck and frightful results follow. We have known the happiness of more than one family to be hopelessly blighted by such occurrences. The private theatrical also exercises a pernicious influence upon the community at large. It confuses the moral perceptions of the people and is a sort of bait to draw them to see the wandering stars (of various magnitudes) of the dramatic world. A person who attends the presentation of some popular drama by local talent is pretty apt to want to see how the celebrities acquit themselves when they come along.

The attitude of the Methodist Church toward the theater is well known. Both our Bishops and General Conference have spoken unequivocally on the subject. The General Conference of 1902 declared 'card-playing, theater-going, attendance upon race courses, circuses, and the like to be justifiable grounds of discipline.' This pronouncement has never been repealed or modified. Surely no good Methodist can afford to set the teachings of his Church at defiance or to do anything that might even indirectly strengthen an institution that is so manifestly evil as is the stage. We believe that an overwhelming majority of our people are sound on this, as well as on all other important questions of doctrine and conduct. But in view of the loose notions that seem to be coming into vogue in some quarters, it might be well for our Annual Conferences to make themselves heard concerning church and school theatricals in no uncertain tones when they next meet. It will, in our judgment, have a wholesome effect for them to let it be clearly understood that they will tolerate no lowering of our safe and Scriptural standards either in regard to this or kindred matters.

We sometimes receive a notice of a play that has been pulled off by some Sunday school class or society in the Church, but none of these have been mentioned in our columns, nor will they be. Our opposition to such things in the Church is uncompromising, and if they want a publicity medium they must look somewhere else than to the New Orleans Christian Advocate while it is in our charge.

In conclusion, we will say that if any brother wishes to defend church or school theatricals, let him come into the Conference organ, and not attack the position of the Editor before his congregation where he has no chance to be heard in reply, as was said to have been done in one instance last year after we had had occasion to discuss briefly this subject. There is little bravery or glory in assailing and demolishing an opponent who is hundreds of miles away and who may know nothing of how he was annihilated until months afterwards, or possibly not at all. To perform so knightly an act as that is to become a rival of the famous Don Quixote.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "It is now given out that David Livingstone was a member of the Wesleyan Mission in his native town of Blantyre, and that he held a ticket to the class-meeting there. When he went to Glasgow, out of deference to his parents' wishes, he definitely and exclusively identified himself with the Independent Church. Methodism has given a good religious start to not a few of the famous men and women of the world." Our contemporary is right. If the influence that Methodism has exerted were obliterated, some of the brightest chapters in the history of other Churches would be blotted out.

"The man who has no grip on the unseen is like a ship without an anchor, driven by the winds and waves."

ANTI-SUFFRAGE.

By H. M. Willett.

Women are not being deprived of a natural right because the ballot is withheld from them. Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court declared that citizenship carried with it no voting power as a right. The learned jurist, Judge Cooley, said, "Suffrage does not exist for the benefit of the individual, but for the benefit of the State itself. It is a regulation which the State establishes as a means of perpetuating its own existence, and of insuring to the people the blessings it was intended to secure." Chief Justice Marshall handed down the opinion that "The granting of the franchise has always been regarded in the practice of nations as a matter of expediency, and not as an inherent right." Similar opinions have been rendered in many courts in deciding test cases. A resident of the District of Columbia has all the privileges of citizenship, but he cannot vote, as the franchise is a State right and the District of Columbia is not a State. Officers and enlisted men in the Army and Navy are citizens, but they are not allowed to vote. These decisions and examples are a sufficient answer to the claim that Woman Suffrage is a natural right.

Another reason put forth for granting the ballot to women is the claim that this is necessary for the purification of the ballot and the elevation of society. Politics in Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, and Utah have been in no way improved because women vote. In Utah, particularly, where women are in the majority, we find a dynasty controlled by one American citizen, Jos. F. Smith, the Mormon prophet, who rules like the Sultan of Turkey with his harem. Have women political, social or economic independence in Utah? Has polygamy been stopped by woman's instinctive self-respect, or her practical demands through the ballot? Politics are not uplifting and conditions in the Woman Suffrage States are still corrupt. Hon. Elihu Root, in a recent address, said: "I am opposed to granting suffrage to women because I believe it would be a loss to woman and an injury to the State. Suffrage implies not merely the casting of the ballot, but, if it means anything, it means entering upon the political field of life, and politics is modified war. In politics there is struggle, strife, contention, bitterness, excitement, agitation, everything averse to the true character of woman. Woman rules to-day by the sweet and noble influences of her character. Woman in strife becomes hard, harsh, unlovable, repulsive. True government is in the family, the true throne is in the household. The highest exercise of power is that which forms the conscience, influences the will, controls the impulses of men, and there to-day woman is supreme and woman rules the world."

Giving the ballot to women would be inexpedient unless this doubling of the ballot would guarantee a higher standard of patriotism and intelligence in the majority of the votes cast. Unfortunately, there are many women who are both ignorant and depraved. These women, through bribery and other improper means, would be brought to the polls to cast their votes for corrupt politicians and harmful measures. On the other hand, a large proportion of our women of culture and refinement are either indifferent or opposed to the ballot, and would largely remain away from the polls. It seems probable, therefore, that by giving the franchise to so many women who care nothing for it, and to others who know less about the principles of our government than the average man, our political problems would be further complicated rather than benefited by the change.

It is often claimed that women need the franchise for their own protection against unjust laws. It is doubtless true that under the Common Law, women suffered from many legal disabilities, but in recent years these laws have been largely removed and the States have conferred on them rights and privileges which exceed those granted to men. The laws regarding the rights of women are more liberal in New York and Massachusetts than in States where they have the ballot. Those two States grant equal guardianship of the husband and wife over their own children. Wyoming, Idaho and Utah give no such privileges, and women have voted forty-four years in two of those States. Nor need the husband support the wife, if he does not care to, in those three Woman Suffrage States. In Idaho, a wife has no control over her own wages, or money of any kind, and she can secure the control of her own property only by going into Court and showing that her husband is mismanaging it.

Economic changes in the past fifty years have driven many women into industrial pursuits, and the statement is frequently made that they require the ballot to improve their wages and better the conditions under which they work. Arguing from analogy, I may say, that the ballot has not apparently increased the wages or shortened the hours of laboring men. These benefits have been secured rather through the organization of trades unions, and the processes of supply and demand. Women's wages are comparatively low because there are so many more applicants for positions in offices and factories than there are places available. Another equally potent reason is the temporary nature of their employment. Statistics show that forty-five per cent of wage-earning women cease to work at the age of 25, and sixty-seven per cent at the age of 35. Of the total population of women in this country, only about 12 per cent are of voting age—21 years or older. Miss Ida M. Tarbell, one of the ablest women of our day, and a wage-earning woman, has well said: "The woman in industry is, after all, a transient. A training that will lead her to apply her powers with appreciation and enthusiasm to domestic and not to political life is what she needs. She must not prove her equality by doing in his ways the things man does, but by doing the things for which she is fitted and which the world needs from her. Life is not saved by politics, but by principle."

The movement for Woman's Suffrage is founded on the belief that the ballot is the solution of all governmental evils. The experience of the last half-century shows the fallacy of this opinion. The ballot was given to the negro, but instead of solving the race problem, it has tended to complicate it. Men have learned that social reforms cannot be secured by merely casting the ballot on election days. Men now understand that public opinion must be educated and stimulated in order to create a demand for the enactment of a law and for its enforcement thereafter. Ex-Mayor McClelland, of New York, said not very long ago: "In the last analysis, that which gives life to the statute, that which transforms it from an empty threat into the living, breathing law, is the vitalizing force of public opinion." William Allen White, in his recent novel, "A Certain Rich Man," says, "When public opinion rises sure and firm and strong, no material force on earth can stop it. It is in this realm that woman plays a large and important part." The many evils of civic life and the abuses of industrial conditions can be best rectified and remedied by the indirect influence of women. Let them stand intelligently, fearlessly, and insistently for all that is true, pure, and just in the home, and in the business and social life, and thus use their strength along the myriad lines of work needing their support. In this way, women can exert a much greater influence upon the political life of the country, and can better promote the needed reforms in our government without the ballot than with it. Unfettered by party obligations, they are in a position to unite in non-partisan efforts to elevate political ideals in all the parties. To take this exceptional power away from women, and make them merely cogs in the political machinery, is no advantage to them and a distinct loss to the community.

It is a significant fact that there is a well organized movement among women against having the franchise forced upon them. This opposition to Woman Suffrage must be based upon some fundamental principles and not upon the mere whim of women who do not wish to vote. It is the welfare of the State and race which they have at heart, as a careful study of the question from its various standpoints has convinced them that suffrage would but add another responsibility to those they now carry without giving them any compensating advantages. They realize that the whole social structure of the State would be weakened at the very foundation by this attempt to equalize and identify the practical activities of the sexes. They comprehend that this addition to the electorate would shatter the basic principles of our government by making possible a majority which could not enforce its own laws.

The principal function of Government is the protection of person and property. Women in the past have been exempted from this responsibility. Voting is only a small part of government, and if this responsibility is thrust upon women, they must also take an active part in the preliminaries necessary to voting and assume their share of the consequences resulting therefrom. They must assist in enforcing the laws which they have helped to enact. For this, women by their very constitution, are unfitted. Man is the natural protector of life and property and the natural provider for the home. Equality applied to the sexes is a misnomer. The question of Woman Suffrage is not a question of equality, but a question of function. I find no political reason for Woman Suffrage. On the contrary, I find in the complementary relation of the sexes why both should not be engaged in the same work. The world's work for the benefit of humanity needs the co-ordination of men and women, and women need the protecting care of men to make them efficient in their own special sphere. The irritating nature of politics would impair the ability of women to do properly their own work, and they would not have the power to do more than man alone in improving political conditions. If women assume the responsibilities and duties of political life, if they undertake to do man's work in addition to their own, it will mean a diffusion of their natural powers and activities, and we shall have deterioration instead of progress. I would not attempt to limit woman's sphere of influence, but we should seriously consider whether she may not better serve her generation by conserving her natural forces for her great work as a home-maker, rather than dissipate and weaken them by undertaking to do man's work also.

"RELIGIOUS BELIEF OF THE PRESIDENTS."

(This letter written by Rev. E. S. Lewis, our pastor at West Point, Miss., to the Editor of The Leader, a paper published in that city, deals with matters of such general interest that we take pleasure in reproducing it.)

Editor of The Leader: In your issue of the past week I find an article with the above title. The same article has appeared in a number of papers recently, throughout the country, and no one, so far as I know, has challenged its truthfulness. I do not want to appear in the light of a critic, but a fact that is not historically true ought to be challenged.

No one honors the good old Presbyterian Church more than I do. It has been, and is yet, a mighty force for righteousness in our land. Its adherents have not been so numerous as some other Churches can boast of, but it has certainly been influential. It is a fine thing to be able to number the great and the titled among your followers, but if certain claims are not warranted by fact, then they ought to be challenged.

There are certain claims in the article referred to of last week which cannot be substantiated, according to my books. All I am concerned about in this article is whether the statements made are historically true. We are all agreed that honor ought to be given to whom honor is due.

You state in the article, quoted from the Richmond Times-Dispatch, that Polk and Lincoln were both Presbyterians. It also is so stated in the World Almanac. Mr. Will T. Hale, who is so well-known to literary people that he needs no introduction at my hands, says in his little book, "Great Southerners," page 122, that James K. Polk was converted under a sermon preached by Dr. John B. McFerrin, a noted Methodist preacher, near Columbia, Tenn., in 1833. He says: "From that day he was a changed man." However, he did not connect himself with the Church at that time. Mr. Hale says it was supposed that he would not connect himself with the Church because his wife and mother were Presbyterians, while he was a Methodist in belief, and he did not care to separate from them in Church affiliation. Quoting from Hale, page 122, I find these words: "On his return from Washington, at the expiration of his term as President, he settled in Nashville. His fixed purpose was to join the Church. In his last illness he sent for McFerrin (the minister who had been instrumental in his conversion), revealed the matter to him and requested that he be baptized and received into the Methodist Church. McFerrin also preached the funeral sermon, from the text on which was preached the one under which Polk was converted in 1833." This, it seems to me, is conclusive, if one who lived in the same community can be regarded as a trustworthy historian. So, according to Mr. Hale, the wife and mother were Presbyterians, but the President was a Methodist.

As to Lincoln, the Times-Dispatch is wrong again. Mr. Lincoln was never at any time in his life, a member of the Church. So states Bishop Charles H. Fowler, in "Patriotic Orations," page 88. At the time of Lincoln's death, Bishop Fowler was pastor of the First Methodist Church in Chicago, and delivered a notable oration upon the life and character of the martyred President. Here are a few facts gleaned from the address on Lincoln: "At the time of his mother's death, when he was nine years old, there was no minister near by and so his mother was laid away without any religious ceremony. This greatly distressed young Lincoln. Months afterward he wrote to an itinerant Methodist preacher, a hundred miles away, to come and hold services over his mother's grave. The good man came and held the service, which was attended by the settlers for miles around, and the lad was greatly comforted.

It is true that during Mr. Lincoln's stay in Washington he worshiped most frequently at a Presbyterian church, whose pastor was a warm personal friend, but he was never a member of that Church. On page 102 of the book mentioned above, there is a stirring account of Lincoln's conversion under a sermon preached by a Methodist preacher, named Jacques, of the Illinois Conference, on the text, "Ye must be born again." In 1837, Lincoln heard Dr. Peter Akers, a famous old Methodist preacher, deliver a great sermon at Salem, Illinois, on "The Dominion of Jesus Christ." Lincoln declared twenty-five years afterward that he had never been able to shake himself loose from the convictions of that occasion.

When Lincoln was buried at Springfield, Illinois, a Methodist, Bishop Simpson, far-famed as an orator and preacher, had charge of the services and delivered the funeral oration. If Lincoln was not a member of the Church and the above facts are true, how does it happen that the martyred President is put down as a Presbyterian?

RUSTON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Preachers and Laymen of the Ruston District enjoyed a very successful Institute at Winnfield, April 8 to 10. Our congregations on account of bad weather were not large, but those who could attend were very much profited and encouraged. Brother Carter had been very careful in planning his program. Such subjects as "Our Responsibility to the Non-Christian Peoples," "Prayer in Mission Work," "How to Develop a Missionary Spirit Among the Pastors," and others of equal importance were discussed. The preaching was done by Brothers Brown, Holmes and Means. Brother Brown was the oldest young man in the crowd. He is a living example of how it is possible to grow old gracefully.

The most important feature of the occasion was the round table talks. Every one present entered into these discussions with enthusiasm. In this way the meeting was truly apostolic, each having a psalm or exhortation. The preachers told of their needs and the needs of their works, and received suggestions practical and helpful. There was no hurry; but it was a real Institute—a place of learning. We had less of eloquence and more of sense than any Institute it has been my privilege to attend.

The last day of the Institute was enlivened by having Brother Vic Fulton, of Shreveport, with us. He led the discussion of the last afternoon. I had almost said he is a Prince, but as I never saw a Prince I will abstain. He is a splendid layman, and may his tribe increase. One of our preachers suggested that we recommend him to the District Conference for license to preach. That suggestion was heartily objected to from the fact that we have spoiled too many laymen in that way already.

The last night was given over to the laymen of Winnfield, who had prepared a banquet of about one hundred plates. You can say for the preachers of the Ruston District, that they don't mind staying out late. The banquet was one of good cheer and fellowship. We had toasts and roasts, laughter and song. Winnfield was glad of the opportunity of entertaining our brethren from a distance, and hope that they will all feel like coming this way again at an early date.

THE WORK OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

On Monday evening, March 31, ex-Governor Rob't B. Glenn, of North Carolina, delivered in the Walnut Street Theater of Vicksburg one of a series of lectures on the prohibition question that he was engaged to deliver in the State of Mississippi under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League. Of course, any one who ever heard Governor Glenn knows that this was one of the greatest speeches ever delivered in the State on this most important and vital question. When the Governor is through with his speech-making in the State, there is little doubt that prohibition will be stronger and the cause of the whiskey men much weaker.

The next morning after the lecture, one of the leading citizens of the city said to me, "If we could hear a few more speeches like that to large crowds in Vicksburg, something would be doing sure enough." One's impression of the Governor is that he has a great mind, and that his mental powers are backed up by a splendid Christian character—reinforced by strong convictions. He deals one striking blow after another, and carries his audience with him by arguments and eloquence in such a manner that the man who is in favor of whiskey is rendered speechless and helpless. Any State is to be congratulated on having had such a man for Governor. Surely a State has a bright future in which the citizenship has such ideals as to put a man of Governor Glenn's character into a position of leadership. Moral and civic righteousness is the best capital stock a State can have. People who are looking for a locality in which to invest and build a home and rear a family feel safe in coming to a State, city, or community where their children will be free from the grosser forms of evil. Three-fifths or seven-tenths of the evil in the social life of the world to-day come from the drink habit, and when we are rid of this, or when it is reduced to the minimum, we will have lifted the social life of the country to a vastly higher plane than it has ever been.

Those who have watched the progress of things in the prohibition line, in the enforcement of the law and the increase of sentiment favoring civic righteousness, in Mississippi for the last eighteen months, may well congratulate themselves on the headway being made under the leadership of Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, D.D. Under his leadership, properly supported by the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U., we may look for better things in the future than in the past. The Near-beer Law must be repealed and other laws that we have improved where needed, and still others passed, to bring this State up to the front rank of Prohibition States.

The attitude of some of the preachers of the State is a little surprising. I mean the Methodist preachers, for it is not my privilege to criticize ministers of the other Churches in the newspapers. Of course, we all stand right on the question, but we are not all at work like we should be. Some men I know, occupying spheres of large influence, have never turned a hand to aid the cause. As Governor Glenn says, this is the greatest Home Mission work a preacher can do, and where this curse is lifted from the social life of the community, the Church always prospers vastly more than where whiskey has held sway. One other thing must be done by the next Legislature: a law must be put on the statute books requiring the school boards to put in the course of study of our public schools, a text-book on the evil effects of alcoholic stimulants on the human system. Let this course be a thorough one to run through several grades.

One other thing especially needs to be done, and that is for the State of Mississippi to get control of the island in the Mississippi River, west of the city of Vicksburg. If the Governor of Louisiana would put himself to a little trouble and investigate the situation on this island, he might feel compelled to remove the evil or transfer it to Mississippi, that she may clean it up. The toll in human life paid to the liquor business since it was established over there is more than a dozen men, and one woman has been shot on the island since I came to this city as pastor. A business of that kind, conducted so near the city, is a menace to good order in the city, and is used as an argument against the enforcement of the law within our corporate limits. Governor Brewer said to me before the election in which he was made Governor that he was going to give the State the best judiciary it has had since the Civil War. So far, so good; and if he will keep the good work going on until we have judges that will make every official in the counties and the cities do his full duty, or resign and get out, we will soon see a different state of things. This is what we can bring to pass if we will—and we will. That a man should run for an office, be elected, take the solemn oath that he does and then protect a criminal, wink at the violations of the law, and connive at the very evils he is sworn to protect the community from, is a burning shame. Yet there are some who do this. Where this state of things exists every good citizen should strive to see, not only that such men are put out of office, but that they are made to put on stripes and spend a season at Parchman or Greenfield, making corn and cotton to pay for the education of boys who may be brought up with a higher sense of honor than to live a perjured life. When a man sells honor and self-respect for office, money and position, he should be made to feel the pressure of a respectable social sentiment.

Church News

The Federation Committees of the two Episcopal Methodisms in America met in Washington, D. C., a few days ago.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, will preach the Commencement sermon at Carolina College at Maxton, N. C. The Annual Address will be delivered by the Hon. T. J. Jarvis.

The Annual Convention of the Holiness Union will be held in Louisville, Ky., April 29 to May 4. Mr. L. P. Brown, of Meridian, Miss., is the president of this organization, and will deliver one of the principal addresses.

It is stated that the headquarters of the Mormons for their operations in the South is Chattanooga, Tenn. They are said to maintain there the largest printing house that they have in the United States, except the one in Salt Lake City.

Dr. H. C. Tolman, professor of Greek at Vanderbilt University, has declined to accept the presidency of an Eastern college which was recently tendered him upon flattering terms. He has been connected with Vanderbilt for about twenty years.

After stirring addresses by Bishop Lambuth, Dr. Rawlings, and others on Sunday, March 30, the Central M. E. Church, South, of Spartanburg, S. C., subscribed $2019 to support a missionary and his wife in the foreign field. It is stated that this congregation, when all its offerings are footed up, will give $5000 for home and foreign missions this year.

The largest Sunday school Bible Class in Tennessee, according to report, is the S. C. Williams Class of the Munsey Memorial Church of Johnson City. This distinguished gentleman for whom this class is named was recently appointed by Gov. Hooper to the Supreme Bench of the Volunteer State, to succeed Judge John K. Shields, who was elected to the United States Senate.

Rev. Carl D. Harris, Editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, started on a trip abroad on April 12, sailing from New York. Before his return he expects to see the Holy Land, Egypt, Greece, Italy, and a part of Turkey. During his absence his paper will be in charge of Dr. F. J. Prettyman, pastor of Epworth Church of Washington City, and the Chaplain of the United States Senate.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist, though the closest economy has been practiced in the management of its affairs, yet finds it impossible to get along without the aid of an assessment upon the Annual Conference. We think that money thus applied is put to a wise use. There is no interest of the Church that is not helped by the maintenance and circulation of a good church paper.

Dr. J. C. Morris, of Alabama, has been appointed associate pastor of Trinity Church of Los Angeles, Calif., the work having become too heavy for Rev. R. P. Howell, who has been serving this congregation with such marked acceptability and success. Trinity, it will be remembered, is soon to have one of the largest and most complete institutional plants to be found in the United States.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson is quoted as having said that only 43 per cent of Southern Methodist children are being educated in Methodist schools, and that 5,000 Methodist young people are students in State universities. Manifestly we need to do something to bring the youth of our denomination more generally under the instruction of our own educational institutions. "Standardizing" our colleges is well enough, but even more important is the task of enlisting the patronage of our people, so that the rising generation in Methodist homes will not be weaned away from us. In our humble judgment, we need few things worse than a wisely planned system of secondary schools.

Bishop W. A. Candler will soon publish a new book, entitled "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel." With so rich and inviting a field before him as the Gospel of St. John, we dare say that our Georgia Chief Pastor will give the Church a volume that will be both helpful and inspiring. As is well known, this is the Gospel at which the "critics" have chiefly aimed their shafts within recent years.

Dr. W. F. McMurtry, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, sends us the following good news: "The Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension had reached the sum of $501,387.16 at the close of our fiscal year, March 31, 1913. This was an increase of $66,222.66 for the past year." We congratulate Dr. McMurtry and his co-laborers upon having brought this important fund past the half-million mark.

The Texas Christian Advocate states that Rev.

W. J. Johnson, of the First Methodist Church of Beaumont, Texas, is having a remarkably successful pastorate in that progressive city. He is preaching to large congregations, and the Sunday school, which is said to be scarcely second to any in the Lone Star State, had on a recent Sabbath an attendance of 862. The work is also reaching out into other sections of the city, and lots for two mission chapels have been secured. Brother Johnson's Mississippi friends will be delighted to learn of the substantial results he is achieving for the Master in his present important field of labor.

There are reported to be 8,960 Methodists in Richmond, Va. The per capita contribution to missions by the membership of the various Churches in that city, according to figures recently given out, is as follows: Baptists, $1.16; Campbellites, 68 cents; Episcopalians, $1.37; Lutherans, 33 cents; Methodists, 66 cents; Presbyterians, $2.09. It is doubtful whether these figures do the Methodists justice, since they give money to Church Extension and other causes, which are really missionary, but which are not nominally set down as such in our statistical tables.

Centenary's New President

REV. R. H. WYNN.

On Thursday, April 17, the Special Committee appointed by the Board of Trustees of Centenary College to name a president for that institution, to succeed Rev. Felix R. Hill, resigned, met in Shreveport and elected Rev. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Crowley District, to this responsible position. It is stated that Brother Wynn has signified his acceptance of the place, and that he will take charge at the close of the present scholastic term. The new President of Centenary, who is a son of Rev. J. F. Wynn, an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, was born at Waterproof, La., on Feb. 23, 1871. He was graduated from Centenary College, then located at Jackson, La., with an A.B. degree, in 1889; was Principal of the Preparatory Department of his Alma Mater in 1889-'91, and was a student in the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University in 1891-'92. He was licensed to preach in 1889, and was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Conference in December, 1892. Since his entrance into the itinerancy he has filled the following appointments: Parker's Chapel, New Orleans, 1893, 1894, 1895; Algiers, 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899; Louisiana Avenue, New Orleans, 1900, 1901, 1902; Homer, January to October, 1903; Ruston, October to December, 1903, 1904; Minden, 1907, 1908; Monroe, 1909, 1910, 1911; Lafayette District, 1912, and 1913 up to the present time.

As a pastor, Brother Wynn has everywhere been efficient, and has taken rank with the best in his Conference. For a number of years he has been an influential factor in the Methodism of the State, and as a presiding elder he has exhibited in a striking degree the elements of successful leadership. Well educated, studious, admirably poised, tactful, physically vigorous, and possessed of an attractive personality, Brother Wynn is splendidly equipped for the duties of the office to which his brethren have called him, and we predict that he will measure fully up to every requirement. Let every friend of Centenary now rally promptly to his support and lend a helping hand in building up and strengthening this historic institution, upon which the future of Louisiana Methodism so largely depends. The time has come when, by every token, we must move forward to larger things.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Sloux Falls, S. D., has a law limiting the number of saloons to one for every 500 population, and making it necessary for a man to be elected by a majority vote of all citizens of the town before he can open a barroom.

There is a law on the Federal statute books that forbids the picture of any living person being placed on government bonds or currency. This law was all that prevented Congress from having the picture of Colonel G. W. Goethals placed upon the new Panama bonds.

On April 16 a constitutional amendment granting the right of suffrage to women was defeated before the State Legislature of Florida. A few days before that a similar measure was lost in a general election in Michigan. This cause has also recently suffered severe reverses in the Dominion of Canada.

Representatives of the American Academy of Political and Social Science have been engaged for some time in studying the cause of the high cost of living, and how to reduce that cost. Their report, recently submitted, named a number of contributing causes, but stated that there is no way of materially reducing it.

Dr. Robert Sharp, who has been the acting President of Tulane University since the resignation of former President Craighead, was on last Thursday elected President of that institution. Dr. Sharp has for 31 years been a member of the faculty of Tulane University. He is a native of Virginia, and an alumnus of Randolph-Macon College.

Herr Jago, the chief of police of Berlin, Germany, recently issued an order forbidding children under fifteen years of age to enter a moving picture show in that city. He says that the effect of the pictures upon the youthful mind is such as to endanger the public safety in the future. There is no doubt but that there are many films shown in moving picture theaters that are not fit to be seen by a mature person, much less by a child.

The Southern Educational Conference held a profitable session in Richmond, Va., last week. One of the features of this meeting was the spirit of co-operation that was manifest between men in different callings. Ministers, editors, merchants, and teachers counseled together concerning methods of building up rural communities and other educational problems. It seems that our leading instructors have been slow in recognizing the fact that the minister, the editor, and the merchant are important factors in the educational world as well as the teacher.

The United States Navy is now said to be surpassed only by those of England and Germany. However, unless there is a change in the American naval policy, it is only a question of seven years' time until the navies of all the great Powers will excel ours except those of Japan and Austria. While we believe in peace and condemn any measure that tends to glorify bloodshed, we yet believe that a great navy is necessary to a great nation. The United States might try to teach the lesson of peace by permitting her navy to deteriorate, but other nations might not learn the lesson.

Last month the corner stone of the new capitol building in Australia was laid by Baron Denman, the Governor-General of that commonwealth. Australia is said to be trying to follow in the footsteps of the United States in locating and constructing her capitol buildings. A site in the woods, including two hills on opposite banks of the Molongio River, has been selected and the town to be built there will be named Conberra. Mr. W. B. Griffin, of Chicago, is the architect who drafted the plans for both the city and Government buildings.

The Louisiana State Teachers' Association closed a very interesting session in New Orleans last Saturday. The dominant note of the convention was in favor of greater activity in the field of vocational education. The position of those who favor vocational education is that the State which maintains schools for the training of lawyers, teachers, and those preparing for other professions, is inconsistent when it declines to do as much for those who desire to learn a trade or a craft. There is some reason in the argument of the friends of vocational education, but we have always been of the opinion that if the public school would confine its curriculum to the essentials of intellectual training and give the child more care-free time at home it will acquire more practical vocational knowledge in its father's shop, factory, farm, or store, than it will under the roof of a school building.

CHURCH EXTENSION RECEIPTS.

I am giving below comparative statements of Church Extension receipts by years, 1906-13, inclusive:

Year ending March 31, 1906	$156,934.47
Year ending March 31, 1907	203,701.36
Year ending March 31, 1908	203,399.82
Year ending March 31, 1909	246,512.48
Year ending March 31, 1910	289,643.72
Year ending March 31, 1911	296,328.70
Year ending March 31, 1912	317,214.66
Year ending March 31, 1913	387,008.99

The above figures show the growth of the work of Church Extension so far as cash receipts are concerned. W. F. McMURRY, Cor. Sec'y.

VANDERBILT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Vanderbilt Missionary Institute was held in Wesley Hall, April 11-13. Valuable services were rendered by Mr. T. H. Haden, the only returned missionary present, and by Dr. W. W. Pinson, who had just been visiting the foreign field, and by Dr. G. B. Winton, who was just back from a visit to Mexico. Preliminary to the Institute proper, Bishop Lambuth lectured Monday night on "Prospecting for our Mission Field in China." On Friday night Professor Gilbert, who accompanied Bishop Lambuth on his tour through Africa, gave an illustrated lecture on "Life in the Congo." On Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, Dr. E. F. Cook presiding, Dr. G. B. Winton lectured on "The Meaning of Present Conditions in Mexico." During the further sessions of the conference the following addresses were given: "Need for Christian Missions in Japan," by Dr. Haden; "The Movement for Social Service Among North American Students," by Dr. A. M. Trawick; "Opportunity for Christian Service in the East," by Dr. W. W. Pinson. On Sunday morning Dr. O. E. Brown preached the annual sermon. A special service of missionary intercession was conducted on Sunday afternoon, and at night after a devotional service by Dr. Tillett, a testimony meeting was led by Dr. Cook. One of the most interesting features of the last meeting was a talk by Mr. Ryang, a Korean student who has spent the past three years at Vanderbilt and whose plans for returning to Korea have been for a time defeated on account of political conditions in the Far East.

MRS. M. W. HAGGARD,

Secretary.

COMMENDED BY DR. HILL.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Thursday, April 17, the committee appointed by the Board of Trustees, elected Rev. R. H. Wynn President of Centenary College of Louisiana, to succeed the present incumbent in that very important office, next June. Please permit me to say, that the election of Brother Wynn is highly gratifying to me; and that I expect Centenary to grow and greatly prosper under his administration.

Cordially and fraternally yours,

FELIX R. HILL.

Shreveport, La.

MR. J. H. CAMPMAN.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr. John Henry Campman, of this city, which occurred after a brief illness on April 10. Brother Campman was one of the most loyal Methodists in New Orleans, and was respected and esteemed as a man and citizen by all who knew him. He was a member of the Louisiana Avenue Church, and was one of its most active and ardent supporters. In former years he took great interest in the Seashore Camp Meeting and did much toward making its management permanent and effective. He was at the time of his decease one of the trustees of the building in which the New Orleans Christian Advocate is published. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them. We have in hand a more extended sketch of the life of Brother Campman by his friend and fellow-worker, Brother W. B. Thomson, which will appear next week.

NEW WHITWORTH LADY PRINCIPAL HIGHLY COMMENDED.

Miss Janie H. Drake has been lady principal and head teacher of English literature for two years at Sullins College-Conservatory.

As lady principal she is firm, yet so reasonable and fair that she manages the student body quite easily. In fact I regard her ability to manage young ladies as of a very high order. In this very difficult department of school work I know of no one with superior ability.

As teacher of English literature she, in my judgment, stands at the very top. Her scholarship in this line of study is large and accurate and her ability to impart the same is hardly excelled.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) W. S. NEIGHBORS,

President Sullins College.

PRESIDING ELDERS' ADDRESS.

To the Pastors and Official Members, in particular; and to All the People who are Called Methodists, in the Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South.

Dear Fellow-Laborers: We, your servants under God, at a meeting in Jackson, March 26, 1913, after prayer and much consideration of the work committed to our care, resolved to present this earnest appeal to you:

1. Since it is sadly evident that for years revivals in our churches have been far too infrequent, and those conducted have not generally brought satisfactory results, we respectfully urge that you plan well and largely for a revival in every church in your charge. To this end we request and urge each pastor:

(1) To select the time most convenient, and give to each meeting ample space; in no instance, if at all possible, giving to each less than the time required to accomplish a REVIVAL.

(2) To secure at once the best help among our ministry; and in case you cannot get the help you need, prepare by prayer and study to lead in the work yourselves, the pastor preaching and the people following him as their leader.

(3) To organize the membership of the Church, especially the most religious of them, into prayer circles, pledged to pray daily and to work diligently for a revival until it comes.

2. We earnestly beg that during the month of May, or as near thereto as possible, sermons be preached in every congregation on Tithing or Christian Stewardship, with special reference to such Scriptures as Malachi iii:8-11; I Cor. xvi:1, 2; and II Cor. viii:13, 14.

3. We request that this paper be read to each congregation, and that a copy be placed in the hands of every official member, including the officers of the Leagues, Missionary Societies and Sunday schools, as well as stewards.

DR. AND MRS. HAMILL'S TOUR OF SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES—AN APPRECIATION.

To have the skilled service of Dr. and Mrs. Hamill, of Nashville, Tenn., for two weeks is a rare and distinguished privilege, and yet this was our pleasure on our recent round of District Sunday School Institutes. Bringing to us many years of specializing, they unstintingly gave of their best, and two more loyal, faithful, and enthusiastic Southern Methodists it would be hard to find. While none of their work was mediocre and all was well prepared and interestingly delivered, Mrs. Hamill's address on "The Call of the Child," and Dr. Hamill's on "Wanted—Men," reached the high-water mark, both being well thought out, thoroughly planned, and delivered with life and force. They won all hearts, and personally we feel very much drawn to them and shall ever remember with appreciation this faithful service of love that was so generously laid upon the altars of our Louisiana Methodism. And while we were disappointed somewhat in the out-of-town attendance upon these institutes, we believe now and when we started, that the work of these two weeks will mark an epoch in our Sunday school life. With the others who enjoyed their labors, the writer feels that he himself has a more comprehensive view of his work in the Sunday school field than before, and shall endeavor to use his better equipment for rendering a more efficient service. Let us hope for the day when these two specialists shall be multiplied many fold in our Church, and that institutes among Sunday school teachers shall become all but as common as among our day school teachers. "Let the whole line advance," and let Louisiana keep far toward the front in the forward march.

P. O. LOWREY,

Field Secretary, Louisiana Conference
Sunday School Board.

A VISIT TO GRENADA COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Meek: My husband and I visited our two daughters in Grenada College on Easter Sunday. We heard three fine sermons while in Grenada—one at 11 a. m., one at 4 p. m., and one at the evening hour. Brother Hall is a most excellent preacher and must be doing a good work. We found the college girls all well and in good spirits. Brother Countiss and his family are certainly choice people. He is the right man in the right place. We were delighted with the college faculty and all whom we met at the institution. I desire to say to those who have girls to educate, send them to Grenada College. They will there have good table fare, careful attention, and the best of treatment in every way. To say that we greatly enjoyed our visit, very inadequately expresses our feelings. We hope to have the pleasure of going again some day. I trust that Brother and Sister Countiss may be spared for many years to continue their noble work.

MRS. W. C. CHANNELL,

Clayton, Miss.

A CHANGE IN THE WHITWORTH FACULTY.

After thirteen years of great service at Whitworth College, Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, Dean of the Faculty of that institution, has been named as one of the Missionary Secretaries in connection with our woman's work, and has signified her acceptance of that position, though she will not go to Nashville until after the close of the present school term. No better selection for the place to which she has been called could have been made. She will long be held in grateful remembrance by the teachers and students of Whitworth, who will give her up with not a little reluctance. We feel, however, that the College is most fortunate in securing as Mrs. Lipscomb's successor Miss Janie H. Drake, who for the past two years has been the Lady Principal of Sullins College at Bristol, Va. Miss Drake was educated at the Woman's College of Baltimore. She formerly rendered valuable service at Whitworth for nine years as teacher of English and resigned about two years ago. She will now return to her college home to assume greater responsibilities. The many friends of Whitworth College, while regretting the loss of Mrs. Lipscomb, will rejoice to know that Miss Drake will again have a place in the Faculty of this institution.

THE RAINBOW FAIRIES.

Two little clouds one April day
Went flying through the sky.
They went so fast they bumped their heads
And both began to cry.

Old Father Sun looked out and said,
"Oh! never mind, my dears,
I'll send my little fairy folk
To dry your falling tears."

One fairy came in violet,
And one in indigo.
In blue, green, yellow, orange, red—
They made a pretty row.

They wiped the cloud tears all away,
And then, from out the sky,
Upon a line the sunbeams made,
They hung their gowns to dry.

THE RAINY DIARY.

Mabel was looking over her diary for the old year. Suddenly she exclaimed, "What a rainy year last year must have been, mother! It seems as if my diary just overflows with rain, rain, rain. Hear this: 'A rainy day,' 'More rain,' 'Stormed all day,' 'A shut-in day, on account of rain,' 'Showers,' 'Cold rain,' 'Rain and slush.' So it goes. Isn't it funny? And yet it doesn't seem to have been such a stormy year, as I look back."

"Have you found any reference at all to sunny weather in your diary, Mabel?" asked her mother. "No-o. I can't say that I have," replied the little girl, hesitatingly.

"You see, you have taken all the pleasant days for granted, dear," said her mother, smilingly. "You don't mention the sunny days, but when there comes an occasional day of rain, you are careful to enter a complaint in your diary. Is that quite fair?"

"No, no—of course not!" cried Mabel. "But, really, I never thought of it in that way. I see now that the reason why I mentioned the rainy days was because they came so rarely, and the sunny days came so regularly that I never thought to speak of them."

"There is something for you to bear in mind, dear," her mother reminded her. "In just the same way we take our innumerable daily blessings for granted, but when anything goes wrong, what a cry of complaint we raise! There may be no more than half a day of showers in a fortnight of sunshine, but it goes into our hook of memory, whereas all the sunny days get not a line of mention. It is a good thing for us to think of, dear, when we are tempted to grumble or find fault."—The Wellspring.

STRIKING FIRE.

"Wonder who first thought out a match in his head?" asked Billy, who always liked to start at the beginning of things. "It's interesting to me to find out who did things first, or who made 'em first."

The professor beamed. "That is something that most thinkers find interesting, Billy," said he. "And you'll find that the early history of 'making or striking fire' is a right remarkable one. Away back in very early times fire was obtained by rubbing two pieces of stick together very rapidly. This took time, and patience, too, let me tell you, for a very few tiny sparks meant aching elbows!"

"The next thing was the use of steel and flint, with a little tinder box to help the sparks along. This, too, was a long performance, and I will tell you the origin of that slang expression so often used when people pay a very short call, 'You must have come for a chunk of fire.' In the early times in this country people often walked a mile or more to get a few hot coals to start a fire with, finding that way much more speedy than to patiently rub away on the steel and flint, or on two sticks.

"The first matches were not much better than the tinder box and flint and steel, for they were made to use with that primitive fire outfit. They were really nothing but little sticks dipped in sulphur, and would light more quickly than ordinary wood when applied to the spark in the tinder box. These were called brimstone sticks.

"In 1829, or about then, one John Walker, a chemist in Stockton-on-Tees, made a wonderful discovery. He found that sticks would ignite if drawn over a rough surface after having previously been dipped in a mixture of phosphorus and chlorate of potash. Many queer things for striking a light came in vogue about this time, one of them being a bottle containing an acid of some sort. Into this mixture slim pieces of pine wood were dipped and at once ignited.

"It was not until about 1833 that matches were manufactured on a large scale. They have grown at a rate that is astonishing, for from the few made by John Walker, less than a century ago, has come the remarkable record of a match factory in the United States which claims to turn out one thousand gross boxes each day, while another firm claims to make eighteen million matches in the same length of time."

"I tell you what, that's going some!" said Billy, his eyes bulging. "I think they'd better buy a forest and be done with it."

The professor chuckled. "The match factories use an amount of wood that is beyond belief," he said, "for they have to cut all the matches the way the grain of the wood runs, you know, otherwise they would break all to pieces and be of no use at all."

"But what becomes of them?" demanded practical Billy. "I don't see what happens to so many of the things."

Again the professor chuckled. "There are thirty-five million and seven hundred thousand matches used in this country alone each day, Billy; and that comes to a cost of over three thousand dollars. So, you see, even the smallest things about us begin to mount up when we find out a few facts about them."

"Queer, isn't it?" mused Billy. "But everything we run across, no matter how little it is, is interesting when we begin to study it up."

"Just so," answered the professor. "Just so, my boy."—Harriet Hobson Dougherty, in "Baptist Boys and Girls."

MY FIRST ROUND.

Some days after Conference I found myself unexpectedly made Presiding Elder of the Newton District. I began at Laurel, where Dr. Weems and Brothers Black and McClellan had been returned. Three quarterly conferences and two sermons in one day made up my first attack upon my new job. Dr. Weems had his board of stewards on hand without a single absentee. Brother Black was full of plans and hopefulness. Brother McClellan, whose field is rather a hard one, was sure of success. I went from Laurel encouraged. They are doing things there.

At Pachuta, Brother C. H. Ellis and his people were mutually pleased. This was another post-cabinet appointment. An effort to reduce the salary here resulted in an increased assessment.

At Homewood on the Rose Hill charge a fine congregation greeted the Presiding Elder on Friday, and the quarterly conference was delightful. Brother Vickers and his people seemed a sort of mutual admiration society. Homewood is a new congregation worshipping in a neat new house.

Brother W. A. Hayes, elegant, scholarly, and energetic, had wrought well at Bay Springs, and was planning to do still better. Everything on this quarterly meeting occasion went on as smoothly as a May morning.

Two days with Brother C. C. Evans at Union only increased the glow of the year's outlook for me. At Louin, however, the skies clouded a bit. Brother C. H. Strait, whose name misrepresents him, for he is in no sense narrow, had been seriously hindered by floods and overwork. He is trying to organize a new charge and go to school too.

Crowded on Sunday into a recitation room of the public school building, we had the communion under trying conditions. Yet, less than a block away two Baptist churches stood with empty pulpits and closed doors. Why two Baptist churches of "the same faith and order" in this little village?

A fine quarterly meeting, a happy new pastor and a pleased people made Brother C. C. Griffin and myself joyful. It was Friday at old Shiloh, where the great camp meetings are still held each year; and after a pleasant night in the parsonage, Griffin and I drove over a muddy road to Polkville for the Trenton quarterly conference. W. H. Young, with his charming young wife and pretty little Clarice behind the white ponies, met us, and we had a great time there. The prospects were never better for this young preacher and for this charge. These fine young people in the Trenton parsonage are very near to my heart. They are worthy.

A drive with Brother Geo. P. Fikes over an atrocious road made of mud and fence rails, eight miles from Philadelphia, brought us to Sandtown—a hill of rocks, a little sand, and no town at all. Why the name? A large audience—and it was Friday—a splendid "dinner on the ground" (it was really on a table), a well attended quarterly conference, and a drive back through the rain, made up my first visit to the Neshoba charge. Brother Fikes' uncomfortable parsonage and heavy work through bad weather and over worse roads, have brought him very near to death's door. I am greatly concerned for this fine and useful young preacher. He is still withheld from his work.

Wiley Ferguson, whom everybody knows and loves, is doing the best work of his life at Philadelphia. With such laymen as George Mars, T. A. Holloman, Austin McLendon, and others whose names I do not know so well, his success is easily understood. The representative Methodist clergy known at Philadelphia reads: Ferguson, Fikes, Freney, and Featherstun—four F's; and these four "are at one."

Eighteen miles on horseback through a sea of mud, a fine congregation, a splendid quarterly conference, the beaming faces of Pastor Ormond and his wife, and the satisfied attitude of "Bill" Weems and the other stewards, are the memories of my Friday trip to Homewood.

At Forest, A. M. Broadfoot is overworked. He does everything laid upon a Methodist preacher in charge, and does it well; but the burden he is carrying on that large and exacting charge is too heavy for any man. It is his fourth year.

Editorial.

SOME CHURCH STATISTICS.

(This editorial appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of July 18, 1912, and is reproduced by special request.)

A correspondent asks us to give the relative strength of the several religious denominations in Mississippi. This cannot be done with exactness up to the present date because late figures for all the Churches are not available. The best we can do is to take as a basis the Government statistics collected in 1906 and issued from Washington in 1909. They show that there were then in the State of Mississippi a total church membership of 657,831; of these 358,078, considerably more than half, were colored. The strength of the leading denominations was set down as follows: Baptist, 371,518; Methodist, 212,105; Presbyterian (including Cumberland), 22,471; Disciples (Campbellites), 9,864; Protestant Episcopal, 5,704; Roman Catholic, 28,576. Of the 371,518 Baptists, 240,892 were negroes, and 130,626 were whites. Of the Methodists approximately half were negroes, leaving a white membership of about 105,000. The white membership of the other leading Churches amounted to 63,127, the total in the State, barring the Baptists, being slightly less than 170,000, and including them, slightly less than 300,000. Two-thirds of the colored church members were in the Baptist fold, and it was to them chiefly that the Baptists owed their large lead.

The numbers of white Baptists and Methodists in Mississippi are probably not far from equal. The two white Conferences of the Southern Methodist Church in the State show an actually enumerated membership of about 110,000; to this must be added the whites in the Methodist Protestant, the Congregational Methodist and the Methodist Episcopal Churches. The Baptist claims as to numerical strength are larger than are those of the Methodists, but because of their better facilities for gathering them, the statistics of the latter are considered more reliable. No Methodist Church is ever without a pastor, and its membership roll is gone carefully over every year and an accurate report made as to any changes that have taken place. But Baptist congregations are frequently unshepherded and their system does not make it possible for them to obtain authentic reports so easily. Statisticians have frequently complimented the Methodist bodies upon the fullness and up-to-dateness of their statistical tables. No mean test of the relative strength of the two denominations is that furnished by the State colleges, where fully as many Methodist as Baptist students can nearly always be found, and often more. (Dr. George Summey, one of the editors of the Presbyterian of the South and an able minister of wide observation, in the issue of his paper bearing date of Feb. 26, 1913, says: "The statistics of Baptists are, we think, very little to be depended upon. In our efforts to obtain figures from them we have found that their numbers are in many cases little more than estimates.")

In the United States the Methodist denomination easily stands first among the Protestant bodies, both in numbers and resources. All the reputable authorities unite in crediting it with the largest membership. The Government Bulletin, from which we have been quoting, shows that in 1906 the Baptists owned in the United States property to the amount of $139,842,656, and the Methodists to the amount of $229,450,996; that the seating capacity of the Baptist churches was 15,702,712, and that of the Methodist churches 17,053,392; that the Baptists had in their Sunday schools 2,898,914, and the Methodists 4,472,930.

We give these figures not because of any disposition to parade the great strength of our denomination, but because we have been asked to do so in view of extravagant statements made by others. In our judgment, numbers and material possessions are not the things most to be prized and relied upon by a branch of the Church of Christ. Far more important is it that it should hold and teach the truth in its purity, and faithfully illustrate the spirit of our ascended Lord. Better a Glendon's band with the Holy Ghost in their hearts and their hands busy in unselfish service, than a vast multitude dominated by worldly sentiments and Christians only in name.

CONCERNING THE ADVOCATE.

Not since our connection with the Advocate have we been so pressed for space as we have been for the past few weeks. Many things that the Editor has been anxious to discuss he has had to pass over because of the crowded condition of our columns. At times we have had to carry over news items and quite a number of personals for the reason that it was absolutely impossible to find a place for them. In one sense this situation is encouraging, since it undoubtedly shows that the influence of our paper is widening and that it is commanding increasing attention from our constituency and the general public.

In view, however, of the demands which are being constantly made upon us for a hearing, we hope that those who have occasion to send us communications will compress them into as few words as possible. We desire this statement to apply especially to those who feel moved to speak in the interest of special causes committed to their hands. For instance, if one desires to stir up his Conference on the subject of Education, or Missions, or Church extension, we respectfully submit that he needs to do something else besides write the Advocate full of platitudes such as have been appearing in it, from time to time, for years. Of course, we are glad to carry brief notices and statements which convey needed information to the workers, but we do not want long drawn-out articles covering a whole or two-thirds of a page. We do not believe that such prolixity is the best way to help any cause. The thing to do is to write more briefly, and if necessary, to write oftener. We try ourself to set a good example in this respect and seldom write an editorial more than a column and a half or two columns long, and usually we make them much shorter than this. Boil down what you have to say, brethren, and you will have more readers, a larger number who wish to write will get an opportunity to express themselves, and the Conference organ will contain a greater variety of matter and grow to be much more interesting.

One of the greatest hindrances to making a live and popular church paper is that the editor does not have a free hand in making up its table of contents, but is forced, in order to avoid being misunderstood, to publish matter which he would not think of doing if he were in charge of an independent journal. In other words, he knows that in putting in certain articles he is hurting his paper, but under the circumstances he simply cannot help it. One reason why the Northern Methodist publications are so far superior to ours is that they have managed in some way to get rid of the necessity of carrying so much of this kind of copy. And our press will also have to attain unto a similar emancipation if we are ever to issue periodicals that are creditable and which are eagerly sought after by our people.

A FLASH-LIGHT FROM THE NORTH.

In an effort to bolster up the cause to which it is consecrated, The Laity Advocate, it seems, called upon Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer of Chicago to shed some light on the issues involved. The noted lady replied in a communication that was very commonplace, with the exception of the following remarkable statement: "The small number of women delegates in the last General Conference is no indication of a lack of interest or lost ground. The explanation may in part be in the fact that men seem to desire the honor more, and are more skilled in methods of obtaining election than women."

We were not aware that the Methodist Episcopal Church had so degenerated that the methods of politicians were brought into use in electing delegates to the General Conference, and that one's chance for a seat in that body depends so largely upon the extent to which one is skillful as a manipulator. We refuse to believe that any such state of affairs exists among our fellow-Methodists of the North, the opinion of Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer to the contrary notwithstanding. If the Editors of The Laity Advocate think that the splendid men and women of Southern Methodism can be influenced by one who has such a spirit as thus to reflect upon the gentlemen of her own denomination, we predict that they will find that they are very much mistaken when our people have an opportunity to express themselves.

AN ADMIRABLE SELECTION.

The election of Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, of Whitworth College, to the position of Home Base Secretary of our Woman's Work, was, in our judgment, a wise choice. We will not refer to the distinction which has come to Sister Lipscomb as an honor, though such it undoubtedly is; we prefer to speak of it as a call to larger service. And having known her for years, we have no hesitancy in saying that, unless she should in some way be providentially hindered, she will give a good account of herself in this new and responsible field of work. When she takes up her new duties, she will be followed by the prayers of her host of friends in Mississippi, who will never cease to be interested in her, and who will ever claim her as a product of the Methodism of their State.

THE MISSISSIPPI LEVEE BREAKS.

On last Monday morning the levee on the east side of the Mississippi River broke near Mayersville, Miss. This crevasse will probably inundate the southern end of Washington County, the whole of Issaquena and Sharkey Counties, and the entire Delta part of Warren County. Though there are not a great many white people in this territory, it is thickly settled with negroes, and there will likely be considerable destitution and suffering. We suggest that our people in Mississippi take offerings for the needy in the flood-stricken section at once, and correspond with Rev. T. W. Adams, P. E. of the Port Gibson District, at Lorman, Miss., and Rev. H. S. Spragins, P. E. of the Greenville District, at Greenville, Miss., as to how the money may best be applied. We should count it a privilege to give to the unfortunate when thus overtaken by calamity.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. J. W. Lee, of St. Louis, was called to New York last week to attend the funeral of a friend. In a letter written to the Editor on April 17, from the great metropolis, the Doctor stated that he expected to leave for home on that day.

Rev. J. H. Holder, of Okolona, Miss., spent last week in Winona, Miss., assisting in a meeting.

Before leaving home he forwarded to the Publisher several subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend him our hearty thanks.

Rev. H. M. Young, our pastor at Coahoma, Miss., undeterred by the disturbing influences of the high water, secured and sent us last week a club of fifteen subscribers from his charge. He serves an excellent people and is doing a good work.

The Jackson (Miss.) Daily News of April 19 stated that Dr. W. F. Tillett, Dean of the Vanderbilt Theological Faculty, was expected to preach for the congregation of our First Church in that city last Sunday. The chief object of the Doctor's coming was said to be to pay a visit to Millsaps College.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, of Moscow, Miss., reports encouragingly of his work. He has recently organized a new Sunday school, and "is planning for, praying for, and expecting a revival throughout his charge." As he mingles with his people, he is presenting the claims of the Advocate with some success.

Rev. R. P. Goar, of Toccapola, Miss., sent us a few days since 3 renewals and 2 new subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Goar added: "I am doing all I can for our paper. I am having a great time up here. I find plenty to eat and plenty of work to do. I have made up to the present 177 pastoral visits."

From the classic city of Oxford, Miss., Brother J. F. Dooley sent us a club of 9 subscribers a few days since. We have a loyal and growing Methodism in this university town, where Rev. W. W. Mitchell is the popular pastor. We are grateful to Brother Dooley for looking after the interests of the Advocate in so effective a manner.

In sending us some names for our subscription files a few days since, Rev. W. E. Akin, of Bonita, La., closed his letter as follows: "The storm blew one of our churches down, and the possibility of overflow has paralyzed business; but the sun is shining and we are hoping that the floods will pass us by." We admire Brother Akin's optimism.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, sends us the following item of news: "The graduating class of our school this year is composed of four candidates for the degree of A. B. and nine candidates for the degree of M. E. L. The Commencement sermon will be preached on May 18 by Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Tenn."

In a business letter to our office, Rev. T. J. McCoy, of Shreveport, La., says: "Our church is in the beautiful subdivision of Shreveport known as Queensborough. We have received twenty-four members since Conference and every department of the work is growing. The contract for our new house of worship will be let this week, and we expect to be in it by July 1."

The Methodist and Baptist pastors of New Orleans have registered with the municipal authorities a vigorous protest against the proposal to permit the sale of intoxicating liquors within the limits of City Park. This action is timely, and should be given the enthusiastic endorsement and support of all the religious and moral people of the city.

Rev. J. F. Foster, the accomplished pastor of our church at DeRidder, La., spent last Thursday and Friday in New Orleans and favored us with an appreciated call. He came to the city to officiate at the wedding of his niece, Miss Cora A. Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Foster, which took place on the afternoon of April 17. Brother Foster was looking exceptionally well and spoke hopefully of the work of the Church in his section of the State.

Rev. F. R. Power, of Logansport, La., has brought us under obligations to him for 11 subscriptions to the Advocate, forwarded on April 15. Brother Power is located in the section of Louisiana where Protestantism and Methodism are strong, and he is achieving things worth while for the Master. We appreciate his kindness in including the Conference organ among the important interests of the Church which he is so diligent in looking after.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., writes as follows: "On Sunday, April 13, Bishop W. B. Murrah was in Mendenhall, and after preaching a masterly sermon at 11 a. m., he impressively dedicated our church. In the afternoon he told us of some of the impressions that he received during his recent travels in the Far East. It was a great day for Methodism in this community. The Bishop expressed himself as delighted with our town and people."

We were delighted on last Friday to receive a brief visit from Mr. Dunbar Rowland, of Jackson, Miss., the director of the Department of Archives and History of the State of Mississippi. He had been to Mobile to deliver an address on an important occasion and was passing through the Crescent City on his return trip home. Mr. Rowland is one of the best informed of Southern historians, and time passes all too rapidly when one is privileged to be in his company.

By special invitation Dr. W. C. Black will preach his sermon on "The Immortality of the Soul" at the Capitol Street Church of Jackson, Miss., on the second Sunday in May.

Rev. W. L. Doss has received 27 new members at Epworth Church, New Orleans, since Conference. The financial condition of the church is more satisfactory than it has been in several years.

Mr. John A. Stockwell, of Lake Charles, La., who will be one of our Church's pioneer missionaries to Africa, has been invited to participate in a public meeting in Dallas, Texas, during the meeting of the General Missionary Board in that city next month.

We are grateful to Dr. B. F. Jones, our esteemed pastor at Shubuta and Quitman, for a cordial invitation to attend the Meridian District Conference which will meet at the latter place on May 27. We dare say that the occasion will be one of much interest.

We are informed that our Church at Lexington, Miss., continues to prosper. Dr. H. G. Henderson, the pastor, is now delivering a series of Sunday evening discourses on "Bible Masterpieces." Bishop H. C. Morrison is expected to spend the third Sunday in May with this congregation.

The Louisiana State Sunday School Association is holding its annual convention in Alexandria this week. Mr. J. Van Carter, a brother of the wide-awake presiding elder of the Ruston District, Rev. Briscoe Carter, is the General Secretary of the Association and has prepared a fine program.

Last week at a general meeting of the members of the Algiers Church of New Orleans it was unanimously decided to undertake at once to raise the sum of $20,000 for a new church building. It is not the intention of the congregation to begin the building until the larger part of the money needed is in hand.

Remember the

GALLOWAY MEMORIAL DAY,

The Fourth Sunday of April, 1913.

The amount collected for the Galloway Memorial Fund in 1912 amounted to $482. Let the 1913 record read $2000.

Professor H. B. Hines, who is the Principal of the Rayne (La.) High School and a local elder in our Church, was in New Orleans last week in attendance upon the meeting of the State Teachers' Association. He paid the Advocate office an appreciated call, and gave a favorable report of the work of the Rayne congregation, of which Rev. John Sholars is the pastor.

Rev. Martin Hebert, writing from New Iberla, La., a few days since, enclosed in his letter several subscriptions from persons residing on Pecan Island. Among other things he said: "I was down there last week assisting Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir, of the Vermilion Circuit, in a meeting. He is doing a fine work at that point, and is held in high esteem by the people."

Mrs. Lily Meekins, the faithful City Missionary of New Orleans, has found two young ladies who are especially talented in music. They are unable to make progress toward a musical education because of not being able to pay the rent on a piano upon which to practice. Miss Meekins desires to communicate with any person who has a piano that is being stored, or that is not being used, who is willing to allow the two young ladies the free use of it.

One of the most interesting congregations in New Orleans is that known as the St. Mark's Italian Church. It was organized last October, and since that time there have been 70 accessions to the Church, 20 of whom have taken their church certificates and returned to Italy. Rev. W. E. Thomas, the pastor of Second Church, is also the shepherd of this Italian flock. He says that there is a fine prospect of building up a large congregation from among the sons of Italy in New Orleans.

The following brethren, to whom we have not made acknowledgment elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. J. M. Brown, Haughton, La., 5 (from Alberta); Rev. J. Mark Gunn, Crawford, Miss., 6; Rev. W. H. Mounger, Coldwater, Miss., 3; Rev. A. F. Moore, Eudora, Miss., 5 (from the Lake Cormorant and Hines charge); Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Hermanville, Miss., 5; Rev. J. O. Bennett, Gibsland, La., 11; Rev. J. M. Massey, Centerville, Miss., 8, (from the Wilkinson charge).

In a note to our office Rev. J. W. Ward, our beloved pastor at Friar's Point, Miss., says: "The work moves along smoothly here in spite of the exceedingly high water. The river at this place has gone above the record of last year, and now stands fifteen or sixteen feet higher than the street. Six water is all over the town." This is a season of great anxiety with our people in the Mississippi River Valley, but we earnestly pray that a favoring Providence may spare them a repetition of the disasters of last year.

Rev. W. D. Dominick, of Prentiss, Miss., writes: "Our church here is doing well. The officials of the Prentiss Church are well organized, and have adopted the monthly envelope system in the management of their finances. We are making progress along all lines." Brother Dominick, who has long been known in our office as one of the Advocate's best friends, is making a personal canvass in its behalf, with gratifying results. Such a canvass by the pastor rarely fails to bring substantial returns.

In sending us some subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. J. E. Craig, of Chestnut, La., refers to his work as follows: "I came on January 1 to this charge, which has about 125 members, and I did not find a single family that was taking the Advocate. I have succeeded in introducing it into some homes, and I hope to be able to get it into many others. I think our work is progressing favorably." We assure Brother Craig that we highly appreciate his efforts to extend the circulation of our paper, and we trust that he will find it an increasingly valuable assistant in his present field of labor.

Two years ago Rev. T. V. Peters was assigned to the St. Tammany Circuit, which at that time was a vast stretch of territory in St. Tammany Parish, La., that was practically unoccupied by our Church. Brother Peters has scarcely rested day or night since going there and now has fifteen regular preaching places. The St. Tammany charge will in all probability be divided at the next session of the Louisiana Conference and its fifteen appointments organized into two circuits and a part of a third circuit. Brother Peters is to be congratulated on the success he has achieved in this important field.

Rev. L. I. McCain, our pastor at Bogalusa, La., has a grip on the hearts of his people second to no other pastor in the New Orleans District. And he is not alone in his popularity, for his charming wife is the trusted companion of the young people of the church. There is little wonder that the Bogalusa church doubled in membership last year and is now able to report its Conference collections in hand and every interest of the Church prospering, when there is at the helm such devoted leaders as are Brother and Sister McCain. This church is now in the midst of a revival meeting in which Rev. G. S. Harmon, of Meridian, Miss., is doing the preaching.

Rev. C. T. Barton, who is well known in North Mississippi, is having a most successful pastorate at Hornsby Falls, West Va. The revival spirit is abroad in his charge, and he has had since the last session of his Conference 35 conversions, 26 reclamations, and 12 additions to the Church. He has a Missionary Committee in every congregation, a considerable part of the connectional claims has been secured, and some needed repairs have been made on the parsonage. We are pleased to note the fruitfulness of the labors of this zealous young itinerant.

We are indebted to Rev. J. O. Bennett for the following good report from his work: "Things are progressing favorably and we are hopeful of a fruitful year on the Gibsland charge. Our second quarterly conference was held last Tuesday, April 15. Our presiding elder, Rev. Briscoe Carter, was with us and gave us a splendid sermon on "Divine Providence." Rev. E. K. Means, our popular pastor at Arcadia, La., was also present and preached a fine sermon in the afternoon. It was good to be there. You are giving us a most excellent paper, and our people who read it like it very much."

We are much gratified to learn of the flourishing condition of our church at Leland, Miss., which is one of the few points in the Yazoo Delta where Methodism has had a hard struggle. The congregations are reported to be good; there is an average attendance of about 30 at prayer meeting; the stewards are attentive to their work, and as a result the finances are keeping up well. Rev. L. W. Cain, the pastor of this flock, states that Rev. H. S. Spragins, who was placed in charge of the Greenville District last December, is already measuring up to a high standard of excellence as a presiding elder.

Rev. H. W. Van Hook, the Principal of the Seashore Training School, was in New Orleans last Friday and gave us the pleasure of his genial presence in our sanctum for a brief season. He had been to Centerville, Miss., and Bogalusa, La., to tell the Port Gibson and New Orleans District Conferences of his work, and was passing through the city en route home. The Seashore Training School will close its first year on June 8 and 9. The session has been a remarkably successful one, between 85 and 90 pupils (from various States) having been enrolled and all expenses having been very nearly met. Brother Van Hook is enthusiastic over the outlook for this young institution.

Mrs. REBECCA VALLERY was born in the month of January, 1845, and departed this life March 14, 1913, at her home in Natchitoches. She was buried in the American Cemetery by the pastor of the Methodist Church. She was converted many years ago, and she has since lived a consistent Christian life. She was the mother of five sons and three daughters. She also leaves a brother, Mr. J. B. Gibson of Alexandria, La., and a host of friends to mourn her departure. To her son in the ministry, Rev. E. J. Vallery, pastor of the Methodist Church in Pineville, La., she expressed no fear of the end. And of her he writes: "She died in the faith, and we know that since she was faithful here, she is happy up yonder." So her loved ones sorrow, but not "as others which have no hope."
R. H. HARPER.

I write this in loving memory of THELMA SHELBY, who passed from earth to heaven April 4, 1913. She had just reached the tender age of fifteen. All that loving hands and medical skill could do was done to rescue the little darling from the cold hand of death, but without avail. God loved her and took her to himself. Her father died when she was three years old; since then she had been a sweet care and a great comfort to her widowed mother. She was a worthy member of the Methodist Church. Dear mother, brothers and sisters, grieve not, but think of the beautiful home made ready by our Savior, in which Thelma is now forever safe. We have the blissful hope that we shall meet her in that happy land where there is no sorrow and no farewell words are ever spoken. May God bless and comfort the sorrowing loved ones.
AUNT MATTIE.
Hermanville, Miss.

S. A. HILTON was born in Simpson County, Miss., April 29, 1851, and moved to Louisiana in 1875 and settled in De Soto Parish near Logansport, La. Brother Hilton was born into the spiritual kingdom when he was only ten years old, and united with the M. E. Church, South, of which he was a faithful and true member until the day of his death. Brother Hilton was the first member of the Bethel Church, he and his wife, with a few others, becoming the charter members of this church about 25 years ago. His death occurred on December 19, 1912. He was sick only a few moments with heart failure, when he fell asleep. His funeral was preached by Rev. H. J. Boltz, who had been his pastor for the past two years. After the preaching of the funeral the Masons laid his body to rest in the Bethel Cemetery to await the final resurrection. He was a loyal citizen, a good husband and father, and a genuine Christian. While we mourn his loss we humbly bow in submission to the will of God, who doeth all things well, realizing that our loss is Heaven's gain.
F. R. POWER.

CHARLES HARLEIGH BLACK, son of Rev. M. M. Black and Mrs. Lillian Black, was born July 12, 1907, and died at Laurel, Miss., Feb. 3, 1913. This little life, though so short when measured by years, meant much to those who knew and loved him. A delicate child, and of a clinging, affectionate disposition, he especially endeared himself to those who were brought into close association with him, and who miss him so sorely, now that he has gone away. The end came as the result of a sad accident, followed by two weeks of intense suffering so patiently and beautifully borne as to be a lesson to those who watched beside him. Another of the little ones so dear to our Lord has gone to be with the Savior in the heavenly fold, where no foe can enter. There little Charles is forever safe from sin and temptation, and there no sorrow nor pain shall ever touch him. To those who have loved him and lost him for a little while, the promise of the Master is given: "What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." KATE A. DRAKE.

On March 2, 1913, in the Holmesville (Miss.) cemetery, all that was mortal of Brother RANKIN ELLZEY was laid to rest amid a multitude of sorrowing relatives and friends. He was born near Holmesville, Pike County, Miss., Nov. 10, 1828, and died at McComb City, Miss., March 1, 1913. He was married Dec. 22, 1853. His wife preceded him to glory about one year. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1855 and was a member at Holmesville when he died. The following are the words of a devoted son: "He has lived a consecrated Christian life for the last 25 years, never missing a single church service if he was able to go. He always expressed himself as being ready to meet his God. The tears came unbidden as we beheld his old, worn, and faded Bible that he asked me to read when we had prayer. Who could doubt but that this Book had been, indeed, a light unto his path and a lamp unto his feet? I shall always treasure highly the sacred and precious moments spent with him just before he crossed the river, and some glad, good day I expect to see him again. May the blessings of the Lord (according to Numbers 6:24-26) be upon all his bereaved relatives and friends."
J. A. WELLS.

W. J. BELL died at Clinton, Miss., Oct. 8, 1912, in the eighty-first year of his age. As this message was sent out to the world many hearts were saddened, for he numbered his friends by the multitude, and had touched many lives during the period of his long and useful career. A man without ostentation, he went, without the blowing of trumpets, about the performance of every Christian duty. Putting self into the background, he successfully carried forward many church enterprises. Many times was he elected to represent his Church in both the District and Annual Conferences, and a more conscientious delegate was never admitted into the councils of the Church. Living at Clinton, Miss., where the Church of his choice has comparatively few members, he was always a loyal Methodist, a true supporter of every claim of the Church, and a wise counselor of the pastor. There were no clouds in the spiritual sky when he was called into the great beyond. The preparation for the going had been made many years, and there was a sublime confidence in God through Christ. The writer, then his pastor, was assisted in the funeral service by Rev. John L. Johnson, D. D., of the Baptist Church and a long-time friend of Brother Bell. From his address we quote the following: "Soon after I came to Clinton to live I first met our friend on the street, and was introduced to him as 'Brother Bell.' I was not told what denomination he belonged to, but took him then with his honest face and modest bearing as my brother, and so I have kept him ever since. That is a good enough title so long as a brother's life is a brotherly life." In his young manhood he joined the Confederate Army and for four years had part in that unequal strife to which his country was called. The war over, Brother Bell moved to Clinton. Here, as husband and father, as citizen and neighbor and friend, as Christian and church goer, he has kept the faith and finished the course. For him death is swallowed up in victory—it is the day of his triumph and coronation. We pray that the mantle of this ascended brother may fall on each of those nearest him, and that God may bless the sorrowing hearts.

Tidings From the Field

Houma, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: I began a meeting here in town about a week ago. I received 7 into the Church last night; three of them were Syrians. Brother Hebert preached for me from Tuesday until Sunday night. I shall continue the meeting this week, doing the preaching myself. I had 31 men in my Bible class yesterday.

Yours, C. V. BREITHAUPT.

April 14, 1913.

West, Miss.

We had a good day at Hebron last Sunday (April 6). We organized a Sunday school there, and I secured an assessment for the Conference benevolences upon that church except $8.25, and I think that will be paid. We have recently made some good repairs upon our parsonage at West. The work generally is moving on nicely. We have a good prayer meeting at West, which is well attended. There are four Sunday schools in the charge. I think the outlook is quite promising. I am sending you herein four subscribers to the Advocate.—W. A. Clark.

Hollandale, Miss.

I write to give you some idea of the condition of our work here. Brother L. W. Cain has infused new life into things since he came to us. Under his wise counsel and leadership, the church has been revived and strengthened, and the attendance upon public worship has greatly improved. In every service there seems to be an encouraging interest and enthusiasm. Our Sunday school is steadily growing. Our Bible class has grown to great proportions, and is still increasing every Sabbath. We are now using the absentee-card system which is working well. We expect to prepare a splendid program for Children's Day and also for a Mother's Day which we shall celebrate at a favorable time. We want to make these days an inspiration to all Hollandale. Our pastor is lending us all possible aid in consummating our plans, and, with his capable assistance, we are expecting to make progress along all lines during the year.—J. D. White.

Vermillion (La.) Charge.

At Monroe, in December, 1912, Pecan Island was added to this charge. On Saturday, March 22, 1913, assisted by that ever faithful and successful French Missionary, Brother Martin Hebert, we began a revival meeting on this little island, situated in the extreme southern part of Vermillion Parish. It is south of White Lake, is entirely surrounded by marshes, is without any railroad or telephone connection, and has mail coming but once a week. To reach the island one must travel about 50 miles by water in a motor boat. In this isolated place, and with as good people as it has ever been our privilege to work, we began the battle against sin and unrighteousness and continued until March 30. Brother Hebert's preaching was strong, instructive, edifying, and spiritual, and our labors were not in vain. We closed with the church membership greatly revived and 15 accessions to the Church—9 by the assumption of vows and 6 by baptism. We also secured a club of subscribers for the Advocate. Pecan Island has some faithful Christian workers, and the interest was good from start to finish. The attendance was excellent. We were never treated better. We closed the meeting on Sunday at 11 o'clock, and at 2 p. m., March 30, we left for home, while a large crowd assembled at the landing to see us off and bid us good-by. J. H. HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

Logansport, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: As you know, this is my first year on the Logansport charge. But I found a man had been here before the writer was. Rev. Henry T. Young served this charge two years and was loved and esteemed very highly by the people. Our second quarterly conference was held on April 12, with Rev. Paul M. Brown, presiding elder, in the chair. Every church in the charge was represented. The charge is not the same as it was last year, Keatchie having been taken off and added to Greenwood charge, and Bethel having been added to the Logansport charge. While Bethel is assessed $25 less this year than Keatchie was last year, the charge as a whole is assessed about $40 more for presiding elder and pastor than it was last year. The presiding elder preached to a large congregation at Logansport, Sunday the 13th, at 11 o'clock, and again at 8 o'clock. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the close of the morning service. To say that Paul M. Brown is a good preacher would be putting it mildly, for he is indeed a great preacher. I am sending you a list of new subscribers and some that have renewed their subscription. This shows that I am not unmindful of the merits of the Christian Advocate. Brother Sinclair, one of the renewals, is in his 89th year. He has been taking the Advocate for 40 years and tells me that the paper is better now than it has been since he has been taking it.—F. R. Power.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Adopted by the Ebenezer, (Miss.) Quarterly Conference.

Whereas, Brother G. W. DARNELLE, one of the most worthy and efficient members of our body, has lately been called from the scenes of time to the scenes of eternity; therefore, be it Resolved by the quarterly conference of the Ebenezer charge:

1. That in his death both our body and the Church at large have sustained a great loss, and that we shall sadly miss him in the coming days.
2. That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to his bereaved wife and family, and pray that God may so bless them that they, together with their ascended loved one, may form an unbroken family in the glorious Beyond.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and also a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Lexington Advertiser.

A WAR WORTH WAGING.

In its triumphant fight for the improvement of public health New York has made a record that might well be copied by other cities, for in the space of forty-six years New York has more than doubled the average length of life of its citizens. An account of this great achievement, written by Richard Barry and entitled "A War Worth Waging," will appear in the May Century. It will tell how thousands of babies are saved by the "seventy-nine dispensaries of milk and medical knowledge;" how children that have learned sex hygiene in the public schools are educating their ignorant parents, and how humanitarian science is conquering typhoid and consumption.

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference met last Thursday morning in Bogalusa, La., with a fine attendance of ministers and laymen. Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder, announced that the session would end on the following day if the brethren were disposed to attend strictly to business. There was no delay, nor a minute idly spent. Among the items of business attended to were the following: Every pastoral charge was reported by its pastor or some delegated layman; the report of the missionary committee embracing recommendations that the Slidell and St. Tammany charges be re-arranged and made into four charges and that the Lower Coast country be formed into a mission, was adopted; Rayne Memorial Church was selected as the next place of meeting, and the following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: S. H. Meyer, Wm. Seidel, Frank Dutch, and J. M. Harle with Hon. B. D. Tally and Mr. P. O. Rosenstream as alternates.

Both the pastor, Rev. L. I. McCain, and the people of Bogalusa proved to be the last word in charming hospitality. The delegates were shown every consideration in the homes in which they were entertained, and were also shown every point of interest in the town, not the least of which was the Great Northern Lumber Company's magnificent plant, through which the members of the Conference were conducted by its competent manager, Mr. W. H. Sullivan, who is a loyal Methodist.

The preaching was done by Rev. H. R. Singleton and Dr. J. W. Moore, and both sermons were comforting messages, laden with spiritual truth. The song services were of a high order, and every preacher left Bogalusa favorably impressed with Brother McCain's fine chorus choir.

A. J. GEARHEARD, Sec'y.

AN EXCELLENT TRACT ON TITHING.

Dear Brother Meek: At our recent District Conference the writer was requested to give in the Advocate the address of Brother Cane's famous tracts on tithing. Send 15 cents in stamps to "Layman," 143 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., and get samples. These tracts are in convenient form for distribution. Our people should be thoroughly taught on this important Bible doctrine, and when they learn the duty of systematic paying, and giving to the Lord, then the finances of the Church will be solved, and the kingdom of Christ will receive a mighty impetus. The writer has circulated this literature for many years, and knows it to be the finest published.

THE PRESENT EDITOR AND HIS POLICIES ENDORSED.

At the session of the Port Gibson District Conference held at Centerville, Miss., April 16-18, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted and the Secretary was instructed to send a copy of the same to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication:

Resolved, first, That we greatly regret the inability of Dr. R. A. Meek, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, to attend this session of our District Conference.

Second—That we commend Dr. Meek's fidelity to the institutions of our Church, and his advocacy of the causes we have always held, and still hold dear, because we believe them to be in line with Bible teaching.

Third—That we pledge ourselves, as pastors of the twenty-three pastoral charges of the Port Gibson District, to make a faithful and earnest effort during the month of May to increase the subscription lists in our charges.

Fourth—That we, as a District Conference, urge the members of our Publishing Committee to do all in their power to hold Dr. Meek in editorial charge of the Advocate, and to do their best in some way to secure for him a more adequate salary. We assure them of our willingness to do what we can to make effective whatever plans they may adopt to achieve that end.

Signed: H. B. Watkins, T. B. Hollo-man.

PLACE IT WHERE IT WILL DO THE MOST GOOD.

To the Readers of the Advocate:

I have entered the Times-Democrat Contest from Dist. No. 2. My winning of any one of the 3 best prizes given in this city will enable me to purchase a Linotype Machine and secure a contract to keep it and myself busy. I feel that anyone who takes the Times-Democrat will get full value for his money, but I realize that no matter how hard I work, I cannot win without a friendly public support, and I take this means of soliciting it. Since entering I have realized that this contest proposition is a tough one, but I'm no quitter and I'm going to work hard and win—with your help.

Terms of subscription are as follows: (If you are already taking the paper, your renewal will help too, even for the Sunday edition only.)

Daily—$3.00, 3 months, 5,000 votes; $6.00, 6 months, 15,000 votes; $12.00, 1 year, 45,000 votes; $24.00, 2 years, 120,000 votes. REV. W. M. MCINTOSH IN OKLAHOMA.

The Scotch-Irish evangelist, W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, Miss., who has been preaching in Altus for two weeks, has captured the hearts of hundreds by his passionate devotion to Christ, his broad Irish sympathy and wit, his heart-stirring appeals and his untiring work. Between 250 and 300 have professed religion, several hundred have been up at different times for prayer and pledged themselves to support the meeting.

Mr. Anderson, the chorister, is the best leader ever seen in the city. He is a big-hearted, whole-souled Dutchman, and puts new life in the song service.

Dr. McIntosh is accompanied by his wife, who is one of the greatest soul winners in the work. The people will long remember Mrs. McIntosh for her untiring efforts to lead men and women to Christ.

Dr. McIntosh goes from here to Weatherford, Okla., for his next meeting. All the business houses, banks and offices are closing for the morning service.—The Altus (Okla.) Times.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. CAROLINE E. THOMPSON (nee Thompson) was born in North Alabama, March 21, 1835. In childhood she moved with her parents to Middle Tennessee; thence to North Mississippi, settling in Monroe County, where she spent the remainder of her long and useful life. She died on February 6, 1913. She was married on December 18, 1856, to James A. Thompson, and this union was blessed with 6 children, one son and five daughters. The daughters only are left to mourn their loss, the father and son having gone before. Sister Thompson was a good woman, and was loved by all who knew her. She gave her heart to God in early life, and joined the Methodist Church, of which she was a faithful and devoted member to the end. She was an everyday Christian, and, looking on the bright and sunny side of life, was full of hope and good cheer. It was an inspiration to be with her. She will be greatly missed at Old Greenbrier Church, of which she was a member so long. Death had no terrors for her, and she died as she had lived, trusting in God. Her remains were laid to rest beside her husband's at Greenbrier, to await the resurrection morning.

Her former pastor,
W. A. BOWLIN.

JELL-O ICE CREAM Powder

she can make the most delicious ice cream in ten minutes, freezing and all, at a cost of about one cent a dish—and never go near the stove.

Your grocer will tell you all about it, or you can get a book from the Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N.Y., if you will write them.

Grocers sell Jell-O Ice Cream Powder, 10 cents a package.

WEAK, COLD SPELLS.

Wilmington, N. C. — Mrs. Cora L. Ritter, of this place, says: "I used to have headaches, and blind, dizzy spells, and weak cold spells went all over me. I had different doctors, but they were unable to tell me what was wrong, so I began to take Cardui. I am now all right, in good health, and better than I have been for 10 years." Cardui is a remedy for women, which has been helping sick women for nearly a lifetime. You can absolutely rely upon it. Other people have done the testing, and you should profit by their experience. Cardui has benefited a million women. Why not you? Begin taking Cardui today.

It is authoritatively stated that there are only about 7000 saloons in all the Southern States, with 33,000,000 people. This is less than Chicago has. Forty-five million of the 90,000,000 people in the United States live in prohibition territory. Every State is organized against saloons, and there are more than 1000 special workers in the field.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

THE EAST MISSISSIPPI PRESBY-TERY.

A fine body of ministers and laymen belonging to the above-mentioned body are in session here in Pontotoc.
(Some of the readers of the Advocate will perhaps remember my article in regard to a meeting of another denomination held here some time ago.)
I have just heard a sermon from one of their preachers on the subject,
"Why I am a Presbyterian?" It was chiefly an attack upon the form of church government maintained by other Churches, especially the episcopal form. Among other things the speaker spoke of a Bishop as a high salaried boss. He said that a Methodist preacher fears the Bishop more than he fears his God. Now I want to say to my brethren in the ministry that I think it is high time we were expressing our minds concerning the polity as well as the doctrines of our Church. We are being grossly misrepresented all over the country and there are people who have little enough sense to believe these ignorant praters about matters of which they know nothing. We should inform our people in very clear language concerning all of the workings and doctrines of our Church.

This same brother also spoke of preaching at a Methodist church within the bounds of our Conference where he had to take a hoe and dig the dirt out of the church, and stated that the people said that he had preached more gospel than had been preached there since the war. We should be careful about allowing other preachers to use our churches.

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Abingdon, Va.—Mrs. Jennie McCall, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with female complaints for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering.
Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in $1 bottles.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Centerville, Miss.
Conference Press Superintendents:
Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

A Suggestion from the Louisiana Press Superintendent.

Some of the report blanks I had mourned as lost have been coming in since the Baton Rouge meeting. I have a most excellent paper used by the Bunkie Auxiliary and sent by Mrs. Haas. I wish all the women might read it, as some of them have done. The Mormon question seems to be stirring up interest in some places, and well it may. Our faithful friend, Mrs. Wynn of Crowley, reports for the auxiliary there, and they are "always at it." May their tribe increase!

I have been thinking and wondering if there is not some plan by which our Press Department may be improved and made more effective. For some reason the Bulletin is not the power for good that it ought to be. Some of our pastors' wives tell me that when the Corresponding Secretary is asked if she has received any literature, her reply invariably is, "Nothing but the Bulletin," and the subject is dismissed. Everybody knows, or ought to know, that there is valuable information in the Bulletin, and that it costs something to get it out into the hands of the Corresponding Secretary or Press Superintendent. It is a gift to be used and not hidden in a napkin. One president, who is a district secretary and gets the Bulletin regularly, told me that a good part of her monthly program was gotten out of the Bulletin. That gave me the idea that perhaps it should go to the President instead of to the Press Superintendent or Corresponding Secretary; then if she chooses to turn it over to some one else, she may do so; or she may use it as she thinks best. The President is the captain, and should command her army and make them use the ammunition furnished. If anybody objects to this plan, let her "speak now or forever hereafter hold her peace." Things have not been going in this department to suit me, and it is a self-evident proposition that a change is needed.

A. C. MCKINNEY.

Inhabane Mission.

This work was brought to our notice by receiving a copy of the Inhabane Christian Advocate, a publication devoted to maintaining the interest in the African work, and especially that in the district of Inhabane. It is published quarterly and contains bright, crisp articles, as well as some thrilling accounts of the work. Our Northern Methodist brethren are sharing this field with the Church of England and the Free Methodist Mission of North America. As our own Church contemplates taking up work in the Dark Continent, it is a matter of much interest to us to learn of the work being accomplished by others.

Where is Inhabane? Get out your maps, and you'll find it down on the southeastern coast of Africa. The district has 350 miles of coast line, and extends into the interior for 250 miles. A conservative estimation of its population places it at 3,000,000. To reach this vast throng of people there are 17 missionaries. Having this small force with which to work, they are striving to reach the people, and win their souls for the Savior of men who died for the black man as well as for the white man. The women are being taught the use of the sewing machine, and loom weaving will soon be an established industry.

sionaries, gives the following vivid description of traveling in Africa: "Traveling in Africa often presents a queer sight, and if a caravan out for a business trip were in any other country, the sight would be ridiculous in the extreme. As it is, even in its native country, the people of the neighborhood are often interested and enjoy the spectacle. Not long ago one of the missionaries wanted a change and decided to visit another station about ten miles away. She said that it took a whole caravan to move them. There were the carriers with the boxes, baskets, and suitcases; then the servants with the wraps, and refreshments, for they must rest a little by the way; and by far the larger part of the procession was still to follow. The lady herself was carried in a mashillo, a hammock swung on a pole and carried by two natives at a time, relieved every few minutes by two others. In this way it takes five relays to carry one mashillo. The oldest little girl was carried in a bed and the baby in her bath tub. It took considerable energy for this family of three to go ten miles."

There is much more of interest in this valuable little paper, but our space does not permit the quoting of more.

"Is it nothing to you, O ye Christians,
That Africa walks in the night?
That Christians at home deny them
The blessed gospel light?"

Is it nothing to you, O ye Christians,
Will ye say ye have naught to do?
Millions in Africa dying unsaved,
And is it nothing to you?"

Snap Shots from the Council Daily.

There are one million immigrants pouring in upon our land every year—two every minute.

The Negro is here ten millions strong, and it depends upon the white man whether he will be a good negro or a bad one.

Two and a half million children under sixteen years of age are slaving somewhere, instead of playing and studying.

Five and a half million women and girls over ten years of age are making a living, instead of having it made for them.

On Wednesday afternoon preceding the opening session of the Council a Workers' Conference was held, and was conducted by Mrs. Arch Trawick. The following facts were developed:

1. The development of the spiritual life through personal connection with Jesus Christ is the first necessity for a successful missionary woman.

2. The work of the Missionary Society needs definite prayer. To secure this definite prayer, there should be a definite interest for which to pray. To secure this definite prayer, it is suggested that the use of the daily prayer subject given in the Council Year Book be used.

3. Our possessions in the Foreign field are valued at $1,000,000. This represents the work of only one-tenth of the women of Southern Methodism.

4. One of the greatest needs of Korea is a system of day schools throughout the country.

5. Our most insistent demand in China is for our McTyeire School at Shanghai. Immediate improvements are needed. Native Chinese gentlemen have pledged to raise $60,000 to start the enlargement.

6. In our own land there are two

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss-Elizabeth Kilpatrick.
Remember Children's Day.

The Adult Classes of Rev. R. P. Neblett's fine Sunday school issued an artistic program for Adult Bible or Class Day and rendered the exercises in a fine manner. This school stands alongside of the very best in Mississippi.

Ero. W. W. Jones writes of fine Sunday school progress at Carrollton and North Carrollton, and a teacher's meeting at both places gives an explanation as to the reason for this. Six commodious class-rooms are being added to his church.

Mrs. J. H. Mitchell, the splendid leader of the Teachers' Meeting of First Church, Corinth, had a Bible Study contest at her hospitable home, March 26th. There were 75 questions given and the following teachers answered them all, as also did one member of the Young Men's Bible Class: Mr. J. A. Price, of the older men's class; Hon. Frank Worsham, of the Galloway Memorial Class; Mrs. R. M. Weaver, of the Young Women's Bible Class; and Prof. Puckett, of the Young Men's Bible Class. Each teacher brought a dish for the refreshments and an enthusiastic meeting resulted. The award was given to Mr. Price, and he fully deserved it, as he has been a life-long member of the Sunday school. Mrs. Mitchell is doing a great and highly appreciated work in Corinth.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Now is the time to observe Children's Day. Later the program may conflict with the close of the public schools, the weather will be hot, and some of the people will leave for the summer. The program for this year is on "Bible Boys and Girls," and is said to be the best that Mrs. Hamill has ever prepared. It should be ordered at once and put into the hands of a capable committee for preparation, and rendered without unnecessary delay.

Miss Cora Russell, from Tennessee, and a teacher in the public school, has organized a Teacher-training class in our Sunday school at Pelican, and thus is giving the church the benefit of her teaching talent. The best work that any trained teacher can do for the Sunday school is to train others to teach, and pastors and superintendents should ever be on the outlook for such leaders for Teacher-training classes. The only permanent way to keep the Sunday school supplied with teachers who are qualified to teach is to make them. The State is thus meeting its need through the Normal School.

Mr. J. H. Carter, the superintendent of our Carrollton Avenue Sunday school and the President of our New Orleans District Sunday School Conference, has been promoted from being the local cashier of the Cumberland Telephone Company to the Superintendency of the Tolls Department. Brother Carter is one of our truest and most efficient church workers, and the Company that employs him never had a more honorable and capable employee. We feel that the Methodist Church is honored in this recognition of his worth. We are glad that Brother Carter's center of operation will still be in New Orleans, where he will continue to render service to our Church.

Our Sunday school at Ponchatoula is making a forward move in instituting a Home Department, perfecting its Cradle Roll, organizing its Bible classes, building up its Teacher-training class, and instituting a system of grading and recognition for its scholars. The nice brick church, built only a few years ago under the pastorate of Brother F. N. Sweeney and containing four separate class rooms, has just been seated with as beautiful oak pews as can be found anywhere, at a cost of over $600, and a $500 organ has just been ordered. With a fine public school building, just completed, and a growing country around, the faithful working force here, led by an aggressive pastor, will no doubt soon have one of the best schools in this section.

At a recent Sunday school testimony meeting in New Orleans, one mother, whose children are filling honorable places in the Church, one son being a theological professor, said that the best work she ever did in the Sunday school was to bring her own children into its membership. This reminds us of the teaching that one who cares not for his own household is worse than an infidel. A mother's first field of missionary activity is to put her own children in training for service in the Church, and to bring them into loving fellowship with the Sunday school is one of the first steps to be taken. It indicates both a low state of piety and a loose system of discipline when the children of Christian parents are not regular attendants at Sunday school.

Before me, J. Frank Baker, a Notary Public in and for said state and county, personally appeared Mrs. Emma Stralls, who being duly sworn, deposes and says that on or about 15 years ago last April (1912) she contracted the disease known as pellagra and was treated without result by a number of physicians, got worse continually and was told by Dr. P., a practicing physician of Carbon Hill, Ala., that she could not be cured. On or about the first of May, 1912, she sent for Mr. G. P. Baughn to treat her (at that time was very low and weighed only 90 pounds), and after using said G. P. Baughn's treatment for about one month began to improve. She continued his treatment for five months when she was completely cured, is now well, and has no symptoms of pellagra. She now weighs 135 pounds.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Note carefully the report of the Treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference which appears on Page 12. It shows what the various charges have done toward helping the worn-out preachers and other claimants on the Conference Fund.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, the alert and energetic colporteur of the two Mississippi Conferences, wrote us a few days ago that he expected to attend the District Conferences to be held at the following places: Como, Lake, Pheba, Georgetown, Sidon, Belzoni, and Cleveland. The first two of these meetings have already been held, and the Columbus District Conference is in session at Pheba this week. The others will convene later, and it may be well to let the brethren know in advance that Brother Bachman will be on hand with a good supply of religious books and periodicals. If a person desires any special publication, it would be a good idea to communicate with the colporteur beforehand so that he will be certain to have it in stock.

Dr. W. T. Bolling, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Clinton, Ky., and a widely known minister, died at his home in that city on April 16. The obsequies were conducted in the First Methodist Church of Memphis, with Bishop W. B. Murrah in charge. The interment also was made in Memphis. Though not a man of wide learning or extraordinary profundity, Dr. Bolling possessed unusual gifts as a speaker and enjoyed a large measure of popularity as a preacher. He once served as pastor of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, and also as pastor of our First Church in Jackson, Miss. Though a mere youth at the outbreak of the Civil War, he entered the Confederate Army and served with distinction. He was about 65 years of age.

Writing from Artesia, Miss., where for some days he had been laboring with Rev. E. H. Mohler, our pastor at that place, in a series of revival services, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb says: "We have had a gracious meeting here. There have been fourteen accessions—twelve of them on profession of faith—and the church has been greatly blessed. Rev. E. H. Mohler, who recently came to us from the Mississippi Conference, is certainly making good. He has a fine hold upon his people; has organized here a Y. M. C. A., with well equipped baths and a reading room near the depot which are open to the railroad men and the town generally; and he and his flock are working with one heart and soul for the advancement of the kingdom in this region."

We acknowledge the reception of a most attractive announcement on thick calendared paper, about 12 by 16 inches in size, of Galloway Memorial Day—next Sunday—which has been designated by the Mississippi Conference as the time for taking a collection for the "Charles B. Galloway Memorial Fund." This large announcement card is adorned with a fine picture of the late Bishop, and is so made that it can be hung on the wall. It always greatly rejoices us to note any movement that has for its object the honoring of this great preacher, church leader, and citizen whom we have never ceased to miss, and whose like we never expect to see again on earth. We hope that this $25,000 Memorial Fund, so happily named and so urgently needed for the old preachers, will be secured at an early date.

Rev. John Tillery Lewis, our capable pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., who, with the assistance of Revs. J. B. and O. B. Culpepper, has been conducting a series of revival services in that city, under date of the 18th inst., writes as follows: "We are having the greatest meeting that Clarksdale has ever had. The Court House is taxed to its full capacity at every evening service to accommodate the people, and already 37 have given their names for church membership. God is wonderfully blessing us." The local correspondent of the Commercial Appeal also gave in that paper a few days since quite an extended account of this remarkable awakening, stating that practically all the business houses were closing for the morning services and that the community generally was being wonderfully stirred. We rejoice with Brother Lewis and the faithful workers who are aiding him in this glorious victory for the Master.

On Tuesday, April 15, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Gusman, of Mobile, Ala., Mr. D. R. Barbee and Miss Elina Deas Gusman were united in marriage. Mr. Barbee is a son of the late Dr. J. D. Barbee, who was known and honored throughout Southern Methodism, and is one of the leading newspaper men of the South. He at present holds the position of Managing Editor of the Mobile Register and is steadily widening the influence of that well known journal. Of the bride, a Mobile paper says: "She possesses all the refinements inherent in a gentlewoman of the South, is endowed with a sweet voice, both in speaking and singing, and nature has added to an affable disposition, other attributes which unite in forming the character of a very lovely young woman." We extend to the happy couple our hearty congratulations and best wishes.

OBSERVANCE OF CHILDREN'S DAY

By Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor.

Why should every Sunday school in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, observe Children's Day?

1. Because our Church requires it. The mandate of the General Conference contained in paragraph 256 of the Discipline is: "The third Sunday in May, or as near thereto as practicable, shall be observed throughout our Church as Children's Day."

2. Because the observance of the day is a means of blessing to the children. It is the official recognition by the Church of their right to a place in its fellowship and tends to make them feel that they are a part of it and hence to make them love it.

3. Because it helps the school. It awakens a vital interest not only among the children, but also in the community at large. It is an entirely legitimate and at the same time a thoroughly effective way of directing the attention of the entire Church to the Sunday school and its work.

4. Because it helps the homes from which the pupils are drawn. The Sunday school cannot do really effective work without the hearty and intelligent co-operation of parents and no opportunity for the awakening of interest that will insure such co-operation should be neglected. Parents who seldom or never go to church and are not greatly concerned about the religious training of their children may readily be induced to attend the exercises of Children's Day, and such attendance often marks the beginning of a new interest in the development of the religious life of their children and consequently a new interest in the Sunday school.

5. Because the offerings of Children's Day are the only contributions which the Church makes for the upbuilding of our general Sunday school work. This statement, when its true import is considered, is startling. The Sunday school is the greatest organized agency under the control of the Church for the religious training of children and youth. From it are drawn more than three-fourths of her yearly accessions. It is confessedly the most important and fruitful department of her work. Other great religious denominations, recognizing the significance of this fact, are making large provision for Sunday school extension and the training of Sunday school workers. But at present the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is doing nothing in this direction except to turn over the Children's Day offerings for the furthering of Sunday school work. And strange to say, the Church has never seemed greatly interested even in this small effort in behalf of the Sunday school cause. Perhaps less than a third of our schools observe the day and the total amount collected is pitifully small. Surely when our pastors and superintendents realize the urgency of the need, this apparent indifference will disappear.

Our Children's Day offerings at present are distributed as follows: Sixty per cent is retained by the various Conference Sunday School Boards for use in the Conferences; the remaining forty per cent is sent to Mr. D. M. Smith, Treasurer of the General Sunday School Board, one-fourth to be used in Sunday school work in our foreign mission fields and three-fourths "to be applied to the endowment of a chair of Religious Pedagogy and Sunday Schools in Vanderbilt University, until the sum of $50,000 required for the endowment is raised." After that sum shall have been raised this thirty per cent of Children's Day Fund is to be used by the General Sunday School Board to increase its force of field workers. This last item calls for special attention just at this time. There are two important reasons why the Vanderbilt endowment fund should be pushed to speedy completion: (1) The chair is greatly needed in order that the young preachers who are being educated in this central institution of our Church may go out as trained Sunday school leaders; and (2) there is urgent demand for an immediate increase in our force of field workers. The men who are at present engaged in the general offices of the Sunday School Department have ten times as many calls for help as they can possibly accept. This shows a widespread awakening throughout the Church in regard to Sunday school work and to the demands growing out of this awakening there should be prompt and adequate response.

The remainder of the Vanderbilt Fund can and should be raised this year. The fund at present amounts to $38,099, leaving a balance of $12,000 to be raised. The interest on the amount in hand between April 1, 1913 and April 1, 1914, will decrease this sum by at least $2,000. If, therefore, our Sunday schools will raise $10,000 for the chair this spring, we shall be able to report to the next General Conference that we have finished in full the task assigned us and are ready to enter upon a united campaign for general Sunday school extension and development.

THE FINISHING TOUCH.

It was not a very pleasant face that Walter brought when he came to papa for the finishing touches to his dress.

"There, everything is on now," shouted Walter.

"Why, no, son!" said papa soberly, "you haven't put everything on yet."

Walter carefully inspected his clothes, from the tips of his small toes to the broad collar about his neck. He could find nothing wanting.

"You haven't put your smile on yet," said papa, with the tiny wrinkles beginning to creep about his own eyes. "Put it on, Walter, and I'll button it up for you."

And Walter began then and there to put it on. And now he never really calls himself dressed for the day until he has put on a sunny face.

Have any young America smiles been forgotten in the morning "getting ready?" If so, no amount of fresh collars and new neckties and gay hair ribbons can ever take their place. The only really safe way is to put the smile on the very first thing. Besides, the other things will go on better if you do.—Central Christian Advocate.

SHALL A RETREAT BE SOUNDED?

With the exception of St. Louis, Baltimore, and San Francisco, New Orleans is the largest city in the territory occupied by the Southern Methodist Church. Already a great commercial mart of more than 350,000 people, the general feeling is that, though just at present a state of financial depression exists throughout South Louisiana, it is on the eve of a wonderful development. It is the nearest large port in the United States to the Panama Canal and the natural gateway for the trade of our great nation with the South American countries. It is also destined to become more and more the outlet for the foreign commerce of the vast and fertile Mississippi Valley. The magnificent new Immigrant Station, now nearing completion, means that within the next few months the overcrowded nations of the Old World will be pouring their surplus population into the Crescent City at a rapidly increasing rate, to be distributed westward from here.

The meaning of all this is that New Orleans is to-day a great open door, challenging the evangelical enterprise of the Christian Churches of this section and of the entire country. The field is already white unto the harvest, and will doubtless expand and offer richer opportunities with every passing year. The Roman Catholic Church is strongly entrenched throughout the city and is ready to take advantage of all the possibilities that the future may bring. She has here well equipped colleges, academies, and primary schools, more than a score of expensive charitable institutions, dozens of magnificent churches, and a daily paper to advocate her principles and guard her interests. Our present population is largely under her domination, but not to so great an extent as some may imagine. Indeed, it is estimated that there are probably at this time not less than 100,000 people within our corporate limits who do not belong to any religious denomination.

Most of the Protestant Churches are beginning to appreciate the strategic importance of New Orleans as a missionary center. The Presbyterians are alert and active, and by a generous expenditure of money are achieving substantial results. The Episcopalians and Lutherans are wide awake and are laying plans for advanced movements. The Baptists, though weak, have their eyes open and are earnestly appealing to their people for missionary money, that they may inaugurate here more aggressive operations. The Northern Methodists have located a Bishop in New Orleans, have acquired considerable property, and are here issuing one of their connectional papers. And it is reported that their General Boards are standing resolutely behind them to see that their work in this field is not hindered by a lack of adequate funds.

Our Mission Board for the past two years and the Woman's Board have been showing a commendable appreciation of the importance of strengthening our forces and equipment here; but now, just when the outlook is brightening and there is a promise of accomplishing substantial results, the news comes that at the recent meeting of the Woman's Council in Birmingham the appropriation hitherto coming from that source has been reduced nearly one-half, and that the General Board of Missions at its meeting in Dallas next week will also largely withdraw its support. We highly appreciate the past kindnesses of these Boards, and we would not seem to be ungrateful for what they have previously done; but, in view of the seriousness of the situation, candor compels us to say that we fear they are about to make a serious mistake. We do not believe that the Methodism of New Orleans under existing conditions can, with the little assistance that we hear will be offered it, take care of our interests in this great city. In other words, we fear that if the reported plan of the Board is adhered to, our work here will be struck a blow from which it will not soon recover. And why should New Orleans be neglected? Is there any greater home mission field within the bounds of Southern Methodism? Is there any that is more needy, or that offers a larger opportunity for the future? The middle and eastern Conferences pay a large share of the money that goes into our General Missionary Treasury. Why, then, should the largest city on our eastern border, whose claims are so urgent and appealing, be cast off for other places? Why should Southern Methodism be preparing to sound a retreat in New Orleans, when every other Church is girding up its loins and getting ready for an advance? These are questions that our Mission Board must answer. Certainly it will be most regrettable if, because of a mistaken policy, we are forced to lose the fruits of the money that we have expended and the hard work that has been done in this field within the past few years.

THE MORMON PROPHET A FAKIR.

In the Department of the Woman's Missionary Work in the Advocate of April 10, there appeared the following statement from the two Louisiana Conference Secretaries—Mrs. W. T. Cunningham and Mrs. A. P. Holt: "There are several Mormon settlements within our borders, and an attempt is being made to make this State one of the strongholds of that sect." There is no fouler blot upon our American civilization than Mormonism, and one of the most astounding things in our history is the extent to which this moral leprosy has been allowed to spread within our domain. If Louisiana is, indeed, menaced, it behooves every good citizen of the commonwealth, whether a member of any Church or not, to rise up and resist the planting in our territory of a superstition that is so utterly subversive of decency and sound morality.

In this connection, it may not be amiss to call attention to the fact that Mormonism not only stands for polygamy with all its vicious influences, but that its religious teachings are also a palpable fraud. New and conclusive evidence of this has lately come to light, as is shown in the following statement, which we take from a recent issue of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate:

"Joseph Smith, the original Mormon 'prophet,' did not anticipate the progress that would be made in the 'learning of Egypt.' The book of golden plates from which he was supposed to have translated the 'Book of Mormon' was returned to the angel who gave it to him, and buried again. The question of the source of the 'Book of Mormon' has never been determined beyond doubt. The manuscript of Spalding's work, which may have furnished Smith the material, or at least the suggestion, of the 'Book of Mormon,' has never been found, and hence no comparison can be instituted to show its likeness or unlikeness to the book which the Mormon prophet professed to have received in a supernatural way.

"But happily for the cause of truth, and unhappily for his own reputation for veracity, Joseph Smith made what purported to be a translation from an accessible source. In 1835, while yet at Kirtland, O., he came into possession of some papyri found in the wrappings of Egyptian mummies, which an itinerant showman was exhibiting in the community, and which were purchased by the Mormons. These strips of ancient writing material were covered with pictures and hieroglyphics which the prophet studied. He gave out that he had been enabled by prophetic insight to understand the meaning of these writings and pictures which he translated and explained.

"He had the rashness, as the matter has turned out, to publish his translations and explanations in 'The Book of Abraham,' and this 'Book of Abraham' is a part of the great Mormon work, 'The Pearl of Great Price.' He declared that the documents were autograph writings of Abraham and Joseph.

"It occurred to Bishop Spalding, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Utah, to submit the reproductions of the pictures and hieroglyphics which Smith was audacious enough to make along with his translation, to distinguished Egyptologists in Europe and America. From eight scholars, recognized as authorities on such matters, he received replies, and they unanimously report that the papyri which Smith pronounced autograph writings of Abraham and Joseph are simply the ceremonial funeral incantations which the Egyptians commonly buried with their dead, and which have been found bound up with the wrappings of thousands of mummies.

"The Mormon prophet's translations have no connection whatever with the original text, and his explanations of the symbolical figures are equally wide of the truth. He simply drew upon his vivid but untrained imagination in writing the 'Book of Abraham.'

"Bishop Spalding has published in a pamphlet the facts about this matter, including the letters received from Dr. A. H. Sayce of Oxford, Dr. Edward Myer of Berlin, Dr. Friedrich von Bissing of Munich, Dr. Flinders Petrie of London, Dr. Arthur A. Mah of New York, Dr. John Peters of the University of Pennsylvania, Prof. James H. Breasted of Chicago, and Professor Mercer of Pittsburgh. It is being circulated in Utah. Will it open the eyes of any who have accepted the 'Book of Mormon' as a revelation from Heaven?"

"But it cannot be that they should long obey God from fear, who are deaf to the motives of love." So wrote John Wesley in crossing the Atlantic when he observed that persons who were religiously inclined in the midst of a terrific storm so soon seemed to forget their gracious Deliverer, some even asserting that there had been no danger. Mr. Wesley was entirely correct in his comment. Fear may produce spasmodic religious impulses and moods, but only love can constrain to unselfish and continuous service.

FINDS FAULT WITH THE DISCIPLINE.

Dr. R. A. Meek, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, has this to say touching the religious teaching of the children in our Sunday schools: "A writer in a current religious journal discusses the question, 'How to Lead the Children in Our Sunday Schools to Christ.' So far as the small ones are concerned, the brother, according to some of our present-day teaching, is misdirecting his efforts. Having been born regenerate, they do not need to be led to the Master, but merely kept from going astray. Queer teaching for the followers of John Wesley! We suppose that Adam Clarke was wrong in stating that he was converted at four years of age, and that also many other shining lights in the Church who claim to have found the Savior between the ages of five and ten. Or possibly the explanation is that they had backslidden and did not know it; that in addition to the doctrine of infant regeneration, we are to have the doctrine of infant apostasy."

Dr. E. G. E. Mann, Editor of the Central Methodist Advocate, exhorts, after quoting the above paragraph in his able journal, as follows:

"The doctrine that children are in a saved state by nature when they are born, and only need to be trained up properly in order to become mature Christians, has the immense disadvantage in our Church of being at variance with the teachings of the Methodist Standards. There is but one thing in all the range of Methodist standard theology, that we know of, that teaches that children are born into a state of salvation, and that is paragraph 664 of the Discipline of our Church, and that was only placed there by the last General Conference. Here is the language. Paragraph 664. 'The Ministration of Baptism to Infants.' 'Dearly beloved, forasmuch as all men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer, heirs of life eternal and subjects of the saving grace of the Holy Spirit, and that our Savior Christ saith, suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God; I beseech you to call upon God the Father through our Lord Jesus Christ, that of His bounteous goodness He will grant unto this child, now to be baptized, the continual replenishing of His grace, that he may ever remain in the fellowship of God's Holy Church by faith that is in Jesus Christ.'

"That paragraph affirms that 'children are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer,' and ignores absolutely the whole Scripture and Methodist teaching on the subject of depravity, and all this 'Decision Day' movement is coming right in through the open floodgate to overwhelm our Church with a great number of unconverted church members out of the Sunday school."

It would seem that both these brilliant editors are worrying over the fact that the Church is drifting away from its belief in the doctrine of total depravity.

The Church, in its General Conference deliverance, embodying its belief in a disciplinary utterance touching infant baptism, stated in form what the Church had been teaching for a score of years. The old conception of total depravity so ardently held to by Adam Clarke, harmonizes with present-day Methodist thinking about as well as to his views regarding instrumental music in church worship. He made no bones locating "the devil in the organ." Why should Clarke or Wesley be final authority on doctrines? Are they gods to be worshiped? Or did they say their doctrine was final? It strikes us they would be ashamed of the way some of their children accept in toto what they said when out of the nature of the case theirs could be but a limited statement of doctrine.

Only Jesus Christ is final authority on doctrine and life. No one man before or since his day, or any number of men, can formulate a doctrine or statement of faith sufficiently all comprehensive and embracing as to meet all the needs of a growing Christendom through all time. We would hate to admit that the Church of to-day has not wiser men, better men, more thoroughly taught of God, than were Clarke, Watson, or even Wesley himself. As good and great as were these men, their gospel is not as suited to our present-day religious life as is the gospel of Granbery, Haygood, Hoss, Candler, Wilson, Tillet, Hendrix, Atkins, Waterhouse, and hundreds of others who preach an ever-expanding, evolving, growing gospel, their words being spirit and life.

For our part we accept as a most wise and wholesome deliverance the statement of the General Conference regarding depravity, as found in the paragraph of the discipline above referred to. The General Conference, without so much as hinting it, did make a "restatement of faith" of the Church, not merely "ignoring absolutely the Methodist teaching on the subject of depravity," but in the light of present-day teaching and expounding of the Holy Scriptures, silently repudiated the teachings of the fathers on total depravity, and put the Church abreast with the times. Total depravity, as taught by our fathers, is as inconsistent with the Methodist thought of to-day as is the doctrine of the damnation of infants repugnant to the spirit of present-day Presbyterianism.

Again, we need not be alarmed at the Church burdening its roll by a large company of children. No danger of worldliness here. Would to God we could take the last child from Sunday school right into the fellowship of the Church. The great sin lying at the door of the Church is her failure to save these lambs to Christ's fold. Full half of the Sunday school enrollment are never admitted into the Church. They are lost.

Religious life, as is mental life, is a growth, and as the normal child, properly developed mentally, is born, albeit unconsciously to itself as a fact, in the mind world, so it, under normal conditions, in the home, Sunday school, church worship, enveloped in a friendly spiritual atmosphere may, all unconscious to itself, be born into the spiritual world or kingdom of God.

No, brethren, the Church is not suffering from worldliness, as expressed in social diversions so much as it is by a covetous, godless and idolatrous membership who, having the form of godliness, are strangers to its power, living in wantonness and pleasure, but when it comes to Christian liberality, to supporting the Church and its institutions, they are stingy, mean and despicable. But this is the kind that make a great noise when converted. Brothers Meek and Mann are welcome to them, but as for us, we will take our chances amid the sunshine, flowers, smiles and prattle of sweet-voiced children, who are swept into the kingdom of truth as mysteriously as the wind blowing where it listeth and we hear the sound thence but cannot tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. For thus they are born of the Spirit.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

CONCERNING THE RITUAL FOR THE BAPTISM OF INFANTS.

Some weeks ago the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate addressed to every member of the Committee on Revisals at the last General Conference, the following letter:

"Dear Brother: You were a member of the Committee on Revisals at the last General Conference, which met in Asheville in May, 1910. As there is considerable difference of opinion as to the significance of the change made in the Ritual for the Baptism of Infants (found in the first paragraph, page 357, of the Discipline of 1910), will you please kindly answer the following questions:

"1. Was it your understanding that the language used in that paragraph was intended to teach the doctrine of birth regeneration, and that no child needs to undergo the 'new birth' unless he first apostatizes and becomes a sinner? In other words, that children are born, not only in a justified, but in a thoroughly regenerate state, not necessarily needing any subsequent change of heart?

"2. Was it your understanding that the language used in this paragraph was in harmony with the Seventh and Eighth of our Twenty-five Articles of Religion, or that you were incorporating into the Discipline a new and different teaching as to the state of infants?

"3. Did your Committee understand in adopting this paragraph that it was setting aside the work of a Committee on the Revision of the Ritual which had had that important task in hand for four years?"

To this communication, nearly all of the members of the Committee have kindly responded, and most of them stated that they had no objection to the publication of their views. We do not, however, deem it needful, for the present at least, to print what was said by any of these brethren except the distinguished Chairman of the Committee. We take great pleasure in giving our readers his most interesting discussion of this important matter.

Dr. Alderson's Statement.

Dear Dr. Meek: I take pleasure in replying to your questions relative to the new Baptismal Ritual; but believe I can do so more briefly by evading the numerical divisions. I was chairman of the Committee on Revisals at Asheville, and author of the revised ritual on baptism which the Conference adopted from that Committee. The report of the Commission appointed by the previous General Conference was referred to my Committee, after being printed, I think, in the Daily Advocate. By the Committee it was referred to a sub-committee, which carefully considered it, adopting the majority of its suggestions. But on the Baptismal Orders—the matter out of which the appointment of the Commission grew—practically nothing had been done, so the sub-committee adopted a revised order, which I offered, and reported it back to the Committee, which, after full time for examination, adopted it with but two or three changes, and by almost a unanimous vote. Its final adoption by the Conference was also with great unanimity.

I cannot answer specifically your inquiry as to the attitude of the Committee towards the doctrine of depravity, because there was no discussion of it; but the Orders which they reported to the General Conference are certainly clear on the subject, declaring in the Order for Infant Baptism that all men are "fallen in Adam", and in that for the Baptism of Adults that "all men do inherit a nature so fallen that no man of his own strength can so live as to please God, and that our Savior Christ saith, Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God."

The only appreciable change made in the draft submitted to the full Committee was this: I had written, "All men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer, heirs of life eternal and subjects of the regenerating grace of the Holy Spirit (which from the beginning doth work in the hearts of our children, both to will and to do of God's good pleasure)." The parenthesis was stricken out as not of vital necessity, and "regenerating" was changed to "saving" on the ground of a verbal preference only, the statement being distinctly made that the words meant the same thing. I have come to regret the change—especially of "regenerating" to "saving", for I see that it lends itself to a possible misconception of the intent of the Committee and of the Conference.

As the author of the new ritual, I trust I may be pardoned for a brief statement as to the principles that governed me in the work.

1. I sought to free both Orders from all possible suspicion of teaching either infant guiltiness or baptismal regeneration. I do not think that either idea can now be found in either Order.

2. On the constructive side, my endeavor was to substitute for the non-scriptural "all men are conceived and born in sin" such a statement of the universality and utterly disabling power of inherited depravity as would fully guard against the error of Pelagianism, constitute an adequate ground for the doctrine of regeneration by the direct power of the Spirit, and square at once with the Scriptures and Christian experience. The statement, "All men do inherit a nature so fallen that no man, of his own strength, can so live as to please God, and that our Savior Christ saith, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," I venture to think, is strong enough to fully protect against Pelagianism, and broad enough to satisfy the varying shades of thought that always will exist in a Church as free as ours. I sought also to substitute for the lingering superstition of a magical, regenerating virtue in baptism the rational, Scriptural concept of a discipling ordinance, a solemn sacrament of dedication, deriving its final value essentially from parental faithfulness to the covenant obligation assumed.

3. I sought to make a practical, illuminating ritual—one that would at once instruct the people on the broad lines of Methodist faith, avoiding the commitment of the Church to any of the minor shades of difference that may exist among us; and above all, I sought, through an emphasis, not on the child's depravity, but upon the glory of its inheritance in Christ, to deepen the sense of responsibility and quicken the faith of Methodist parents as they deal with the unfolding life of their children.

If any member of the committee understood or intended the ritual to teach either congenital or birth regeneration, it did not appear in the discussions, and I think that anyone so holding would have insisted on eliminating that paragraph in the prayer which contains the petition, "Grant that the old Adam in this child may be so buried," etc. To my mind, with all deference to wiser men, regeneration, congenital at birth, or at any other time before there is a capacity for moral response to the Spirit's call, is absolutely unthinkable. The Spirit's call must be to a nature capable of making a moral response; and, until the moral nature has begun to unfold, the infant is as incapable of such response as a mocking bird.

And yet the most distinctive feature of the new Ritual, one that differentiates it clearly from all others—and this I think is its peculiar glory—is its frank avowal of the doctrine of infancy in Christ. But it is just here that some confusion of thought has arisen, due perhaps to the fact that St. Paul so constantly uses the phrase "in Christ" of converted sinners, leading to the idea that the term connotes repentance, pardon, regeneration, and adoption. But the phrase "into (or unto) Christ" is that which indicates the Godward progress of an alien soul, while "in Christ" simply expresses a present locus and its relationship—the being and abiding within the sphere of Christ's saving influence, within the Kingdom of God—whether one—an alien by wicked works—has, like the Roman captain, purchased his citizenship with the great price of the tragedy of bitter repentance, or is an infant in Christ, his Federal Head, who like St. Paul, was free born. Of course the relationship connotes a corresponding susceptibility—actual or potential—to the spiritual influences by which the one who is "in Christ" is environed; otherwise it would be meaningless. Now, it is precisely this idea that I sought to convey by the use of the terms "subject of regenerating grace." The child is born into a sphere of which Christ Jesus is the gravitational center and his Spirit is the atmosphere. Here he remains, safe, quiescent, until time brings him to the border of the twilight zone that separates blank infancy from full moral responsibility. Then, at the first glimmer of moral consciousness, he inbreathes the Holy Spirit, he feels the drawing power of the Savior. At this supreme crisis, if parents and teachers are made to understand its full significance, and are faithful co-workers with God on their children's behalf, the child not only may, but normally will, put its hand into the hand of Jesus, and receive, through the acquiescence of a faith which Jesus makes the standard of ours, the Spirit of eternal life.

This is infantile regeneration, to be sure, but regeneration nevertheless in its divine reality.

If parents now continue faithful to their holy trust, the child will pass out into the fullness of moral responsibility in the clear consciousness of sonship unto God. To me, it is a constant wonder that we have so long refrained from raising the flag of Methodist sovereignty over this rich, sunlit province of our rightful theological domain. The statement, "All men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer," is simply the logical and Scriptural statement of a principle for which Arminian theology has been groping for generations. It does not deny or minimize the awful fact of universal depravity, or commit us to any peculiar theory of infant salvation. It simply gives practical reality to the fact of Christ's Federal Headship, affirming that, in his redeeming work, he has lifted the race of Adam from the level of servanthood into his own Kingdom, constituting them subjects, as ever their age and condition have need, of all those quickening, purifying and enabling graces of the Holy Spirit which abound and reign therein through him. At the same time, the word "subjects" does not necessarily limit the possible time of regeneration, but was chosen simply to indicate the birthright and susceptibility thereto in advance of any departure from God in sin; and it may properly be used by any one who believes that, whatever his special theory of infant salvation may be.

Having labored diligently through many years to find a statement sufficiently accurate, inspiring, and illuminating to make our Ritual teach the living truth for which infant baptism stands and which all Methodists most steadfastly believe, and rhetorically fit to blend, even decently, with the stately rhythm of the existing Ritual, no one can appreciate more fully than I the imperfections of the new Order. But let us not throw away, in the captious criticism of mere words, the substantial, vital gains we have made. The new Ritual is free from Calvinism and Sacramentarianism; it grounds the necessity of regeneration in a universal and totally disabling depravity, and it states this awful truth—more dogmatically and fully of course under Adult Baptism—on the practical side, and in terms that "find" the people, as no theological technique can possibly find them. And above all, our Ritual is unique in that it puts us on the positive and spiritual side of the question of the instruction of our children, rather than on the negative and ethical; teaches us, not that we may perhaps bring our children early back to Christ through conversion, but that they are now "in Christ", awaiting only our faithful pointing of their infantile faith and love to him, so that the Holy Spirit may, at the very dawning of moral consciousness, impart to them the germ of eternal life. In this conception, we are not only on absolutely Scriptural and purely Arminian ground, but we are in the very forefront of the advancing hosts of Christ, occupying the position to which evangelical Christendom must come, if ever it would conquer the world for its Lord.

With the phrase, "regenerating grace of the Holy Spirit," restored—or some equivalent—the Ritual cannot be fairly construed to teach birth regeneration, nor any other specific theory, but only the broad, glorious fact that regeneration before alienation by sin is every child's birthright in Christ. While I have now no more interest in the Ritual than any other preacher, I will be glad to help in bringing it towards perfection, and to correspond with brethren to that end.

I suggest possible improvements in the prayer: Let the opening sentence read, "Almighty, ever living God, we beseech thee for thine infinite mercies, that thou wilt look upon this child, quicken, cleanse and sanctify him ever with the Holy Ghost; that, abiding safe," etc.

I believe a decided improvement could also be made in brevity, clearness, and force, by combining, in an amended form, the second and third petitions, thus: "O merciful God, grant that the old man with his lusts may be so buried in this child that the new creation in Christ Jesus may be raised up in him; and that all things that belong unto the Spirit may live and grow in him. Amen." At any rate, "old Adam," a non-scriptural term, ought to give place to "old man," and "new man" ought to be substituted with "the new creation in Christ Jesus." We certainly ought not to pray for the destruction of "carnal affections," which are essential to our very life, but of "carnal lusts," which only are sinful.

I should be glad for you, and other Editors who may think it worth while, to publish what I have written.

Faternally,

E. W. ALDERSON.

THE METHODIST HOSPITAL! A PLAN.

As the Methodists of Mississippi, and a part of the Methodists of Tennessee and of Arkansas, have undertaken to build, in the city of Memphis, Tenn., a hospital for their Church, it is important to agree upon some plan adequate to such a purpose. The Commissioners of the enterprise met recently and divided the work as follows: The Memphis Conference would undertake to raise $150,000; North Mississippi, $75,000; Mississippi, $50,000; and the White River, $25,000, making in all $300,000.

What is the plan for raising this money? At present it seems to be to have a secretary visit this territory taking collections and subscriptions. Let us look at this plan in the most favorable light. If the people are to be met, it will have to be done on Sundays, unless they are taken one by one, which is an impossibility. People congregate too poorly on week days to undertake, in that way, a work like this. Then let us figure some. There are 2,000 congregations to be reached. One a week would require thirty-eight years, or two on each Sabbath, nineteen years. Even then the Secretary would not be able to see anything like all the people. If central points with the "dinner on the ground method" should be tried, it too would fail to bring the subject to the attention of all who should aid in so great a work as this. Then, what have we to suggest?

I propose the following plan: After the apportionments made to the Districts by the Commissioners are accepted, let the District Conferences appoint a committee, consisting of one from each charge in the district—a layman, when a suitable one can be found—being preferred. Let each member of this committee, with the help of the pastor or presiding elder, appoint a committee for his charge, having in his mind the purpose of reaching every Methodist, and, of course, every well-wisher of the cause in that vicinity. A time—not too long—should be given to arousing interest and a week should then be taken in which to see all parties, giving each one an opportunity to contribute. This plan, if adopted and pushed, will bring this interest before the entire co-operating territory inside of two months instead of the thirty-eight years that would be required to have the secretary visit all the charges. We are inaugurating this plan in the Sardis District of the North Mississippi Conference. The secretary might keep in touch with the field through these committees. This is offered merely as a suggestion.

Church News

The next meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council of the M. E. Church, South, will be held in Fort Worth, Texas.

Because of the state of her health, Miss Mabel Head, the Educational Secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions, will be relieved of all work for the present.

Dr. H. M. DuBose is having a notably fruitful ministry at the First Methodist Church of Atlanta, Ga. The accessions since the last Annual Conference have passed the one-hundred mark.

Mrs. Atticus G. Haygood, wife of the lamented Bishop Haygood, passed away in Decatur, Ga., on Sunday, April 13. The obsequies were conducted by Bishop Candler and Dr. W. F. Glenn.

The meeting at the Sam Jones Tabernacle in Cartersville, Ga., this year promises to be one of unusual interest. The renowned English evangelist, Gipsy Smith, is expected to be the chief preacher for the occasion.

An interesting revival was held at Emory and Henry College from March 17th to March 27th. The preaching was done by Rev. E. L. Bain, of Winston-Salem, N. C., who is an alumnus of that institution. There were about 50 conversions and reclamations.

A Joint Commission to consider the question has declared in favor of the consolidation of the Arkansas and White River Conferences into one body, to be known as the "North Arkansas Conference." These two Conferences are expected to memorialize the General Conference to carry this proposed plan into effect.

• The Centenary M. E. Church, South, of Richmond, Va., is planning to acquire a valuable lot adjoining the one upon which the present house of worship stands. The price fixed upon it is $40,000, and Mr. John P. Branch has offered to give half of this amount, provided the congregation will raise the other half.

One of the interesting movements of this day is the return of the Jews to Palestine. According to figures recently given out, there are now more than 100,000 of them in the Holy Land, and about 40,000 of these are in Jerusalem. They are acquiring real estate rapidly and are said to be in the majority in a number of towns.

The Midland Methodist states that a preacher at Millington, Tenn., has undertaken to secure material for the construction of a church by using the parcels post. He has issued an appeal to the general public asking every person who reads it kindly to mail him a brick. It is claimed that this novel plan seems to be meeting with some success.

Rev. W. G. Beasley, pastor of the Troost Avenue Church, of Kansas City, is a brilliant success in the difficult work of lifting a church debt. He started out to raise $9,000 to meet an outstanding obligation of his congregation and secured $14,000. The problem which he now has to figure out is what to do with the $5,000 surplus. We dare say, however, that he will not find this a disagreeable task.

Rev. R. P. Bogle, of Reldsville, North Carolina, who is in charge of the Ruffin Circuit, near that city, will have a memorial window in honor of the late Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald placed in our church at Ruffin, where the distinguished Editor and Bishop was born. This window will cost about $200. If any friend of Bishop Fitzgerald would like to contribute to this enterprise, he may have that privilege, provided he will do so at once.

The New Testament has been translated into Esperanto, the international language; and it is stated that Dr. Zamenhof, of Warsaw, Russia, the originator of this new language, is now occupied in translating the Old Testament into it. The British and Foreign Bible Society and the National Bible Society of Scotland, are behind these publications. The American Bible Society, though not co-operating in bringing them out, will import and handle them; so they will be easily obtainable in the United States.

Bishop W. A. Candler spent Sunday, April 6, at Chattanooga, Tenn., in the interest of the Emory and Henry Endowment Fund. He preached at Centenary Church in the morning and at Trinity at night. It is said that the new house of worship which Centenary Church is erecting in that city, including the lot, will cost $225,000. Dr. J. W. Perry, who is one of the strong men of the Holston Conference, is the pastor of this congregation.

The Baltimore Conference at its recent session unanimously endorsed a suggestion made by Dr. F. J. Prettyman that the College of Bishops be requested to allow Bishop A. W. Wilson to preside over its annual meetings for the next quadrennium, if he shall live so long and they find it practicable to do so. This is the Bishop's home Conference, and this action attests the high honor and esteem in which he is held by the brethren who know him best.

Much has been written concerning the sons of ministers who have achieved distinction, but comparatively little has been said about the daughters of preachers who have attained to honor and fame. The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of April 18, refers to the latter in the following interesting manner: "Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is the seventh daughter of a clergyman to become mistress of the White House. These were: Abigail Adams, wife of President John Adams; Abigail Fillmore, wife of President Fillmore; Jane Pierce, wife of President Franklin Pierce; Caroline Harrison, wife of President Benjamin Harrison; Mrs. Mary Arthur McElroy, the sister of Chester A. Arthur; and Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, sister of Grover Cleveland. Some of the most famous women in history have been clergymen's daughters, such as Susannah Wesley, mother of John and Charles Wesley; Harriet Beecher Stowe, daughter, of Lyman Beecher; Charlotte, Emily and Annie Bronte; Frances Ridley Havergal, and Jane Austin.

WHERE DOES THE BLAME LIE?

This subject was suggested to my mind by the reading of the following resolution passed by the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference, and published in the Advocate of April 10:

"Resolved, that we, the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference, agree that we will be scrupulously careful regarding the passage of the character of either local or itinerant preachers where there is a manifest indifference regarding debts or moral character involving their efficiency as preachers, and that we hereby pledge ourselves to stand together in this action."

I heard a presiding elder say that he would feel like locating a preacher who would move away from a charge without making satisfactory arrangements with his creditors. It is true that when a minister moves from one place to another without paying his honest obligations or arranging satisfactorily with those whom he owes, the effect of his act upon the observing public is injurious to his further efficiency. But is the preacher to be blamed, or should the blame be placed elsewhere?

When a preacher is admitted into full connection in the Conference and is ordained a deacon, this question is asked him: "Will you reverently obey them to whom the charge and government over you is committed?" The Methodist preacher answers that question in the affirmative. He likewise answers practically the same question when he is ordained an elder. Thus, he surrenders his right to select his field of labor. If, then, he is assigned to a field where the support is not sufficient to pay for the actual necessities of life, he must either ask for credit or starve. If he buys on a credit and his charge does not pay him enough to enable him to pay his debts, should he bear the whole blame? or should the presiding elder who assigned him to that field, or the congregation that did not pay him be blamed? Do you not think that those preachers who are forced to leave unpaid debts would select for themselves congregations that would pay to them a living if they could? There may be some preachers who are careless about paying their debts, but I believe I am safe in saying that nine-tenths of those who leave debts behind would pay them if they had the money.

What is a preacher to do when he has wrought for a year on a poor circuit and finds himself at the end of the year without enough money to meet his obligations, and then goes to Conference and is assigned to another distant field that gives no promise of a larger support? Must he be loyal to his vows and go to the field to which those over him have assigned him, leaving behind debts that he has no prospect of paying, or must he locate, secure honorable employment, and pay his honest debts?

If I were a presiding elder and should send a preacher to a place that would not support him, I should feel that I was partly to blame if that minister caused a reflection to be cast upon the Church by not paying his debts. If I were a steward in that poor circuit, I should feel that I was in part responsible. I have never followed a pastor who did not leave debts behind, and I know all of them to be good, consecrated men—men who would have paid every cent if they had had the money. One, in particular, that I remember, who was talked about worse than others, has paid every cent of his old indebtedness. But that circuit never paid him the back debt it owed him, and at the same time criticized him for being slow about meeting his financial obligations.

I do not mean to criticize the Mississippi Conference presiding elders. Their utterance was a timely one. I only want to suggest another resolution that they might consider at their next meeting: Resolved, that we, the presiding elders now in conference, will in the future be more concerned about the support of the preachers in our districts; that we will note particularly the size of each preacher's family, the respective ages of his children and their need for schooling, as well as his personal accomplishments, and will report the same to the presiding Bishop and other members of the Cabinet at our Annual Conference session.

Be it further resolved, That we will not nominate any preacher for any charge where we know there is not to be obtained a living for him and his family, unless we have a sufficient amount of missionary money with which to supplement his income.

In my opinion, it is far better to tell a preacher that there is no suitable place for him and permit him to locate, than to send him to a field that is almost sure to starve him or force him to contract debts. Let him have an honorable location and earn his living in the secular world, rather than go in debt and cause unfavorable criticism of the Church.

Mrs. William Cummings Story was recently elected President of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

It is reported that there are 500,000 women employed in New York City in positions that could be filled by men, and that there are 350,000 men idle.

The Canadian Government experimented last year by conducting in five of its principal cities free employment agencies. Employment was found for 1903 men. It is reported that the number of free agencies will be largely increased at once.

On April 13, 1,000 convicts of the Indiana State penitentiary were tendered a banquet by the citizens in Jeffersonville, Ind., in appreciation of their successful four days' fight to prevent that city from being inundated during the recent floods.

Texas is the first State to enact a law making effective the Webb Law which was recently passed by Congress. The Governor of that State within the past few days signed a bill which makes it a felony to ship vinous or malt liquor in any quantity into territory in Texas where prohibition prevails.

A movement has been started in Virginia to organize into a society the sons of the members of the Convention in that State that signed the Articles of Secession on April 17, 1861. The society, if organized, is to be subsidiary to the Sons of the Confederate Veterans, and will undertake as its special task to secure and publish a biography of every man who affixed his signature to that historic ordinance.

The Meridian Road, an automobile highway that is to extend from Winnipeg, Canada, to Galveston, Texas, has been completed from the former place to Wichita, Kan., and is reported to be one of the most perfect stretches of road to be found in the United States. The road follows very closely the ninety-seventh meridian of longitude, and will, when completed, cross the two Dakotas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Certain journals have published extravagant accounts of the exodus of United States farmers into Canada, and have urged that efforts should be put forth to turn the tide from the North into the South. Statistics recently published, however, throw new light upon this subject. There have been between 200,000 and 300,000 from the United States who have gone to Canada during the last 50 years, while 1,800,000 Canadians have moved from Canada to this country.

The International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs has offered a prize of $100,000 to the first man to invent a substitute for gasoline to be used in internal-combustion motors. Already a large number of men have entered the contest for the prize, and it is announced that a successful solution will most certainly be found. The Association's desire for a substitute for gasoline is said to be due to the fact that that product is now controlled by a trust.

Scutari, the last Turkish stronghold in Europe, is reported to have been captured by the Montenegrins. There now seems to be imminent a struggle between the Bulgarian States and Greece over the division of the spoils, with Austria interfering on one hand, and Russia making demands on the other. While Turkey has been practically eliminated from Europe, the fight over her lost possessions seems to be more disturbing to the peace of Europe than was the war to wrest them from her grasp.

Secretary Daniels, of the Navy Department, has been an editor all his life, and a resident of North Carolina. It seems that he has discovered that the technical language of sea-faring men is practically unintelligible to the average American citizen. He has ordered that "starboard" and "port" give place to their colloquial equivalents, right and left, and that similar nautical terms be substituted by simple every-day words. It is evident that Mr. Daniels is a newspaper man and desires that the public be informed.

Ex-Governor R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina, recently finished a lecturing tour in Mississippi. He was everywhere greeted by large and enthusiastic audiences, and the effect of his inspiring speeches is said to be already noticeable. He has consented to return later and deliver another series of addresses. From the report of Mr. Eichelberger, the superintendent of the Mississippi State Anti-Saloon League, we learn that there have been more than 900 violators of the State Prohibition Law convicted during the past 15 months.

The California Legislature is considering a bill that practically excludes all orientals from owning land in that State. As Secretary of State, which department virtually controls the foreign policy of the United States, William Jennings Bryan has entered a protest against the passage of this bill on the ground that it would be in violation of an existing treaty between the United States and Japan. It now appears that a very delicate point of law must soon be settled, namely: Does a treaty ratified by the United States Senate bind each separate State?

The Associated Press recently sent out the statement that the late Senator Henderson of Missouri was, before his death, the last surviving member of the United States Senate who was connected with that body when the trial of President Andrew Johnson was conducted. The Louisville Courier-Journal says: "Senator Cole of California is now over ninety years of age, and Senators Edmonds of Vermont, and Sprague of Rhode Island, are each more than eighty years old, and all three of them are in good health." By reference to the Senate Register from 1863 to 1869, it will be seen that these men were members of the Senate during that stormy time.

The Richmond Virginian, in a recent issue, called attention to a strange contrast between the conduct of those who have and those who have not the franchise. In Belgium 350,000 men recently quit work, and caused the business of the Empire to come to a complete stand-still, which resulted in a loss of millions of dollars in an effort to secure the ballot, and in England the suffragettes are using dynamite, fire brands and infernal machines in order to force that government to give them the right to vote; while in America in many places those who are entitled to the ballot often ignore the polls on election day and thousands refuse to pay their poll tax, thus disfranchising themselves in order to save $1 a year. "The things we have not are often the things we value most."

The Alamo Heroes' Monument, a monument combining beauty, grandeur, and usefulness, and representing the patriotic devotion of loyal Texans to the pioneers who fought for and won liberty, will soon be erected in San Antonio. It will be 802 feet high, thus making it the tallest structure in the world. Among the many things to be contained in this massive monument are four spacious auditoriums, a museum, an art gallery, and a separate room for every county in the State, nearly 300. Prominently displayed will be heroic sized statues of Travis, Crockett, Bowie, and Bonham, the brave leaders who perished in the old Alamo. There will also be kept in evidence the flag of every power that has ever governed Texas. In the center of this group of flags will wave the Stars and Stripes and next to it will be the Lone Star banner. Then, in order, will follow the flags of the Southern Confederacy, Mexico, Spain and France, and near by will be an emblem dedicated to the American Indian who roamed the Texas plains before the feet of white men ever touched them. In the shaft of the tower will be a huge "lone star" that will be visible both day and night to those in the lobby. The dome will be given to the Federal Government as an observatory.

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT CLARKSDALE.

Dear Brother Meek: On Wednesday night, April 23, we closed the greatest revival ever had here in Clarksdale. The services lasted 17 days. From the very beginning great interest was manifested in the meeting.

For two months before the meeting I preached a series of sermons in which I sought to prepare our people for the revival. Two weeks before we began, I commenced a house-to-house visitation of our membership in an effort to get them pledged to co-operation in the meeting. Just a few days before we began, our Board of Stewards sent a letter to each church member urging attendance upon and co-operation in the services. The pastor of the Baptist Church of our city also did much in preparing his congregation for co-operation with us. The fact is every Protestant Church of our city contributed something to the success of the meeting and received some benefit therefrom.

Bro. Burke Culpepper was with us, but not his father who was detained by unavoidable circumstances. From the very beginning the crowds began to increase. On Thursday night of the first week the crowd was so large that we left the church on Friday and went to the Court House.

In the spirit of Christ and with an enthusiasm loan of God, Brother Burke denounced sin and preached righteousness. He condemned the modern dances, card clubs, Sunday baseball, etc. On the first Sabbath that Brother Burke was here they played a game of baseball, but by the following Sabbath his terrific denunciations of Sabbath desecration developed such a sentiment against Sunday ball that leading citizens of our city got together and offered the President of the Clarksdale League $200 to call the game off. The offer was accepted and many of the baseball enthusiasts heard Brother Culpepper at 3:30 that afternoon. The Sheriff of Coahoma County, Mr. W. H. Fitzgerald, says he does not think we will have any more Sunday baseball in Clarksdale. During the revival nothing was so much talked as was the revival itself. Men and women from 15 and 25 miles away came to the meetings.

As a result of Brother Burke's services among us our church membership has been wonderfully uplifted. Many of our leading men and women have determined to put more of their life into the church work than ever before. Some of our good women who have belonged to card clubs have announced that they are done with playing cards for prizes. One good woman of the Episcopal Church said she would never again allow the new-style dances in her home. About 90 gave their names for membership in the various churches. Of this number, 65 or 70 will join the Methodist Church. God has greatly blessed us in our hearts, our homes and churches for which we are profoundly grateful.

To know Brother Burke Culpepper is to love him. To see him work is an inspiration. He works both in and out of the pulpit. His entire life is in his work and he gives evidence of working only for the glory of God and the salvation of souls. The prayers of many grateful hearts here in Clarksdale will ever follow him wherever he may go.

NEWTON DISTRICT NOTES.

II.

J. E. Williams never fails; and at Hickory and Chunky he is sustaining this record. It is his first year, and also the first year of the charge as it now reads. Chunky was until this year with Meehan; but now Meehan, the mill-town, with Suqualena, on the new railroad from Meridian to Union, and some country churches, forms a new charge, with W. E. Dickens as pastor. They came through the rain to hear the presiding elder. Dickens is popular there.

M. R. Jones is another overworked preacher. In addition to a large circuit, with a parsonage being built and a church or two to be erected, he has pastoral oversight of our two Indian churches, where Sim Tubby, the local preacher, and a few Choctaw exhorters do practically all the preaching the Choctaws get. We must do more for these red men. Jones is doing all he can—more than he should.

Pickett at Carthage and Moore at Walnut Grove cover the large inland County of Leake, the only county in the State untouched by a railroad. The population is large, the distances great, the roads atrocious, the problems numerous, and the difficulties peculiar. But these fine young men are undaunted and untiring.

Newton and Montrose, "too big for one and not enough for two," has H. F. Tolle doing his best to cover the field. Dan Kelley has been to both churches, and revivals of tremendous import, especially at Newton, resulted. Over a hundred joined the Church, and the conversions far outnumbered the accessions, for many in the church were either converted or re-converted. The work at Newton was possibly the best I have known in twenty-five years.

A few general observations are in order:

1. There has been no reduction in salaries; but some increase, and there is more financial hopefulness.
2. The distinctive doctrines of Methodism need clear, strong, and repeated statement in most of the charges.
3. Methodist Hymnals are sadly scarce, and consequently the singing is poor and sometimes execrable.
4. Nevertheless young men are entering the ministry. The fields are white, and the call to service is strong. They are hearing and heeding.
5. Not a single discouraged preacher holds a pastorate in this large and difficult district. To a man they are brave, hopeful and energetic. We are expecting a year of great results.

H. W. FEATHERSTUN.

WHY DON'T YOU GO TO CHURCH?

By Mr. J. M. Haley.

The Church stands for all that is good and uplifting, and teaches that morality and right living constitute the bed-rock upon which all society should be built. It has a definite purpose that always leads in the right direction. It has stood the storms of persecution for multiplied centuries, and it still survives rich in countless blessings which it stands ready to bestow upon the human race.

You may say, "I am not spiritually inclined. The services are a bore to me." Suppose we leave out the spiritual part entirely; are you not willing to make some sacrifice in order to set a right example for your neighbors and their children? You are certainly not an enemy of the Church, and would not throw any obstacle in its way to prevent it from building up a good, moral sentiment in the community. You are willing for all others to go to church, because you really think it is the proper thing to do, and you can not help but give them credit for attending.

When a new citizen moves into a community, he is watched by all to see how he and his family spend Sunday. The employer who meets his new employee at church the following Sunday always has his stock of confidence in that man materially increased. You may be a great deal better than the man who attends religious services regularly, but no one but yourself gives you credit for being so; and even if you are, the principle involved in this article is not affected. If everyone in your community would follow your unspurious example and stay away from church services, you would be among the first to move out. Every citizen (whether a church member or not) is morally bound to pay something to support an institution that does so much for the welfare of the country. It takes money, men, women, and children to keep the Church going.

No intelligent person would dare discount the Church's influence for good; so by staying at home you place yourself in the false attitude of being out of harmony with its aims and purposes. You have no way to right this impression but by taking one hour of the 168 of each week to go to church. If you cannot do so with pleasure, consider it a duty you owe to yourself, your neighbor, and your country. The Church is a great moral barometer by which the character of all is measured. You may ignore it, but you can not escape its silent influence in giving you your proper standing in the community in which you live.

NOTES FROM THE RUSTON DISTRICT.

I guess I will always feel differently toward the people of the Ruston District than any other. These people furnished me the material to practice on when I was a new hand in the work of the assistant general superintendency of the Church. I feel toward this District somewhat like I do toward my first sweetheart. You all know, if you can not describe that feeling. So you know it touched me in the right spot when, after I had retired from the Cabinet, so my case might be discussed, and was recalled, I heard the Bishop say: "Well, Brother Briscoe, the brethren have decided it is best to take you off the Alexandria District and put you on the Ruston District. So I will write you down for the Ruston District."

Again, it is the first time I have ever been on a work I had ever served before. The welcome that I have received from preachers, for I have here some of my former preachers, and people has been gratifying. It looks to me like I always have more friends than I deserve. Well, that sick spell I had at Conference lasted a good while after the appointments were read; you remember the Editor's comment about those sick before the reading, but returns were lacking as to the sick after the reading. I was sick a bit over a month, which delayed me somewhat in starting; but I finally got started and found the preachers and people generally in a responsive mood. The prospects for a prosperous year in spiritual things seem as good as I have ever seen. So far, there have been 146 accessions in the District reported to me. Of course, I have not gone far into my second round and the hot season has not got here yet; and you know most country churches seem to think, judging from their practice, that God only works in warm weather. As a result of this idea no special effort is made in country churches except in mid-summer, so there is nothing very noticeable yet done in the circuits generally. Yes, there is one notable exception, Perry, at Haynesville, reported forty new subscribers for the Advocate, secured between the first and second quarterly conference. He is IT so far in this District. As a consequence his work is financially ahead of every thing in the District except the two leading stations.

You always find an active, aggressive, and progressive church where the church literature is read. The set-fasts and stand-patters are always found among those who prefer the evaporations of Tom Watson to the tenacious fidelity of Tom, the twin. By the way, I know of no better antidote for the poison that the irresponsible gentleman mentioned above is spreading broadcast over the land at so many dollars per spread, than our church papers. Tom teaches what he does because he is paid for it, he knows there are a great many fools, even among church folks, who will pay him well for it. But what does the fool get who pays for it? If one of them should happen to read this, let him ask himself that last question and get busy in bringing forth fruits meet for repentance; fruits meet in this case being to give his preacher money to pay for a year's subscription to the church paper. The man that is furnishing his family with Watson's magazine owes them some preventive like he would if one of them should be bitten by a poisonous snake. For that is just what has happened to them.

There are only five stations in this district—Arcadia, Homer, Minden, Ruston, and Winnfield. Means has started well; his people are delighted and have advanced his salary $200. They say his preaching is of a high order, and from what I have heard of it, I can indorse that. He has a fine opportunity there for intensive cultivation and I believe his people will respond. For the size of the membership, there ought not to be a better church in Louisiana than Arcadia. I believe there will be good team work there this year.

Warlick, at Homer, is doing well. He is at home up here among those sons of Alabamians and Georgians. Up to the time of the beginning of his meeting on the second Sunday in April, he had received 22 into the Church.

Shankie is giving proof of his ministry at Minden to the delight of his people. At the first Conference on the 10th of March the stewards reported the preacher and presiding elder paid for one-quarter, the house rent paid, and money in the bank. This was not on account of arrangements with the bank to pay whether they had money there or not, but the money was actually collected by the stewards for church purposes. They also reported $5000 toward a new parsonage, and 12 additions to the Church.

Holmes is gathering Ruston to his heart. I hear some of the Presbyterians here have expressed a desire to have him for their preacher, as they have no pastor here now. I guess he will be theirs also. Dr. J. W. Moore recently came up to help in a meeting, and was greatly "help up" by having a large congregation to preach to. Come again, Doctor, when you get lean and light, and these good folk will satisfy your yearning and add to your weight and enjoy some more of your sermons, or your sermons some more, as the case may be. The Sunday school is doing well, an attendance of 482 being recorded for Easter. Thirty-five have been received into the Church.

Humphreys, at Winnfield, together with his membership, is planning and working for the building of a brick church. That is a fine body of men he has there. It is a pleasure to be associated with them in the work. Winnfield is one of the two charges in this District that paid everything in full last year, Minden being the other. We recently held our Preachers' Missionary Institute there. It was enjoyed by all present. The closing feature was a banquet given by the local laymen to the visitors. The program was well received and all counted the repast excellent.

The work on the circuits has been greatly hindered by the weather and the roads this winter, but with the opening of spring the brethren are moving out for the campaign. All are doing well and I am looking for a general advance on the work this year. Our District Conference will meet at Athens, July 22-25. Come up, Mr. Editor, our folks up here would like to see you, as you are "unknown by face to the churches" in these parts; and since many have not seen your face, we give you a cordial invitation to be with us. Your presence and an acquaintance with you will greatly assist in the circulation of the paper. Try a round among all the District Conferences in Louisiana and get acquainted with the preachers and people and see if you don't see some good come from it. BRISCOE CARTER.

THE COMING MAN.

A pair of very chubby legs
Incased in scarlet hose;
A pair of little stubby boots,
With rather doubtful toes;
A little kilt, a little coat,
Cut as a mother can—
And lo! before us stands in state
The future's "coming man."

Those hands—those little, busy hands—
So sticky, small and brown;
Those hands, whose only mission seems
To pull all order down—
Who knows what hidden strength may be Concealed within their grasp?
Though now 'tis but a taffy stick
In sturdy hold they clasp.

Ah, blessings on those little hands,
Whose work is yet undone!
And blessings on those little feet,
Whose race is yet unrun!
And blessings on the little brain,
That has not learned to plan!
What'er the future holds in store,
God bless the "coming man!"

A GOLDEN SILENCE.

"Girls, there comes Hattie Haines; let's hide from her. She will spoil all the fun if she comes here. I don't want her." Thus declared Lucy Long as she saw Hattie coming toward them.

"I just can't bear her," began one of the girls; then bit her lip when she noticed that Hattie was within hearing distance and must have heard every word.

Marjory remained silent, but smiled a welcome to Hattie, motioning her to a place beside her in the garden swing. But Hattie passed on her way with a very bright spot on each cheek.

"Oh, girls, cried Marjory, "how could you? I believe she heard every word you said."

"Can't be helped now," said Lucy. "It may have been wrong for me to say it, but I don't like Hattie."

"Perhaps you would if you knew her better," rejoined Marjory gently; "and anyway, mamma has taught me so thoroughly that 'silence is golden,' that I always try to remember it. I am sorry she heard, for she looked so hurt."

Lucy fidgeted uncomfortably.

"Of course, I did not mean for her to hear me; I didn't realize she was so near. But she is so stupid."

"Hattie is very timid," replied Marjory, "but really, she is not stupid. I am glad she did not hear you say that."

Lucy laughed a little.

"Well, I am glad she did not stop, anyway. It would have spoiled our Saturday afternoon, and it is precious, now that we have to be in school."

Monday found the girls standing about in groups evidently very much interested in some discussion. Hattie would join none of the groups, however; she sat apart, pretending to be deeply absorbed in her books. Marjory called to her, and tried to attract her attention, but she only bent lower over her book.

"Let the sulky thing alone," whispered Lucy; "what is the use of making such a fuss over her? She has been a queer fish ever since she came here."

As Marjory stood looking at her she saw the wistful look in the eyes raised for just one fleeting glance, and going to her quickly, she placed an arm about her.

"Do you know," she whispered in her ear, "that Mr. Thornton has offered a medal for the best story for our school paper—one that will illustrate some old proverb? You must try with the others, it will be such fun."

Hattie's cheeks flushed, and she was silent for a time; then just as the bell rang, she answered timidly:

"I had heard about it. I think you are very kind to ask me to try, and—perhaps I shall."

Lucy laughed when she heard that Hattie would compete for the medal.

"She couldn't write a rule for muzzling a poodle dog," she said lightly. "If she were my only opponent I should have nothing to fear."

"I'll tell you what proverb to choose, Lucy," teased one girl slyly. "Choose, 'Brag is a good dog,' and so forth—you know the rest."

"Thank you for your suggestion, but I'll be kind enough to give it back to you. I have already made my choice. What are you going to write about, Marjory?" she went on coolly.

"I'm not going to try," answered Marjory; "I know my limitations. I guess I'll just stick to Algehra and Latin."

"Well, I am going to try," continued Lucy in a superior tone, "and my story will illustrate the proverb, 'It is never too late to mend.' Congratulate me right now. Can't your fancy picture how becoming the medal will be, pinned on my best white dress?"

"Here's luck to you," smiled Marjory kindly. "You always have been the literary genius of our class, Lucy."

There was no doubt in Lucy's mind that she would win the medal. She thought her opponents scarcely worth considering, especially Hattie. She labored painstakingly with her story till it was completed, and when she had read and re-read it a hundred times she became still more fully convinced it was bound to be a prize winner.

On the day when the medal was to be awarded the girls clustered about Lucy, assuring her over and over that she was certain to be the lucky one. She wore an expectant smile when Mr. Thornton came forward to announce the winner of the medal.

He held it in his hand and showed off its beauty tantalizingly. Also, he held the prize story, and Lucy was quite sure it was her own, but her cheeks flushed painfully as Mr. Thornton called Hattie Haines to come forward and receive the medal.

There was a flutter of surprise, and it was some seconds before timid little Hattie could make up her mind to go.

"This story," said Mr. Thornton, "beautifully illustrates the old proverb, 'Speech may be silver, but silence is gold.' I shall ask her to read it aloud."

Poor frightened Hattie gave him a beseeching glance, but he did not see it, and handed her the manuscript with a bow.

As Lucy listened to the reading of the story she was fully convinced that her thoughtless and unkind words had been heard by Hattie. Her feelings underwent a wonderful change toward her schoolmate. She acknowledged to herself the justice of the decision, and wished heartily that she had acted upon Marjory's hint to become better acquainted with her. At the conclusion of the story she was on her feet and took Hattie's hand.

"That's the best lesson I ever had," she exclaimed, "and I think my story illustrating 'It Is Never Too Late to Mend,' will make a good sequel to it, if you will let it, Hattie; will you? I would like to be friends with you."

"I have always liked you, Lucy," said Hattie as she kissed her impulsively.—Flora Swetnam.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Sunday School Superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference.

Dear Friends: On March 18th, I sent your pastors an order for Children's Day programs for your schools. I hope that you have received them by this time, and if not that you will notify me at once. You might also ask your pastors about them. This should be attended to at once so that you may be able to begin preparations early for the best observance of Children's Day that your schools have ever had.

Please try to make the day a genuinely religious occasion, and I pray that some of your scholars may be saved and brought into the Church on that happy day.

I trust that the amount raised will enable you to surpass the record of last year. The fund raised on Children's Day is greatly needed, as much of it goes to foreign fields where they are actually begging for help. Let us hear and nobly heed their cry this year by largely increased giving.

I have recently sent you a very suggestive leaflet on the "Value of Children's Day Observance" by Mrs. H. M. Hamill. If read carefully, it will help us all to a broader view of the real purpose of Children's Day, the great "Red Letter Day" in our Sunday school work.

Confidently depending upon your hearty co-operation, and thanking you in advance, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ELIZABETH KILPATRICK,

Field Secretary.

The above letter is an added word of emphasis to underscore the word Children's Day in our Sunday school vocabulary. Persistent effort has been made for the past two years to bring our Conference up to the fine standard set by Mr. Pepper in his great Conference—that is to have Children's Day observed in every charge. A gradual increase has been made each year and this year it is hoped that every pastor and every superintendent will feel that it is his privilege and duty to help bring about the observance of this day. It comes in the beautiful spring season, and should be made to mean a great deal to every school.

Editorial.

THE AMBIGUITY IN OUR RITUAL.

We publish this week two lengthy articles concerning our Ritual for the Baptism of Infants—one by Dr. E. W. Alderson of Greenville, Texas, who was the Chairman of the Committee on Revisals at the last General Conference and who was the author of the paragraph in question, and another which appeared as an editorial in the Pacific Methodist Advocate, of which Rev. W. E. Vaughan is the editor. We make no apology for thus using so much space, since this is a matter which concerns the whole Church and in which we have been deeply interested ever since this change was made in our Book of Discipline. Indeed, we have put ourself to a considerable amount of trouble that we might obtain such information as would enable us to lay this question intelligently before our leaders and people in advance of the meeting of the next General Conference.

Our object in reproducing the editorial from the Pacific Methodist Advocate is to give some idea of the difference of opinion that exists concerning the wisdom of this change in our Ritual and as to the probable effects of it. Dr. Mann, it will be noted, holds that it clearly teaches the doctrine of birth, or congenital, regeneration, which he thinks is a repudiation of our Methodist standards, and which he believes must exert a disastrous influence upon the Church in the coming years. Brother Vaughan takes the position that a new statement in conflict with the teachings of Wesley and Clarke (and, of course, with our Twenty-five Articles of Religion) has been made; that we have outgrown the Founder of Methodism and the famous Commentator; that we have plenty of men, far wiser and abler men than they, and that this new teaching is wholesome and should be approvingly received. We have observed in the church press, though they are not reflected in the editorial under consideration, the expression of two other opinions, which either in whole or in part differ from the foregoing ones: one is, that the paragraph referred to does not at all teach the doctrine of birth regeneration; the other is, that it does clearly teach it, but that birth regeneration is in perfect harmony with Wesley, Fletcher, and Clarke, and with our Articles of Religion.

Such is the muddle in which we have been left by this alteration made in our Ritual at the last General Conference. Some of our preachers are rejoicing over what they are pleased to term the new position taken by the Church concerning the state of infants, while others are lamenting the fact that we have departed from the sound teaching of the fathers. We know men who in point of ability and distinction are the equals of any in the Connection that will not use the new Ritual in baptizing infants, because they think that it repudiates the Master's teaching as to the universal necessity of regeneration. Manifestly such a mixed-up condition of affairs should not be allowed to continue.

With the limited space at our disposal, we cannot at this time enter upon anything like a full discussion of our present unfortunate predicament, but we shall offer a few general reflections:

1. If the doctrine of birth regeneration has been incorporated into the Book of Discipline, it is obviously out of harmony with the Seventh and Eighth of our Twenty-five Articles of Faith. "A nature that is corrupt, inclined to evil, and that continually, is certainly not regenerate in the Scriptural sense. Such a view would require all our definitions of that blessed experience to be rewritten.

2. If a "new statement" that conflicts with our Articles of Religion was placed in the Discipline, it was unconstitutional, and ought to have been vetoed by the College of Bishops. And in case they failed to do this, if such a conflict were admitted, the new enactment would still be illegal, and the Church would be under no obligation to regard it. If our Articles of Religion are to be modified or set aside, let it be done in the prescribed constitutional manner. It is nothing short of amazing that an editor of one of our connectional organs should be boasting of how the Church has repudiated Wesley and Clarke, and of how a new and different statement of faith has been placed in the Discipline by a mere majority vote of the General Conference. What has become of his loyalty to the Constitution of the Church? Has he grown to be so wise and progressive that he wants to fling that away as well as the teachings of the ignorant Adam Clarke and the diminutive John Wesley? We would not be severe, but we confess to a bit of impatience with a Methodist preacher who in this day can depreciate the majestic Founder of Methodism. Only a few days since, the Central Christian Advocate, edited by the brilliant Dr. Spenser, contained the following words which contrast strikingly with those of Brother Vaughan: "John Wesley is the central figure in the history of Methodism—indeed, he is one of the central figures of the Anglo-Saxon race. Buckle, Lecky, Green, and Leslie Stephen place him there. A distinguished German, a professor in Halle, writes that, 'in the many-sidedness of his education, and in his unwearied interest in all branches of knowledge, he is without a peer amongst revival preachers in any age.'"

We dare say that if those whom our confreres enumerate as "wiser and better men" than Clarke, Watson, or Wesley, were urged to throw their writings into the fire on the ground that they themselves could easily furnish the Church with something superior to them, they would ask with some vehemence to be excused from undertaking such a task. We should like to hear the replies of Bishops Wilson, Candler, and Hoss to such a proposal. True, Wesley was no god—he was not infallible; but he was one of those extraordinary men seemingly raised up by the Almighty to meet a great emergency—a "choice vessel" with such a perception of spiritual truth as has been vouchsafed to but few in the history of the human race. Such geniuses in any realm are rare. There has been no other poet like Shakespeare either before or since he wrote. And there has been in the Christian Church since the eighteenth century no other leader of the commanding stature of John Wesley; and back of him there is none until we come to the mighty "monk who shook the world"; and back of Luther we find none of like proportions until we come to the majestic figure of St. Paul. Such was the man who laid the foundations of Methodism. And with all due deference to our progressive brother-editor, we beg to say that there are some things in the Christian religion that have been forever settled, and that most of these have been incorporated into the constitution of Methodism. These fundamentals need no tinkering with. Brother Vaughan's plea for unconscious conversions must be passed over for the present, though it ought to have attention.

3. If the language inserted in the new Ritual was not intended to repudiate the standards of the Church, but only to set forth her teaching more impressively and to guard against certain errors, it ought to be made so clear as to admit of no misconstruction. Dr. Alderson clearly states that he had no thought of committing the Church to the doctrine of birth regeneration. All the other members of the Committee on Revisals who have written us, except two or three, state emphatically the same thing. Manifestly, therefore, no such interpretation may fairly be placed upon the words of this paragraph. But the language is undoubtedly ambiguous and confusing, and should be amended when our law-making body next assembles. Dr. Alderson himself, though he thinks that we have gained by the change that has been made, admits that there is ambiguity and suggests certain modifications as advisable. What we think of the substitutions which he proposes, we shall state in a later editorial.

If we understand him correctly, we are in hearty accord with Dr. Alderson's views concerning the religious state of infants and the possibility of the early regeneration of children. We have never held that any guilt rests upon them at an irresponsible age, or that they must first plunge into sin before they can be quickened into spiritual life. Our only contention has been that in every case such a work, subsequent to birth, must be wrought by the Holy Spirit in response to an exercise of faith; and that this is the great goal toward which every child should be faithfully and steadily led. This seems to be substantially what Dr. Alderson affirms to be his belief in his able and interesting discussion.

In conclusion, we shall only say that in bringing forward this important matter it is not our purpose to re-open our paper at this time to a general discussion of the spiritual state of infants and their relation to the divine kingdom. That subject has recently been pretty well threshed out in our columns. What we are concerned with now is the hurtful confusion that spoils our Order for the Baptism of Infants, which we hope to see remedied by the next General Conference.

WISE AND TIMELY WORDS.

Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in addressing a class of young men about to enter into the work of the itinerancy in the State of New York a few days ago, made the following striking utterance:

"A preacher should not be a man of altitudes, latitudes, or platitudes. Jesus does not propose to have a referendum held every now and then to determine how the Scriptures shall be interpreted by those selected to represent him; neither does he intend to submit to a vote of Greater New York whether the Decalogue shall be abrogated, modified, or repeated. It is not for us to stand before the world apologizing for Jesus Christ. It is for us to stand before the world telling people what Jesus Christ told us to tell."

This is what we call a center shot. There has been far too much apologizing for the teachings of Christianity from our pulpits all over the country within recent years. We need to proclaim the truths of the Gospel with a note of authority, rather than to defend them or to try so to modify them as to make them popular. What is wanted is a full, clear, and forceful presentation of the Divine Word, leaving it—re-enforced as it is by the Holy Spirit—to make its own appeal to the longing human soul. As the Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, in discussing the methods and success of Billy Sunday in a recent issue, expressed it: "The day of hiding, trimming and compromise is past; it has become a disgust. The time for a noble and bold testimony has come."

WHY NOT MAKE IT GENERAL?

At the recent session of the Port Gibson District Conference, which, under the splendid leadership of Rev. T. W. Adams, the capable presiding elder, was a meeting of unusual interest, it was resolved by the preachers of that District to make a special campaign for the Advocate during the month of May. This was a happy suggestion, and we wish that all the pastors in the three patronizing Conferences would adopt it and make the effort to extend the circulation of the Conference organ at the time designated a general one throughout Mississippi and Louisiana. Why not? Certainly few things are worse needed than to get the church paper in the homes of our people. Two or three new subscribers from every charge would give the Advocate a considerable boost, and at the same time strengthen every worthy cause in both Church and State. Help us, dear brethren, that we may be able to help you more.

CHANCELLOR KIRKLAND ELECTED.

From the Memphis News-Scimitar of April 25, we take the following dispatch sent from Little Rock, Ark.: "Dr. J. H. Kirkland, Chancellor of Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn., was to-day elected by the Board of Trustees of the University of Arkansas to the presidency of that institution. He met a Committee representing the Board in Memphis last week and agreed to accept the position if tendered him. President Kirkland will take charge on July 1. Mr. J. C. Hardy, President of Baylor College for Women at Belton, Texas, for the past two years, was chosen Dean of the Agricultural College at Fayetteville. He was formerly President of the Mississippi A. and M. College at Starkville."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

The contract has been let for a new $50,000 Methodist Church in Helena, Ark. The building is to be completed within the next six months.

Rev. J. W. Thompson, of Meadville, Miss., reports a successful meeting at Bude, Miss., which was conducted by Rev. G. H. Galloway. His account of it will appear later.

Rev. J. E. Williams favored us with a club of ten subscribers from the Hickory charge (Mississippi Conference) a few days since. He reports that his work is progressing favorably.

Rev. J. A. Biffle, of Longton, Miss., while attending the Sardis District Conference at Como a few days ago, remembered us with several subscriptions. He stated in his letter that Bishop Murrah was presiding at the Conference, and that the sessions were being well attended and were highly profitable.

The Commencement sermon of the Crystal Springs High School was preached in the Baptist Church of that city by Rev. B. F. Lewis on April 20. It was an appropriate and helpful message.

Hon. J. S. Sexton, of Hazlehurst, Miss., delivered an address at the service held in the interest of the "Galloway Memorial Fund" at the Methodist Church in Yazoo City last Sunday. Mr. Sexton was a life-long and trusted friend of Bishop Galloway.

Dr. J. W. Moore delivered an able and comforting sermon on "Divine Providence" to a large and interested audience at the First Methodist Church of this city last Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m. The music and the singing, by both the choir and the congregation, were also enjoyable and helpful.

Mrs. J. L. Forsythe, in ordering her paper changed from Washington City to Sharon, Wis., kindly says: "I always enjoy the Advocate because it always brings news from my friends in Louisiana and Mississippi. I feel as if I really knew you, and I greatly enjoy your work."

In forwarding us some names for our subscription files, Rev. L. P. Wasson, of Tunica, Miss., reports his work as moving on encouragingly. He has recently had with him in a series of services, Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, whose preaching, he affirms, was of a very high order.

Rev. C. A. Bowen, a son of the Rev. J. A. Bowen and pastor of the Trinity M. E. Church, South, of Birmingham, Ala., was a guest of Rev. M. L. Burton at Gulfport, Miss., last week. Cawthon was reared in Mississippi, and both he and his father are held in loving remembrance by many in that State.

We are indebted to Brother P. M. Franklin, of Delay, Miss., for six subscriptions, sent in a few days since. This is the tenth year in succession that Brother Franklin has worked up a club of subscribers for the Advocate. He also this time favored us with a few brief notes from his section of country which will appear next week.

At a meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society at Trenton, Tenn., last week, Bishop Lambuth is reported as having declared that the action of the Chinese government in requesting the Christian churches in that country to pray for the success of the young Republic, is the most remarkable occurrence in the history of Christianity.

Rev. Eugene Johnson, our worthy pastor at Ripley and Blue Mountain (North Mississippi Conference), favored us with a fine club of fourteen subscribers on the 23d ult. It is nothing new for Brother Johnson to look carefully after the interests of the Advocate in his charge. He serves a choice people, and his work is in a good condition.

In a personal note to the Editor, Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Winona, Miss., says: "We have just closed a ten days' meeting here. Rev. J. H. Holder, of Okolona, Miss., was with us, and gave us as fine a series of sermons as one usually hears. The services were helpful to all, and there were 12 accessions to the Church on profession of faith."

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, who has been very successful in holding the friendship and confidence of the boys of his congregation at Sardis, Miss., by organizing Boy Scout companies, has decided to undertake to organize the girls of the church into companies of the Camp Fire Girls of America. He has sent for books of instruction and has enrolled the names of 30 who are willing to join.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Gulfport, Miss., the efficient superintendent of our Gulf Coast Mission, writes that at the recent session of the Woman's Council, Misses Long and Stubbs, the deaconesses at the Biloxi Wesley House, were reassigned to their same work. He further states that these workers will establish a day nursery in connection with their kindergarten and night school departments.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, our pastor at Monticello, Miss., is pressing the claims of the Advocate in his rounds with gratifying success, having sent last week a club of six subscribers. Brother Bennett will be the host of the Brookhaven District Conference, which will meet at Georgetown, one of his appointments, May 6-9. We are grateful to him for a cordial invitation to attend this gathering.

A dispatch to the Memphis Commercial Appeal on the 24th ult., stated that Mrs. Long, wife of the Rev. W. Fred Long, of Jackson, Miss., who had been seriously ill for some days, had found it necessary to submit to an operation at the Jackson Sanitarium. She was reported to have stood the trying ordeal well, and her condition was thought to be encouraging. We pray that she may be speedily restored to health.

Having noticed in a late issue of the Advocate that one of the two evangelists appointed at the last session of the Louisiana Conference, has accepted a pastoral charge, Dr. John T. Sawyer of this city desires us to remind the Louisiana pastors that he is always ready to assist them in holding revival services. He will be glad to hear from any brother who is in need of help. His address is P. O. Box 1563, New Orleans, La.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, writes that the Commencement sermon of that institution will be preached by Rev. I. D. Borders, of Aberdeen; that Rev. J. H. Felts, of Corinth, will preach the sermon before the Y. W. C. A., and that Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, will deliver the Baccalaureate Address. We have in hand an interesting statement concerning the work of this school from the pen of Brother Countiss, which will be published in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, has issued a card announcing his schedule of services for the month of May. Sunday, May 11, will be Mothers' Day, and on the succeeding Sabbath Children's Day will be celebrated. Brother Singleton is having excellent congregations and there is much activity in the Master's service upon the part of his members. The beautiful new pipe organ, installed a few weeks ago, has added much to the music and singing at this growing church.

An interesting debate between representatives of Millsaps College and the Mississippi A. and M. College took place in the High School auditorium at Moorhead, Miss., on April 27. The question discussed was, "Resolved, That the law passed by the last Legislature prohibiting corporations from acquiring and owning land in Mississippi for agricultural purposes is just." The A. & M. men, who championed the negative side, won the question, but the $25 gold medal provided by the city of Moorhead for the best debater was awarded to Mr. R. T. Henry, of Millsaps.

Rev. J. F. Campbell, of Rocky Springs, Miss., sends the following good news from his charge: "Things are moving on nicely here. We are trying to do justice to every interest of the Church. We are serving a good people, who are ready to do anything they can to advance the Master's cause. We have organized two Sunday schools, and we are planning for a missionary campaign." Brother Campbell enclosed in his letter six names for our subscription files, with a check to correspond. It is needless to add that we appreciate his good work for the Conference organ.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to the following brethren, whose good service has not elsewhere been mentioned, for having sent in two or more subscriptions to the Advocate within the past few days: Rev. Jas. Porter, Oakland, Miss., 5; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss., 3 (from Vaughan); Rev. J. W. Price, Oak Ridge, Miss., 5; Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, Glenmora, La., 2; Rev. W. J. Wood, Sweetman, Miss., 4; Rev. C. W. Bailey, McCool, Miss., 6; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Heidelberg, Miss., 2; Rev. C. C. Griffin, Pelahatchie, Miss., 6; Mr. J. L. Bell, Newton, Miss., 10; Rev. M. M. Black, Laurel, Miss., 5.

We are pleased to be informed that the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., shows increasing prosperity under the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Woollard. The congregations have appreciably increased, and already 43 have been received into the Church (ten of them on profession of faith), though no meeting has yet been held. The pastor's study has been re-decorated and refurnished, and the entire interior of the building is soon to be touched up and a decided improvement made in the way of lighting it. Brother Woollard is planning to begin on May 11 a series of revival services, in which he will have with him Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, Miss.

Mrs. Ward W. Moore, of Pontotoc, Miss., sends us a clipping from a local paper which gives an extended account of a dining given at the parsonage in Pontotoc on the evening of April 5, complimentary to Rev. W. D. Wendel, the pastor, on the occasion of his forty-fourth birthday, and to the official members of the church. The decorations are described as beautiful and the repast as elegant and sumptuous. Brother and Sister Wendel are said to have charmed all with their gracious hospitality, and the former was presented with a handsome roll-top desk as a testimonial of the appreciation of his people. Bishop Murrah's presence and appropriate remarks are stated to have added much to the enjoyableness of the occasion.

On the occasion of his recent visit to Carrollton, Miss., where he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bingham, Dr. J. W. Lee, of St. Louis, visited the historic home of the late Senator J. Z. George, where he was given a hearty welcome by Dr. and Mrs. William Hayne Leavell. Mrs. Leavell is a daughter of Senator George, and Mr. Leavell is one of the most brilliant and accomplished Presbyterian ministers in the South. Brother Bingham gave a six o'clock dinner complimentary to Dr. Lee, at which Mr. and Mrs. Leavell were present. It was a rare occasion, and the two distinguished divines, though one is an Arminian and the other a Calvinist, are said to have fallen in love with each other. Why shouldn't they? Is there not such a thing as an affinity of culture?

At a recent meeting of the New Orleans Methodist pastors, a committee was appointed, composed of Brothers Sutton, Battle, Thomas, and Moore, to prepare a resolution protesting against the action of the New Orleans City Park Commission granting permission to restaurateurs to sell wine and malt liquors within the limits of City Park. The committee did its work most effectively, and was last week notified that the Commission had rescinded its former action. At its meeting last Monday, the Methodist Ministers' Association addressed a communication to the Commission thanking it for its prompt and commendable recall of its previous order, and Rev. J. L. Sutton was instructed to go in person and deliver a similar message to Mayor Behrman for having used his influence against the granting of the liquor permit.

The Louisiana State Sunday School Association closed its annual convention at Alexandria last Friday. With but few exceptions, the program was carried out exactly as it was advertised that it would be. Special credit is due the energetic Secretary, Mr. J. Van Carter, for the large attendance and the practical program rendered. The Association will hold its next meeting in Lake Charles. Mr. W. A. McKennon, who is the superintendent of our First Church Sunday School at Shreveport, was elected President of the State Association for the ensuing year. Other well known Methodists honored with offices are: Mr. A. M. Mayo of Lake Charles; Mr. P. L. Lawrence of Crowley; Mr. H. N. Pharr of Olivier; Mr. T. W. Holloman of Alexandria, and Mr. H. L. Baker of New Orleans. Mr. Carter was re-elected to the office of General Secretary.

Rev. J. M. Alford, of Standard, La., under date of April 21, writes as follows: "I have just closed a good meeting at Urania, where 19 members were added to our Church. I did my own preaching. The church membership, being a very weak one, was more than doubled. In fact it has not hitherto been known as an appointment; but it has now been placed on the map, and will ask for regular services and make an assessment to pay for them. In view of the fact that this work has been in rather an undeveloped state, my presiding elder, Rev. H. W. May, has given me the privilege of holding revivals outside of my charge as circumstances may permit. I have recently held one meeting in Mississippi, one at Glenmora, La., and expect to be at Long Leaf next week. I can arrange to hold one meeting a month, and I should be glad to hear from any brother in Louisiana or Mississippi who feels that he needs my assistance."

Rev. C. C. Miller, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Monroe, La., was in the city last Monday, and paid our sanctum an appreciated call. He came to New Orleans to celebrate the nuptials of his son, Mr. Eugene K. Miller, of Rochester, New York, and Miss Irma Carroll, an accomplished young lady of the Crescent City. The groom, who is a literary graduate of Centenary College and a law graduate of Tulane University, is in the employ of the L. R. A. Law Publishers of Rochester. The bride formerly lived in Hammond, La., and has many friends and admirers both there and in New Orleans. Brother Miller reported everything as moving on smoothly in his pastorate at Monroe, and stated that his congregations are good, and that the general outlook for the work is quite encouraging. Rev. Wm. Schuhle, the presiding elder of the Monroe District, is making his home with Brother Miller's family in the station parsonage. Brother Miller also stated that he is happy to be out of the presiding eldership and again on the effective list. And he, furthermore, said that he and Brother Schuhle are trying to work up a scheme between now and the next General Conference whereby all the presiding elders may be made effective.

MR. HENRY WELDA was born in Perry County, Miss., on February 3, 1862, and died at his home near Cheraw, Miss., at 6:30 a. m., March 20, 1913, surrounded by loving relatives and friends. He joined the Methodist Church at Hopewell in 1884 and was a faithful member of the same, having served on the board of stewards for several years. On February 18, 1885, he was married to Miss Susanna Merritt, and to them were born nine children, all of whom survive him. He was a devoted husband and father. As a citizen he always stood on the right side of every question. He was only sick a few weeks with typhoid fever, finally yielding to the Master's summons. Interment was made in Hopewell cemetery after services conducted in the church by the writer in the presence of a large assembly of grief-stricken relatives and friends. May they be submissive to God's will and put their trust in him for comfort and guidance during this period of their affliction.—CHAS. E. DOWNER.

Mrs. MINNIE BELL (nee King) was born in 1896 and died April 3, 1913, in the 18th year of her age. She was married on Dec. 25, 1911, to Mr. Bell. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1905 and lived as a consistent member of the same. She was the church organist at Bassfield, Miss., and was also a member of the Woman's Missionary Society. She had a cheerful and happy disposition, was a good dutiful daughter, and a kind, loving, and considerate wife. She was a woman who scattered sunshine and blessings by her life, and was a willing and ready church worker. After a long illness, she died from the effects of typhoid fever. She is gone from us, but we trust that she is in a fairer and better land where there is no sickness and death. May the Lord comfort her loved ones, and may her going be the cause of their drawing closer to the heavenly way, that they may render faithful service unto God.—W. D. DOMINICK.

THOMAS JEFFERSON STEPHENSON was born near Seaboard, N. C., on May 26, 1844, and died at his residence in Warren County, Miss., on Oct. 4, 1912. He accompanied his parents to this State when quite young. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and remained a faithful member of the same until his death. He and his brother enlisted in Company H, 48th Regiment of the Mississippi Volunteers, known as Harris' Brigade, in Vicksburg, in Feb. 1862. His brother was killed in the Battle of the Wilderness. At the close of the war he returned home, connected himself with the State Militia, in which he was a lieutenant, and was ever ready to serve his State. He was married on June 6, 1869, to Miss Sue F. Spratley, who, together with four children, survives him; two children preceded him to the other world. His surviving children are, Mrs. Mary Fox, John M. Stephenson, and Misses Georgia V. and Sallie S. Stephenson, all of Warren County. He also leaves a brother and two sisters, besides numerous friends to mourn his death. He was a devoted husband and an indulgent father.—J. C. PRICE.

Mrs. MARY ANN (Durr) WILLING, daughter of Michael and Caroline Durr, was born in Simpson Co., Miss., April, 17, 1842. She was graduated from the State Female College at Memphis, Tenn., in 1859. On Dec. 18, 1862, she was married to Hon. R. P. Willing, with whom she lived in happy wedlock until his death at Hazle-hurst, Miss., May 7, 1905. She "fell on sleep" April 1, 1913. Mrs. Willing taught at various places during her young ladyhood and during the early years of her married life, frequently as assistant to her husband, who taught for several years after their marriage. She was a woman of great natural ability and unusual mental culture, gentle and gracious of manner and spirit. Her conversion to Christ, which occurred when she was a girl of fifteen, was definite and thorough—the beginning of an experience of great peace and a life of great usefulness. She united at once with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and became an energetic, faithful, and eminently helpful member—an inspiration to her fellow-members and a constant and devoted assistant to her pastors. Mrs. Willing was notably altruistic, finding her highest happiness in doing good to others. She knew Christ, loved him, served him with continuous gladness and zeal, and showed him to others in her noble character and blameless life. Her death is a great loss, not only to her immediate family, but to her church and community.—WM. H. LAPRADE.

JOHN HENRY CAMPMAN was born in Hanover, Germany, Oct. 19, 1831, and died in New Orleans, April 10, 1913. He came to this city in 1846, residing for a time with his Uncle Casper Auch. He worked at several occupations and attended night school. He learned the tinsmith and sheet-iron trade, in which business he started on his own account in 1854, and was the proprietor of the New Orleans Cornice Works and carried on his business up to within a few months of his death. In 1852 he married Miss Laura Lane. Two children were born to them, one of whom, Mrs. Laura Kampman of Shreveport, survives him. His first wife died in 1862. He married Miss Amanda Cummings in 1864. Seven children were born of this union, only one of whom, Miss Lulu Campman of this city, survives him. His second wife died in 1896. In 1897 he married Miss Clara Klopfer, of St. Louis, Mo., who also survives him. From his earliest childhood Brother Campman was taught that "The fear of the Lord was the beginning of wisdom." He often, in relating his religious experience, thanked the Lord for religious parents who taught him to cast his care upon the Lord. During the Civil War he served as a member of the Home Guards. He came to our Church in 1878 from the Lutheran Church, joining the Louisiana Avenue M. E. Church, South, during the first pastorate of Rev. S. Halsey Werlein. He was a most efficient church worker from the beginning. As a Sunday school teacher, steward, class leader, and trustee he was always faithful and diligent. As chairman of the building committee he rendered most valuable service to his church, superintending and directing the work from the laying of its foundation to the completion of the new church. He was a liberal contributor to all the church enterprises according to his means. For many years he was most active in advancing the interests of the Seashore Camp Meeting, being a trustee and the chairman of the Executive Committee. How heavily the burden rested upon him in those early days when thousands attended the meetings and waited upon the Word! He was a man with a clear Christian experience, who loved his Lord and his church. He is missed from his accustomed place as teacher of his Bible class; but he rests from his labors and his works do follow him.—W. B. THOMSON.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Each year the men of every District seem to think that theirs is the best presiding elder. We of the Port Gibson District this year of our Lord, 1913, are no exception to this rule, save that instead of thinking it, we are most positively certain.

Our District Conference was held in the thriving city of Centerville, Miss., some time headquarters for boll weevil operations, but now rapidly becoming the hub of the State in the way of the trucking industry.

On Tuesday afternoon, April 15, the delegates began to gather, and Tuesday evening at 7:45 those who had arrived, together with quite a crowd of citizens, listened with pleasure to a sermon by Rev. George Yeager, of Hamburg, Miss. On Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, Rev. T. W. Adams, our efficient presiding elder, called the Conference to order, and things began to hum. At eleven o'clock we heard with gratification Dr. Robt. Selby, our Conference Secretary of Education, who spoke very entertainingly on the interests of education in general and the work of the Seashore Divinity School. In the afternoon Rev. H. M. Ellis, of Memphis, presented the cause of the Memphis Methodist Hospital and at the end of his speech a resolution was adopted commending the enterprise. Wednesday evening Rev. C. F. Emery, of Vicksburg, preached to a large congregation, and after the sermon Dr. J. M. Sullivan talked a few minutes in the interest of Millsaps College.

Thursday morning, as it was announced before it would be, was given largely to Sunday school interests. Discussions of various vital subjects were given. Prof. R. A. Maddox, the field representative of the Sunday School Board, addressed the Conference on the subject of "Organized Sunday Schools." He is a very able speaker and seems to be well fitted for his work.

At eleven o'clock Dr. T. B. Holloman preached, and after the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. At two o'clock the business of the Conference was resumed, and at three o'clock the ladies of the church gave the visitors a reception which was delightful indeed. At four o'clock two girls from the Port Gibson Female College gave a very interesting Recital, after which Rev. W. M. Williams presented the Orphanage cause. The evening hour was devoted to the consideration of our educational interests. Rev. L. L. Roberts spoke for Whitworth College and President C. M. Chapman for Port Gibson Female College.

Friday morning the last of the charges reported. Two men were licensed to preach—Brothers Marsh and McLaurin. Two very promising young men were recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference. They were Rev. M. F. Adams, our presiding elder's son, and Rev. Joe E. Belew. It was reported that there had been about $130 paid on the Frazier fund, and by subscription $65 was added to it. Port Gibson was chosen as the place of meeting for next year.

Altogether, this was a most interesting session of the Conference. In the northern part of the district the raging floods of the "Father of Waters" held back a number of our delegates who would otherwise have been with us, but notwithstanding this fact, this was the best attended Conference I have ever seen in the Port Gibson District. The spirit of all was good. There was no jar in our proceedings, but a spirit of brotherly kindness was ever present, and the Spirit of the Lord was there. We thank the people of Centerville for their charming hospitality, and we thank God and take courage when we know there is so much spiritual work going on in our District. We are sure that each of us received inspiration that will abide with him until the gleaming of the sunlight reflected from the house-tops and spires of the city of Natchez, and the thud of the wave-beats of the mighty Mississippi shall announce to us that Annual Conference is again at hand, and that therefore the work of 1913 belongs to history, and to the ages.

ELMER C. GUNN,

Secretary.

BAKER, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are having splendid congregations this year. My wife and I recently organized a Ladies' Aid at Deerford. On account of some conditions that existed, we thought it better to organize a Ladies' Aid than a Woman's Home Mission Society. We believe in the Missionary Society and have a very good one here in Baker. The good women of the Baker, Deerford, and Blackwater churches have collected some money for repairs in and on the parsonage, and already we have screened the dining room and purchased a nice iron bedstead, and springs. Some of the rooms are to be papered. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Coleman, came to me on Tuesday before the 2nd Sunday in April and traveled and preached all over my charge. His sermons were very fine. The people, as well as the pastor, were delighted with his preaching, and with his personal visitation. At Deerford on Saturday, April 12, he held my 2nd quarterly conference, and presided to the delight of all. The good women of Deerford had prepared a most bountiful and delicious dinner, which they served in an old store building, near the church, and I assure you that the dinner was enjoyed by all present.

Mr. Editor, I enjoyed having my presiding elder travel over my work. I believe that is as it should be. The people want to see him and he gets a better conception of things in every way. He knows the advantages and the disadvantages—he sees things as they are. I commend the course of Brother Coleman; and I would say to his colleagues in the eldership, "Go thou and do likewise!" It may be that other presiding elders are doing the same kind of work. I hope that they are. Last Sunday we had two delightful services at Blackwater. Both at the morning and night services we had good congregations. Last Tuesday we had our Ministers' and Laymen's Institute in the 2nd Church at Baton Rouge. Brother W. S. Holmes gave us a fine talk on the Financial Plan and Missions in the Sunday school; Rev. W. W. Drake gave us a most excellent address on Missions; Rev. H. W. Bowman gave us a splendid talk on our obligation to support the Church to the extent of our financial ability, and your humble servant gave a talk on Evangelism in the Baton Rouge District. I discussed it under the following heads: (1) The need of it; (2) How to bring it about; (3) Our obligation in it. The Institute, while not as well attended as it should have been, was a success. Our presiding elder presided and made some splendid talks. We are praying that this may be the best year in the history of the Church, not only on my charge and in the Baton Rouge District, but throughout the whole connection. May the Lord bless the Advocate and all its readers.

Get This Canner and Live Like a Prince!

Never Before a Bargain Like This

A $15.00 canner and $2.00 capping steel during May for only $7.75 or three for $22.50.

All records were broken by Miss Nannie Chatham of Forrest Co. Miss., who with this little canner, canned 1852 cans, clearing $137.50 from one-tenth acre. This is a photograph of her displaying the canner we offer and some of her canned goods. If this canner was not the best on the market the Government would not use them in teaching the canning schools.

It comes ready set up for operation and can be operated in ten minutes after it is taken out of the shipping crate. It requires neither cookstove nor furnace, as the firebox is made in the canner. It burns ordinary stove wood and has a daily capacity of 4.0 to 8.0 cans.

With process 43 No. 2 cans at one cooking. This canner is made of extra heavy material and is very durable. It can be moved while in operation without hindrance to the work, and works any kind of glass jars or tin cans. The following accessories makes the outfit complete: 1 canner, 1 capping steel, 1 soldering copper, 1 can tray, 1 fire pot, 1 pair can tongs, and a book of instructions all for only $7.75 or three for $22.50. We can quote exact prices that make them as follows: 100 No. 2, $2.50; 250, $5.00; 500, $9.00; 100 No. 3, $3.00; 250, $6.50; 500, $12.00. Cut this ad out and send to us with the amount of your order and get the most complete little canner on the market. Mrs. J. F. Brewer of Janet, Miss., writes us "I have my canner, tried it and like it fine." Miss Clara Odum of Clark, Miss., writes us "I received my canner from you and it sure is a dandy. No trouble to heat up at all." M. J. Z. Holland of Magazine, Ark., writes us "I have put up over 1000 3 lb. cans and have found ready sale for all my stuff. Could have sold 10,000 tomatoes. Can't see how any farmer can afford to be without a canner."

THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Meek: I desire through the Advocate to request the preachers in the Seashore District to send me at once the names of the delegates to our District Conference, which will convene here on May 13. And please also, if you can, state the number who will attend, and whether it is your purpose to be present. It will not be convenient for us to take care of conveyances and teams.

BISHOP MURRAH AT MONTICELLO, MISS.

On the fifth Sunday of last month Bishop W. B. Murrah made his first visit to this immediate community, in response to a special request, and our people will long remember his great sermon, preached at the Baptist Church at eleven o'clock to a large congregation. His theme was "The Choice of Moses," and for considerably more than an hour he was given the closest attention by all as he eloquently and logically developed his great theme. Brother Bennett, the pastor, was unfortunately absent, being at Ora engaged in a revival meeting. At the conclusion of Bishop Murrah's sermon, opportunity was given by one of the stewards present to make subscriptions on the parsonage debt, with the result that the entire debt was wiped out. By his visit Bishop Murrah has greatly endeared himself to our people, regardless of denomination, and his next coming is anxiously awaited.

MRS. T. L. FOSTER.

It is with great regret that I am having to chronicle the death of Mrs. T. L. Foster, widow of Rev. T. L. Foster, who was for many years a member of the North Mississippi Conference and who for a number of years traveled as an itinerant in Illinois. This sad event occurred on the 24th of March, 1913, at Sallisaw, Oklahoma. After a fourteen months' stay on the Texas coast, Mrs. J. D. Eastis, her daughter, seeing that it was a vain endeavor to regain her health, carried her to Sallisaw, where being stricken with paralysis, she died before the week had passed.

She was born in Illinois, January 23, 1832, and died March 24, 1913. So passed away one who was true in all the positions into which she was called. She was a sympathetic, true and helpful wife, a devoted mother, an uncomplaining toiler with an itinerant minister, and as this writer can testify, a dispenser of refreshing hospitality—all these traits being adorned with a steady faith in Christ. This is the heritage she leaves to a circle of bereaved ones, who await the time of their ascension. May the Lord bless and comfort them.

J. W. DORMAN.

FROM BROTHER SHIPMAN.

Dear Dr. Meek: The following are the committees for the Durant District Conference which will meet at Sidon, Miss., on May 14: License to Preach—Dr. H. G. Henderson, J. D. Simpson, J. B. Streater; Recommendation for Orders—J. M. Wyatt, C. P. Moss, W. F. Rogers; Recommendation for Admission into the Annual Conference on Trial—A. H. Williams, V. C. Curtis, W. A. Clark, Rev. H. G. Henderson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesday, May 14. I trust that you may be with us.

The Louisville charge is the first to report its foreign missionary assessment all paid, with Pickens a close second, and others in sight and still coming. The prospects are good for a new church at Kosciusko, and for a new parsonage at Chester. Myers, too, is about to gather the cyclone kinks out of his church. Brother Rogers is planning for a big tent meeting at Sallisaw. You remember that his church was recently blown down, and Rev. B. P. Jacob has lent him the Winona District tent. We are hoping that he will have a great meeting. Our Sallisaw people are meeting their responsibilities bravely, and are restoring or rebuilding their storm-crushed house of worship. I received a note from Bishop H. C. Morrison recently, and he tells me that he is not gaining strength very rapidly.

SHE STAYED IN BED.

Ingram, Texas.—"Ever since I became a woman," writes Mrs. E. M. Evans, of this place, "I suffered from womanly troubles. Last fall, I got so bad, I had to stay in bed for nearly a week every month. Since I have taken Cardui, I feel better than I have for years." You can rely on Cardui. It acts on the womanly organs and helps the system to regain its normal state of health, in a natural way. Prepared especially for women, it prevents womanly pains by acting on the cause, and builds up womanly strength in a natural way. Purely vegetable. Mild, but certain in action. Try it.

What Does The Future Hold?

Can you see big things ahead—or has the steady grind of monotonous work clouded your vision and stilted your ambition? If that's the case it's time to get out of the rut and get into something that will give you a better opportunity. The has helped and is helping hundreds of men along the pathway to success. It has set them up in the contract ditching business and enabled them to be their own boss and make $15 to $18 a day digging drainage ditches for the farmers in their neighborhood.

Looking at it as a good, hard business proposition, the Buckeye Traction Ditcher offers you an unusual chance—a chance to get into the money making class.

With the Buckeye you can cut on an average of 100 to 150 rods of straight, perfectly graded ditches a day, and keep busy 9 to 10 months in the year.

Our catalog 33 contains all the details of the ditching business. If you really want to make good write for this catalog, today.

MRS. BESSIE W. LIPSCOMB'S ENDORSEMENT OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

It is with deep regret that I sever my connection with Whitworth College and enter upon the new field of work to which I am called at this time. Through a period of thirteen years I have found a happy home for myself and my children, and a congenial field of work in this institution. In Dr. Cooper, under whose able administration I have served for the greater part of this time, I have found a wise leader, whom I honor greatly, and a warm personal friend, and I am deeply grateful to him and his good family for their constant kindness to me and mine.

Under Dr. Cooper's management the College has prospered phenomenally, and is to-day on the eve of its brightest and most useful period, and he deserves for the College the most loyal support of the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference while he steers her affairs into broader seas of service for the Church.

I lovingly and heartily commend Whitworth College and her head and heart, Dr. Cooper, with his faithful corps of helpers, to those seeking the best in a Church school, and I earnestly pray upon them all a continuance of God's blessings.

SUFFERED FOR MONTHS WITH PELLAGRA

Given Up To Die—Used My Treatment Four Months—Now ENTIRELY CURED.

State of Alabama, Walker County.

Before me, J. Frank Baker, a Notary Public in and for said State and county, personally appeared Mrs. Emma Yates, who being duly sworn, deposes and says that on or about the 1st of March, 1911, she called upon Dr. J. —, of Nauvoo, a practicing physician, for treatment for a disease known as pellagra. She used his treatment two months without benefit and was told she could not live. She then went to Dr. E. —, of Nauvoo, but he refused to treat her, saying she could not be cured. After these doctors failed she went to G. P. Baughn on or about December 1, 1911, and after taking Baughn's Pellagra Remedy for one week began to improve. She used his remedy for about four months, when she was entirely cured and in good health. (Signed) EMMA YATES. Sworn to and subscribed before me this, the 19th day of February, 1913.

TERRIBLE TRAIN OF TROUBLES.

Lake Charles, La.—Mrs. E. Fournier, 516 Kirby street, says: "The month before I took Cardui, I could hardly walk. I had backache, headache, pain in my legs, chills, fainting spells, sick stomach, dragging feelings, and no patience or courage. Since taking Cardui, I have no more pains, can walk as far as I want to, and feel good all the time." Take Cardui and be benefited by the peculiar herb ingredients which have been found so efficient for womanly ills. Cardui will relieve that backache, headache, and all the misery from which you suffer, just as it has done for others. Try Cardui.

Extracts from Miss Bennett's Message.

"During the past year two vital needs have loomed up before me. Cause and effect are clearly manifest. The reports of the Secretaries and the Treasurer show that there has been for 1912, a small increase in both membership and collections, but not sufficient to meet the reasonable requests from the fields. If we would maintain our high standard of excellence in buildings, equipped workers, and progressive and fundamental missionary activities, the Home Base must be aroused and worked, now and each succeeding year, with increasing diligence.

"We must have a larger membership, a larger income, and to secure these we must have a larger force at the center directing and developing the Home Base and all that pertains to it. We have no well organized church behind us as inspirers and collectors of a financial assessment on a great membership. We are wholly dependent, under God, on a temporary organization of women and children, with a voluntary and fluctuating membership. From the first years of the work a large number of our intelligent, godly women have given themselves with splendid devotion to the maintenance and enlargement of the society by winning and developing a like interest in other women. They have organized and re-organized Auxiliary, District, and Conference Societies in order that a membership might be instructed and re-enforced, knowing that a relaxation of effort for six months or a year would mean a perceptible decrease in pledged finances which are necessary to support the established missions and the workers on the field. Eternal vigilance, all at it, and at it all the time, has been the price of the woman's missionary organization. But thirty-four years have passed and we still have only about one-tenth of the women and girls of the Church in our ranks, and we are facing new conditions.

"God's work is not done by the Church alone, and the last half-century has seen the rise and development of interdenominational and undenominational organizations—Clubs, Leagues, Unions, and Orders—devoted to all forms of humanitarian and definite Christian work. Church women everywhere are hearing and answering the appeal of these bodies, and if we cannot make it plain to the women of Southern Methodism that they can do as good work through the Woman's Missionary Society to advance the kingdom of God on earth, as through any other channel, they will continue to join the ever-increasing ranks of those who belong to these non-church societies."

Growth of our Work During 1912.

Mrs. J. B. Cobb, Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Department, reports an increase in members and money; the growth of members has been greatest where there has been a Conference Organizer. North Georgia heads the list with 1,434 new members during the past six months. The increase in auxiliaries is 772, making a total of 4,855. The increase in membership is 7,008, making a total of 106,894.

Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, Corresponding Secretary of the Home Department, reports an increase of 605 auxiliaries and 12,672 members. The local work done through the auxiliary committees on Local Work and Social Service among the needy, sick and strangers shows $337,395 expended in relief.

Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Council Treasurer, shows a total of $293,823.95 in the Foreign Department, an increase of $13,670.88 over the total for 1910. The Home Department shows a total of $181,461.42 including the Homer Toberman bequest of $13,000. The Week of Prayer Offering brought in nearly $12,000. The total from the South Georgia Conference was more than $29,000.

New Deaconesses and Missionaries.

There were nine new deaconesses consecrated at the recent Council Meeting in Birmingham. Five were from our Scarritt Bible and Training School; the remaining four from the Methodist Training School. Bishop McCoy conducted the consecration service.

Twelve Foreign missionaries were consecrated by Bishop Lambuth. Two of them, Misses Bessie and Eva Hardie, are the daughters of our Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Hardie, missionaries in Seoul, Korea. These two young women have been in the United States for nine years completing their literary education. One medical missionary, Dr. Hattie F. Love, has been appointed to China. She is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College and the Woman's Medical College, and has served an Internship in the Memorial Hospital, at Worcester, Mass. This past year has been spent at Scarritt. She is eminently qualified for the work to which she is assigned.

Scarritt Endowment Fund.

The Committee on Extension of Work, Foreign Department, urges "that the Conference Secretaries be strenuous in their efforts in behalf of the completion of the Scarritt Endowment Fund, and that each auxiliary pay at least $2 toward this Fund."

Special Work for the Children and Young People.

The Council recommended "that the pledge in the Children's Department be $25,000, and be directed, according to recommendation of the Committee on Extension of Work, to the Girls' School at Rio for the Foreign Department; and to primary work in Brevard, Ruth Hargrove, and Pacific Coast for the Home Department."

They further recommended that the Young People's specials for 1913 be $15,000 for the McTyeire School in the Foreign Department, and $5,000 for Laredo in the Home Department.

Bishop Lambuth on Brazil.

"This is a field which is going to build a great nation, for God has given to it material resources that can mean nothing less. Only the wide dissemination of the gospel of the living Christ is needed. Another pressing need is room to house our work, and equipment that will make it possible to do standard work. The leading men of Rio came to our women and said, 'We are tired of sending our daughters to Paris and Rome; build a great school here, and we will give of our money, and will give patronage.' You cannot rule the millions of Brazil unless you mold their ideals. Give money enough to buy lands and put up a great building in the capital city of Brazil and that will be the hinge upon which the whole mission work of the Republic shall move."

Five young women from Paine College have volunteered to begin training for missionary service.—Council Daily.

LOOKOUT INSECT POWDERS

WHAT MRS. HEN SAYETH
Good-bye, folks! I'm going to leave you. I don't know where I'll stop, but it will be with people who will take better care of me and use Lookout Insect Powders and Lice Killer Nest Eggs when I need them. I may look funny to you, but I don't feel funny. In fact, I was never more serious and miserable in my life. The hen house is a perfect hell.

The lady hen next door to me died on her nest, three days before hatching, actually eaten alive by lice and mites which you made no effort to get rid of. I stuck to my nest and hatched fourteen chicks, but it would have been better had they never been born, as the lice and mites got them all in less than three weeks.

Every other chicken on your place has either died or "runned" away, and I'm going too—YOU BET!

GOOD-BYE, and may the lice and mites follow you home, and run you crazy, and may the Cruelty to Animals Society lock you up.

WORTH A TRIAL?

If you were kept awake at nights from some tormenting skin disease; if you were suffering agonies from some lacerated, festering wound, with the chances of losing a limb from blood poison, would a preparation with a record of relieving and curing thousands of similar cases be worth a trial? For 32 years (nearly a century) Gray's Ointment has been used with most pleasing results in treatment of ulcers, boils, carbuncles, burns, bruises, old sores, poisonous bites, tumors and other skin troubles. It is absolutely reliable and can be implicitly depended upon to give quick relief in the most aggravated cases. Write Dr. W. F. The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Since the coming of the Bowman-Hicks lumber mill to Oakdale, where there is one mill already and another one coming (the same company as that at Fisher), Rev. S. L. Riggs, the pastor, with Mr. J. W. Hughes, the superintendent, is organizing a Sunday school on modern lines, and is planning to build a $5,000 church. He expects within a very few years to have one of the best stations in the Conference. He already has five Sunday school teachers who have had Normal or Montegale training, and expects from the first to have a school that will measure up to our present Standard of Excellence. His school will meet in the town hall. A tent is to be used during the summer while a church is being built. It will be remembered that Brother Riggs built the splendid church at DeRidder, under very adverse circumstances.

It is suggested that unless Adult Bible class members are given some active work to do there is great danger that they will suffer a reaction from the enthusiasm by which the big class was built up and lapse into a worse state than if they had never been brought under the class influence at all. Religion does not consist alone in the truths of the Bible, but must find expression by putting those truths into practice, and that teacher who can plan helpful lines of work not only renders the Church a service, but is also a greater blessing to the one whom he teaches to serve. And there are special advantages derived by the pupils doing team work—a whole class engaged in a common task—that appeals to adults as being worth while. Banners and badges are a good thing for soldiers on holidays and dress parades; but if they should take the place of battles, war would lose its glory and soon fail to attract brave men. Play is good for the child when it is a means to the end, aiding him in growing to be a man, but the sport that does nothing but play is a nuisance. The social pleasures of a Bible class are of great value in cultivating the fraternal spirit and in making up the "team", but to be a Bible Christian and follow the Master means a great deal more than simply being a fraternal member of a Bible class. All kinds of social service, mission work, Sunday school extension work, benevolent work, and local church work need the help of our Adult Sunday school scholars, and they need to do this work. Let no class have a reaction from enthusiasm caused by non-activity.

Approving the Work of the Field Secretary.

At the session of the Port Gibson District Conference held in Centerville, Miss., April 16-18, 1913, the following resolutions regarding the work of Mr. R. A. Maddox, Field Secretary for the Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, this Conference has greatly enjoyed and been greatly helped in Sunday school matters by the presence and ministry of Mr. R. A. Maddox, field agent for the Mississippi Conference, therefore be it Resolved:

(1) That we heartily thank Brother Maddox for his work among us, and that we commend him and his Ministry to the people throughout the Conference.

(2) That we especially invite him into our pastorates and pledge ourselves to an earnest endeavor to collect the assessment for Sunday school extension placed on our charges.

(3) That we consider Brother Maddox to be the best representative possible for us to get at present and decidedly the right man in the right place.

FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE.

From Leesburg, Fla., on April 4, the fiftieth anniversary of the occasion when he was licensed to preach, Bishop H. C. Morrison wrote the St. Louis Christian Advocate a most interesting letter, from which we have taken the following extracts:

"Just 50 years to-day since I was given authority to try to preach the gospel, and at the time was plainly told, by two distinguished physicians that, 'if you go into the pulpit, you cannot live six months.' My reply was, 'I prefer to go that way.' Without health, without education, without experience, and with no surplus whatever of common sense, I went to the pulpit. It was poor preach, Doctor; but God was with me and gave me souls. I never understood it; but am sure he did. My weakness became a background for his power. Two years I served as a local preacher (part of that time in the Confederate Army); then 25 years as a pastor, nearly all that time in the heavy charges. Following this, eight years in the Missionary Secretaryship, and 15 years in my present department of service, making altogether 50 years.

"I have seen, approximately, 8,000 conversions. I did what I could as Missionary Secretary, as I also have in my present sphere of service—some of the things done were wise, some otherwise, as judged by myself and a few aspiring brethren.

"So here we are at the close of half a century of service. Allowed 'six months to live' at the beginning, three times given up to die, and yet little time lost in the 50 years, and now in good hope, by God's will and blessing, of spending some years yet in putting a heel-tap of some years' service on the completed half century.

"After raising a few thousands recently for church building, I went down to my couch, not knowing how the attack would terminate. Do not know now; although I am much improved and have prospects of getting well soon.

"However, I examined the ground. I found it solid. There was no alarm and the outlook was one of perfect peace. My dear friend, I came within sight of the ground on which Paul stood when he wrote, 'I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better.' I got near enough to realize what the Apostle meant. Doctor, our Christianity is real—gloriously real!"

The New Immigrant Station in New Orleans, Now Being Completed at a Cost of More Than $150,000.

NEW ORLEANS METHODISM.

South Louisiana, including New Orleans, was a hundred years ago little less than a foreign land where the English language was little spoken. It is to-day a garden spot peopled with an aggressive and cosmopolitan population. But while vast stretches of swamp lands have been redeemed and residences and factories have been built, the inhabitants have not been evangelized and the growth of the Church has not kept pace with the growth of the country in population and commerce.

New Orleans is a city of some 350,000 people. They embrace every nationality under the sun. Methodism is here represented by eleven preachers, sixteen congregations, and 2868 members. Each congregation has its own problems. First Church is the only down-town church, and it ministers to large congregations at every service. It is the center of missionary activity, and from it the affairs of the Mary Werlein, the St. Paul, and St. Mark's Hall (in part) missions are largely conducted. But First Church faces an indebtedness of nearly $23,000 on its church and parsonage buildings, which, for its not large membership of mostly wage-earning people, causes the annual cost of maintaining it to be a considerable burden.

From the standpoint of missionary opportunity Second Church occupies the point next in importance. It is the only regular congregation in what is known as old, or French Town, and with its two missions—the St. Mark's Italian Church and the Franklin Avenue—is all that Methodism has in the center of a population of more than 100,000 souls. Second Church is out of debt and its members, composed of about seven different nationalities, are struggling to master the situation that environs them.

Both the Carrollton Avenue and Felicity Street Churches are out of debt and are, in addition to maintaining their own churches, conducting important missions—the former, Cambonne Mission, and the latter, Douglass Park Mission. Felicity has a commodious and beautiful church building and a well appointed parsonage. Carrollton Avenue has a beautiful parsonage, but is cramped for room in its church building, and therefore needs to build at once.

Of the other churches of New Orleans, Parker Memorial possibly ministers to a larger number of people through its Sunday school and other departments of church work than any other church in the city. From a mission it has grown in the past few years to its present dimensions, having constructed a beautiful church building which is thoroughly furnished. While the membership is small and there is a debt of $10,000 on its building and organ, this band of faithful men and women are straining every point to do the work that Providence seems to have set before them. Rayne Memorial has a membership that probably is in the best condition financially of any Methodist congregation in New Orleans, but it faces the fact that its one-room church building is no longer adequate. Standing in the very heart of the uptown residence section, it will be forced to undertake great things in the future in order to minister properly to those who attend its services.

Louisiana Avenue is an old church, well equipped but lacking in financial support. Epworth Church has grown from a Sunday school six years ago to a thriving congregation. It is now worshipping in the Sunday school room of the proposed new church and needs to construct the main auditorium at the earliest day possible. Algiers has a Sunday school of more than 200 that is being held in a two-story building that was thought large enough 50 years ago, but which must be replaced by a new and modern structure in the immediate future. McDonoghville is an old mission that is just now beginning to make progress.

Such are the present conditions in New Orleans, and this city has just now entered upon an era of advancement that is destined to place it among the foremost cities of the world. On March 27, the new immigrant station was opened in Algiers, one of the wards of New Orleans, and special efforts are now being put forth to bring to this city from all parts of the world immigrants in large numbers. Next October the Panama Canal will open its gates to the first steamship and forthwith this city will become the distributing point for a large part of the Mississippi Valley in its dealings with foreign countries. The Gould interests are now excavating for the construction of one of the finest depots in the South, and have plans for improvements along the River front that will cost $10,000,000. These are but a few of the strides that are being made here along commercial lines, and they bespeak the fact that New Orleans is bound to grow by leaps and bounds. Methodism confronts the greatest problem in New Orleans to-day that it does anywhere in the South, and its local congregations, burdened with debt, and paying now almost to the limit of their ability, should not be expected to solve it alone. A. J. GEARHEARD.

SOME FACTS OF INTEREST.

It will interest some of your readers to know that the father of the distinguished American printer, Theo. L. DeVinne, was an active missionary in the South.

For a great many years Rev. Daniel DeVinne contributed to the National Magazine, an illustrated monthly published in New York and edited by Abel Stevens (the eminent author of a great many books concerning American Methodism). The contents are very similar to the earlier issues of Harper's Monthly which, however, had evidently greater staying power. The engravings, especially those of birds, are exceedingly good; the latter accompany a series of articles on birds which are recreations in ornithology.

One of Dr. DeVinne's articles is a description of "The Prairies of Louisiana" in the neighborhood of Bayou Queue de Tortue and the Vermilion River, in which the want of roads made travelling very difficult.

ACROSS THE OCEAN IN AN AUTO A POSSIBILITY OF THE FUTURE.

That we will some day cross the ocean in an automobile seems to be the conviction of several expert machinists. Major J. O. Wright has recently constructed a water automobile. The machine is not a beauty, but it glides over the water at about five miles an hour. It will go equally well on land.

It consists of a framework of light steel and oak, twenty-five feet long and eight feet wide, and is mounted on three wheels, the two in front being of iron and wide-rimmed. Surrounding the framework and only a few inches above the ground is a large air-filled steel cylinder which keeps the machine afloat while on the water.

In the "bow" of the craft is a gasoline engine which transmits power to the front wheels when the machine is crossing land, or to an ordinary screw propeller, such as are used on motor boats, for propulsion on water.

This propeller is under the machine and well out of the way when it is traveling as a land automobile. On the framework of the machine is a platform which will hold a score of men. Two men are needed to operate the machine.

This combination motor and boat has been used successfully in running the survey lines through the vast swamps of the Everglades in Florida.—Chicago Tribune.

"A CALL FOR MOTHERS."

It is characteristic of every generation to count itself superior to those which have gone before it. We are disposed to regard every change that takes place in our customs, manners, laws, or institutions as but another step in the upward path of progress. Some one has said that a man usually thinks of every other person as being mortal and liable to die any moment except himself. In like manner, every nation is disposed to indulge the fancy that, though other empires decayed and went down, it will endure until the end of time. But the lesson that history teaches is exactly the reverse of this. It shows us nation after nation growing strong and great while its people lived a plain and simple life, but later becoming increasingly corrupt as wealth and luxury multiplied, until there followed a moral degeneracy that undermined the foundations of the social order and caused it to topple to the ground in ruins. If we were asked to name what vice did the most to wreck the governments and civilizations of the past, we should promptly answer, sexual licentiousness. So long as a nation's home life is what it ought to be, it will stand secure; but when its home life has become generally corrupt, no sort of expedient can save it.

Napoleon is reported to have said on one occasion that the most urgent need of France was "Mothers." They are the most imperative need of every age and land. Thanks be to God, we yet have in America many of them who measure up to a high standard, but there are some things going on in our country which clearly indicate that they are by no means as plentiful as they ought to be. A recent issue of the Memphis News-Scimitar contained the following forceful utterance, which bears so pertinently upon this important subject that we gladly give it a place in our columns:

"While their daughters 'turkey trot' and 'bunny hug,' or parade the streets dressed more after the fashion of the woman of the streets than of modest girlhood, where are the mothers? If thoughtless girls do such things, what shall be said of the mothers who have so far forgotten the duties of motherhood as to permit or encourage them? At Palm Beach, Fla., the other day when a thoughtless (or worse) young man had made all arrangements for the younger set to turkey trot in bathing costumes on the beach to the accompaniment of a talking machine, a mother who had a proper sense of her duty declined to have her daughters take part in such a proceeding and the vulgar performance was nipped in the bud.

"But where are the mothers that demand a restraining hand? Do they no longer care about the amusements their daughters seek? Are they no longer concerned how their daughters dress? Is maidenly modesty becoming a thing of the past? A revolution in manners and morals is taking place with little or no protest from those who should be first to speak—the mothers. The vogue of filthy and beastly dances in supposedly good society, the vulgar and suggestive styles, and the general laxity of conduct even among boys and girls still in their early teens, constitute a terrible indictment of the mothers of the day whose eyes have been so blinded that they do not see whither we are moving. Give us a revival of old-fashioned mothers who will restore the simple customs that used to characterize the period of childhood and youth."

REPORT OF THE NEW YORK SABBATH COMMITTEE.

Through the courtesy of Mr. W. P. Swartz, its General Secretary, we have received a copy of the "Report of the New York Sabbath Committee for Its Fifty-sixth Year." This organization was effected in 1857 by citizens who desired to resist the encroachments that even then were beginning to threaten the peace and quiet of the Christian Sabbath. At first the Committee restricted its labors to the great city in which it had its origin, but later began to include the whole State of New York in its operations. It has done, and is doing, a great work, the influence of which is felt throughout the Nation.

This interesting report gives a summary of the Sabbath legislation enacted last year by State Legislatures, and also calls attention to many of the bills which were introduced and defeated, or which are still pending. Changes in the laws of only three States were made during the year 1912. In New York an amendment was adopted allowing the City Magistrate's Court to sit on Sunday, just as it does on other days; in Louisiana Sunday was made a legal holiday, so that all contracts made thereon are illegal; and in Georgia some alterations were made allowing larger liberty in the handling of trains carrying perishable farm products. We are pleased to note that in its legal contests with the theatrical and baseball enthusiasts in New York who sought to evade the law, the Committee was generally successful.

But by far the most notable feature of the Committee's Report is the announcement of a plan to establish a "Department of Scientific Research into the Influence of the Sabbath Upon Human Welfare." It is designed to have the scope of this inquiry include the influence of the weekly Sabbath: (1) Upon the physical well-being of man; (2) Upon his mental well-being; (3) Its influence upon domestic life; (4) Upon industrial efficiency and business profit; (5) Upon man's civic and political well-being; (6) Upon his religious well-being.

We believe that data on these important questions scientifically gathered and tabulated would be of very great value. The Report calls attention to the fact that this new method of procedure will differ from much of the work done in the past in behalf of the Christian Sabbath, "in that it will be constructive rather than repressive."

We regret to note that the Committee has lost by death some of its most generous contributors at this time when it needs an addition of several thousand dollars to its annual income for the prosecution of this new work which it is inaugurating. Contributions of any size will be gratefully received, and may be sent to The New York Sabbath Committee, 31 Bible House, New York City. Since the whole country will receive the benefit of the work done by this Department of Scientific Research, it seems proper that the Christian public of the entire nation should assist in maintaining it. It has the hearty endorsement of many prominent ministers in all the Churches, including the Roman Catholic.

SHOULD NOT UNDERTAKE TOO MANY THINGS.

This is an age when ministers are strongly urged by many of our educators and church bureaus to meddle with all kinds of knowledge, and to participate in a great variety of activities, religious, social, humanitarian, and industrial. We have long believed that this is unwise teaching—that it tends to unmake rather than to develop a preacher, and also to so scatter his energies that he can accomplish little in any department of service. It is somewhat strange that at this time, when those in other occupations are more and more recognizing the need of concentrating and becoming specialists, the man engaged in the work of the Christian ministry should be exhorted to spread himself out and try to become a sort of jack-of-all-trades. Holding the views in regard to these matters that we do, we were pleased to note a few days ago an utterance confirmatory of our position by Dr. J. H. Jowett, the brilliant pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, who is one of the most conspicuously successful ministers in the English-speaking world. In one of his lectures to the Yale divinity students which were on the General theme, "The Preacher: His Life and Work," he said:

"I am a strong believer in a very few schemes, but tried to the utmost; I believe in a few mines, but worked for all they are worth. The life of our day tempts us to diffuseness. We are tempted to have too many irons in the fire, and we don't beat any of them to final 'shape and use.' Gentlemen, have a few well-designed and well-proportioned schemes. Don't lose yourself in dreams. Lay your hands upon a few things, and hold on to them like grim death, and make them pay daily tribute to the Lord your God. Master something. Finish something, or be still working away at it when the Lord promotes you to higher service."

Only he who sows and cultivates may hope to be happy in the harvest time. The man who plants and tills nothing has nothing to gather into barns—nothing to enjoy when the season of production is over. This is equally true of life and its work. To waste its precious years is to go to the judgment poverty-stricken and empty-handed. Our reaping in eternity will be in proportion to our sowing here. Then, let us with strong, steady, and unceasing hand scatter the seed on every side. Not a day can we afford to lose. A tremendous toiler every Christian should be.

"THE BLOOD OF SPRINKLING."

(A Sermon by a Circuit Rider.)

"And (ye are come) to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh." Hebrews 12:24, 25.

I shall call attention, and give emphasis to some truths which have been overlooked by some, lost sight of by others, and covered up by not a few in the propagation of man-made dogmas. "The blood of sprinkling" is the foundation of all our hopes in time and in eternity. Not only is this a Scriptural phrase, oft repeated, but "the blood of sprinkling" was the very foundation for our Lord's mediatorial office. It has stood from the beginning for the atonement of the Son of God, and for that good conscience in believers which gives assurance of admission into that rest which belongs to the people of God. It is also true that God's "elect" are those who have come to "the blood of sprinkling," and who are sanctified by the Spirit unto obedience.

If I were to say that no man can properly preach the gospel and leave out "Jesus the mediator of the new covenant," every Bible student would say, "Amen." But suppose I were to say that no man can preach the gospel properly and leave out "the blood of sprinkling?" I have just as much authority for saying the latter as the former. The fact of sprinkling runs throughout every dispensation of the Church from Moses and the Prophets, to the very last book in the Bible. It is a sad fact, that in these latter days some thoughtless people refuse to come to Jesus, and to heed his voice. In consequence, they are in the road to eternal perdition. It is also a sad fact that some Christians hesitate before using the word "sprinkle," either in public or social conversation. It is likely that some preachers have preached for years and have never said "sprinkle" from the pulpit, except in ridicule and derision. When a minister uses the word in a sermon, many in the congregation prick up their ears, cast sidelong glances at others, and regard the preacher as strictly sectarian. How sadly many have departed from the fundamentals, and from the teachings of Moses and the Prophets, and the writers of the New Testament Scriptures! "Sprinkle" is the Divine word to show the far-reaching effects of sin, and of that salvation which God has provided through Christ. Moses said "sprinkle" upon every occasion when he gave instruction, and he affirmed time and again that the sprinkling was the command of the Lord.

The prophets caught up the fact with joy, and repeated it often through their long, eventful careers, and the beautiful word with all its significance is carried over into the New Testament Scriptures, and made the basis of the sinner's hope. I would like to see this important, Scriptural word rescued from all the ridicule which has been heaped ignorantly upon it, and from the antipathy and prejudice with which many thoughtless ones regard it. I wish that everybody would see it as it really is, in all its grace and beauty, standing as it does for the atonement of the Son of God, and for that conscience in us which has been cleansed through the suffering and merit of the Redeemer, enabling us to read our title clear to mansions in the skies.

That which should awaken thanksgiving above everything is the sprinkled blood of Jesus Christ, and when we get over into the glory land (please God, we may through faith in his "blood of sprinkling"), we, too, will behold his "vesture sprinkled with blood," and join ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands, in saying with a loud voice, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing."

When Paul wrote the words of the text, he alluded to the sprinkling of the blood on the book and on the people when God made his covenant with the Jewish nation. The record over in Exodus says: "Moses took the book of the covenant, and read it in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient. And Moses took the blood and sprinkled it on the people and said, Behold the covenant which the Lord hath made with you," etc.

The blood was sprinkled on the people when God made a covenant with the Jewish nation, and it is sprinkled on the hearts of believers by Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant. It is "meet and right and the bounden duty" of ministers to-day to say in the audiences of the people: "Behold the blood of the covenant which God hath made with you." The New Testament Scriptures teach very plainly that the sacrifices of the Mosaic dispensation with all the appendages of sprinkling were shadowy representations of things under the Gospel.

"Not all the blood of beasts,
On Jewish altars slain,
Could give the guilty conscience peace,
Or wash away the stain.

"But Christ, the heavenly Lamb,
Takes all our sins away;
A sacrifice of nobler name
And richer blood than they."

The blood of bulls, goats, et al., could not take away sin, yet the sprinkling of the blood of animals called to the remembrance of the Jews their innumerable transgressions, and foreshadowed the sprinkling of the blood of the Lamb of God, who alone taketh away the sin of the world. The sprinkling of the blood on the people impressed them with the truth that God could not make a covenant with them, except through the blood of atoning sacrifice. The sprinkled blood of Jesus stands at the very foundation of the new covenant which God has made with believers. The blood of the Lamb of God is represented as sprinkled upon us when we enter into the covenant, and because it is sprinkled, it not only cleanses from sin, but "it binds God to fulfill to us his promises, while it binds us on the other hand to obey his precepts."

You notice that Paul also says that the blood of sprinkling of the new covenant "speaketh better things than that of Abel." Some have erroneously supposed that Paul refers to the blood of Abel which was shed by Cain. Paul simply refers to Abel's sacrifice. He brought as an offering unto the Lord "the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof." It is likely that God made a revelation to Adam, after his transgression, concerning the use of sacrifices. Cain did not come before the Lord in faith, as a sinner, according to God's appointment, but Abel did. "The blood of Abel's sacrifice spoke the language of faith in an atonement to be made; but the blood of sprinkling, under the new covenant, speaks of salvation as already accomplished." It is accomplished through Jesus Christ, and the sprinkling of his blood upon our consciences brings forgiveness and peace, and is the basis of our hope.

Paul says: "We are come to Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling." Jesus is not a typical mediator, but the one true, effectual mediator and Savior, himself. It was because of his sprinkled blood that God made a covenant with man and he himself fulfilled all the conditions of that covenant, and to-day administers all its blessings. When the blood is divinely applied to our hearts, we are cleansed from an evil conscience, justified, saved, and made heirs with Christ. It was the knowledge that Paul had of the Mosaic law, with its shadowy representations, as well as from a rich experience, that he wrote: "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water."

It is not a new gospel, neither is it far-fetched, to ascribe such importance to "the blood of sprinkling." Men are preaching a new gospel, who deny these propositions. The Apostle Peter even represents God's "elect" as those who are sanctified by the Spirit unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. Says he: "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." God's elect are those whose hearts are sprinkled from an evil conscience, who are forgiven and cleansed, and live obediently. We need not be disturbed over the dogma which is still preached by a few, that God predestinated a certain number to be saved, and a certain number to be lost. God has not appointed anybody to wrath, but it is his wish that all men should obtain salvation through Jesus Christ. A certain old negro had a very good idea of "election" when he said: "De Lawd am always votin' fur you, an' de devil is always votin' agin you. Now, whichever way you votes, dat decides de 'lection."

The foundation of every man's election is the sprinkled blood of Jesus Christ. We have no authority at all to leave out the "sprinkling," or to preach in a way to lead people to believe that they do not need the blood applied to their hearts and consciences. Man is not only guilty and in need of forgiveness, but he is depraved and in need of cleansing. The history of the world and of the Church, and the history of every man, proves the depravity of the human heart.

"No bleeding bird, nor bleeding beast,
Nor hyssop branch, nor sprinkling priest,
Nor running brook, nor flood, nor sea,
Can wash the dismal stain away.

"Jesus, my God, thy blood alone
Hath power sufficient to atone;
Thy blood can make me white as snow;
No Jewish types could cleanse me so."

It was to "the blood of sprinkling" that many of the Jews came in the apostolic day. Any other gospel would not have appealed to them, familiar as they were with all the writings of Moses and the Prophets. When they saw that Jesus was indeed the Messiah, even the Lamb of God whose blood of sprinkling taketh away the sin of the world, and that he fulfilled the types and shadows of the Mosaic dispensation, many of them embraced him as their long-promised Redeemer, and they gave up the sprinkling of the blood of sacrificial animals. This is the gospel which will ultimately win not only the Jews, but all of the Gentiles. All the nations of earth will come to "the blood of sprinkling" of the new covenant for forgiveness and cleansing.

Isaiah with prophetic eye looked down the centuries and not only saw the suffering Redeemer in "sprinkled raiment" trampling under foot all his enemies (Isaiah 63:3), but he also saw him "exalted and extolled" by all the nations of earth. "So shall he sprinkle many nations." (Isaiah 52:13-15.) He saw him as "King Messiah, exalted above Abraham, extolled above Moses, and high above all his angels of ministry."

There are several things I will say in conclusion.

1. A very popular and splendid hymn, written more than one hundred years ago, would be more scriptural were one verse changed, so as to read:

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners sprinkled with that blood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

The Scriptures know no such idea as "plunging" sinners into the blood of Christ.

2. There is no religious rite or external observance more beautiful and significant than sprinkling. There is wisdom in all God does, and he had good reasons for instituting sprinkling from the very beginning. When blood or water is sprinkled, the drops fall upon all the parts, or go in every direction. Sprinkling not only represents the need of man, but the love and mercy of God which goes out to every fallen son of Adam. Sprinkling symbolizes cleansing, and denotes universality, completeness, and perfection.

3. It is imperative that every fallen child of Adam become interested in, and a partaker of, "the blood of sprinkling." Faith is the great and simple condition whereby we partake of its benefits.

Paul tells us that "Through faith Moses kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood." The destroying angel did not touch Moses, or the Israelites. Jesus Christ was typified by that divinely appointed ordinance; and if we will put our trust in Christ's "blood of sprinkling," the wrath of God will not touch us. May our chief delight be to honor and obey him, and may we celebrate the riches of his salvation.

"BROTHER JOHN."

Evidence that the brotherhood of man is becoming more and more a reality is not wanting in this day. The Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald in a recent issue gives a concrete illustration of this fact, and comments upon it in the following impressive manner:

"We've seen it stated so often that it has grown stale that 'one touch of nature makes the whole world kin.' The 'touch of nature' descended upon Omaha on the evening of Easter Sunday. And recently there came into the World-Herald office a Chinaman, who modestly failed to leave his name. He did leave, however, $120, and with it a little note—'In token of sympathy for the tornado sufferers, from the Omaha Chinese.'"

"God bless you, John Chinaman, with your yellow skin, your slant eyes, and your inscrutable face with its thousands of years of sad and patient racial history behind it! Our white man's money has gone out to your own people in times when the great turbulent floods went pouring over China's teeming plains. Our missionaries have penetrated the vastnesses of your ancient civilization, preaching that you are our brothers, too. Nevertheless, the idea never quite got under our skins—we must confess. But it's there now. We've mocked your pigeon English and your mincing steps and your pig tails—and dreaded you a bit, too, even as we mocked. We've speculated on 'the yellow peril' and read, in the lurid magazines, of how your deft, long fingers were itching to plunge into our very vitals and tear out our hated hearts. We've idly wondered if you really did despise us as you washed our linen and served us your chop suey and performed your menial tasks with that enigmatic smile forever on your lips.

"It's different now. The whole world is kin, after all. That $120, earned nickel by nickel; that little note, 'In token of sympathy for the tornado sufferers, from the Omaha Chinese,' has taught us more than we could learn from many ponderous volumes. You're Brother John, after all."

A CALL FOR PRAYER AND LABORERS.

By Rev. William F. Quillian.

To the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

When the Master looked out upon the whitened fields of the world's need he did not call upon men for more laborers but he said to his disciples "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will thrust forth other laborers into his harvest." We believe that the one great need of the Kingdom is that skilled laborers may be thrust forth into the needy places of our world.

So heavily has the burden of this need rested upon our school that one of our most promising young women, on her own initiative, recently presented the following paper to the faculty: "Believing that the students of the Methodist Training School have caught a vision of the urgent need for more laborers in the Lord's work, and knowing of their faith in prayer, it is suggested that the school set apart a Sunday in May as a day of special prayer for strong young men and young women to consecrate their lives to definite service. Also let prayer be made that the means may be provided to train and send into the field these volunteers. Let an appeal go out from the school through our church papers and through personal letters to every pastor and presiding elder that the entire Church unite in prayer on the same day for the same cause." With characteristic self-effacement she expressed the desire that her name be withheld.

In view of the urgent demands and the totally inadequate supply of workers, it was decided that no more important or far reaching suggestion could be made. The idea was heartily endorsed and Sunday, May 18, is the day set apart. We are, therefore, through our church papers calling upon our pastors, presiding elders, elect women of the Church, and others who realize the need for more workers and desire to see it met to unite in fervent prayer with the faculty and students of the Methodist Training School that volunteers may be found, and that the means for their training may be supplied, in order that the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Master, may be hastened in its coming.

We feel sure that our leaders will be glad to call the attention of their people to this day of special prayer. We so thoroughly endorse the plan and believe that it will bring results that we desire to see this date or some other observed annually in all our churches, as an occasion when prayer shall be offered and a call made for volunteers in the Master's service.

Let us remember the date—Sunday, May 18.

Let us remember the object for volunteers and support.

Let us remember—to pray to the Lord of the harvest.

MAKING GOOD.

Dear Dr. Meek: Inquiry is often made as to the success of the graduates of Grenada College. I am glad to say that they find employment and make good. Of the 31 who have been graduated in the past six years, 20 are now teaching, 6 others taught till their marriage, 2 married immediately after graduation, 2 others have had remunerative employment, and the other one has this year been taking advanced work in the College.

Our graduates are the principal teachers in the city schools at Grenada, Pontotoc, and Amory; have charge of the Latin in Oxford, Corinth, and Batesville; have grades in Okolona, Ackerman, Baldwyn, Itta Bena, Kossuth and Big Creek, while others teach piano, voice and expression in various places in Mississippi and other States.

This is a remarkable showing when we think how closely all the public schools are affiliated with the State institutions. Our girls must win on their merit alone. In my three years here, I have had but one public school man to write me of his graduates who were going to college, and but one has asked me for a teacher. Our own people should write their church schools when in need of teachers for literary work, piano, voice, or expression.

We count this the best session we have had in point of attendance, financial returns, and the character of work done. The health has been almost perfect, the average fee for medical attention being less than seventy-five cents.

It is time for an advance movement for the education of our girls. Cordially,

J. R. COUNTISS.

REV. G. H. JACOBS.

George Henry Jacobs was born in Blount County, Alabama, Nov. 2, 1849, and died in Memphis, Tenn., March 26, 1913. His mother died in October, 1865, and in the following February he moved, with his father, to Iuka, Miss., and soon after to McNairy County, Tenn. In July, 1866, he was converted and joined the Church. He was licensed to exhort in 1868 on the Corinth Circuit. In 1872 he entered into the Bible work in Winston County, Miss., and was licensed to preach the following March. He served as a local preacher from this time until 1885, when he was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference.

As an itinerant preacher he served the following charges: Ripley and Blue Mountain, Ripley, New Albany, Olive Branch, Mount Pleasant, Arkabutla, Wall Hill, and Cockrum. And on account of his broken down health, tuberculosis of the lungs having already developed, he superannuated at the session of the Annual Conference which met at Winona in 1901. Since then his health gradually declined unto the end. But he remained with us at least eight years longer than the most sanguine of his friends had hoped at the time of his superannuation.

Brother Jacobs was a good and true man. His childlike faith and purity of heart were evident to all who knew him. His daily life proclaimed, "Behold the Lamb of God." As he was finishing his fourth year's pastorate at Arkabutla, an intelligent gentleman of that town of another denomination remarked of him: "I regret to see Brother Jacobs leave, for he has preached a sermon by his life every day that he has been with us."

Besides being a good man, he was a good preacher. I shall always remember the last sermon I heard him preach. His text was: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." I thought, "How befitting the text and the sermon to the character of the preacher!"

I had not seen him in more than eight years until about two weeks before his death, when he sent for me to talk to me about his expected death and to make arrangements to be buried at Olive Branch, Miss. He spoke of his approaching decease and his burial as calmly as if he had been planning for a journey. He said, "My spiritual preparation has long since been made and my mansion is ready on the other side; but I have sent for you to ask you to see that my body is laid to rest in the cemetery at Olive Branch after God takes the real George Henry Jacobs to heaven. The family will telephone you when to make ready for the burial." And we carried out his plans. Several times during this interview he would exclaim almost with a shout, "O how good God has been to me! And how happy I am in the abiding witness of his Spirit!" He also made use of many other like expressions.

He is survived by his wife, five sons and three daughters. What a legacy and what a consolation is theirs! May the Great Comforter abide with them; and may the memory of the pure life of the departed husband and father linger in their lives as a beacon light to allure them heavenward.

THE KIND OF HYMN BOOK NEEDED.

I read with attention the discussions of our Hymnals by Dr. Werlein and Brother Townsley, and I am interested in whatever pertains to securing better singing in our churches. I like all good songs, new and old, but think we should not use any kind, however good, to the exclusion of the best.

And as a matter of information to some who may not understand the conditions as to singing in many rural churches, I will say that of sixteen churches served during not a long ministerial career, only one had the Methodist Hymnal when I went to them; and it was with difficulty that any was induced to use it, owing to the price and the people's being unfamiliar with the hymns. Such books as were being used contained only a few songs—averaging about twenty—which were usually most familiar. I feel that probably most of those in the Little Hymnal will be quite new.

Another objection to the Hymnal has been that all the words were not placed between the staves—I suppose another supposition (this time by the Editors) that all the people already knew all the hymns. We evidently need a differently arranged and cheaper book in these mission fields—something to meet the needs as they are—not conditions as they ought to be, or as we may suppose them to be.

Church News

During his recent stay at the Battle Creek Sanitarium (Michigan), Bishop E. E. Hoss gave at the general reception hour a most entertaining lecture entitled "Bits of Humor." The stories related were chiefly of the South.

Dr. J. L. Dickey, President of Emory College, has recently been lending the Oklahoma Methodists a helping hand in a campaign which they are conducting to raise money for the Oklahoma Wesleyan College at Oklahoma City.

The Board of Church Extension reports $300,000 subscribed for the Representative Southern Methodist Church in Washington City, of which $65,000 is in cash. This important enterprise is one which should appeal to all our people.

At a meeting of the Publishing Committee of the Southern Christian Advocate on April 17, Rev. S. A. Nettles was named for Editor and Publisher for an additional term of four years. This paper is issued at Greenville, S. C., and is reported to have a circulation of 10,500.

During the past year (1912-13) 86 teachers enrolled with the Teachers' Bureau maintained by our General Board of Education and paid their registration fees. This is an arm of service which is calculated to do great good and which ought by all means to be fully developed.

The Fleming H. Revell Company will soon bring out for Rev. C. F. Wimberly, of Madisonville, Ky., a member of the Louisville Conference, a volume entitled, "Is the Devil a Myth?" A local paper pays Mr. Wimberly the somewhat doubtful compliment of stating that "he is an authority on this subject."

The vote of the Baltimore Conference on the question of changing the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America" was 24 for the change and 156 against it. It will require, to effect the change, three-fourths of all the votes cast in all the Annual Conferences in the Connection.

Dr. John H. Race, President of the University of Chattanooga since 1898, has been chosen one of the Publishing Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a vacancy having been caused by the death of Dr. Homer Eaton. Dr. Henry C. Jennings, who had been in charge of the Cincinnati branch since 1896, was named as General Agent in place of Dr. Eaton, and Dr. Race will succeed him at Cincinnati. The other two publishing Agents of this Church are Mr. E. R. Graham of Chicago, and Dr. George P. Mains of New York.

The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, gives the following interesting figures concerning the seven weeks' meeting recently held at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., by Rev. William A. Sunday, D.D.: total number attending, 668,300; attendance on the last Sabbath, 28,500; number of professions on the last Sabbath, 1861, of whom 611 were men. The total number of professions during the entire meeting was 16,584. The collections for charity footed up $2252; for campaign expenses (incomplete) $16,459; for Mr. Sunday, $23,188. Offerings for the evangelist were taken up on one Sabbath only.

The corner stone of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas, was laid on April 30 with imposing ceremonies. The principal address, which was a brilliant utterance, was delivered by Bishop J. H. McCoy. Of the $800,000 that the Methodists of Texas are to raise in order to secure the $200,000 promised by the Rockefeller Board of Education of New York, $135,000 yet remains to be secured. Those in charge of the campaign feel certain that this balance will be provided for by June 30, which will mark the termination of the period allowed by the Rockefeller Board for raising the required amount.

Bishop W. A. Candler is reported by the Dallas Morning News as having made the following optimistic statement concerning the work of the Southern Methodist Church while in the North Texas metropolis last week: "Our membership now numbers about 1,950,000, and if our people will continue to be as zealous and active as they ought, we will come to the General Conference with 2,000,000 members. In both the home and foreign fields the work is extremely prosperous. The Church never in any period enjoyed more peace and harmony. During the past year not a single case was before the Committee on Appeals, which is perhaps unprecedented. We are building more and better houses of worship than ever before."

The press dispatches report that nearly the whole of the estate of William Chitney Borden, a missionary who died in Cairo, Egypt, on April 9, which is valued at approximately a million dollars, was given to the cause of missions. The largest single bequest was $250,000 to the China Inland Mission, of which amount $100,000 is to be invested and the income used for infirm missionaries and mission workers. Mr. Borden's will contained the following noteworthy recommendation concerning the administration of his gifts: "That each of the bequests be used for and in connection with missionaries and teachers who are sound in the faith, believing in such fundamental doctrines as the divine inspiration and authority of the Scriptures, the doctrine of the Trinity, including the deity of Jesus Christ, and the doctrine of the Atonement through the substitutionary death of our Lord Jesus Christ."

BISHOP HOSS AND THE GENERAL BOARD OF EDUCATION.

When Bishop Hoss tendered his resignation as a member of the General Board of Education today it seemed to be a sad surprise to the Board and the members were loath to believe that the Bishop could not be induced to go on with the work. He spoke to the Board in a courageous tone of his probably approaching end and joked about his tongue having been affected by paralysis. "You don't look like you are such a sick man," said Bishop Murrah, as Bishop Hoss came forward.

"Well, it's pretty hard to spoil my style of beauty," replied Bishop Hoss; "it is a Dutch red that weathers well."

He reviewed his decline in health and said that it had not been his nature to submit to inactivity after a life of energetic work. I am glad to say," he continued, "that I had the grace to submit myself to the hand of God. That's not nature, but grace."

He spoke with his old-time vigor for a moment or two about the commanding importance of the educational enterprises of the Methodists in Texas and then referred to his ill-health.

"I am going on, by the grace of God, toward the end," he said. "I am not afraid to go. I am not afraid to look God in the face. I never had a profounder sense of my own personal unworthiness, and I never had a firmer faith in the mercy of God."

Many members of the Board spoke feelingly of the need for Bishop Hoss' counsel, and the action finally taken was to relieve him of his duties, but to retain him as a member of the Board.—The Dallas Morning News.

ANOTHER INDORSEMENT.

From a private letter from one of the most active women of our Church, in another State, we take the following:

"O how the women are erring! We are heavenly citizens. At least it is our privilege to be. Paul was! How we are side-tracking the real work of the Church—witnessing to every nation—for these trite things—clubs, whitewashing, puddles, weeds. Get the people saved and these things will fall off. What America needs is Spirit-filled men in the pulpit and pew, and on the streets, and in the highways, compelling people to come in!

"It is our right as women to love the Lord with all our hearts, soul, mind and strength. Who wants any more rights? Not she who has found her Lord to be the God of all grace, the sufficiency for every time of need."—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

(A friend sent us a few days since the following letter, which was written to the Editor of the New York Tribune, and was published in that paper.)

Sir: It is a little amusing the way Mrs. Harper ends her article in Saturday's Tribune with an appeal to "the comparative liberality and justice of the men in the United States." For, if any movement is called for, it is a man's movement instead of a woman's movement. We are protected and accorded every right through man-made laws. If we have property, we may do with it whatever we choose, by law. We are not compelled to use what is ours for anybody else, while a man, be he husband or father, or both, has to earn for his wife, his children, or both, and so the laws go in favor of woman in every case.

We are not conceded the vote, because men and the average woman are wise enough to realize that we are physically incapable of incurring the civic duties attached to the vote or franchise. In the real sense of the word, when a man first registers as a voting individual, he gives himself over to his country, to be called out for jury duty at any time, to do military duty in case of extreme need, and in parts of the South and West civilians have to be called out to quell many disturbances. Physically we cannot and ought not to do these things. Consequently we have no right to ask for the vote, and all I hope is that the men who have already made so many laws to our advantage will again be kind and save women from the suffragettes.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN.

Newport, R. I., March 2, 1913.

MRS. BERRY T. CREWS.

Minervia Caroline Kieth, wife of Rev. B. T. Crews of the Louisiana Conference, was born in South Carolina 67 years ago, and died in Shreveport, La., March 4, 1913, at 8 o'clock in the morning. Her family was one of the oldest of her State, and being pious and, before the war having considerable wealth, she was born into an environment of refinement. In early life she was converted and joined the Methodist Church, and ever lived an humble life of faith, of love, and of service. In 1867, when she was just 21 years of age, she was married to Rev. B. T. Crews, and when, in 1878, he joined the itinerant ministry she, too, put her heart into the cause which he had espoused and made him a faithful helper in seeing that his home was ever a refuge for rest and for meditation. She left four daughters, one son, and five grandchildren, who, together with her husband and one daughter-in-law and two sons-in-law, were present when she passed away. After the family, alone in the parlor, had knelt around "the beautiful house she had vacated" and had given it back to him from whom it, with the life it had housed, had come, Rev. R. J. Harp, assisted by Rev. G. E. Cameron, conducted the funeral service in the home, and laid the body to rest in the Greenwood Cemetery in Shreveport. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother, a faithful friend, and a child of God. Until the graves give up their dead, we bid thee farewell!

Governor Wm. H. Mann of Virginia was, on April 29, elected president of the Southern Sociological Congress, which closed its annual session in Atlanta, Ga., on that date.

A very beautiful monument erected in honor of the Confederate soldiers of Mississippi was unveiled in the courthouse square in Meridian, Miss., on April 25.

According to press reports, Austria is now mobilizing her naval forces in the vicinity of Scutari for the purpose of dislodging the Montenegrins from that stronghold. Italy also is said to be considering the question of taking a hand in the attempt to solve the Balkan international riddle.

That the planters of Louisiana and Mississippi are confident that the boll weevil will not destroy the cotton industry is evidenced by the fact that there has been planted in Louisiana this year 20 per cent more cotton than last year, and that in Mississippi there has been an increase of 3.5 per cent.

A painting entitled "To the Highest Bidder," representing a negro woman with her child standing on an auction block, was rejected by the Brooklyn Institute of New York City when recently offered to it by a former Brooklyn mayor, Mr. C. A. Schieren. In refusing the painting, the manager of the Institute gave as his reason that such pictures "tend to keep alive memories that had better be forgotten."

An organization known as the Louisiana Co-operative Rural Association was effected in Alexandria last week, and Mr. John M. Parker of Monroe, La., was chosen its first president. The object of the Association is to bring about a closer fraternal feeling between the producer, the consumer, and the merchant, and to advance the interests of good roads, schools, and diversified agriculture and stock raising.

The University of Mississippi has been made the beneficiary of the law library of the late Leroy B. Valliant, formerly Chief Justice of the State of Missouri, according to a recent announcement made by Chancellor Kincannon. Judge Valliant was an alumnus of the University of Mississippi, and, though a resident of Missouri, never ceased to take a deep interest in his alma mater. This large library will be known as the Valliant Collection.

At a cost of $150,000 the United Fruit Company, whose headquarters are located in New Orleans, is now completing the next largest wireless telegraph station in the world (the largest in the world being located at Arlington, Va.). The New Orleans station has the power to transmit a message a distance of 1800 miles, and will be used by the United Fruit Company as a means of communicating with its large line of steamships which sail between New Orleans and ports in Central America.

A movement is on foot to effect the purchase of Lower California from Mexico. The purchase price mentioned is $25,000,000, and those figuring on the deal are a number of American capitalists. It will be necessary for Mexico to conduct an election in Lower California before the strip of land can be sold, and if a majority of its inhabitants oppose it, the sale will not be made. If purchased by United States capitalists, Lower California will in all probability be annexed to this country within a few years.

Mississippi is to be congratulated upon the excellent showing made by her banks in the statements filed during the month of March. The combined resources of her banks increased over last year from $77,098,126.77 to $78,919,925.50, and the deposits mounted up from $44,500,000 to $48,091,850.93. Few phases of Southern development have been so striking as those to be found in the Magnolia State during the past two decades. She has undergone a great agricultural and commercial awakening, and it is chiefly the Mississippians who have re-made Mississippi.

Because of stringent laws regulating the fire insurance business recently passed by the Missouri State Legislature, 182 companies doing an insurance business in that State withdrew on April 30, and are refusing to write any new business or to renew existing policies. Local companies will be organized at once to take over the business abandoned by the old companies, and it is reported that the Attorney General of Missouri will attempt to prosecute 109 of the "striking" companies under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

On account of the unfinished conditions of the church building at Quitman, the Meridian District Conference will be held at Shubuta, beginning Tuesday, May 27, at 8 p.m. Rev. John Paul will preach the opening sermon. The pastors are requested to send to me the names of their delegates immediately, as I desire to make out the official roll at an early date. Committees have been appointed as follows:

For License to Preach—B. F. Jones, G. S. Harmon, and A. B. Barry.

For Orders—W. G. Forsyth, John Paul, and C. M. Crossley.

For Admission into the Annual Conference—J. R. Jones, J. E. J. Ferguson, and H. A. Gatlin.

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

A WORD OF EXHORTATION.

To the Lay Leaders in Jackson District, Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Of course you are planning to attend the District Conference at Flora, May 13-16. Thursday afternoon, May 15th, is the time set for consideration of Missions and the Laymen's Work. It would be a splendid thing for every Church Leader to become enthusiastically desirous to see a full attendance of laymen at this Conference. To this end, brethren, urge the delegates of your charge to come and remain to the closing day. When a conference of church leaders is called at our approaching session, let every charge be represented. If your report for the past year is not furnished me by mail, as requested, please bring same to the Conference.

Faternally,

J. M. SULLIVAN, District Leader.

A PORT GIBSON COLLEGE GIRL.

Dear Dr. Meek: I give the following incident in order to show the influence that a church school has: A member of the Junior Class, who is the child of Roman Catholic parents and was for years in a convent, recently asked the privilege of going to the parsonage and being baptized. The permission was granted, and she was this afternoon baptized by Dr. Holloman. She spent all day to-day reading the Bible, having asked to be left alone in her room while the other girls were taking a holiday. I am more rejoiced over this incident than over all the medals that have been won by Port Gibson girls in contests.

AN ILLUSTRATION OF FIGURATIVE SPEECH.

One of the English instructors at the University of Kansas makes a hobby of forceful and picturesque language. Primitive people, he contends, because of their scant supply of words, are forced to use figures of speech to express themselves, and consequently use much more picturesque language than the educated classes, which have an extensive vocabulary from which to pick and choose. The doctor has many stories which aptly illustrate his point, but this year he has a new one which was given to him by a Washington clergyman who is deeply interested in the negro race.

"I had been invited to deliver an address at the dedication of a colored church in Richmond," says the minister, "and at its conclusion in recognition of the tireless efforts of an aged colored deacon I invited him to offer prayer. He included me in his supplication something like this:

"Gibe this pore brudder de eye of de eagle, dat he spy out sin afar off. Glue his hands to de gospel plow. Tie his tongue to de line of truf. Nail his years to the gospel pole. Bow his head way down betwen his knees, oh Lord, and fix his knees way down in some lonely, dark and narrow valley, where prayer is much wanted to be made. Noint him with de kerosine ile of salvation, and set him afire."—Kansas City Star.

SUCCEEDING IN HIS WORK.

Rev. L. L. Roberts passed through New Orleans last Saturday en route to Gloster, Miss., where he was to spend the Sabbath, and while here paid our sanctum an appreciated call. Brother Roberts is this year serving in a dual capacity, being both the pastor at Wesson, Miss., and the financial agent of Whitworth College. Our church at Wesson generously allows him to be absent two Sundays each month to look after the interests of the college. This, however, does not seem to be hindering the work of the congregation to any great extent, since much activity is being shown in the Master's service. Among other things, a Sunday school annex is being constructed, and the entire church is to be re-roofed. Brother Roberts is succeeding finely with the task of raising money for the new buildings at Whitworth, and is enthusiastic over the outlook for that splendid institution.

TOBACCO HURTFUL TO THEM.

The following statement concerning the effect of tobacco upon the boys in the New Orleans Public Schools who use it, which we take from the Times-Democrat of April 24, contains some interesting and suggestive information:

"According to statistics compiled by Dr. Edmund Moss, chief medical inspector of the School Board, smoking is shown to operate as a serious drawback to boys in obtaining promotion. Of course, while smoking is prohibited in the schools, there are boys who smoke when away from school. Dr. Moss obtained data on 11,564 boys. Of this number 1019 are reported as using tobacco. Of these only seventeen are said to chew tobacco, the remainder being the smokers. It was found that the greatest proportion of tobacco users are in the fourth and fifth grades, the percentage being 13.7 per cent. From these grades upward there is a decrease until in the eighth grade only 9.3 smoke.

"In commenting on this Superintendent Gwinn stated that the lower percentage may be accounted for by the fewer boys in the higher grades. It was found, however, from the records, that while the average of the boys who fail of promotion in the classes is 19.9 per cent, 39 per cent of the smokers fail of promotion. This was commented upon by Mr. Gwinn as indicating that tobacco affects the mental capacity of the boys."

THE LOUISIANA SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The recently closed annual session of the Louisiana Sunday School Association was an enthusiastic gathering of some of the best Sunday school workers in the State, there being something like four hundred delegates in attendance. The program was well arranged and effectively rendered, mostly by local workers, who magnified the several parts assigned to them. Mr. J. Van Carter, the General Secretary, has, by the results of the year's work, proven himself to be a magnetic leader and a fine organizer of his forces; and he is held in high esteem by the members of the Association. As much could be said for Miss Juden, the Association's consecrated and capable Field Secretary, who has done so much for the Elementary work in the State, and Miss Hugo, the Office Secretary. All of these received the enthusiastic commendation of the Association's leaders, and were re-elected to their respective offices for another year.

One noticeable thing about the body was that the larger part of the members were Methodists (practically all the offices being filled by them for the coming year), and that Methodists give by far the larger part of the money to support the work. The new President of the Association is Mr. W. A. McKennon, Superintendent of our First Church Sunday school at Shreveport, and one of the most capable and zealous Sunday school workers in our connection; Mr. H. L. Baker, the Chairman of our Conference Sunday School Board, is the Chairman of the Executive Committee; Mr. H. N. Pharr, the Superintendent of our New Iberia Sunday school, is the Chairman of the Finance Committee; Mr. A. M. Mayo, the Secretary of our Conference Sunday School Board, is the Chairman of the Life Membership Club; Mr. T. W. Holloman, the Treasurer of our Conference Sunday School Board, is the Secretary of the Executive Committee; and Mr. C. O. Beauchamp, of our Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, is the Recording Secretary. Thus, it will be seen that the leaders in this work are among our most loyal Methodists, and their active co-operation in this non-denominational work shows the estimate that they place upon aggressive Sunday school activity. And this is suggestive as to what our denominational work should be. In the past, our Church has done practically nothing to develop the quality of its workers except through the regular literature helps. Now we are beginning to use the Teacher-training class in the local church and the Field Secretary for the Annual Conference; and the next logical step is to magnify the institute. Surely a Methodist institute would do more for Methodists than the interdenominational Parish Convention; and the State Convention program could be easily duplicated by a State Conference of our own people, if only we would go into the business. Suppose our District and Annual Sunday School Conferences were organized as thoroughly and worked as zealously as the State Association, could they not accomplish as beneficial results? Judging by the subscriptions on the floor of the Convention the Methodists must either pay or raise something like $5,000 of the $7,000 expense budget to support this organization annually, and they spare no effort to carry forward its work.

While we shall ever be ready to co-operate with other denominations in co-operative and fraternal work of a practical sort, we are persuaded that we are doing more than our share in this, and that we should begin to look after the needs of our own people and conserve their gifts and their effort to better advantage for our own Church. Our organized District Sunday School Conferences are a step toward this end, and if properly supported and worked there is no doubt but that they will accomplish this result. We are furnishing too many leaders and too much money in an effort to be fraternal with people who really do not reciprocate, and while the results in the past have been magnificent, we are persuaded that the time has come when we must begin to supply the needs of our own people and conserve more of their efforts to their own Church. In the meantime, Methodists will continue, of course, to co-operate with all that is good, especially with the Louisiana Sunday School Association with its present splendid corps of officers and adherents. Brother Carter and Miss Juden are among the best Sunday school workers in the land, and their service is a benediction to any church. We wish them a hearty Godspeed in their noble work, but we insist that we as Methodists must more and more do this work for our own people; and we call upon those who agree with us in this to support our efforts in this direction.

P. O. LOWREY.

SOME OBSERVATIONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By Rev. H. G. Roherts.

The Mississippi Conference passed a very timely resolution, asking that no man whose orthodoxy is questionable be given a place in the faculty of the Seashore Divinity School. It is rather noticeable and unfortunate that they did not include the lecturers also. Probably it was intended that they should be included, but if so, it is regrettable that the language used was not more explicit.

Dr. W. T. Davison, the fraternal delegate from the British Wesleyan Conference to the General Conference of our Church, which met in Baltimore in 1898, in his address before that body said: "More practical good will be accomplished by noting the operations of the Holy Spirit in apostolic times and in the various revivals which have swept over the Church, than by erudite treatises on the Third Person of the Trinity, which at best can never be more than speculative." And it seems to me that he might have said, with equal warrant, or "by questioning the trustworthiness or the inspiration of the Books of Jonah and Daniel, or such others of whose authority there was never any doubt in the Church." (Book of Discipline, Ninth Article.)

Now, Doctor, I appreciate the fact that, should this squib be read by the readers of the Advocate, this scribe will be considered a back-number by many. I was greatly amused by a certain Doctor of Divinity at one of our district conferences in Louisiana a few years ago. It was during the time that the Editor of the Nashville Advocate was under fire for certain editorials of a skeptical nature appearing in the columns of that paper. While this D. D. was making his report, the presiding elder asked him about the circulation of the church papers among his people. The Doctor curtly replied that he insisted upon his people taking the Nashville Advocate, but that he did not care for them to read the New Orleans Advocate, as Dr. Blank, the editor, was antiquated and out of date; while Dr. Blank of the Nashville Advocate was strictly up-to-date, and a man who kept abreast of the times. Deep down in my heart I said, "Hurrah for Dr. Blank of the New Orleans Advocate, who is considered a back-number." I gladly submit to being numbered with the same class. Whenever that genuine revival of religion that our Bishops have called upon the entire Church to pray for sweeps over the country, probably we will have a rest from heresies and non-essentials.

One of the most honored superannuates of the Mississippi Conference, a man under whose preaching fire from off the altar fell in other days, said to me a short time ago: "What our Church needs to-day is a genuine revival of religion in both the pulpit and pew." Such expressions are common throughout the Church; are we in earnest in seeking it?

One of the pastors of the North Mississippi Conference, who is proving to be very successful in revivalistic work, said to me at Greenwood last December: "Some of our preachers and people do not want genuine revivals." Because of some former observations, I could not question his statement. It had been but a few months since another one of our pastors, who is above the average in preaching ability, said to me: "I'll be glad when we quit trying to have revivals; I would like to see them converted into institutes." He was then assisting another pastor in an apparently very cold meeting. I said to the brother that the more I compared the results of our efforts with those of our fathers of no longer than a generation ago, the more I was convinced of the need of an old-time revival of religion. He remarked that it was a wonder to him that the Methodist preachers of fifty years ago had any conversions at all under their ministry, as they got at things in such a crude manner.

One of our leading pastors down in the Mississippi Conference had a very conservative, successful evangelist with him in a meeting some time ago. The evangelist was not inclined merely to preach a dry discourse and close with a hold-up-your-hand proposition, but appealed to his hearers to make some definite move. The pastor informed the evangelist that his people were very intelligent and would not yield to any such methods.

Doctor, are we getting after things in the right manner? What are we to do? It does seem that the walls of Jerico will have to be battered down. If our learned divines, instead of spending so much time in digging up the ideas of old German and French critics, which were exploded and buried centuries ago, would spend that time in developing and emphasizing the vital truths of our Christianity, the needed revival would, I think, undoubtedly be hastened.

LITTLE BESS'S QUESTION.

There were two little kittens, a black and gray,
And grandmamma said with a frown—
"It will never do to keep them both,
The black one we'd better drown."

"Don't cry, my dear," to tiny Bess,
"One kitten's enough to keep;
Now run to nurse, for 'tis growing late,
And time you were fast asleep."

The morrow dawned, and rosy and sweet
Came little Bess from her nap;
The nurse said, "Go into mamma's room
And look in grandma's lap."

"Come here," said grandmamma, with a smile,
From the rocking chair where she sat;
"God has sent you two little sisters,
Now, what do you think of that?"

Bess looked at the babies a moment,
With their wee heads, yellow and brown,
And then to grandmamma soberly said,
"Which one are you going to drown?"

FOR MOTHER.

He was only a mite of a boy, dirty and ragged; and he had stopped for a little while in one of the city's free playgrounds to watch a game of ball between boys of his own and a rival neighborhood. Tatters and grime were painfully in evidence on every side; but the little fellow attracted the attention of a group of visitors, and one of them, reaching over the child's shoulder as he sat on the ground, gave him a luscious golden pear. The boy's eyes sparkled; but the eyes were the only thanks as he looked back to see from whence the gift had come and then turned his face away, too shy or too much astonished to speak.

But from that time on his attention was divided between the game and his new treasure. He patted the pear; he looked at it; and at last, as if to assure himself that it was as delicious as it appeared, he lifted it to his lips and cautiously bit out a tiny piece near the stem. Then, with a long sigh of satisfaction and assurance, he tucked the prize safely inside his dirty blouse.

"Why don't you eat it, Tony?" demanded a watchful acquaintance.

"Eat it? All meself? Ain't I savin' it for mother?"

The tone, with its mingling of resentment and loyalty, made further speech unnecessary. Whatever Tony lacked—and it seemed to be nearly everything—he had learned humanity's loftiest lesson. He had another dearer than self, and knew the joy of sacrifice.—Christian Intelligencer.

HE LEARNED ON CRUTCHES.

Linn is a little boy who has to go around on crutches. He is not a cripple, but he fell one day and hurt his knee, and the doctor said that the only way for it to become well and strong again was for Linn to use crutches for a time.

It was a good thing that the accident happened in the summer-time so that the little boy did not need to be shut up in the house. But it is tiresome for an active boy to keep still for a long time, and Linn's mother suggested that it might be a good plan for him to see that the birds had water to drink and to bathe in during the hot summer days.

Linn was delighted with the idea. So his father nailed a shelf to the trunk of an elm tree in the yard, and his mother gave him a large, deep dish.
Linn's duty was to see that the water in it was kept clean and fresh. "Birds like clean, cool water just as well as we do," his mother told him.

It was such fun to watch the different families come there for water. One day a robin wanted to bathe at the same time that a sparrow wanted to drink. The robin got there first, and he did not intend to give up his chance. So he stood in the middle of the dish, and every time the sparrow tried to dip its bill in, he pecked at it.

After a while the sparrow flew off for help, and pretty soon three spunky little sparrows were doing their best to drive the robin away; but they did not succeed. The robin finished his bath, and when he flew off, his merry chirp seemed to say: "You can drink all you want now; I'm through."

One day a beautiful orange-colored bird with black wings, that Linn's mother called an oriole, stopped at the dish for a bath. Pretty soon after that a dear little yellow bird stopped for a drink.
Before Linn's knee got well enough for him to go without his crutches and romp with the other boys, he had learned to know ten different kinds of birds.

He had also learned that birds are always grateful for water, and that they grow very friendly when not disturbed.

Limping slowly around on crutches, Linn was able to see a great deal more than he could possibly have seen if he had been racing about the yard with a lot of noisy companions. And when he went back to school he had many amusing and interesting things to tell.

"You see, even our troubles can be our teachers," his mother said, when Linn was telling her some of the curious things he had learned about birds while giving his lame knee a chance to get well.

Linn did not forget his little feathered friends even after he could romp and play again; and filling the birds' dish with water before he went to school was one of the duties that he never forgot.—Heleen M. Richardson, in S. S. Times.

MRS. JULIA BROWN WATKINS.

By Rev. B. F. Jones, D. D.

"My faith looks up to thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary,
Saviour Divine."

Many hearts were made sad by the news of the unexpected death of Mrs. Julia B. Watkins, which occurred at her home in Jackson, Miss., a little past three o'clock in the afternoon, of March 20, 1913. Her illness was of short duration, but was most alarming from the beginning; and after a heroic contest, she passed from the toils and infirmities of earth, to the rest and rewards of heaven.

Mrs. Watkins was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Brown, and was born under the sunny skies of a prosperous Southland, near Meadville, Franklin County, Miss. She came of an honorable and pious parentage. By heredity and environment she was reared under the favorable advantages of a home of comfort, affection and refinement. Naturally endowed with a bright intellect, she readily appropriated the opportunities offered by the curriculum of the local schools, and afterwards the higher collegiate literary course.

In the beauty and purity of her young womanhood, on Dec. 22, 1868, she gave her heart and hand in holy wedlock to Mr. Thos. H. Watkins, son of the Rev. W. H. Watkins, D. D., late of the Mississippi Conference. Mr. Watkins, who had come in possession of a valuable estate in Jefferson County, was a prosperous planter. To this home, made sacred by the ties of an heroic ancestry, the young couple came, and speedily adjusted themselves to the practical side of life.
It was a happy marriage. When her husband prospered in his agricultural pursuits, he found her a helpmeet in every way worthy of the fruits of his toil. When adversity came and the accumulations of frugal industry seemed to be swept away by a relentless hand, she still stood by to help and comfort and inspire him, and in every way fill with unselfish sacrifice and adorn with rare grace, her place as wife and mother.
And when her husband on August 10, 1894, was called to his reward she was still in a greater degree the same sweet, gentle and loving companion, helpmeet, wife — the light of the home and the guardian of its sacred shrine. After the death of her husband she removed to Jackson, Miss., in 1896, where she lived until she exchanged the "corruptible for the incorruptible" and the "mortal for the immortal" and joined the happy loved ones in the bright beyond.

The achievement which crowns the life of a mother with unfading glory is giving to the world a noble type of manhood and womanhood.
This she did, as is manifest in the character of her children. Two of her sons are prosperous lawyers; two are successful physicians, and one a popular minister of the gospel. One daughter has been prominent in educational circles, having filled with brilliant success the position of Dean in Whitworth College, but more recently elected one of the Secretaries of the Woman's Department of Mission Work. Another daughter is an active missionary in far-away China, while the other and younger daughter is an active worker in the church in Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. Watkins was a noble example of that splendid type of womanhood which is the crowning glory of our beloved Southland. She was a woman of refined and delicate sensibilities, and possessed admirable qualities of mind and heart.
Modesty and purity, intelligence and goodness, were so interwoven into the fiber of her nature that the fruit they bore in her every-day life was so gracious and attractive as to make her friendship esteemed and her presence a benediction to all who were intimately associated with her.

All that entered into the life of this noble woman and combined in the formation of her beautiful character was founded upon her faith in God and her love for her fellow-man. She joined the Methodist Church early in life, and remained a faithful member to the end. Her's was not a plethora of mere profession, but it was a principle that pervaded her whole being, and bore daily fruit unto holiness of life. She lived close to her Heavenly Father, and Jesus Christ as a personal Savior and an ever present helper was with her in rich reality all the time and all the way; and when the sunset of life came, the transition was so swift, and yet so silent, that it was hard to tell when the last pulse beat of life's starlit night ushered in the dawn of the eternal day.

Editorial.

A DIFFICULT THING TO DO.

The movement to change the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church to "The American Catholic Church" has stirred up a tremendous amount of opposition, and the indications are that this attempt will result in overwhelming failure. This, to us, is not surprising, since if a body of Christians have a church name that has been historically developed and to which they have become attached, they are not apt to favor changing it unless it can be shown that some great advantage would thereby be gained. And this has not been done either in the case of the Episcopal Church of ours. It is quite easy to affirm that more could be achieved if this or that were true, but the demand is not for unsupported assertions, but for something that has at least a faint resemblance to proof. Are the other Southern Churches that have no geographical word in their names, doing any better in the Far West than ours? If such a word in its name is so tremendous a handicap to a denomination as some allege, how is it that the Roman and Greek Catholic Churches, with restrictive words in their titles, have spread themselves over such vast areas of territory? The Methodist Episcopal Church, though it has no so-called sectional word in its name, finds it, except where it is re-enforced by immigration, as difficult to establish itself in the South as ours does to plant itself in the Far West, where Northern sentiment largely dominates.

The truth is, a Church cannot dissociate itself from the history that it has made. Nor can it, if its name has a historical significance, by a mere official pronouncement start the public to calling it something else. The Presbyterian Church in this section discarded the word "Southern," but it is still almost universally applied to it. We do not believe that it has gained a single thing of consequence by trying to assume a more pretentious title. The brethren may "resolute" as much as they please, but our denomination will continue to be known as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We commend to the consideration of those who are worrying over the task of finding a new and better name for our Church, the following homely but suggestive lines, which first appeared in the New York Times, and were recently reproduced in The Independent:

"She ransacked every novel,
And the dictionary, too,
But nothing ever printed
For her baby's name would do;
She hunted appellations
From the present and the past,
And this is what she named him
When they christened him at last:

"Julian Harold Egbert
Ulysses Victor Paul
Algernon Marcus Cecil
Elvester George McFall.
But after all the trouble
She'd taken for his sake,
His father called him Fatty,
And his schoolmates called him Jake."

WISE ACTION.

At the recent meeting of our General Board of Education in Dallas, Texas, a request asking for an appropriation for the establishment of a Bible Chair in the University of Texas was made. The extent of the course that it was proposed to have in the State University is not stated in the newspaper accounts of the discussion that took place in the Board, and we are not informed as to whether it contemplated merely the general religious instruction of the Methodist students at that institution, or some special instruction for those intending to devote themselves to religious work, or both. But no matter what the scope of the proposed work was, we think the action of the Board in refusing to make an appropriation for this purpose was eminently wise. So far as the general religious instruction of the Methodist young people attending State institutions is concerned, it should, in our opinion, be provided through the local churches in the towns or cities where these seats of learning exist; and it behooves us to see that these churches are well located and well equipped, and that their pulpits are always properly manned. Should the work in any instance be too heavy for a single pastor, there is no objection to giving him an assistant.

As to the question of furnishing at these schools training for subsequent religious work, it seems to us that it would be a serious mistake to undertake to provide it. In preparing our workers, it is most important that we should be able to shape the general conditions which surround them, and this we could never hope to do at State institutions. The prevailing atmosphere about the campus of a college is a tremendous factor that must be reckoned with by educators. No student can escape its influence. Herein lies the vast superiority of the Christian school.

The establishment of this Chair at Austin would have set a precedent of far-reaching significance. If this had been done for the University of Texas, similar demands would have been made for other State institutions; and this would have brought a heavy draft upon our treasury at this time when many of our own institutions are struggling for life. Moreover, the question as to what would be the final effect of such a policy upon our colleges is one that we may well carefully consider. The ringing words that Prof. R. L. Flowers, of Durham, N. C., uttered in the course of the discussion at Dallas are not to be lightly dismissed: "When you start Bible Chairs in State Schools, it is farewell to your Church schools." But why waste time upon this matter, when the Board has already acted? We answer that the view which expressed itself in the form of a request in Texas is by no means confined to that State. On the contrary, it is beginning to be advanced in various parts of the Church. This is our reason for touching upon this subject.

THE OUTGOING TIDE LITTLE NOTED.

The New York Independent of May 1 represents the Churchman of that city as saying that when the Roman Catholics make proselytes from the Protestants much ado is made about it, but that when the Protestants secure accessions from the Romanists, the occurrence is but little advertised. The following quotation from this distinguished Episcopal organ is given: "Within the past four years seven Paulist fathers in New York City, members of the great teaching Society of the Church of Rome, all high-class men, left that body, and one of them became a priest in our Church, but the incidents were not given headlines in the daily press." To this statement, The Independent adds: "The number has risen since we mentioned the withdrawal of four Paulist fathers. At a late religious meeting in this city we observed four ex-priests present, all excellent and scholarly men, three of them formerly Paulists." There is no doubt that defections from the Roman Catholic Church are steadily going on in the United States. If that denomination had succeeded in holding the vast number of immigrants connected with it that have come to our shores within the last fifty years, it would have been immensely stronger than it is to-day.

THE SECOND GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The first General Missionary Conference of our Church was held in New Orleans in 1901; the second will be held on the Assembly Grounds near Waynesville, N. C., June 25-29. The first was a memorable occasion, but the second promises to surpass it. Every preacher and layman who possibly can, should begin to get ready to attend this great gathering. Send to Dr. C. F. Reid, 310 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for a fine prospectus of this approaching Conference, which will give you much valuable information concerning it. This meeting should call together thousands of our workers, and it ought to be made to mark a new epoch in the history of Southern Methodism.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. S. Duke, of Corinth, Miss., attended the recent meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council in Birmingham, Ala.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, the pastor, began a revival meeting at Second Church in New Orleans last Sunday night. He is being assisted by Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Hon. W. A. Belk, of Holly Springs, Miss., in a personal note to the Editor, says: "Tucker and Brown are 'making good' hereabouts. We all love them."

The Methodists of Alabama report that they have successfully completed their campaign to raise $150,000 for Birmingham College. Hurrah for the Alabamians!

Rev. R. M. Brown is planning to hold a revival meeting in the Aigiers Church of New Orleans during this month. He has engaged Evangelist D. A. Morris, of Ohio, to assist him.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, will leave New Orleans on June 6 to attend the World's Sunday School Convention in Zurich, Switzerland. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Singleton.

The Commencement exercises of the Seashore Campground School will be held June 8-10. Dr. J. W. Moore, of New Orleans, will preach the Commencement sermon and also deliver the literary address.

Rev. J. J. Garner, of Lula, Miss., reports encouragingly of the work in his pleasant charge. He also favored us on the 24th ult. with a club of ten subscribers, many of whose names look quite familiar to the Editor.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church of New Orleans, after attending the meeting of the General Board of Church Extension in Dallas, Texas, last week, returned home on Tuesday of this week.

Rev. E. N. Evans filled our pulpit in Aigiers last Sunday morning and that of the Carrollton Avenue Church on Sunday evening. According to the reports given by those who heard him, he has not lost any of his old-time power as a preacher.

Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, President of the University of Virginia, has been forced by ill health to ask for an indefinite leave of absence, and it is feared that he may never become able to resume his labors. Dr. Alderman was formerly the President of Tulane University.

Rev. A. S. Byrd, of Vivian, Miss., is presenting the claims of the Advocate to his people with gratifying success, as is evidenced by both the renewals and new subscriptions which he is sending in. All the interests of the Church in his charge are feeling the influence of his energetic touch and wise leadership.

We take the following news item from a recent issue of the Magnolia (Miss.) Gazette: "Mrs. J. A. Moore is at the bedside of her distinguished father, the Rev. Dr. J. M. Weems, who is seriously ill at Laurel." We regret to learn of Dr. Weems' illness, but trust that ere this he has found relief and is on the road to recovery.

In a note to the Editor, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, says: "We are distressed over the extreme illness of my aunt, Mrs. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, who makes her home here with my mother. Some hope of her recovery is still entertained." We regret to hear of the sickness of this elect lady, and we pray that her life may, indeed, be spared.

The M. M. W. Association will hold its next regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. M. Henry next Thursday, May 15. Mrs. Henry, who is the Secretary of the Association, which is composed of the wives of the Methodist Ministers of New Orleans, reports that the last meeting, held at the home of Mrs. A. J. Gearheard, was a most delightful one.

Rev. John T. Foster, our pastor at De Ridder, La., is announced to deliver his lecture, "A Ramble Through Sunny Italy," in the Delhi (La.) Methodist Church next Wednesday evening. Brother Foster was at one time the pastor of our church at Delhi, and the people of that community are looking forward with pleasure to his coming.

We neglected last week (having only met him on the street) to mention the recent visit of Rev. A. G. Shankle, of Minden, La., to New Orleans. Brother Shankle has a host of friends in the Crescent City, who will always be delighted to see him. He is one of the ablest preachers in the Louisiana Conference, and what is better still, he has a warm and brotherly heart.

A dispatch to the Jackson News from Lexington, Miss., stated that Rev. W. S. Shipman held the second quarterly conference of that charge on the evening of April 24, after preaching an excellent sermon. Dr. Henderson, the pastor of this congregation, on the Sunday preceding that date, asked for subscriptions to the Conference collections and secured nearly the entire assessment.

Prof. W. H. Smith, of Durant, Miss., Superintendent of the Rural Schools of Mississippi, has returned home after an absence of several weeks in Denmark, where he went to study the educational work of that country. Collier's Weekly has announced that in the near future it will publish an interesting account of Prof. Smith's life and what he has accomplished for the interior schools of the Magnolia State.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached an old-time sermon at Carrollton Avenue Church at 11 o'clock last Sunday morning, and another one to a large congregation in the McDonoghville Church of this city last Sunday night. Dr. Sawyer has been preaching the gospel for about forty years, but he yet lacks much of being an old man, either in his appearance in the pulpit or style of delivery.

The following letter was sent this week to Hon. W. J. Bryan, our present Secretary of State, at Washington, D. C.: "The Protestant Ministers' Association of New Orleans at its meeting held this day (May 5), resolved to congratulate you upon the stand taken by you in substituting unfermented grape juice for wine at the dinner given by you to the foreign diplomats, Monday, April 21."

The Commencement exercises of the Meridian Woman's College and the Meridian Male College will begin on May 24 and continue through May 27. The Annual Praise Service will be conducted at 10 a. m., May 25, by the College pastors, Rev. J. S. Paul and Rev. R. S. Stewart. The Commencement sermon will be preached by Rev. J. L. Brasher, of Boaz, Ala., who also will deliver the Baccalaureate Address.

A card sent from Hattiesburg, Miss., a few days since, by Rev. W. G. Huff, reads as follows: "I have just returned from Brother Ulmer's work where I have been preaching in a meeting for him, which continued ten days. There were a number of conversions and 42 accessions as a result of our labors. Brother Ulmer is in great favor with his people." We are pleased to hear of this gracious season of refreshing.

"My work, I am glad to say, is prospering; our congregations are increasing, which is very encouraging, and we are praying for and expecting a revival throughout the charge." So writes Rev. L. E. Crooks, of the Elmore Circuit (Louisiana Conference) in a business letter to our office. Brother Crooks includes the Advocate among the important interests of the Church which a pastor should look after, as is attested by our subscription files.

The Coalville charge (Mississippi Conference) is prospering under the ministry of Rev. C. C. Gibson. At most of the appointments the congregations are large and attentive; an Epworth League has recently been organized at Coalville with a membership of 29, and the general outlook is most encouraging. Brother Gibson desires us to state that his postoffice is not Coalville, as it appears in the Mississippi Conference journal, but Biloxi, R. F. D. No. 2.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the accomplished President of the Mississippi Conference Training School at Montrose, obliged us by sending in some subscriptions to the Advocate a few days since. This is something unusual for the head of an institution of learning to do. But in more ways than one, Brother O'Neil is an uncommon man. His school closed the term of 1912-13 on April 28. We hope that he will find it possible to give us some account of the Commencement exercises and the work of the last session at an early date.

Rev. J. H. Felts, of Corinth, Miss., assisted Rev. T. M. Brownlee of Indianola in a meeting last week.

The Commencement sermon for the Tupelo (Miss.) High School will be preached next Sunday by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of New Albany, Miss. The people of that community have a treat in store.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Franklin, La., writes as follows: "Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., of the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans, has been engaged to preach the Commencement sermon of the Franklinton High School on May 13 at 11 a. m. Our people are expecting to hear an able discourse on that occasion." We predict that our Franklinton friends will not be disappointed.

An interesting series of revival services has recently been held at Mendenhall, Miss., in which the preaching was done by Rev. J. W. Ramsey, the pastor. The people say that the meeting was an excellent one, and though there are not many persons in this community outside of the Church, much good was accomplished. There were four reclamations and nine accessions to the Church.

In a personal note to the Editor, Rev. G. W. Bachman, of Winona, Miss., says: "My general health is good, but my eyesight is bad. It is with great difficulty that I can read ordinary print. But I endure as seeing Him who is invisible to mortal sight, but who is sensed by faith." This worthy veteran has behind him a long record of useful service, and it is not surprising that he should testify to the abiding presence of the Master as the evening shadows lengthen. The glory of the Christian religion is that it is always "better further on."

We are pleased to be informed that our Central Church at Meridian, Miss., is enjoying a large degree of prosperity under the pastorate of Rev. J. R. Jones. The congregations are large, often taxing the capacity of the building at the regular services. Seventy-two have been added to the membership this year, and a Committee has been appointed to secure a location for a new church. Brother Jones began a revival meeting last Sunday in which he has the assistance of Rev. J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark. The singing will be led by Rev. L. C. Smith of Chicago.

Rev. G. W. McLain, of the North Carrollton (Miss.) charge, favored us with a club of subscribers a few days since, and in his communication made the following reference to his work: "We are moving along nicely. We have been paying church debts and repairing our parsonage and some of our churches, and yet have plenty to do. We had quarterly conference at Hemingway on April 26, and the occasion was a profitable one. The brethren, than whom none more faithful can be found anywhere, are co-operating with the pastor in all movements that tend to huld up the kingdom."

Bishop W. A. Candler will hold the Louisiana Conference at Crowley on Dec. 10, 1913. The Methodists of Louisiana are most fortunate. There is not an abler preacher or safer leader in American Methodism than Bishop Candler. We regret that we cannot give the Mississippi assignments. We made no special arrangement to get the episcopal appointments, thinking that they would be easily obtainable from the press dispatches. But thus far the only thing that has appeared in the New Orleans papers is a single fragmentary and confused dispatch. It is regrettable that our city papers give so little Protestant church news.

Rev. W. C. Carlisle, of Shuqualak, Miss., is keeping up his usual good record in his present field of work. Since the last Annual Conference he has received 13 members, and has organized a Junior and Senior Epworth League and one Adult Bible Class. He will begin at Shuqualak on the first Sunday in June a series of revival services, in which he will have the assistance of Rev. J. H. Felts, of Corinth, Miss. Amid his manifold duties Brother Carlisle manages to look faithfully after the interests of the Conference organ, and he has our thanks for a club of 5 subscribers forwarded on April 28.

Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached at the St. Mark's Italian Church last Sunday evening, and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. He spoke in English, and those who could understand that language were very attentive. Many of that church do not understand or speak the English language, but they are taught the great truths of Christianity by Rev. Louis Pegani, a highly educated Italian, who is a local preacher in our Church. Two women, neither of whom understood English and both formerly Roman Catholics, joined our Church at St. Mark's on Sunday night.

From Gloster, Miss., under date of April 29, Rev. T. W. Adams, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, writes: "To-day, at 12:30 p. m., I united in matrimony Rev. E. C. Gunn, the popular pastor of our church at Gloster, Miss., and Miss Hilda Conerly, daughter of Brother and Sister W. J. Conerly, and a granddaughter of Rev. W. W. Simmons. The marriage took place at the residence of the bride's parents. This young itinerant couple begin their wedded life with the love of a host of friends and admirers." We extend congratulations to this gifted young pastor and his accomplished bride, and wish them a long life of happiness and usefulness together.

The following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not elsewhere been made, have our thanks for two or more subscribers sent in since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. W. J. Burt, Mayhew, Miss., 2; Rev. C. W. Baley, McCool, Miss., 5; Rev. A. A. Martin, Montpelier, Miss., 4; Rev. T. J. Burrett, Buena Vista, Miss., 4; Rev. J. J. Garner, Lula, Miss., 4.

From a recent number of the Raleigh (North Carolina) Christian Advocate we take the following: "Those who hurried away from the Raleigh District Conference missed what was universally regarded as a suitable climax to the whole session—the sermon of Dr. F. N. Parker on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. It was an unusually strong presentation of Christ as the way to God. It was food for the soul and its influence will be felt many days hence."

Bishop W. B. Murrah officiated on Monday, April 29, at the corner-stone laying of the new $100,000 First Methodist Church at Shreveport, La. Among those who were present and took part, besides Bishop Murrah and the distinguished pastor, Rev. G. E. Cameron, were the following: Rev. R. J. Harp, at one time the Publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the first pastor of our Church in Shreveport; Rev. Paul M. Brown, presiding elder of the Shreveport District; Dr. Felix R. Hill, President of Centenary College; Revs. M. E. Dodd and J. K. Smith, pastors respectively of the First Baptist and First Presbyterian Churches of Shreveport, and the Hon. J. E. Eastham, Mayor of Shreveport.

In forwarding some subscriptions to the Publisher, Rev. H. J. Maddox, of Sartartia, Miss., makes the following reference to his pastoral charge: "Everything considered, my work is moving along very nicely. We have had some special Sunday school days, the exercises being led by our Field Secretary. Things here at Sartartia are somewhat demoralized on account of the overflow. Every business house is standing in water from one to two feet deep, and most of the residences in the town have water underneath them. This Delta country needs the prayers of the Christian people generally in this time of emergency." We deeply sympathize with the people of this flood-stricken section, and we pray that the calamity which has come upon them may be of brief duration, and that the Heavenly Father may in some way make it minister to their good.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. Fannie Millsaps, which occurred at the residence of Mrs. J. M. Dameron in Jackson, Miss., on Tuesday morning, April 29. Mrs. Millsaps was the widow of the late Rev. William G. Millsaps, who was a beloved member of the Mississippi Conference and a brother of Major R. W. Millsaps. She was a daughter of Mr. Abraham Mayberry, and was born in Jefferson County, Miss., about 77 years ago. Being left a widow comparatively early in life, she lived for many years with her two daughters, and since their death had made her home chiefly in Jackson, where she had a sister, a granddaughter, and a number of other relatives. She was a woman of culture and the noblest Christian character, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. The obsequies, which were largely attended, were conducted by Dr. A. F. Smith, who paid a beautiful tribute to the character of the deceased. The remains were carried to Hazlehurst, Miss., for interment.

MRS. A. D. MILLER DEAD.

Mrs. A. D. Miller, wife of Rev. A. D. Miller, deceased, was buried at the Hermanville Cemetery, by the side of her husband on May 5, 1913, at 3 p. m. The services were attended by a large crowd of friends, in addition to the immediate family (which consists of the children). A suitable sketch will follow later.

Mrs. EVA MARY STEWART (nee Mayer) was born in Mississippi on March 4, 1870; was married to Dr. Chas. S. Stewart, of Amite, La., on Oct. 28, 1888, and departed this life on April 19, 1913. Shortly after her marriage she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and throughout her life was identified with all the church societies. She leaves a devoted husband and two sons, all of whom are members of the Church. On Sunday afternoon, as the sun sank out of sight, her remains were placed to rest in the cemetery in Amite, to await the resurrection morn. She will be missed by her family and a large circle of friends. Home, society, and church—all will miss her. She was a great sufferer for eight months, but never lost her interest in the work of the church or ceased to inquire concerning it.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Pope (Miss.) M. E. Church and Sunday School.)

Whereas, it has pleased God to remove from our community his faithful worker and our beloved sister, Mrs. PET GLENN, therefore be it Resolved:

1. That we with great sorrow chronicle the death of this noble woman, so long a member of our Sunday school.
2. That we shall always cherish the memory of her devoted Christian life, expressed in her untiring work for the Church, and in deeds of kindness which endeared her to all in our midst.
3. That we shall strive to emulate her virtues, and thereby gain a share in the great reward which we hope she now enjoys. ("I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also.")
4. That we deeply sympathize with the father, brother, and other loved ones in their great bereavement.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT.

Whereas, our Father, in his infinite wisdom, has taken from the midst of her home circle Mrs. KATIE W. WALL, the mother of some of our fellow-Leaguers, be it therefore resolved, by the Epworth League of the First M. E. Church, South, of Lake Charles, La.:

1. That in the abrupt ending of a life of devotion to her family and thoughtfulness for others, we recognize the controlling hand of Providence.
2. That while we sorrow for those to whom the loss is greatest and to whom the grief of separation is bitterest; and while we long to speak words of comfort to them in this time of bereavement, we feel the insufficiency of words, however lovingly spoken, and can therefore only point the way to Him "from whence cometh our help."

3. Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to each of the local papers, to the Christian Advocate at New Orleans, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Epworth League.

"THE LITTLE HYMN BOOK."

I, with many others, sincerely thank Brother Townsley for his lucid commendation of this timely and most excellent hymn book in the Advocate of April 17. The design of this publication is not to supersede, but to supplement the use of our standard "Methodist Hymnal" in our churches and in the homes of our people. Surely, every objection as to music, arrangement and price is now met, and all excuses for not having a full supply and using our own hymnal are removed.

Prices are as follows: Leatherette binding, 20 cents per copy postpaid; $2.00 per dozen postpaid; $12.50 per hundred, not prepaid. Cloth binding, 25 cents per copy postpaid; $20.00 per hundred, not prepaid. Either round or shape notes may be had. Let us have your orders rapidly.
 G. W. BACHMAN.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

We are most truly thankful to the people of Porterville for their considerate attention since the birth of our baby girl. For two weeks we have almost lived by eating the food that was prepared by kind neighbors and sent to us on trays and waiters, and on last Saturday night we received a most liberal 'pounding.' We do not know how to express to them our great appreciation. We feel that we are under lasting obligations to them. May God bless them, each and all.

Tidings From the Field

Porterville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I want to say to you and to the readers of the Advocate that God is with us on the Porterville charge. I have been to every one of my appointments on this charge except one, and I am preaching seven times a month. I find that there is an opening for good work in this field. From the way we have been treated since we came here we feel that we have a grip on these people, and I hope to be able to accomplish some good here. I want all the brethren to pray that the Porterville charge may be revived spiritually this year.—H. R. McKee, P. C.

Meadville, Miss.

Dear Editor: Brother G. H. Galloway has just closed a successful meeting for us at Bude, Miss. The attendance was good throughout, and the interest increased with every service. Several made a profession of faith and the Christian people of every denomination were greatly strengthened. We organized a large Sunday school and a church with about 40 members. Brother Galloway is a consecrated man and a strong preacher. His strength and power lies in his "thus saith the Lord." No man preaches the doctrine of the Methodist Church more clearly or leaves the pastor and people more in accord than he does.—J. W. Thompson, P. C.

Delay, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: You are giving the readers of the Advocate a great and good paper. It seems to me that it is worth its weight in gold. Rev. R. A. Tucker, our hustling presiding elder, is small in stature, but he is a most complete man; and when it comes to preaching a sermon he is very hard to beat. The Cambridge work is too small for our pastor, Rev. J. C. Nelson. I had the pleasure of hearing Rev. R. P. Goar a few Sundays ago at Toccoola. He preached a soul-stirring sermon. Brother W. W. Mitchell of Oxford told me a few days ago that some of his best members tell him that the Oxford Methodist Church is in the best condition it has been in for a number of years. Well, my three preacher boys—Countiss, Jim Cunningham, and Gary Murrah—are getting along finely. I thought about two months ago that I would get to name one Tucker, but it happened to be a girl.—P. M. Franklin.

Mayhew, Miss.

Mayhew is a new charge to me. I find that it is a small one and easily served. I also find one of our Advocates in nearly every Methodist home. I presented the claims of the Advocates to my congregation last Sunday and got four subscribers—one for the New Orleans and three for the Nashville. And, furthermore, I collected $40 for home missions which is just $7 less than our assessment. I find my work here very pleasant. It is composed of men and women of fine Christian character. They are kind, courteous, generous and appreciative. My friend, Rev. T. H. Porter, is to be with me at Mayhew the second week in May to assist in a protracted meeting. Pray for us.—W. J. Burt.

Jena, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: Our Sunday school at Jena celebrated on April 27 the most successful Children's Day in its history. We carried out in full the program prepared for the occasion.

The children were well trained and performed their parts with ease. The church was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, Southern smilax, and the arches were embellished with ferns. The Sunday previous to the day set apart for the celebration, I made my Children's Day speech, calling attention to the need and work of the Sunday school. We distributed envelopes for the offering. We worked and planned and talked it up. As a result of our labors, we had a large crowd in attendance and the offering surpassed our most sanguine expectation. We set as our goal $25, but when the money was counted we had $30. We have two Adult Bible Classes that contributed $21. I hope that each pastor who reads this may observe Children's Day. The children need the enthusiasm created by the occasion; the Church needs to recognize officially the child, and the Sunday School Board needs the offering to enable it to further Sunday school interests in our State. A little agitation will do great things. Jena raised in 1911 $4; in 1912 we raised $10; and in 1913, with more effort, we raised $30. If it can be done in Jena, it can be done elsewhere. Brethren, try it. Giving God the glory.—W. D. Kleinschmidt.

Deasonville charge (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: Our second quarterly conference was held on April 19 and 20. Rev. P. D. Hardin, our presiding elder, was with us and preached four fine, soul-stirring sermons. I don't know when I was ever in a more spiritual quarterly conference. At each of my appointments I had announced a two days' revival at Fletcher's Chapel (the place of the conference) and had prayed for the Spirit's presence. We were not disappointed, except in that the congregation was very small on Saturday. On Sunday we had a large congregation, the house being almost filled. The Holy Ghost was present in great power. The Lord gave us a rich blessing and the church was greatly revived. Six precious children joined the Church. Brother Hardin is a great revivalist, as well as a great presiding elder. These people believe in taking care of the preacher. About 45 per cent of the salary is paid; and if we were to count the many good things they have given us, it would be much more. The preacher who is read out for Deasonville charge is fortunate, indeed. On March 3, we lost the faithful horse (Prince) that we owned when we joined the Conference six years ago last December. This left us without a horse and but little with which to get another. A friend let me have a horse to use, and soon a subscription list was being circulated by the Methodists and Baptists, and in a few weeks enough was raised to get me another horse. Now, that I have another one I am ready for business. I want to take this opportunity to thank our friends of all the churches, and those who are not church members as well, for their liberality. We fail to find words to express our appreciation for their thoughtfulness of us. May the blessings of heaven be upon them, and may the God of heaven prepare us to better serve them. We are making every preparation we can for great revivals in all our churches. Will every servant of God pray that revivals may come? We are securing the very best help for our meetings. May the Lord bless the dear old Advocate and all its readers.—J. B. King, P. C.

THE COLLEGE FARM AT PORT GIBSON.

Dear Doctor Meek: Let me tell you of some things that we are doing on our college farm. We have enough corn growing to feed twice the number that we have in our school. We are planting sweet potatoes on such a scale that we hope they will yield a sufficiency to feed everything from the cows to those who sit at our tables. We used the best seed that could be found, our choice being the "Nancy Hall" yams.

We have for a month been supplying our dining room with English peas and salads of all kinds. We have bushels of these peas to can for winter use, after saving out an ample quantity to be served dry. We have rented a very fine peach orchard, and its beauty is ravenous to the eye (these also will be canned in quantities). Sugar corn, Irish potatoes, egg-plants, and pumpkins are being cultivated, and we are assured of more than we can use. We are planning to have beans—bunch beans, poll beans, butter beans, navy beans, and lima beans. We have four acres in beans, and expect to sell large quantities after the demand for home and college consumption has been met. I had almost forgotten our tomatoes. We have a cannery outfit for them, and expect to put up several hundred ten-pound cans.

Now, I am going to tell you of a thing I have never heard of any other college doing. We are growing a large field of white upland rice, which we expect to yield more than we can use in the college. It is the same that we buy from the markets when we do not get the imported varieties. Our patch of sugar cane is fine; our hogs are growing; our yearlings are mending, and the prospects for the next session of our school are brightening. Our only sadness is that we cannot grow granulated sugar and coffee berries.

Doctor, come to our Commencement, and let us prove to you that we can serve as many home-grown products at our table as any school in all the land. With regards to the brethren, I am yours fraternally,

C. M. CHAPMAN.

(After reading Brother Chapman's most interesting account of his farm, we are moved to inquire if he thinks it is possible to take a few outside boarders.—Editor of the Advocate.)

THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Greenville District Conference will be held at Cleveland May 22-25. Bishop W. B. Murrah will preside. The opening sermon will be preached Thursday evening of the 22nd by the Rev. W. S. Lagrone.

I trust that every preacher and layman in the District will arrange to be present at the first service of the Conference and remain until the last. Let us make this session of our District Conference one of great profit to all. I trust that in every service the evangelistic note will be prominent, and that the supreme thought of the Conference will be the salvation of the unsaved. To this end let earnest prayer be made.

An earnest effort on the part of the different churches in the District is being made to pay the assessment for Foreign, Home, and Conference Missions before the time of our meeting in May. If this can be done, I feel most confident that the Greenville District will pay in full the assessment for the year 1913. We ought not to think of doing less.

Let each Recording Steward see that the Quarterly Conference Record for his charge is present at the District Conference for inspection, as the law of the Church directs.

The following committees have been appointed: On License to Preach and Admission on Trial—J. W. Ward, H. M. Young, J. H. Smith. On Elder's and Deacon's Orders—J. T. Lewis, T. M. Bradley, J. J. Garner.

H. S. SPRAGINS, P. E.

IS IT RIGHT TO ADVERTISE COCA COLA?

Men who play the wily game of politics have discovered that the best way to distract the attention of the public from their own shortcomings is to make a loud-mouthed sensational attack upon some one else. As the cuttle-fish eludes its pursuer by clouding the surrounding water with the contents of its ink sac, so the political adventurer takes advantage of the ignorance and prejudices of the people to escape from his indefensible position by muddying the waters of public opinion.

A case in point is the recent attack made upon the religious press for carrying Coca-Cola advertising. This attack was made by a politician who was supposed to be an expert in chemistry but who, having brought a suit against the Coca-Cola Company, was humiliated by having to acknowledge that he could not qualify as an expert. The court decided in favor of the Coca-Cola Company as it was clearly shown that the only essential difference between Coca-Cola and coffee or tea is that the former contains only about half as much caffeine as the latter and that the flavor is different.

The question as to whether it is right to advertise Coca-Cola seems to resolve itself therefore into the question as to whether it is right to advertise coffee, tea, chocolate, cocoa and other beverages of the caffeine group.

"One of the greatest lessons in life is to learn to take people at their best, not their worst; to look for the beautiful, not the ugly; the bright, not the dark; the straight, not the crooked side."

MIGHT NOT BE ALIVE.

McMinnville, Tenn.—Mrs. Ocie Jett, of this place, writes: "I don't believe I would be living today, if it hadn't been for Cardui. I lay in bed for 27 days, and the doctor came every day, but he did me no good. Finally, he advised an operation, but I would not consent, and instead took Cardui. Now I am going about the house doing my work, and even do my washing. Cardui worked wonders in my case. I am in better health than for five years." Cardui is a strengthening tonic for women. It relieves pain, tones up the nerves, builds strength. Try it. At your druggist's.

READ HOW THIS BOY WAS CURED OF DREADED PELLAGRA

State of Alabama, Walker County.

Before me, J. Frank Baker, a Notary Public in and for said State and county, personally appeared Mr. W. R. Key, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that on or about the 1st of March, 1911, he went to Dr. B—, a practicing physician of Carbon Hill, and to Dr. G—, of the same place, for treatment for his son, John Key, for the disease known as pellagra, pronounced so by both Dr. B—, and Dr. G—, who gave him some medicine, but told him that he could not be cured. He kept growing worse till he sent to G. P. Baughn for treatment, and after using Baughn's Pellagra Remedy for about two weeks began to improve, and was completely cured after taking the treatment eight months. He is now entirely well and able to do good work.

DON'T WORRY—EAT.

Memphis, Tenn. — Mrs. Emma D. Looney, of this place, says: "I suffered misery for nearly eight years, but since taking Cardui, I am much stronger, and I haven't missed a single meal. I hardly know how to express my gratitude." Don't worry about your symptoms—Cardui doesn't treat them. What you need is strength. Cardui helps you to get it. Take Cardui, because other tonics and medicines do not contain its peculiar and successful ingredients, imported especially for its manufacture. Half a century of success has stamped Cardui with the seal of public approval. During this time, Cardui has benefited a million women. Why not you? Try it, to-day.

Wouldst thou bring the world unto God? Then live near to him thyself. If divine energy pervades thine own soul, everything that touches thee will receive the electric spark, though thou mayest be unconscious of being charged therewith.—L. M. Child.

The Council Meeting of Woman's Missionary Society of M. E. Church, South.

The third session of this notable gathering of Christian women met in Birmingham, Ala., April 9-17. Ninety-three members of the body answered to roll call, and enjoyed the privilege of the floor and voted on all questions.

Beside these, there was a large attendance of visitors, all of whom were deeply interested in the continuous proceedings. The influences of this meeting are bound to be far-reaching even after the exodus of this host, for "The Lord gave the Word—great is the host of women who publish it."

Reports from all the foreign fields were made by the Secretary of the Foreign Department, and foreign missionaries gave encouraging accounts of the progress of our schools. Bishop Lambuth made a deeply interesting address on Sunday on his mission to "Darkest Africa," which seemed to bring the uttermost parts of the earth closer to us, and helped all to feel that "God made of one blood all nations of the earth." The supreme need of the day was felt to be Africa's dire need. In close correlation with this seemed to be the need of the Negro in our midst.

On Monday night the Deaconesses were consecrated by Bishop McCoy. This was a solemn and impressive spectacle witnessed by hundreds of people, the immense church being taxed to its utmost seating capacity. Tuesday night twelve foreign missionaries were consecrated. Each of these twelve young women told in brief but thrilling words the story of her call to the work, of her efforts to evade it, and her final acceptance, with the joy and peace which complete surrender to the Divine Will always brings.

The reports from the home field were made by the Secretary of the Home Department and showed extensive progress. There are many superior minds among the officers and members of this body, and frequent discussions with foemen worthy of their steel showed the "diamond-cut-diamond" power of their incisive minds. Three new officers had to be elected, the First and Second Vice President and a Secretary for the Home Base. This latter place was filled by Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, the faithful, efficient, and much loved President of the United Societies of the Mississippi Conference, and the Lady Principal of Whitworth College, who accepted the place as a call to service for the Master.

Appropriations amounting to over $400,000 were made for the support of the various fields, institutions, and beneficiaries. These are always made on the basis of the collections of the past year, and always on faith in their constituents. The collections last year by the United Board of Missions were over a million dollars.

Some very flattering testimonials to the ability of our leaders as women of fine business qualities were received. The courtesy, hospitality, and affectionate consideration of the people of Birmingham for the welfare of their guests made a deep impression on all hearts. Each one felt that a personal vote of thanks to every member of the various churches who administered to our comfort would not have been amiss. To crown all, the Mayor extended an invitation to return next year, but the line of march will be westward, and Fort Worth will be the objective point. During all these days of counsel, communion and service, all perplexities were laid before the Court of Highest Appeal, before Him who hath said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Comparisons Not Always Odious.

Mrs. J. J. Holmes, our Louisiana Conference Treasurer, says that comparisons are sometimes glorious, and gives the following item to bear her out in her statement: Collections for the first quarter are $1908.27, against $1665.32 for the first quarter last year. This gain is in the Home Department, as the Foreign Department doesn't quite come up to last year's amount, owing to large contributions to the Jubilee Fund last year. The pledges, however, are much better. Mrs. Holmes says that she feels that we are really in the "Forward Movement," to some extent anyway.

The Foreign Mission Work of a Vashti Girl.

The following is culled from a leaflet issued by the Board of Missions: "She was only seventeen, and not very large, but was engaged to work during vacation for a wealthy family as up-stairs girl. Her salary was ten dollars per month—the first money she had really ever earned for herself, and doubtless she was strongly tempted to spend it for dress. She had studied missions at Vashti, and was interested in helping others. Through a native missionary she learned that a school was badly needed for four girls in India, and she decided to contribute $5 (isn't that a rebuke to us?), and tell her Sunday school class about the need. The girls took the matter up and raised $50. Not content with this, she went to the pastor and asked him to put the matter before the Church. The preacher declined, but said that she might address the congregation. As she had never made a public speech, she did not want to do this, but as there was no other way she decided to try. The pastor kindly introduced her and she read the letter from the native missionary, briefly stating conditions. The pastor told the ushers to pass the plates, and when the cash and subscriptions were counted and collected, $500 was turned over to this girl. After adding another five from her own wages, she joyfully sent the money to India. Truly, her efforts were abundantly blessed of the Lord, and she has set us an example that is worthy of emulation."

Message from a Korean Woman.

"Tell them there are hundreds and hundreds who must go into Christless graves unless they send more helpers, O tell them; make them understand!" This was the message from a Korean woman, delivered by Miss Lillian Nichols at the Council Meeting in Birmingham. Will the women of Christian America turn a deaf ear to this plea? Can you not feel the anguish of those hearts as they plead for more workers to carry the message of salvation to those who are sinking into Christless graves? Oh, let us be about our Master's business! It requireth haste.

inadequate as this force is to thoroughly evangelize China, being less than one missionary to every 100,000, it is the missionaries who are chiefly responsible for the awakening of China. Mr. F. S. Brockman has expressed the opinion that if to-day all the missionaries were removed from China, the gospel of Jesus Christ would, though much retarded in its progress, continue to spread until China became a Christian nation."

Mississippi Conference Meeting.

The distinguishing features of the Mississippi Conference Missionary Meeting, now in session at Hattiesburg, are the undivided attention to the business in hand by all delegates present, the efficient preparation made by those who have it in charge, and a universal desire to get and give all the good things in store.

The Conference is fortunate in having had present all through the session Mrs. A. L. Marshall, Editorial Secretary from Nashville; Miss Myrtle Long, who is doing such a grand work as deaconess at Biloxi; Miss Nell Drake, a missionary to China, now at home on furlough; and Mrs. S. S. Harris, who has been in China for five years at work as one of our most efficient representatives in that field. All these workers, together with local and visiting ministers, have shown a deep interest in the sessions and have contributed to the program by furnishing valuable information and making burning appeals for the work at home and abroad.

Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, the President, goes soon to Nashville as Secretary of the Home Base; and, while it is with genuine sorrow that this Conference parts with her as its leader, she will still be in close touch with the Mississippi work, and in a position to render more wide-spread service than ever.

Lack of space prevents our sending in detailed accounts of the meeting as it progresses, for every minute of the time has been crowded with work and well arranged exercises. Those present feel themselves blessed in being able to partake of such a feast of good things, and will be prepared to take back to their home auxiliaries ideas for better work and higher inspiration. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected to-day, and will be reported promptly to this column.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. J. W. Perry has a Teacher-training class at Haynesville of 15 members. Thus does the wise pastor look out for the coming teachers of the children of his church. In what way could he be a greater blessing to his Church, than to train his most important co-workers for more effective teaching? Thus, and thus only, shall the kingdom be founded upon a rock. The teacher holds the key of the kingdom, and "the world shall be evangelized in that generation when the teachers of its youth determine that it shall be so." The trainer of teachers is the maker of the world. To multiply by one makes slow progress, but when one multiplies by fifteen the numbers soon become large.

Dr. Oscar Dowling of Louisiana and Dr. Friedmann, the German scientist who is in America experimenting with an alleged consumption cure, are both prominent national characters at this time. The former is conducting a crusade to prevent disease, and the latter is endeavoring to cure it after once it has been allowed to take root. These two men are about parallel with the Christian teacher who is endeavoring to bring up children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" and the evangelist-reformer who is trying to save adult sinners who let the formative period in life pass without becoming established in Christian character. As it is to be hoped that Dr. Friedmann may have found some remedy for the dreaded white plague and will succeed in curing many; so it is hoped that the evangelists, the courts, and the reformatories may accomplish much in their line. But how much better would it be if Dr. Dowling should succeed in stopping this and other infectious diseases before they mark their patients, and the teacher and parent could so mold the character of the child that the adult evangelist-reformer would be an unnecessary person in the Church's scheme of morals. If normal children were trained by wise and pious parents of the Hannah, the Lois, and the Eunice type, the adult conversion will be a rare occurrence and not the rule. While the birth rate is being increased the death rate should be decreased; and while the Church should be concerned about making adherents, she should also be concerned about saving those who belong to her by natural increase.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham of Myrtle sends out a very clever postcard inviting members to his good school. It has proven to be so helpful that a copy is added:

"A warm welcome for you! When? This coming Sunday morning. Where? At the Methodist Church. Who? The welcome and invitation are for you, and your friends hope to have the pleasure of your presence. Remember, the doors swing wide open for you, and your presence will be appreciated."

Everything is quite simple and plain. It's just the place for holy gain; There, kindly words and friendly hands Are offered you, by our little band. Your friend,—E. H. Cunningham Pastor."

Activity is the law of Christian development, but that activity must be intelligently directed.

Remember that only a few Sundays now intervene before the May-time season for celebrating Children's Day. Let every pastor and superintendent take notice and have the best service possible on that great day.

Mrs. J. P. Hewlett and Miss Lyons of First Church, Corinth, have organized their Teen Age classes of girls, and Mrs. Hewlett's class started its social service program by taking dainty cake and lovely flowers to a shut-in on last Sunday.

Mr. T. W. Cooper, the progressive superintendent at Eupora, reports a splendid Adult Bible Class Day with a generous collection. Mrs. Wyatt of the I. L. & C. was with them and delivered a fine address. She is doing a great work in Columbus.

There should be certain high class ideals, a definite goal, a growth and training through Bible study, and an exercise of heart life through some avenue of social service, all leading ultimately to the conversion and salvation of every member of every class.

Great emphasis is justly being placed on the organization of Teen Age classes in our State and Conference. Messrs. Smith and Lamar have helpful leaflets along this line and they or the Field Secretary will be delighted to send them on request to any teacher of such a class of boys or girls.

The middle teen years is the period of life when for most people the issues of life are essentially determined. They are years of strife, conflict, the crystallizing of life-ideals and purposes and the determining of a life career. The teacher of a pupil at such a time should mold well and wisely the character in her hands.

Emerson said: "The true test of civilization is not the census, not the size of its cities nor the crops, but in the kind of men the country turns out." Not only is it the test of civilization, but also of a Christian civilization; and the Sunday school is really the one great force which is turning out the finest and best prepared men and women to take the strategic places in this great busy world.

A STATEMENT.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents of the Mississippi Conference:

At a recent meeting of the Sunday School Board of our Conference, the Field Secretary was re-elected for another year. The contract was made, trusting to the Lord to open up some way for raising the money for the salary. Now it is impossible to keep a Sunday school man in the field without the co-operation of the pastors and superintendents in the work of raising the means to support him. Other denominations, in this State have men in the field, and have had for some time. Why can't we also maintain one? I am sure we can, and I also feel sure that every pastor and superintendent is willing to do his part, if he can only find out what is desired of him. Now will you allow me to suggest how you can help? Paragraph 256 of the Discipline says you "shall" hold Children's Day. Now under certain conditions this may be impossible or seem to be so; but I am sure you can take the collection on that day if you can not have the program. The money from this collection will help to defray the expenses of the Field Secretary. Again, you can take the 3-cent assessment collection ordered by the Conference at Hazlehurst, last December. (See pages 27 and 28 of the Conference Journal, 1912.) The proceeds of this collection are applied to paying the salary of the Field Secretary. There is still another way in which you might assist. We have good, loyal Methodist laymen who would give to the support of the Sunday school work of the Church if only called on. If you have any of these men in your charge, will you not speak to them about the matter? Their own Church should come before all other work. Don't you think so?

Unless we can get the pastors and superintendents of the Conference to respond to the above suggestions, it will be impossible to keep a man in the field in the interest of our Sunday schools, which means that we will have to take the rear seat in the work, thus losing sight of that department of our Church that furnishes

MRS. BESSIE W. LIPSCOMB'S ENDORSEMENT OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

It is with deep regret that I sever my connection with Whitworth College and enter upon the new field of work to which I am called at this time. Through a period of thirteen years I have found a happy home for myself and my children, and a congenial field of work in this institution. In Dr. Cooper, under whose able administration I have served for the greater part of this time, I have found a wise leader, whom I honor greatly, and a warm personal friend, and I am deeply grateful to him and his good family for their constant kindness to me and mine.

Under Dr. Cooper's management the College has prospered phenomenally, and is to-day on the eve of its brightest and most useful period, and he deserves for the College the most loyal support of the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference while he steers her affairs into broader seas of service for the Church.

I lovingly and heartily commend Whitworth College and her head and heart, Dr. Cooper, with his faithful corps of helpers, to those seeking the best in a Church school, and I earnestly pray upon them all a continuance of God's blessings.

the greatest ingathering into the Kingdom of Christ. The Church that is progressive and wide-awake in Sunday school work to-day will be the Church that will take the world for Christ to-morrow.

Dear pastor and superintendent, what are you going to do about it? Did you know that about forty charges in the Mississippi Conference failed to observe Children's Day last year? Now if we as leaders fail to obey the Discipline (and the order of the Annual Conference), what can we expect the followers to do? This is not written in a spirit of criticism or rebuke, but that we may think and act and strive to make our Church lead in this important work. Methodists ought to be very loyal to the Sunday school work. One of the greatest men the world has ever produced gave us the Sunday school, in part, as it exists to-day. I refer to John Wesley.

A GREAT MEETING AT BRANDON.

Dear Brother Meek: From the 7th to the 17th of April there was held one of the greatest revival meetings ever seen in Brandon. This is the testimony of those who have lived here for many years. At the beginning of the year I began to prepare specially for this meeting, enlisting the hearty co-operation of the leading members of the Methodist Church, and also of the other denominations. As the time drew near for the meeting to begin the members became more and more anxious for a revival, as they were made to see the great need for one. I do not remember to have seen a people so thoroughly prepared for a revival as these were at the time when our services began. God was graciously working in our midst.

My three brothers of the Mississippi Conference—B. W., H. P., Jr., and J. M. Lewis—were with us and did the preaching. The Lord was with us in power from the beginning and gave the brothers unusual liberty in preaching the Word. But the people did not depend altogether on the preaching and the singing. The men met at the Courthouse for prayer and consultation every morning for an hour or more. Not only were the Christian men here, but sinners came and asked for prayer. Never have I seen the men so in earnest about the spiritual and moral needs of Brandon. The women also met every afternoon for a like purpose. Before the meeting closed practically every man, woman and child in Brandon, and for many miles around, had been touched in some personal way by the meeting. Many of the seemingly hopeless cases, because they had been so long hardened in sin and indifferent to religion, came under conviction and asked for the prayers of the Christian people.

A large number both in and out of the church were converted, and backsliders were reclaimed and testified that they had again found their Lord. The entire membership of some families would speak of the joys of salvation. The whole Church was wonderfully uplifted and is now prepared to do the will of God as perhaps never before. Twelve were added to our Church on profession of faith, besides some who will join other Churches. We are still looking for a larger increase in membership, for the revival spirit continues.

The Men's Prayer Band of Brandon is now a permanent organization and meets every Sunday afternoon at the Courthouse for a threefold purpose: (1) To assist one another to live true to God and each other in the spirit of Gal. 6:1; (2) to help make Brandon a better and cleaner town morally; (3) to pray and work for the salvation of every unsaved man and boy in the town. This prayer meeting is increasing in interest and attendance. The women are similarly organized and meet in the Presbyterian Church, while the children, under the direction of that most capable and consecrated leader, Mrs. S. L. McLaurin, meet as a Missionary and Prayer Band in the Methodist Church.

The Sunday school has had a large increase and is doing the best work in its history. A Bible and Christian Workers' Study Circle is being organized among the young people, in response to their desire to have a better knowledge of the Bible and to be better workers for the Master. Much more remains to be done. God is with us still, and with consecrated lives and a conquering faith, we expect to go on to more glorious achievements. To God be all the praise.

OSMOND LEWIS.

REVIVAL AT COLLINS, MISS.

The revival which closed here last Monday morning was said by the citizens of the town and community to be the greatest meeting that was ever conducted at this place. It made a deep and lasting impression. Souls were awakened and believers were caused to do their duty by the power of the Spirit of God. From the very start the services were powerful and the interest increased to the very last. Before the meeting started the merchants agreed to close for the morning services which were held from eight to nine o'clock. Everybody closed up according to agreement and most of the merchants came to the services. Even on Saturday they came. There is no way of knowing how many were converted. I never counted them and no one else that I know of did. The doors of the Church were only opened three times, and twenty-five joined the various churches in town. One of the great blessings of the meeting was the unity of the preachers in their efforts. They all stood together and presented a solid front to the enemy. It was a blessing to hear the earnest prayers of the Presbyterian and Baptist pastors—Revs. J. W. Allen and J. P. Williams. God blessed their people and we feel sure that they were more than repaid by the influence of the meeting. We are now having a preachers' prayer meeting and we feel that this will be the means of drawing us closer together and making our work count for more. There were some twenty-five or thirty who took up family prayer in the three churches. Some of the most prominent people in town assumed this obligation.

Rev. D. E. Kelly led us in this meeting and he did some of the best work we have ever witnessed. The Conference has made no mistake in holding him in the place of Conference Evangelist. God was and is with him. He is one of the most consecrated preachers it has been our privilege to hear. I have had him in meetings before, but he is a bigger and better man now than he was when he was last with me. May God continue to keep him humble and holy, that he may continue to do great things for the Master's glory. The town, not the Methodist Church, gave him a purse of $210. Everyone who heard him was glad to contribute, and it came in pennies and dollars.

The people were more than kind to the preacher. They pounded him in great fashion. It came from friends some of whom we have not found out, and it came in quantities that will affect the high cost of living for one Methodist preacher for some time to come. For all of these kindnesses shown by the loving and kind people (of all churches and of no church) in our town, we are thankful. God has given us these wonderful blessings, that we may, by his grace, be able to serve for his glory for many days to come.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS, P. C.

A GREAT REVIVAL.

We closed a good meeting at the lumber camps of the Gilchrist-Fordney Lumber Co., on Monday night, April 7. We began regular services on March 30, preaching both morning and night. On Tuesday evening, April 1, Brother D. E. Kelly arrived and did the preaching for us. For seven days he preached heart-searching and convincing sermons. Before the meeting began the church was very weak, having a membership of only eight. At the close of the meeting we had added 36 to our enrollment, some of whom are among the most influential men of the camps. At first the house would easily seat the people, but after the first three days the house would not hold them at all.

Some of the men after having heard the sermon on the subject, "Pay-day is Coming," said that they felt like the "cows had run over them." There was such convicting power in Brother Kelly's sermons that some tried to stifle their feelings of guilt, but they could not do so.

Miss Nona Stanly, who has taught the public school at the Camps for four years, is the superintendent of the Sunday school and has done a noble work. She realized the answer to her prayers during this meeting. Miss Nancy Robins, the music teacher, did all she could to make the work a success, and rejoiced to see her efforts blessed. Hearts that were cold toward the pastor before the meeting are now warm and full of love. This point paid last year to the pastor only $13. After paying Brother Kelly $56 they assessed themselves for the pastor this year over $200. Brother Kelly did most excellent work, the results of which bid fair to abide. There is in his work no element of the superficial.

The prayer meeting held last week was one of remarkable power. It was well attended and everyone took an active part.—C. H. Strait, P. C.

AN EPISCOPAL ADDRESS.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren: We are impelled by a deep sense of the importance of the matter to invite your attention at this time to the consideration of the imperative necessity of extending the circulation of the periodicals of our Church.

The interest of our people in the work of the Church cannot be greater than their knowledge of its efforts and enterprises. Their zeal for the promotion of the kingdom of heaven must be in proportion to their information concerning its needs and progress. Their religious experience and growth in grace must be vitally affected by what they read.

We cannot depend upon any other publications than our own periodicals to serve the high ends of informing our people accurately concerning the interests of our Church and instructing them in righteousness and true holiness. If one or more of our papers were read regularly in every home represented in our membership both the piety and prosperity of our beloved Church would be immeasurably advanced.

At Nashville, Tennessee, our Publishing Agents, Smith & Lamar, publish the Christian Advocate, our general organ. This paper presents weekly reliable accounts of the work of the Church throughout the connection in both the home and foreign fields. In its columns appear also carefully prepared articles in which the current topics of the day are ably discussed.

At various other points are issued the organs of the Annual Conferences. All these papers are worthy of the patronage which they seek, and which they need to secure their highest efficiency.

We are informed by our brethren who are in charge of these periodicals that only about one-third of the membership of the Church is reached by them now. If they accomplish so much while reaching so small a part of the Church, what would they not achieve if they were read by all our people? We fear that with their present circulation they fall far short of reaching all the official members of the Church even. Surely we cannot be satisfied with this condition. If the official leaders of the Church do not take and read our papers, how can we expect our people to become the intelligent and fruitful Christians that they ought to be?

Our Quarterly Review, a periodical of great value and high character, ought to be found in the homes of our official members at least.

We believe that our preachers would make their own work vastly more easy and effective if they would put forth earnest and persistent efforts to introduce these publications into the homes of the people committed to their charge. One round of pastoral visitation in which this matter was emphasized, would result in the great enrichment of the spiritual life and quickening of the religious energies of the members of the Church throughout the entire connection. It would be difficult to overstate the immense good which would follow such a Church-wide campaign in this interest.

We entreat, therefore, our pastors, official members, and all our people to whom this word of exhortation may come, to unite in the endeavor to bring to pass the great good which may thus be accomplished.

We shall be most happy if in the pastoral reports made to the Annual Conferences of the year 1913-1914 we find that every preacher has done his duty faithfully with respect to this important matter. If such shall be the case, we are confident that cheering progress will be reported in all other departments of our work.

The reports made at the last session of the Annual Conferences show that our total membership is now approximately 1,950,000 souls. Let us aim at carrying the figure above 2,000,000 during the year now at hand. Let sinners be called to repentance and multiplied thousands of wandering souls be gathered into the fold. And while the flock is increased let us be careful also to provide wholesome food for it. To the accomplishment of these high ends let us bring to bear the power of our own press.

Detailed plans for extending the circulation of our periodicals will be published in due time by our brethren to whom the Church has committed this important interest. We earnestly ask and confidently expect the hearty co-operation of our pastors and people in carrying these plans to successful fulfillment.

With gratitude to God for the unspeakable blessings of the past, we invoke the favor of our Lord upon all our people in the days to come. Let his work appear unto his servants and his glory unto their children. "And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea the work of our hands establish thou it."

LET THE GOOD WORK GO ON.

We are pleased to note that revival fires are beginning to burn here and there in our patronizing territory. This greatly delights us, and we hope and pray that these fires may catch from place to place until all Louisiana and all Mississippi shall be aflame with spiritual life and power. And if the conditions were faithfully met in our various pastoral charges, there is no doubt that such would be the case.

The spiritual wave that has been sweeping over the Holston country for some months yet shows no signs of subsiding, but, on the contrary, seems to be widening and mounting higher. With the hope that it may help the cause in our section, we quote the following from a recent article in the Midland Methodist by Dr. J. A. Baylor, the Secretary of the Holston Conference Committee on Evangelism:

"The revival wave is more prevalent than we have ever known it in Holston. Almost every pastor is proving a first-class evangelist. In stressing the evangelistic gift in the pastorate there is no intention on the part of the Committee on Evangelism to detract from the work of any man engaged in the distinct and exclusive work of an evangelist. Far from it. There are all too few evangelists of the right kind. * * * It is their very scarcity that marks the need of an evangelistic pastorate. If there is to be a great and general revival in the Church, one that will turn the tide of waning membership in all the Churches, that will rebuke worldliness and put a conquering enthusiasm into our gospel, one that will make real inroads upon the ranks of sin, every pulpit must flame with holy fire. And our belief is that God does not call men to preach without giving them in some degree the evangelistic gift and spirit. Our work has been largely directed toward stirring up this gift in all the preachers. The revival is mightily helping every other cause."

WE STAND WITH DR. ABBOTT.

At the recent meeting of the American Peace Congress, Dr. Lyman Abbott, who was one of the Vice Presidents of that organization, was refused re-election because he had signed a petition to Congress in favor of a larger Navy. We do not think Dr. Abbott's action was at all prejudicial to the cause of peace. Contention and strife will never be stopped by convention speeches and resolutions. Injustice, oppression, and unrighteousness must be wiped out before "sweet concord" can prevail among the peoples of the earth. The coming of that glad day is yet in the far future; and at present it behooves every nation to provide a sufficient military force to protect properly its interests and maintain quiet and good order. We have before us an example of what may result from having a weak government in the pitiable plight of poor Mexico. Let the peace theorists gaze upon that unhappy spectacle and learn wisdom. The brilliant Editor of The Outlook is a far saner advocate of peace than those ante-millennarians, if we may be allowed to coin a name to fit them.

Courtesy is itself a form of service. By gentleness of manner, by an unobtrusive sympathy, by thoughtfulness for others in little things, we may smooth the roughness of life for those with whom we live, soothe their vexations, and contribute more to their real happiness than by great and signal acts of generosity.—R. W. Dale.

How sacred, how beautiful, is the feeling of affection in pure and guileless bosoms! The proud may sneer at it, the fashionable may call it fable, the selfish and dissipated may affect to despise it; but the holy passion is surely of heaven, and is made evil by the corruptions of those whom it was sent to bless and preserve.—Mordaunt.

SUDDEN DEATH.

(This impressive utterance, which is strikingly religious in sentiment, appeared in the Commercial-Appeal of March 27, when the papers were filled with distressing accounts of the storms and floods that had wrought ruin and death in several States.)

The dark wing of death has hovered over the land. In the West many lives have been snuffed out in mighty gusts of wind. In the Ohio Valley hundreds of souls have been washed to eternity by the relentless torrents of water. How many of these unfortunates were ready to go no one can say. Only the Great Father knows. The lesson is plain. We should all be ready to go when we are called. Every man should keep his house in order. Sudden death must be expected.

This world, as all of us know, is a land of the dying, but what we too often forget is that the next is a land of the living. We should, therefore, so conduct ourselves that we can live in peace when we journey there. In this world we should live cleanly, honestly and according to the laws of God and man.

Death to a good man, according to Clarke, is but passing through a dark entry out of one little dusky room of his father's house into another that is fair and large, lightsome and glorious and divinely entertaining.

But how about the man who is not prepared to go? This is the question which must be considered.

As the shades of night sifted down over ill-fated Omaha and the Western States an unexpected storm swept over the country and a trail of death and desolation was left in its wake. In Ohio the maddened torrents of the swollen river raged over cities, towns and hamlets, and to-day a wrecked and ruined path marks the ravages of the floods, while thousands who were enjoying the light of life but a few days ago have gone to join their fathers.

The ancients used to fear death. It is different with mankind to-day. This is one of the fruits of Christianity. We do not so much fear death, it is only dying. To neglect at any time to prepare for death is a serious mistake, for we never know when or where the summons will come.

It does not make any difference at what hour the righteous fall asleep. Death cannot come unawares to the man or the woman who is fit to die, for he who always waits upon God is ready at any time the final call is made.

The example of the recent calamity is most instructive. It should be a lesson for us all. When in the dark hours of night, amidst music, light and laughter, the mighty Titanic sank beneath the freezing waters of the Atlantic, over a thousand lives were lost. Death came suddenly. Death was entirely unlooked for. Death gave no warning.

Some, perhaps, were willing and ready to accompany the dark angel, but others were not, and here again the inevitable lesson is brought home.

Death is, after all, but the sleeping partner of life. It is but a change of existence. It is a great, insoluble mystery we are always flying from and running toward.

We should, therefore, accept the words of Socrates and remember to "be of good cheer about death, and know this of a truth that no evil can happen to a good man, either in life or after death."

If we are prepared to meet our Master, if we are sustained and soothed with a clean conscience, if we have lived in the light of the Lord, we have nothing to fear from storms or floods or fires.

"Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath;
And stars to set, but all—
Thou hast all seasons for thine own, O Death."

"If there is anywhere on your horizon a spot of light, fix your eyes upon it and turn your thoughts away from the clouds which may cover the rest of the sky. One spot of blue is worth a skyful of gray."

ANENT AMATEUR THEATRICALS.

One of the queer things about human nature is its capacity for diverse opinions. All men do not think alike upon any question; often they honestly differ from one another, and at such times it is perhaps as well that their variant views be opposed, since by no other process is the truth ascertained. So long as the clash is kindly and the spirit considerate, no harm is done.

In reading the recent editorial utterance upon the subject of amateur theatricals, I found myself wondering if the assertions of the writer could be sustained. Almost surely the theater is not in the most disreputable period of its history; undoubtedly there are many men and women of the highest character and ability in the theatrical profession, and beyond any question some of the best people in the world patronize it. Certainly it is less than chivalrous to bring by innuendo such a wholesale and railing indictment against the virtue of the women of the stage, and the accusation poorly befits a Christian journal.

Granted, however, for argument's sake, that all the premise were true. Is the natural, inborn instinct of humanity to be repressed because some pervert it? Shall nobody preach because soap-box socialists rant raucously from street corners? Shall children be denied the paint-box, because some artists portray indecencies? Shall music perish, because moral perverts prostitute it to vulgar orgies? Shall we drink no water, because some men will insist upon quenching thirst with liquors?

The amateur performance is often crude, but that is about the worst to be said against it. By means of it healthy-minded, normally-organized, competently supervised young people provide themselves with innocent and instructive recreation, develop talents, and give others wholesome entertainment. The drama makes a powerful and natural appeal to the mind through psychological principles which no ecclesiastical authority can ever annul. Not only do we err when we impose arbitrary and onerous standards, but, on the other hand, we should provide an outlet for these natural and entirely proper instincts.

Aberdeen, Miss.

I. D. BORDERS.

THE EDITOR'S REPLY.

Brother Borders begins his article by commending that form of discussion which is considerate and kindly in spirit, but he does not go far before he gives what he has to say a decidedly personal turn by accusing the Editor of being unchivalric and of conducting the Advocate in a manner which "poorly befits a Christian journal." We sincerely regret that his practice does not come up to his preachment; for we should much prefer to discuss the principles involved in the issue between us in a wholly impersonal way, than to have to meet him upon the plane to which, after such high pretensions, he so quickly descends.

Our brother entitles his article, "Anent Amateur Theatricals," but it is quite as much a defense of the public theater. To see a Southern Methodist preacher coming into public print as an apologist for the professional stage is something "new under the sun." However, it is not the first time that our Brother has appeared in this role, since a few weeks ago some of our disturbed church members in North Mississippi sent us a clipping from the Memphis Commercial Appeal which showed him performing a similar feat in that widely circulated daily. Is not the attitude of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, hostile to the theater? It most assuredly is, as can be proven by its official declarations? When he was admitted into full connection with the Annual Conference, did not Brother Borders promise "to conform to the Discipline of the Church?" He did, or he would not have been received. Why then should he, while filling one of our pastorates, be writing for the press communications that are calculated to encourage our members to do things which the Church, through her constituted authorities, urges them not to do? What has he done with the sacred vows that he publicly assumed?

But let us come more directly to the consideration of his present deliverance. Almost the first statement that he makes is a misrepresentation. He represents us as having said that "the theater is in the most disreputable period of its history." We made no such utterance. Here is what we said: "Never in its long and discreditable history has the theater been MORE corrupt than it is at this time." Between what we did say and what the gentleman represents us as having said, there is all the wide difference between the comparative and the superlative. And we believe that our affirmation is true. At any rate, with leading stars of the dramatic world so often figuring in divorce courts and remarriages; with accounts of scandals in which actresses figure appearing with startling frequency in our metropolitan papers, and with city councils having every now and then to intervene to stop exhibitions that are outrageously indecent, the stage at this time is manifestly in a very bad way. Two or three years ago one of the most eminent ministers in our Church who was reared in New Orleans and who had had a much better opportunity to observe the influence of the theater than have either Brother Borders or the Editor, expressed to us the conviction that the play houses of this city were doing more to corrupt the morals of its youth than any other one evil agency in it. We have at present little disposition to multiply authorities, but we shall give one other. Bishop Warren A. Candler, than whom we know of no man on the American continent with a bigger brain, or a larger heart, or a nobler loyalty to the cause of Christ, says: "The theater has been throughout its whole history, and is now, a school of vice. * * * Its literature is often of immoral tendency, corrupt and corrupting, both in sentiment and principle. Its performances are not unfrequently characterized by irreverence and profanity, religion being made a subject of merriment, if not of derision. Vice is whitewashed and virtually commended. The name of God is blasphemously used and piety ridiculed. Not only do the more popular plays abound with low innuendo and double entendre, with the usual accompaniment of the ballet * * * but the grossest indecencies are the ordinary exhibitions of the stage—such as immodest dances with exposure of the female person, which are the known incentives to licentiousness and crime—so that the theater is, as it always has been, the habitual resort of the irreligious and the immoral."

But the one pointed out above is not the gentleman's only misrepresentation. He charges us with having brought "a wholesale indictment against the virtue of the women of the stage." We did no such thing. Here is our language: "When a young lady enters upon a stage career in the generality of cases it means her moral ruin." We submit that our words are sufficiently discriminating and provide amply for all who may walk the white way of virtue. We also stated that the general reputation of actors and actresses is bad and that it requires a constant sacrifice of splendid young womanhood to keep the theaters going; and these are facts so universally admitted that we shall not affront the intelligence of our readers by arguing to sustain them.

But Brother Borders says: "Undoubtedly there are many men and women of the highest character and ability in the theatrical profession." We think that his language is entirely too superlative. If he had said of "comparatively good, or average, character," we should have readily agreed that there are perhaps some such even before the footlights, but the "highest character" is a thing, which only the indwelling Spirit of God and unselfish Christian service can produce. It is none too plentiful in any calling. It is a sufficient answer to our critic on this point to say that the theatrical profession, like all other occupations, must be judged by the standing of the majority of its members, and not by that of a few exceptions.

But our correspondent, further, remarks that "some of the best people in the world patronize the theater." Here again he needs to define his term. "Best" depends upon what the standard is by which one measures. That there are perhaps not a few kind-hearted, honest, outwardly moral, and useful people who attend theaters (though we feel sure that they are not made better by going), we have little disposition to deny; but that they are frequented by people who are truly spiritual, who have the mind that was in Christ, we do not for one moment believe. Of what illustrious saint is it recorded, that he was a patron of the stage? We have read many epitaphs and obituaries of Christian people, but not in a single one have we seen theater-going mentioned as a commendable characteristic. And this observation applies also to ministers. Most of the clerical apologists for the modern stage have come from the worldly Churches like the Protestant Episcopal and from preachers not distinguished for their piety. It has not had the friendship of such men as John Wesley, Spurgeon, Finney, Moody, Asbury, McTear, Gallo-way, and Sam Jones; but, on the contrary, their uncompromising opposition.

It is claimed by our correspondent that the theatrical instinct is "natural and inborn." If this be so, why is it not evident in all men? Why is it not universal? Great civilizations have been developed without the theater, notably that of the Jewish people, which was largely molded by the mighty hand of God. Brother Borders' effort at ridicule is pitifully puerile. There is no analogy between "soap-box socialists" and preachers of the everlasting Gospel of Christ, or between the influence of the stage and the pulpit. The influence of the stage has been more for evil than for good; there is no divine command to keep it going. Preaching is the world's mightiest lifting agency; and God has commanded us to preach the Gospel to every creature. Painting and music are generally helpful instead of harmful; if the reverse were true, then well might we warn the people against them. The illustration as to water and whiskey is exceedingly brilliant! Water is a necessity—we must drink it. Is the theater a necessity? Our friend should have made the connecting link between whiskey and water more clearly perceptible in his analogical argument. We have heard that there is such a thing as watered whisky, and we have heard it said that when men drink whisky they frequently afterwards want to drink water. But we confess that we are considerably perplexed in trying to discover the relevancy of this remarkable outburst. If Brother Borders desired his illustration to carry with it any argumentative force, he should have put it in more logical form. He should have said, "Shall we leave off taking toddies because some men get drunk?" And in that case we should promptly have answered him, Yes. The sound policy of the Church has been to discourage in their incipency any practices which strongly tend to lead those indulging in them to participate in things that are evil. This has been her general attitude toward dancing, card-playing, and theater-going. Brother Borders wants to take down the bars against the theater—does he also want to take them down against card-playing and the dance?

He thinks that the worst thing that can be said against the amateur theatrical is that it is "crude." We take it from this that he prefers the professional performance, which is not crude. He says that by means of the amateur exhibition "young people provide themselves with innocent and instructive recreation." That it is innocent and helpful remains to be proved. If it is calculated to incline them to become stage-struck or to become patrons of the theater, it is by no means harmless.

He says that it "develops talents." What talents? For our part, we do not believe that there is a single valuable talent developed by the theatrical that cannot be equally as well developed in some other way that is unobjectionable. But it gives "wholesome entertainment to others." Here again we have empty assertion. If it encourages the people to attend the professional theater (and that it does this we think there is little doubt), it is very far from being wholesome. It is further said that "the drama makes a powerful and natural appeal to the mind through psychological principles." It does, indeed, make a powerful appeal, and when placed on the stage that appeal has usually been one which has degraded ideals and cursed human lives with vulgar and sensuous suggestions. The talk of reforming the theater is by no means new. It has been going on for centuries, but all attempts in that direction have ignominiously failed. We are also told that we err when we impose arbitrary and onerous standards, and that we should provide an outlet for these natural and entirely proper instincts." We take it that our friend here means that the Church should lift its ban against the theater. Indeed, he has said as much elsewhere. But our Bishops and our General Conference do not agree with the gentleman. And we think that it will take something more than his oracular affirmation to convince our people that his suggestion is a wise one. It occurs to us that there is at least a bare possibility that the tens of thousands of spiritually minded men and women in Southern Methodism are right in the attitude which they have caused the Church to take toward the theater and that our very wise brother is wrong.

Recurring for a moment to Brother Borders' charge that we have made the New Orleans Advocate take a position which "poorly befits a Christian journal," we will say that, as a matter of curiosity, we should like to see a Christian journal that he would consider fitting. We wonder if it would have a theatrical page, adorned with pictures of beautiful actresses dressed in décolleté style. We have little doubt that it would be quite a unique publication.

We have a suggestion that we wish to make to our latitudinarian friend. If he wants to help along the good cause that he has espoused by having the Church lift its ban against the theater, let him go to the next Annual Conference, and introduce a resolution something like the following:

"Whereas there is vastly more good than harm in the theater, and whereas the theatrical profession has in it many men and women of the highest character and ability, and is patronized by many of the best people in the world; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we memorialize the next General Conference to remove all restrictions in the Discipline against theater-going, and insert in lieu thereof a paragraph urging our people to avail themselves of this wholesome form of recreation and helpful means of culture, taking care only to exercise a wise sense of discrimination against any performances that may not measure up to a high moral standard."

The introduction and advocacy of this resolution might not bring as much applause from worldly church members and outsiders in the galleries as newspaper articles championing the public drama; but it would be the proper course for a loyal Methodist preacher with such convictions to pursue, would keep him from trampling underfoot his sacred ministerial vows, and would show that he possesses the courage and manliness of a true reformer. Will Brother Borders do this? We shall see when the North Mississippi Conference convenes in Tupelo next December.

If there should be any who are disposed to think that we have been too quick or too severe in attacking Brother Borders' position, we respectfully ask them, before passing judgment upon us, to consider the following statement of facts. When our Brother's article advocating the public drama appeared in the Commercial Appeal, it was brought to our attention, and we were urged to take notice of it in our columns; but, thinking that perhaps our friend had been impulsive and hasty, we refrained from doing so. Some time after this we quoted in the Advocate an utterance concerning the Church and the Theater by Dr. A. C. Dixon, of London, the successor of the renowned Charles H. Spurgeon, and to our great surprise Brother Borders sent us an article in reply, in which he openly championed the professional theater. This, we declined to publish on the ground that such a plea would be entirely out of place in a Southern Methodist journal, and, at the same time, wrote him a brotherly letter, telling him how we regretted to see his communication in the Commercial Appeal, urging him not to set at defiance the Discipline of the Church, and reminding him that if he felt that the Church is wrong in its attitude, the proper course to pursue was to send a memorial to the General Conference, which would enable him, with perfect propriety, to argue the question before our ecclesiastical tribunals. So, when the gentleman sent in the contribution which appears above, though we felt that perhaps we ought to exclude it, since he did not restrict his discussion to the question of amateur theatricals but boldly launched out into a defense of the professional stage, we preferred not to do this again, as we did not wish to give him and those who may sympathize with him even any seeming cause for complaint. In view of the foregoing and the interests at stake, we think that our readers will agree that we have been sufficiently considerate.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

By Rev. Wm. L. Sherrill.

The General Board of Church Extension met in Annual Session in First Church, Dallas, Texas, May 1, and continued its sessions until May 5.

Every member of the Board, with the exception of Dr. F. N. Parker, was present, and all the Bishops who are ex-officio members were there. On the first day, however, Dr. E. G. B. Mann, of Kentucky, the Vice-President, presided in the absence of the President, Mr. P. L. Jefferson, whose arrival was delayed on account of an urgent business engagement in New York.

The report of the Secretary indicated decided growth during the past year, but despite our progress the Board is embarrassed for the lack of funds to meet even the most urgent applications for help from every quarter of the Church.

The country is enjoying a measure of prosperity unprecedented; developments are marvelous. Industrial progress is unprecedented; towns are springing up everywhere and the cities are enlarging so rapidly that the Church is taxed to its utmost to meet the ever increasing demands upon it. The material growth of the country is all out of proportion to our growth in Christian liberality, and our Church Extension Board is unable to supply one-third of the funds that are needed to husband the territory. Many very worthy applications were not granted because we lacked the funds to go around and the appropriations were distributed where it seemed the necessities were greatest.

In 1883, the Board set out to raise a loan fund of a half-million dollars during 1884, the Centennial Year of American Methodism, but made a very modest beginning. The fund has grown steadily, even if slowly, until in 1906, when Dr. McMurry was elected Secretary, it had reached $230,002.59. During the seven years since his administration began $241,000 has been added and the fund now aggregates $501,387.16. It has taken over thirty years to reach the goal and since it has been reached we find a rapidly growing Church demands at once a loan fund of not less than a million, and the necessary balance must be raised before another quadrennium closes. There is no cause more worthy than that of Church Extension loans and no investment that will yield larger results to the Church. When wise old Benjamin Franklin died a little more than a hundred years ago, he bequeathed to his native city of Boston $5,000, with the stipulation that it should not be permanently invested until it had earned a million dollars. It has been yielding compound interest for a century, and a year or so ago had grown to a full million. This statement is made to show how $5,000 invested in the loan fund and re-invested with the interest may increase with each passing year, carrying blessing and progress in its wake. If the reader has money to give, remember the cause, and if you can't spare the income, give it on the annuity plan and get interest and save taxes. When you make your will, leave something to the Loan Fund and perpetuate your memory, not with a marble shaft, but with an ever-growing monument in the shape of a Loan Fund.

During the year, Dr. M. J. Coder, of Georgia, for many years a useful member of this Board, passed to his eternal reward. The Committee on Memoirs submitted an appropriate resolution which was adopted by the Board. It was decided that as there is but one year remaining of this quadrennium, the vacancy on the Board should be left open.

The report of the Washington Representative Church Commission was very gratifying. The total amount now pledged to this enterprise is about $300,000, and as soon as the pledges can be converted into negotiable paper, work on the church will begin. Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, who has worked so persistently and wisely to further this enterprise, has outlined a campaign for the coming months which will clench every pledge that has been secured.

The Board adopted a resolution suggesting that no applications be made to the next Annual Meeting that are not imperative, as the Board is anxious at the close of the quadrennium to keep all appropriations within the bounds of the receipts and to be able a year hence to leave to the succeeding Board an unencumbered treasury.

The report of the Executive Committee was against the immediate erection of the Mt. Pleasant Church in Washington City. Bishop Willson offered an amendment that the Board release its title to two of the lots to Mt. Pleasant Church in order that the work of building a $10,000 church might be undertaken at once. This brought forth a spirited and interesting debate between Bishops Wilson, Atkins, Denny and others favoring the amendment, and Bishops Candler, Kilgo and Dr. McMurry, opposing it. The concluding argument of Dr. McMurry cogently and concisely set forth the position of the Committee, completely turned the tide against the amendment and it was defeated by a decided majority. This action in no wise commits the Board against the Mt. Pleasant enterprise, but delays the undertakings for a time, in order that more substantial and permanent plans commensurate with the future needs of that growing section of the capital city may be matured.

Dr. J. A. Anderson, Editor of the Western Methodist, of Little Rock, presented the claims of the Church papers and while making no demands, presented the views of the editors that our General Board should provide a publicity fund for the benefit of the papers that open their columns for the use of the Boards. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee with power to act.

This Board is surely fortunate in having a man of such rare business acumen and discriminating judgment as Dr. McMurry for its Secretary. He is an untiring worker and wise administrator, and has brought our people to see the strength of this powerful arm of the Church as never before.

The banquet given by the Dallas City Board of Church Extension in honor of the members of the General Board was held in the Banquet Room at the Adolphus Hotel, on Saturday evening. There were 200 covers and Dallas Methodism had a representative company present. Judge Corkrell was toastmaster. Eloquent speeches were delivered by Dr. Pinson, Dr. John M. Moore, Dr. T. W. Lewis, Dr. W. F. McMurry, and Judge McCormick. Distinguished visiting preachers filled the Dallas pulpits on Sunday. Bishops Kilgo and Lambuth preached in Fort Worth. Dallas gave the brethren a genuine Texas welcome, and the brethren departed with the hope of returning some day.

Church News

The Methodists of Heber Springs, Ark., will soon erect a new church to cost $10,000. All over the land new Methodist houses of worship are constantly going up.

Rev. O. A. Thrower, presiding elder of the Tampa (Florida) District, is reported to have plans under way to raise $20,000 for church extension work in the city of Tampa.

In the assignment of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which took place at Huntington, W. Va., a few days since, Bishop Thirkield was continued in charge of the Conferences of that denomination in this section.

The General Board of Church Extension placed on the Church for that cause for the current year an assessment of $275,000, an increase over last year of $10,000. In view of the growth of our denomination both in numbers and wealth, this is a very moderate advance in the amount asked for.

A movement has been launched in the Western North Carolina Conference to raise $50,000 for the Children's Home which it maintains at Winston-Salem. This is only one of many indications that Methodism is alive and marching forward in the Old North State.

The International Epworth League Convention which was due to be held this year has been postponed until 1914. The request for this deferment came from Epworth League leaders of the Canadian and Northern Methodist Churches, and was concurred in by our General Epworth League Board.

Of the $150,000 subscribed to the endowment fund of Birmingham College, $124,000 was secured in the city of Birmingham. The Alabama Christian Advocate states that the campaign will still continue, and that it is hoped that a complete canvass of the State will swell the amount pledged to $250,000.

The Chemung Presbytery of Elmira, New York, has received Miss Rachel G. Brooks as a candidate for the ministry. Miss Brooks is a graduate of Elmira College. The General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church only a year ago voted against the ordination of women preachers. In view of this fact, what the outcome of the Presbytery's action will be, remains to be seen.

It is stated that the Southern Baptists have 3,500 congregations without a church building, and that to help them secure houses of worship a movement will be started to raise a loan fund of $1,000,000. In other words, our Baptist friends are feeling the need of a Church Extension Department, such as the Methodists have had for a long time. This is only one of many fields of service in which the followers of Wesley have led the way.

Trinity Parish of the Protestant Episcopal Church of New York City is said to be the richest parish of any denomination in the world. Its Year Book, which numbers 500 pages, has just been issued, and is reported to show that there are now besides the main church building nine chapels in the parish. It owns 366 houses in which between 3,000 and 4,000 persons are living. Its taxable property is set down at $15,171,024, an increase over last year of nearly a half million dollars.

The movement in the Southern Presbyterian Church to modify the elect-infant clause in the Confession of Faith of that denomination has again been defeated, having failed to secure the necessary three-fourths vote in the Presbyteries. The clause referred to declares that "all elect infants dying in infancy are saved." Those fighting for a change contend that their Church really believes that all persons dying in infancy are saved, and that this statement is misinterpreted to its detriment.

At the recent meeting of the Epworth League Board in Dallas, Texas, the question of transferring the Central Office of the Epworth League from Nashville to Dallas was considered and finally referred to the Committee on General Conference Legislation. One of the most interesting decisions reached was to hold a General Epworth League Convention in Havana, Cuba, next January or February. The Epworth League raised last year for missionary specials $31,000, a gain of $6,000 over the preceding year. Of this amount $10,000 went to Cuba.

According to the report of Dr. W. W. Pinson, our Chief Missionary Secretary, which was submitted at Dallas, our United Mission Board is now maintaining in the foreign field 361 missionaries. The total amount raised for missions last year was $1,179,000, a gain of $57,000 over the previous year. At the beginning of the present quadrennium the indebtedness of the Board was $220,121; on January 1, 1912, this debt had been reduced to $145,267; and on January 1, 1913, to $121,943, making within the past two years a total reduction of $98,178. Dr. Pinson stated that if the present financial policy of the Board is adhered to, the entire debt can gradually be retired without any serious retrenchment.

The Census of the British Wesleyan Church, recently taken, is said to show some encouraging indications. The Christian Guardian in referring to the results says: "It is true that for the seventh successive year there has been a decrease in the number of 'Full Members,' but the decrease is only 505, the smallest in all the seven years; and this is more than met by an increase of 544 in the returns of the persons 'on Trial.' But the 'Junior Membership' is the most hopeful of all, as it shows an increase of 1807 for the year. This means that there is really a net gain for the year of 1846. The totals are as follows: Full Members, 482,343; On Trial, 28,870; Junior Classes, 101,220. This gives a total membership for 1913 of 612,433. Out of 772 circuits and stations, 396 had an increase of members; 335 show a decrease, and 41 are stationary."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S MEETING.

The first annual meeting of the United Woman's Missionary Society, North Mississippi Conference convened in the M. E. Church, South, Grenada, Saturday afternoon, May 3. The delegates had previously been assigned to homes in Grenada and the welcome was so cordial and so gracious that a glad spirit prevailed.

Every officer was present save the Third Vice-President, who was detained by sickness, and every District Secretary was at her post of duty.

The presence of Mrs. A. L. Marshall, one of the Editors of the Missionary Voice, added much to the interest of the meeting. Her instructive address and the addresses and Bible lessons of Mrs. S. S. Harris, of the China Mission, were greatly enjoyed. Grenada's deaconess, Miss Ethelyn Knapp, of Corinth, and Miss Mollie Womach, of Meridian, were great inspirations to the meetings. Sunday a sermon delivered by Rev. J. A. Hall was followed by the communion service. A children's service was held Sunday afternoon by Mrs. S. M. Thames, the First Vice-President. On Sunday evening an address was delivered by Mrs. Marshall.

Monday was devoted to routine business until four in the afternoon, when the body entered into a memorial service for departed workers—Mrs. Carlotta Gibbs, Mrs. C. P. Stancill, and Mrs. W. L. Lipscomb. Mrs. L. C. Short presided at this meeting, the choir rendered beautiful music and friends paid loving tributes.

Tuesday evening the Second Vice President, whose work is with the young people, gave an address in the chapel at the Grenada College which was very beautiful and entertaining. The reports from the different departments and officers were very encouraging and attested faithful work.

Quite a number of visiting ministers from the North Mississippi Conference cheered and encouraged the body. There was a large number of ladies in attendance who are interested in missionary work, and a greater number of delegates than at any former session.

Speeches in regard to their special work were made by Rev. W. M. Williams of the Methodist Orphanage and by Rev. H. M. Ellis of the Memphis Methodist Hospital.

Much regret was felt and expressed by the body in that Mrs. Scales felt that she could not serve as President another year. The following ladies were elected to office for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Vic. Thompson Hoyle; First Vice-President, Mrs. S. M. Thames; Second Vice President, Miss Lillie Hartwell; Third Vice-President, Mrs. J. W. Conger; Fourth Vice-President, Mrs. Walter Trotter; Recording Secretary, Miss Mamie Buckley; Corresponding Secretary, Home Department, Miss Louise Dunstan; Corresponding Secretary, Foreign Department, Mrs. T. M. Clark; Treasurer, Home Department, Mrs. W. W. Wilburn; Treasurer, Foreign Department, Mrs. G. C. Jones; Superintendent Supplies, Mrs. Susie Thomas; Superintendent Press and Literature, Mrs. Walter Campbell; District Secretaries—Aberdeen, Mrs. C. A. Roberts; Corinth, Miss Corinne Rogers; Columbus, Mrs. T. W. Woodward; Durant, Mrs. Geo. Beall; Greenville, Mrs. E. T. Clark; Holly Springs, Mrs. T. J. Binford; Sardis, Mrs. J. V. Sanford; Winona, Mrs. H. M. Bryan.

AN ATTENDANT.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER WENDEL.

Dear Brother Meek: I write to let you know that I expect to go to the Baptist Memorial Hospital to-morrow for an operation. I have been suffering for years with a gall-bladder trouble that has frequently been a great source of annoyance, causing great suffering for months at a time. The doctors assure me that I will come out all right, but remarking that there is always an element of danger in an operation. In the case of the alleviation of the trouble, I will have greater efficiency because of the increased vitality that will follow. I wish to say to my brethren that I love them with all of my heart and I covet for them and our great Methodism the greatest honors possible under the providence of God. I feel that all will go well with me. I also have the assurance of my Savior's presence.

Your brother in Christ,

May 10, 1913.

W. D. WENDEL.

HAS NOT MOVED TO CALIFORNIA.

Some weeks ago it was stated in our "Personal and Other Notes" department that Rev. Thomas J. Norsworthy, who at the last session of the Louisiana Conference located to do evangelistic work, had moved to California. This statement was made upon what seemed to be dependable information, but it now develops that Brother Norsworthy was only temporarily in the West to meet some engagements that he had made to conduct revivals in that section. After holding successful meetings in Sacramento and Williams, Cal., he returned home about April 30, and since then has been assisting Rev. A. M. Broadfoot in a series of services at Forest, Miss. Brother Norsworthy yet has some open time at his disposal, and would be pleased to have any of our pastors in Louisiana or Mississippi who desire his assistance to write to him. He may be addressed for the next few days at Oakdale, La., and after that at Yazoo City, Miss.

Secular News and Comment

Nearly $2,000 has been collected for the purpose of building a monument to the Confederate dead in Alexandria, La.

The woman's suffrage bill, which was voted on by the English Parliament on May 6, was defeated by 266 to 219.

The Police Jury of Rapides Parish, La., last week refused to call an election in that parish to decide for or against the sale of intoxicating liquors.

According to statistics recently given out, the rate of infant mortality in the United States decreased from 1900 to 1911, 19 per cent. This means that where five infants died 12 years ago, only four die now.

The official valuation of the Morgan art collections now in the Metropolitan Museum and the Morgan Library of New York City is $50,000,000. It is thought that these collections will ultimately pass entirely into the hands of the Metropolitan Museum.

Mrs. Mary Ann Cooper, of London, England, who was Mary Ann Mitton, and at the age of four a playmate of Charles Dickens, the novelist, who nicknamed her Little Dorritt and wrote a book and named it in her honor, died on May 4, at the age of 99 years.

The Henry Phipps Institute for the Study of the White Plague was formerly opened in Philadelphia on May 10. It is the finest building of its kind in the world, and was completed at a cost of $1,000,000. It was the personal gift of Mr. Henry Phipps of New York City to the University of Pennsylvania.

On May 6, a bill passed the Pennsylvania Legislature requiring every teacher in the public schools of that State to read aloud daily before the scholars ten verses from the Bible. Any teacher who fails to comply with the new law, will, according to the penalty fixed for its violation, be dismissed from service.

On April 26, according to press dispatches from New York City, Dr. Friedmann sold the rights to manufacture and administer his turtle vaccine consumption serum for $125,000 cash and $1,800,000 stock in a corporation capitalized at $5,400,000. The corporation plans to build and equip thirty-six hospitals in different parts of the United States.

A rival of Miss Helen Keller, the famous blind prodigy, has been found in the person of Dr. Jacob W. Bolotin, whose appointment as head physician of a tuberculosis sanitarium in Chicago has been announced. Dr. Bolotin is 25 years of age, and has been blind and deaf since birth. In a test case, he recognized 500 out of 600 men in his class by shaking hands with them.

Instead of allowing the surplus money of the United States treasury to pass into the hands of a few large banks, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has announced his purpose to distribute $10,000,000 among the country banks, and charge an annual interest of 2 per cent on the average monthly balances. This plan will add $1,000,000 annually to the income of the government.

The British Government, according to an announcement made by Premier Asquith, will provide an annuity of $500 for the widow of Capt. Robert F. Scott, who died while attempting to return from an exploring trip to the South Pole. This amount, together with a $1,000 pension which she will receive in accordance with the law of Great Britain granting pensions to the widows of Naval Officers, will satisfy the terms of Capt. Scott's last request that she be well provided for.

It is said that there is $40,000,000 worth of opium now in China, which according to laws recently passed by that Republic can not be sold. Such a loss to one industry seems large, but the dealers in opium in China were conscious that theirs was an outlawed business, and that its perpetuation was entirely subject to the will of the people. An awakened conscience in China has rid that nation of opium. God speed the day when an awakened conscience in the United States may free this country from the curse of liquor, let the loss to those who are engaged in the outlawed liquor business be what it may!

MAY THE FIFTH.

Fifty-eight Years Ago To-day.

Yes, just fifty-eight years ago I, for the first time, tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come. To me it was a great day, a wonderful day, a great hallelujah day. Forget it? Never while I live and retain my right mind.

I had been greatly concerned about my soul's eternal interests, for just how long, I know not; but I know I wanted salvation from sin. I wanted a good case of old-time religion. Just one month before to a day, my brother Lem, who had been in my way for quite awhile, gave his hand for membership in the Church. A wonderful burden was lifted off me when he joined the Church. He was converted, or rather reclaimed, about the same time. From that time on he never spoke lightly of any interest I manifested in my soul's salvation. This was Saturday, May 3, 1855. The following Monday, May 5, Rev. A. B. Nicholson, late of the Mississippi Conference, preached one of his characteristic revival sermons, from Solomon's Songs, 5th Chapter, 16th verse: "He is altogether lovely." For the first time in life I listened with intense interest to every word the preacher said. To me it was the grandest, the sweetest, the most uplifting, heart-cheering sermon I had ever heard. Just before the preacher closed and called for penitents, the power of God came down, and I seemed to let go of the world and grasp the precious promises of God. (This blood is for thy ransom paid, I die that thou mayest live.) O what a blessing I then and there received! It was wonderful. I wept, I laughed, I shouted; well, I hardly know what I did do. I was happy, O so happy. Glory to God for redeeming grace and dying love!

Well, I am still in love with Jesus. I love his word, his songs, his people.

"There is a spot to me more dear,
Than Nature's vale or mountain,
A spot for which affection's tear,
Springs gently from its fountain.
Tis not where kindred souls abound,
Though that is almost heaven,
But where I first my Savior found,
And felt my sins forgiven.

Jackson, Miss., May 5, 1913. H. P. LEWIS.

ENCOURAGING TO POOR BOYS.

The men who succeed in life are not generally those who have an easy time in youth and inherit considerable property, but those who are trained in the school of poverty and hard work. The boy who is born rich is quite as much handicapped in the race of life as the boy who is born poor, if not more so. An impressive illustration of this is seen in the following interesting account of a meeting of prominent business men in one of our American cities, which we take from the Christian Endeavor World:

Dr. John T. M. Johnston, president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, at a meeting of the directors of that bank rose and asked each one present who had begun business with a capital of $10,000 to stand up. There were twenty-five directors of the bank in the room, and their wealth would aggregate about $20,000,000. Not a man of the twenty-five arose.

Doctor Johnston then put another proposition. He said: "Each man of you, who had $5000 with which to begin business, stand up."

The twenty-five directors looked around at one another, but not one of them stood up. "Each of you, who had $1000, stand up," persisted Dr. Johnston.

The directors again looked at one another, and laughed, but none of them arose.

Doctor Johnston kept putting the proposition, lowering the amount by $100 each time; and when he got down to $150 one of the directors stood up and said that was the amount of his capital when he began business.

The majority of the others began without a dollar. Doctor Johnston himself, estimated to be worth well on toward a half-million dollars, began his business without even a pair of shoes.

THINK OF THIS.

Someone asked a famous musician: "What is your favorite composition?"

The answer was: "Whatever I am playing."

That is the feeling that will cause a musician to throw his whole soul into his playing, and a workman to do his best work.

We have to like our work, or we shall not do our level best at it.

It may be that our present task is disagreeable, but it is possible to take a deep pride in doing it thoroughly and in leaving no rough odds and ends to worry others.

To slight the music one is playing is a poor preparation for further music. If one makes up his mind that, whatever be the composition, he will handle the keys like a master, many things are possible to him.

Promotion nowadays comes to few men unless they like the present work well enough to do their work as masters.—Onward.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference met in Como, Miss., April 17, and continued through Sunday, the 20th. The first day was given over to the women, and from all reports they had a pleasant and profitable session. The Conference proper met at 9 a.m., the 18th, with Rev. J. W. Dorman, P. E., in the Chair. The attendance was good, every preacher in the district and a goodly number of laymen being present. The sessions of the Conference were harmonious and pleasant, and every one seemed to be hopeful. To the delight of all, our own Mississippi Bishop, W. B. Murrah, was with us from the afternoon of the 18th. It was here in the town of Como he was stationed about thirty-five years ago. He lectured on "The Orient" on Saturday night and preached a very strong sermon on Sunday to the delight and edification of all. We had with us as visitors Rev. B. P. Jacob, presiding elder Winona District; Rev. G. W. Bachman, the Conference colporteur; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, representing Millsaps College; Rev. J. R. Countiss, representing Grenada Female College; Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Orphans' Home; Mr. R. M. Weaver, Assistant Field Secretary, representing the Sunday School interests; and Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Memphis Methodist Hospital. The Conference accepted the amount apportioned to the District by the Committee for this hospital enterprise, and ordered the appointing of a Committee to arrange for the raising of the same. The preaching, which was of a high order, was done by W. H. Mounger, B. P. Jacob, H. M. Ellis, and J. R. Countiss. A. M. Bennett was recommended to the Annual Conference for elder's orders. Two young men—W. P. Baily and S. W. White—were granted license to preach. P. T. Callicott, H. S. Gunn, Herbert Holmes, and J. J. Stephenson were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. J. H. Arnold and J. E. Birmingham were chosen alternates. H. S. Gunn was elected District Lay Leader. The next District Conference will be held at Courtland. Brother Randolph and the good people of Como feel proud of their new church, and justly so. The good people of Como entertained the Conference royally, and it will be a pleasure to go back there.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

This time-honored institution closed its seventy-third session on the evening of May 6. The special events associated with Commencement occasions were all in evidence—essays, concerts, and medal contests filling up much of the time, to the great interest and pleasure of the community. On Sunday, the 4th, Rev. C. F. Emery, pastor of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, preached the sermon to the edification and great pleasure of the combined congregations of the town. At 8 p.m. Rev. T. Y. Bowman, of Utica, addressed the League and Missionary Society of the College. At 11 o'clock, Monday morning, as a substitute of Presiding Elder Adams, whose official duties prevented his presence, Rev. H. B. Watkins gave the Class-day Address in most befitting style and spirit. Being the chief speaker for Tuesday, he was again before the public in an address which was most graciously received by a large assemblage in the College Chapel. The audience, which was composed in part of young men from Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, the young ladies of the College and the citizens of Port Gibson, gave frequent and hearty applause at the many happy "hits" made by the speaker; nor were his words less forceful and convincing because interspersed with his happy witticisms. As to the success of the session, we may better learn by some references to the President's report to the Board of Trustees. More than 100 have been enrolled in all departments, of which number seventy have been boarders. This is a most excellent showing, considering the fact that there was a change in the administration, and that in consequence only about 20 per cent of the former students returned. There has not been a case of serious sickness during the entire session, and the general health of the student body has been good. With few exceptions, all of the students belong to some branch of the Christian Church, the morale of the college was brought out in the statement that no violation of the rules had been so serious as to call for a demerit.

During the three years that the writer has been associated with the school he has not known greater interest manifested by the community in the welfare of the college; and the Board of Trustees were unusually careful in their inspection of conditions, and in preparing for the greater welfare of the institution. At the election of Trustees to fill vacancies it was thought wise to put new men on the Board and to bring it into closer touch with the Conference; so the following were recommended for confirmation by the Annual Conference: J. M. Morse, J. S. Purcell, and P. D. Hardin. Five young ladies received diplomas. It may not be out of place here to refer to the fact that of the class of 1912, numbering nine, seven have been employed in this and adjoining counties this year as teachers, and the same might be written of the other two but for the fact that one soon embarked on a more pleasant sea, and the other preferred to remain with her mother in the old home. An incident touching and personal will be permitted at the close. A young lady who has attended upon our ministry, a boarder, though of a family of different persuasion, asked that the pastor administer baptism to her in his home, withholding the decision as to the question of church relation until after consultation with her parents. Suffice it to say that there is life in the old College yet, and its right to share in the patronage of the Methodists of the State cannot be denied.

T. B. HOLLOMAN,
Secretary of the Board of Trustees.

May 7, 1913.

REV. CLAIBORNE McDONALD.

He was born in Covington County, Miss., Oct. 21, 1826. His parents were Hugh and Catherine (McCollum) McDonald, who had migrated from Richmond County, North Carolina. In 1852 he went to his grandfather's, in North Carolina, to help in caring for the old man, and attended school near the grandfather's home. Later he attended Bennettsville Academy in South Carolina, and still later the Lovensburg High School in North Carolina. In 1857, he returned to Mississippi and taught school at Pleasant Grove, now Mt. Olive.

While hearing a sermon by Dr. Fullenwider in the Presbyterian Church at Mt. Olive, July 12, 1857, he was converted; and in September joined the Methodist Protestant Church. He was licensed to preach on Oct. 10. He served as a local preacher and taught school until November, 1858, when he entered the itinerancy. His first work was as junior preacher under Rev. Wm. McCormick on the Chicahaha Circuit; and he did most of the work because his senior was very feeble. In 1859 and '60 he served the Bucatunna Circuit. In 1861 he was pastor of Clarke Circuit; but in May of that year he entered the Confederate Army—Wayne Rifles, Thirteenth Mississippi Regiment. At Corinth, Miss., Union City, Tenn., and then in the Army of Northern Virginia he saw active service. At the Battle in front of Richmond he was wounded. In 1863 he was made Chaplain of the 21st Mississippi Regiment, and served as such until the end of the War.

He was appointed by the President of his Conference to a small circuit in Wayne County, which he served, teaching school for a living, until the close of the Conference year. In 1866 he was on the Waynesboro Circuit, teaching school and studying dentistry as well. In 1867-68 he served the Strong River Circuit, and in 1869-70 the Enon Circuit.

He was Secretary of his Conference when the union of that Conference with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was consummated. His first charge in our Church was Morton, which he served during 1872-73-74. In 1875-76 he served Forest and Lake; Hillsboro in 1877; Raleigh in 1878; Newton in 1879; Trenton, 1880-82; Strong River, 1883-84; Morton, 1885-87. In 1888-91 he was presiding elder of the Woodville District, and of the Brandon District in 1892-95. In 1896 he was pastor at Morton and Forest; 1897-98, Caseyville; 1899-02, at Providence; 1903, at Sataria; 1904-05, at Benton; 1906-07-08, at Lake. At the Conference held at Yazoo City in 1908 he asked for the superannuate relation.

He then removed to Pelahatchie, where he made his home until his translation.

Brother McDonald was twice married—to Miss Eliza S. Sims in November, 1868, who bore two children; and, after her death, to Miss Rachel R. Flannagan, of Morton, Miss., who bore nine children. All of his children and the second wife survive him.

He lived a long and useful life, having served one year as a local preacher, fifty years as an active itinerant, and more than four years on the honor roll.

He was a good preacher, a faithful pastor, and a wise administrator of the Church's affairs. He was a man of strong convictions, a genuine Scotsman, as his name indicates—a Christian Scotchman. He was careful in his plans and thoroughly systematic in all his work. He kept for years rather a full diary. He was true to his Church, its regulations and customs. He was greatly loved by the people whom he served, and by his brethren of the Conference. Shortly before his death, he dictated a loving message to his brethren. It was published in the Advocate at New Orleans. He was a patient sufferer, and met death unafraid. A few days before the end came he said to his family: "Watch the clock, the minute my breath leaves me, I am entering Heaven." On April 1, at one o'clock and five minutes after the Lord said, "It is enough come up higher."

The funeral services were held in the village church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. W. Featherston, D. D., Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., Rev. J. M. Morse, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Rev. C. C. Griffin, Rev. W. N. Roberts, pastor of the Baptist church in Pelahatchie, and Rev. O. S. Lewis. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pelahatchie by loving hands. Farewell my brother; we shall meet you again.

GIRLS THAT ARE WANTED.

The girls that are wanted are home girls,
Girls that are mother's right hand,
That the fathers and brothers can trust in,
And the little ones understand.

Girls that are fair on the hearthstone,
And pleasant when nobody sees;
Kind and sweet to their own folks,
Ready and anxious to please.

The girls that are wanted are wise girls,
That know what to do and to say;
That drive with a smile and a soft word
The care of the household away.

The girls that are wanted are good girls,
Good girls from the heart to the lips;
Pure as the lily is white and pure
From its heart to its sweet leaf tips.

THE SMILE THAT REACHED BOTH EARS.

Patsy was a little Irish boy with curly hair and big blue eyes and a big smile which almost touched both ears. Patsy's mother took in washing, and his father—well, Patsy's father was drunk most of the time, and Patsy himself ran errands all day long for a man who lived on Twenty-third street, and it was Patsy's smile that helped to give him his position. This is how it came about. The rent was due, and there was scarcely any money even for food, and Patsy's father kept on getting drunk. One day Patsy started out to look for work. Many days he walked the streets. His mother became sick, and the money was all gone. He worked harder than ever; but people only turned and smiled at him, and some of them laughed, he was so little. One day he picked up a newspaper a man had dropped and laboriously spelled out the words of the advertisement: Wanted—A good, clean boy to run errands, carry packages, and for other odd jobs. 265 Twenty-third street."

Mr. Kendrick looked in astonishment at the first boy who had come in answer to his advertisement. Patsy smiled, his teeth were clean, and not quite all his curls were ruffled.

"You're too small, my little man," explained Mr. Kendrick kindly but firmly. "See, this is the kind of packages I meant." And he pulled out one which Patsy was barely able to lift, and that was all.

"I could get some sort of a little wagon to wheel them in," he ventured.

Mr. Kendrick smiled. "I'm afraid you wouldn't do. You see, there are other things besides carrying the packages, which you could not do either. Have you had experience in anything?"

"No, sir," answered Patsy.

"I'm sorry," exclaimed Mr. Kendrick.

"All right, sir, I'll try another place," Patsy said with a bright smile, although he had had no dinner and very little breakfast. "Well, good day, sir."

There was something strangely fascinating about his curls, which needed cutting, and the little outgrown cap placed rakishly over one ear. Mr. Kendrick watched him out the window, and suddenly Patsy turned and looked up at him and smiled, in spite of the rain that was coming down in torrents and the knowledge that he would go supperless to bed that night.

That was too much for Mr. Kendrick. He motioned Patsy to come back. "I was mistaken," he said. "I guess you're the boy I want after all."

This happened some years ago, and if you should now ever by chance or mischance happen into No. 265 Twenty-third street and ask to see the head of the establishment, you would, to your great delight, be ushered into the presence of a pleasant-faced man with a winning smile which nearly reaches both his ears.—Southern Churchman.

A SMALL BOY'S PHILOSOPHY.

An overheard conversation between two small boys, brothers, aged five and three-and-a-half:

The older: "See how tall I am, Chauncey! See how much higher my head goes up than yours!"

"Yes, Malcolm," said little three-year-old. "Yes, your head is higher than mine;" then, with a radiant look of equality, "but my feet go down as far as yours, Malcolm"—New York Christian Advocate.

THE BOOK OF THANKS.

"I feel so vexed and out of temper with Ben," said Mark, "that I really must—"

"Do something in revenge?" inquired his cousin Cecilia.

"No!—just look over my Book of Thanks."

"What's that?" said Cecilia, as she saw him turning over the leaves of a copy-book nearly full of writing in a round, text-hand.

"Here it is," said Mark, and he read aloud:

"March 8—Ben lent me his hat." Here again: "January 4—When I lost my shilling Ben kindly made it up to me."

"Well," observed the boy, turning down the leaf, "Ben is a good boy, after all."

"What do you note down in that book?" said Cecilia, looking over his shoulder with some curiosity.

"All the kindnesses that ever are shown me. I do not forget them, as I might do if I only trusted to my memory. So I hope that I am not often ungrateful; and when I am cross or out of temper, I almost always feel good-humored again if I only look over my book."—Christian Guardian.

SOME BAPTIST HISTORY AS TOLD BY A BAPTIST.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

In the Mississippi Baptist of April 2, there is an article by W. E. Fendley in which occurs the following:

"As I understand the Bible and church history, there were no churches in the world except Baptist churches prior to A. D. 606, when the Catholic Church was set up. Evidences of the Catholic is seen as far back as A. D. 200 or perhaps A. D. 150, but there is positively no evidence of the Catholic Church earlier than A. D. 150. The Catholic Church, however, was not set up until A. D. 606."

The absurdity of this may be a bit modified by the modest phrase: "As I understand the Bible and church history." However, the brother should have some basis for a published statement, some reason for his understanding. As the Bible does not remotely allude to the matter, we must examine the Brother's interpretation of "Church History." He says "there were no churches in the world except Baptist churches prior to A. D. 606 when the Catholic Church was set up." The fact is, Ignatius, who died in A. D. 107, speaks of the Catholic Church thus: "Wherever Jesus Christ is there is the Catholic Church" (Epistle to the Smyrnaeans, Chapter viii.) Again in an Epistle of the Church at Smyrna relating the Martyrdom of Polycarp, who was born A. D. 65 and was a pupil of St. John, we read: "To all the congregations of the Holy and Catholic Church in every place." It is so evident as to bar all denial that during those earlier centuries the aggregation of Christian congregations was constantly and everywhere known as the Catholic (that is general or universal) Church. So in the Apostles' Creed, which came into general use long before A. D. 606, we find the definition of the name:—"the Holy Catholic Church (which is) the communion of (all) saints."

He tells us further on in his article that "the Greek Church branched out from the Catholic Church." I thought everybody knew that this "Greek Church" calls itself "the Catholic Church;" and that to distinguish them Protestants generally speak of them as the "Romish Church" or "Church of Rome" and the "Greek Church;" for neither of them are in any sense the Catholic Church. If it be true as our Brother says that "there were no churches in the world except Baptist churches prior to A. D. 606," then the Baptist churches made up the Catholic Church.

He recedes, however, from this startling statement by saying further on: "I do not claim nor insist on the succession of the name Baptist; but I do claim and insist that we can trace a succession of doctrine back to Christ and the Apostles." Ah! that is wiser. If he will leave out such insignificant dogmas as relate to the mode of Baptism and the mode of the Lord's Supper and the reprobation of the non-elected, and indicate as doctrine only the fundamentals, we will readily grant his contention. We Methodists claim and are ready to prove that our doctrines come down to us from Christ and the Apostles. Such an Apostolic Succession, as our Baptist Brother contends for, is also our claim.

In the same paper under date of April 23, is an editorial from the Western Recorder, which claims that the Sabians were the Baptists of that early post-apostolic era. Now who are these Sabians? They call themselves the Christians of St. John, claiming ecclesiastical descent from John the Baptist. "They are Christians only in name," says the Columbian Encyclopedia; their so-called theology being a mixture of paganism and Christianity—more pagan than Christian. Their sacred book is not the Bible. They are polytheists, worshipping a number of gods with sundry rites borrowed from Christianity. They practice infant baptism very punctiliously. "Polygamy is advised in the Great Book (their Bible), but at present most of them have only two wives." The sect originated in Babylonia. This is certainly a very old sect, their origin dating possibly from the IVth Century; and if our Baptist brethren insist upon tracing their succession back to and through them, we shall not protest; but we stand ready to exonerate all modern Baptists from the odium of so filthy an ancestry. These Sabians have ever called themselves Baptists—so did the Munsterites of the Reformation time—but "what's in a name?"

SECTARIANISM A HINDERING INFLUENCE.

The following excerpt from a strong and thought-provoking article by the Rev. E. P. Hill, D. D., which appeared in a recent number of The Continent is well worth a careful reading and earnest consideration:

"One of the chief obstacles in the way of city evangelization is denominational rivalry, resulting in duplication, waste and unseemly strife. Frequently a half dozen empty church buildings are found occupying the same field, where the work could be done far more efficiently by only one. So far as the congested sections of the city are concerned, the denominations seem willing to retire, leaving the religious work to be carried on spasmodically by irresponsible groups that often bring the cause of Christianity into disrepute, while the missionary agents rush into the residence districts and fashionable suburbs to contest fiercely for the advantage. A union of the forces of Christianity is far away. But denominational co-operation ought to and may be effected at once. The various religious bodies through their authorized missionary agencies should engage in a concerted, persistent, comprehensive ministry among the unchurched who live in the slums and tenement-house districts. The Chicago Association of Commerce recently investigated various religious and philanthropic organizations that appeal to business men for assistance and made the discovery that eighteen were pure fakes. If the money Christian men and women are annually pouring into irresponsible enterprises were placed in the hands of a co-operative body representing the various denominations, they could rest in the assurance that the money was being conscientiously expended and great good was being done. As to the residence districts, there should be a working agreement among the missionary societies whereby new churches could be organized only after securing the approval of a committee representing the co-operating bodies. What may be accomplished along this line may be inferred from the splendid work of the Co-operative Council of City Missions of Chicago, which is composed of official representatives appointed by the city missionary societies of the Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Baptists, and Disciples. This body is giving a notable demonstration of the value and methods of co-operation in city evangelization. It studies various city problems, canvasses fields, suggests that new churches be organized or that competing enterprises be consolidated. No new work is begun without the approval of the council."

So far as the different Protestant Evangelical Churches are concerned, we are disposed to believe that their existence in separate bodies is helpful rather than harmful, if their affairs are properly managed; but certainly such a spirit of denominational rivalry as that described by Dr. Hill ought not to exist. It is a reproach and hindrance to the cause of Christianity. Yet we are forced to admit that there is quite a good deal of it. Nor is it in the cities alone that it is found; its blighting influence is also often seen in the small towns and in rural communities. It would be a noble achievement for the followers of Christ in the twentieth century if they could speedily do away with this unwarranted and wasteful competition between Churches that are practically in accord in their fundamental teachings. The word "Federation" ought to be written large in the future annals of Christianity. To express it mildly, we consider it most lamentable that even our Methodist bodies, which have a common history and are one in doctrine, cannot be induced to refrain from contending against one another in the same field. There may be rejoicing somewhere over this spectacle of brethren building altar against altar, but we dare say that it is not among the angels of God on high.

"INTELLECTUAL MEASLES."

The Raleigh Christian Advocate says: "Four candidates for the ministry who recently came before the New York Presbytery declined to subscribe to the usual interpretation of the Scriptures in regard to several things. Tertius Van Dyke, a son of Dr. Henry Van Dyke, whose reputation is nation-wide, was the first to break rank. 'There is not sufficient evidence at hand,' said young Van Dyke, 'to induce me to believe fully in the virgin birth of Christ.' He also stood persistently by his doubts as to the bodily resurrection, Jonah and the whale, and the raising of Lazarus from the dead. This is according to a press dispatch sent out from New York under date of April 19. It is said that the opposition to their reception was stubborn, but in the final vote they were received by the large majority of 71 to 10. This is only an instance of a trend of thought which delights to call itself modern and which seeks to eliminate the supernatural from religion. The truth is, it is not modern at all, for the Sadducees denied substantially all these things in the days of Christ, and affected to do it from a larger intellectuality. * * * For the sake of his revered father, as well as for his own sake, we hope that young Van Dyke will get safely over this case of intellectual measles."

We are not certain that our esteemed contemporary has happily named this unfortunate malady. To be sure, it is catching like measles, but it is our observation that it does not speedily run its course like that disease. We think he is right, however, in his suggestion as to the cause of the trouble. Intellectual vanity is responsible for most of the shallow skepticism that vaunts itself among us in this day. There are many men who are willing to do most anything to be accounted scholarly. But if their fancied scholarship were carefully analyzed, it would be found in many cases that about 90 per cent of it consists of pure, unadulterated egotism. Nothing could be more unreasonable than to demand that the sublime truths of the Divine Revelation shall come fully within the narrow compass of the human understanding. Not a few in this age need to meditate long upon the memorable words of St. Paul: "For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block and unto the Greeks foolishness, but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God."

THE EPISCOPAL ASSIGNMENTS.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the "Plan of Episcopal Visitation" for the next twelve months. The re-assignment of Bishop Murrah to the Orient, though a compliment to him, will prove a distinct disappointment to his many friends who had hoped that he would be allowed to labor for a while in the home land. The Church, however, needs his clear judgment and wise leadership in the Far East where events of such vast and far-reaching importance are now taking place; and we should not be so selfish as to desire to retain his services to the detriment of the work in the lands where Christianity to-day has its most inspiring opportunities. We notice in the Jackson papers that Mrs. Murrah has announced that she will again accompany the Bishop on his trip, and that they will probably go to China and Japan by the westward route, proceeding first to Europe, and thence by rail across Eastern Siberia. They will likely leave about the middle of the summer.

The Louisianians and South Mississippians are delighted to have the oversight and presidency of Bishop Candler, as well they may be. As a preacher and administrator, he ranks second to none in the Episcopal College, and he is sound in the faith and is a loyal and ardent Methodist who prefers the old paths, made plain by the feet of the saints ascending to glory, to trying to blaze out new and uncertain ways. In this day, when so many trumpets are giving forth an uncertain sound, it is a wholesome tonic to any Conference to sit under the apostolic and masterful ministry of this great son of Wesley.

This will be Bishop Atkins' first visit to North Mississippi since his elevation to the episcopacy, though he is no stranger to the brethren of that Conference, having been among them a number of times when he was our able Sunday School

Editor. He is a man of culture and breadth of scholarship, and his episcopal service, has been highly commended in Texas and other sections of the Church in which he has wrought. A most cordial welcome will be extended him.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. J. Kelly, of Harrisonburg, La., and Prof. R. N. Jeffrey recently assisted the pastor, Rev. A. I. Townsley, in a revival meeting held at Delhi, La.

Mothers' Day was celebrated in nearly all the churches in New Orleans last Sunday. Most of the pastors preached special sermons in honor of the occasion.

A dispatch sent from Mansfield, La., to the Times-Democrat on May 11, stated that the Methodists of that city had succeeded in liquidating the entire indebtedness on their church and parsonage.

Rev. H. C. Brown, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, died in Chicago the latter part of last week and his remains were interred at Jackson, Miss., last Sunday. He is survived by a wife and two children.

We learn from a correspondent that Rev. J. F. Foster, of DeRidder, La., delighted a large congregation at Rayville, La., on May 13, and another one at Delhi on May 14, with his lecture, "A Ramble Through Sunny Italy."

Rev. W. F. Baggett, in a business letter to our office, says: "Our work at De Kalb is moving on nicely, and we expect to have a good year." Brother Baggett's letter brought us a club of five subscribers, for which he has our thanks.

Rev. W. A. Mangham, the pastor, will begin a revival meeting at Second Church, Baton Rouge, on May 18. He will be assisted by Rev. A. I. Townsley of Rayville, who began his pastoral labors in the Louisiana Conference in that church.

In the Mississippi State Oratorical contest, held in Aberdeen, on May 9, the first prize was won by Mr. H. H. Boswell, of Millsaps College, and the second by Mr. M. E. White, representative of the University of Mississippi. Mr. Boswell is a native of Kosciusko.

Rev. J. W. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, attended the meeting of the General Board of Missions in Dallas last week. Dr. Moore is in Jackson, Miss., this week assisting Rev. J. M. Morse in a revival at the Capitol Street Methodist Church of that city.

Rev. R. O. Brown, of Holly Springs, Miss., has been named as Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference in place of Rev. H. S. Spragins, who resigned because his duties as presiding elder would not allow him to serve longer in that capacity. All moneys which belong to this Board should hereafter be sent direct to Brother Brown.

While the Algiers congregation is campaigning for money to build a new $20,000 church, it is not permitting its present large and growing Sunday school to suffer because of inconveniences. The old Sunday school room is being overhauled and readjusted. Our people in McDonoghville are also making some improvements on the interior of their church building.

Our hat is off to Rev. L. T. Sargent, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., who sent us a club of ten subscribers a few days since. He believes it is worth while to take the trouble to circulate the Conference organ among his people, and he usually succeeds in doing so wherever he is appointed to labor. We are pleased to know that the Master's cause is prospering in his present charge.

Rev. C. F. Emery, pastor of the Crawford Street Methodist Church of Vicksburg, Miss., has a live and active Epworth League. These stirring young Methodists have obligated themselves to raise $200 on the missionary assessment that was placed upon their charge, and are already at work to accomplish the task which they have assumed. Brother Emery is fortunate, indeed, to have such a fine body of young helpers.

Rev. J. E. Craig, of Chestnut, La., is much encouraged by the outlook in his field. He says: "My congregations are getting better all the time. We had an interesting memorial service at old Caster last Saturday, May 3. There were about 200 people present and a fine dinner was served, which amply supplied all, and left a good overplus." We are grateful to Brother Craig for some subscriptions which his appreciated letter brought to us.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, the pastor of our Washington Street Church of Vicksburg, Miss., reports that a sale of the old church in which his congregation has for years been worshiping has been effected, and that plans for the construction of a new building will soon be under way. Brother Saunders has lately been pressing the claims of the Advocate among his parishioners, and as a result of his efforts sent in nine subscriptions last week.

In sending us a club of subscribers from his charge, Rev. C. H. Ellis, of Pachuta, Miss., adds the following interesting postscript: "The work progresses hopefully here. An old debt on the Pachuta church of more than four years' standing has been paid in full, and needed additions have been made to the parsonage furnishings. Our Sunday schools are increasing in numbers and interest. We are planning for great things."

We received last Tuesday morning the following telegram from Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our pastor at Shaw, Miss.: "A gracious meeting is in progress at the Methodist Church here. Rev. L. W. Cain is doing the preaching and the Holy Spirit is with him. All the business houses are being closed for the day services and the Christian people are working together in love and sympathy. Sinners are being saved, and the outlook is for a sweeping revival."

We publish on another page a note from Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Pontotoc, Miss., in which he informs us of his purpose to go to Memphis to have a serious operation performed. We regret to know that this course has been adjudged necessary by his physicians, and we feel considerable solicitude for our college-mate and long-time friend. We hope that all our Christian readers will pray earnestly for both Brother and Sister Wendel at this critical and trying time.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the ever-active and popular pastor of our Church in Crowley, La., spent the first part of this week in New Orleans visiting among his many friends. Brother Atkinson reports that the work of building the new church at Crowley is going forward with commendable rapidity, and states that he feels reasonably sure that the new building will be in readiness by the time the Louisiana Annual Conference is due to meet there next December.

The closing exercises of Whitworth College are now in progress. Next Sunday at 11 a.m. Dr. H. M. DuBose, of Atlanta, Ga., will preach the Commencement sermon; at the evening hour of the same day Rev. J. T. Leggett, of Meridian, Miss., will preach before the Young Woman's Christian Association. The Annual Literary Address will be delivered on Monday Evening, May 19, at 8 p.m., by Dr. A. F. Smith, of Jackson, Miss. This historic institution is closing one of the best sessions in its long and honored history.

From Forest, Miss., under date of May 8, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, who is assisting Rev. A. M. Broadfoot in a meeting at that place, writes: "We are having a great meeting here. The beautiful new church is filled with earnest worshippers at every service. Brother Broadfoot has wrought wonderfully well in this community, and this splendid church edifice and an attractive, modern, six-room parsonage are among the visible results of his labors. I go from here next week to Oakdale, La., to assist Brother Riggs in a revival campaign."

From the Summit (Miss.) Sentinel we learn that the closing exercises of the Auburn High School were most interesting. Three young ladies from Whitworth College attended and contributed to the success of the occasion with music and recitations. The graduates—Misses Badon and Carruth and Mr. Thomas Coker—are reported to have acquitted themselves quite creditably. The Commencement sermon, which won the high praise of all, was preached by Rev. J. S. Parker, our pastor on the Auburn charge.

Mrs. Ellen Magruder Hunnicutt, widow of the late Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. T. J. Sullivan, near the Millsaps College Campus, in Jackson, Miss., on May 9. She was a daughter of Major John Magruder of Madison County, and was an accomplished and most lovable woman. She was 76 years of age. The obsequies were conducted in the Capitol Street Methodist Church by Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Hattiesburg, assisted by Rev. J. M. Morse. The interment was made at Jackson, in the Cedar Lawn Cemetery.

We are in receipt of an attractive invitation to the Commencement of the Memphis Conference Female Institute of Jackson, Tenn., of which Rev. H. G. Hawkins is President. The Commencement sermon will be preached next Sunday by Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, and the Annual Address will be given next Monday by Rev. M. M. Armstrong, of Jackson, Tenn. The graduating class in the literary department this year numbers thirteen; and two will graduate in music, one in voice, and one in expression.

Mr. James A. Christian, Field Secretary of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, writes as follows from Shreveport: "Please announce that the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League has opened an office at No. 312, First National Bank Building, Shreveport. All mail intended for the League should be thus directed. We should be glad to have friends of the cause who may be passing through the city to call and see us. We hope to make our office headquarters for the latest and most reliable information on all questions of moral and social reform and civic righteousness.

In a letter to our office, Rev. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, who is one of the Mississippi Conference evangelists, makes the following reference to his recent labors: "I preached seventy times in succession last month and one day over. Brother H. Meillard, of Logtown, is doing his best for the people of that territory. He is a most faithful minister, and we predict for him a great year." Not only does Brother Peebles preach frequently, but he also preaches well. Few can surpass him as an expounder of the Scriptures and of the essential doctrine of Methodism.

Rev. Olin Ray, who is attending Millsaps College and at the same time serving the Grenada Circuit, forwarded us three new subscriptions and two renewals on April 29, for which we extend him our hearty thanks. In his letter he added the following statement concerning his work: "Everything is moving along pleasantly in my pastoral charge. Brother Tucker, our presiding elder, was with us on the 19th and 20th of April, and preached an excellent sermon each day. Our people are very much in love with him, and have a high appreciation of the service which he is rendering the Church."

Rev. J. R. Jones, pastor of the Central M. E. Church, South, of Meridian, Miss., writes: "Our meeting at Central Church has now been in progress for one week. The preaching of Rev. J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., is strong, practical, and characterized by much spiritual power. The people are coming in large throngs to hear the gifted evangelist. The indications point to a great revival. Mr. L. C. Smith and his wife sing the gospel in an attractive and effective way. Their work is most helpful in the services. Pray that we may have a great religious awakening in Meridian."

Rev. and Mrs. A. Inman Townsley entertained the stewards and trustees and their wives on May 9 at an informal 6 o'clock dinner given in the commodious parsonage at Rayville, La. Stirring after-dinner speeches were made by different church officials, and the prosperity and peace of the local congregation were generally commented upon. On account of the rapid growth of the Sunday school, a movement to enlarge the Sunday school quarters was inaugurated. Bro. Townsley is in great favor among his people. He has been asked to preach the Rayville High School Commencement sermon on June 1.

The following press dispatch from Shreveport, La., was published in the New Orleans Picayune last Tuesday morning: "Bishop W. A. Candler, who delivered two sermons Sunday at the Noel Memorial Church, was tendered a banquet by the pastors of the Methodist Episcopal Churches of Shreveport this afternoon. About thirty laymen were present. Bishop Candler probably will return here later in the year, it is announced, to dedicate the Noel Memorial and First Methodist Churches. This was Bishop Candler's first trip to Shreveport since 1901. He spoke in glowing terms, in an interview, of its development."

A note from Lexington, Miss., informs us that Methodism is still flourishing in that goodly city. The parsonage has been dressed in a new coat of paint, a new range has been installed in the kitchen, and other improvements have been made. The stewards have raised all the finances in full up to date. In the Lexington Advertiser, a local paper, it is stated that Dr. H. G. Henderson, the pastor, has been nominated for a place in "Who's Who in American Methodism," a volume now in process of preparation, and that a prominent Boston Publishing Company has requested the Doctor to furnish the manuscript for "a book of a religious, philosophical, or ethical kind."

Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Georgetown, Miss., sent us on May 9 the following sad announcement: "Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock we conducted the burial service of Dr. W. W. Catchings. He was a leading spirit both in the town and in our Church. In his death our Georgetown Methodism has suffered a great loss. Dr. Catchings was a graduate of Millsaps College and of Tulane University. A true and upright citizen, husband, father, and brother has gone. How sad to see one so young (only 36 years of age), so useful, and so promising go!" We greatly regret to be informed of the early decease of this splendid young man, and we extend to the sorrowing loved ones our deepest sympathy.

Miss Marie Meek, who has finished the musical course at Whitworth College, under the direction of Miss Lois Cooper who is recognized as one of the most gifted musicians in this section, gave her graduating recital in the new Mary Lampton Auditorium on the evening of May 8. After highly complimenting the numbers given, the Brookhaven Leader, of May 10, says: "Beautiful flowers were tributes of the evening from appreciative friends to the lovely young lady, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Meek, of Lexington, Miss., the parents of the gifted young girl being present on the occasion of her graduation. Congratulations from numerous appreciative local musicians and interested friends followed the close of the program."

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to attend the Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt University, which were delivered last week by Prof. G. A. Johnston Ross, M.A., of the Union Theological Seminary of New York City. The general theme of the series was "The God We Trust," and the course was defined as a succession of "Studies in the devotional use of the Apostles' Creed." The sub-heads announced were as follows: "The God We Trust;" "Our Trust in Christ;" "The Christ We Trust;" "The Spirit and the Church;" "The Redeemed Life;" "The Eternal Life." The initial lecture was given Sunday, May 4, in the University Chapel, and all the others in Wesley Hall.

Dr. T. P. Bell, after an absence of several months in Florida, is again at home, and has issued a card announcing that he has resumed the practice of his profession in New Orleans, and that hereafter he may be found at his office in the Audubon Building every day from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Dr. Bell makes a specialty of treating the eye, ear, nose, and throat, and, besides being a competent and reliable physician, is a loyal Methodist and a most affable and agreeable gentleman. We are pleased to know that he has again taken up work in the Crescent City.

Rev. J. O. Ware, of Benton, Miss., brought us under obligations to him a few days since for a nice list of subscribers. Concerning one of the brethren whose subscription he renewed, and of his charge, he wrote as follows: "This makes 39 years that Brother H. S. Swayze has been a weekly reader of the Advocate, and he still loves to read it. Thirty-eight years ago he joined the Methodist Church, and ever since he has been a faithful steward in it. We are well pleased here at Benton, and are happy in the work." May the blessings of Heaven abide upon this long-time friend and reader of the Advocate, and may his path grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day.

We have been honored with an invitation to the commencement exercises of the Scarritt Bible and Training School at Kansas City, Mo., which will begin tomorrow and continue through next Sunday. The Commencement sermon will be preached by Rev. Claude M. Simpson, pastor of the Melrose Church of Kansas City, and the Baccalaureate Address will be delivered by Rev. Frank G. Smith, pastor of the Central M. E. Church, South, also of Kansas City. The graduates this year number fifteen, among whom we note the names of two Mississippi girls: Miss Olive Watkins Lipscomb, of Jackson, Miss., and Miss Fella Richardson, of Corinth, Miss. In addition to the graduates, four other young ladies will be awarded certificates for the completion of special work.

It deeply grieves us to announce the death of Mrs. H. H. Estes, the beloved wife of our long-time friend, Captain Estes of Greenwood, Miss., who passed away in that city at 9:30 on Wednesday evening, May 7, as a result of an acute attack of heart trouble. Mrs. Estes is reported to have been 72 years of age. She was a woman of noble Christian character whose influence had long been felt for good, and she will be sorely missed both in her home circle and in the community in which she was so highly esteemed. Ever since we can remember, Captain and Mrs. Estes have been a source of strength and blessing to the Methodism of Central Mississippi, and it makes us sad to know that these two who have so long wrought together for the Master's glory are now separated; but it will be for only a brief season. May God graciously abide with our stricken brother and those who share with him in this bereavement, until the day of glorious reunion in the Father's house shall come!

We regret to be apprised of the death of Mr. George K. Smith, long an esteemed and honored citizen of Sunflower County, Miss., but who for some time had been making his home at Oxford in that State. He was born on Christmas day, 1844, and passed to his reward on April 27, 1913. Mrs. Smith, the bereaved widow, writes us, in part, as follows: "He was a great sufferer for years from a complication of maladies, Bright's disease being the main trouble, according to the attending physicians. When told that his end was probably near, he said that if it was God's will he was ready. A few days before his death I read to him the poem, 'The Gracious Answer,' by Henry N. Coble, which I obtained from a recent copy of your paper, and he exclaimed, 'Beautiful, beautiful! What a great thing it is to be able to express one's self in such language!' This poem was used at his funeral, so appropriate was it considered to his case. One of his sons professed Christ shortly after he was called home." The remains of Brother Smith were carried to Indianola for interment. We extend our deepest sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones.

On Sunday afternoon, April 27, 1913, the spirit of Brother JOHN QUINCY CRIBBS, of Lyon, Miss., passed to his heavenly home. For two weeks he had been confined to his room, and when he learned that he could not recover, he said, "That is all right; I am not afraid to meet God; I am ready." Brother Cribbs was born not far from Columbus, Miss., but spent much of his younger days near Sulligent, Lafayette Co., Ala. He moved to Coahoma County several years ago, and has resided in this county since that time. He had been a good citizen, one who was true to his convictions, and his convictions were sound and safe. He had been a member of the Methodist Church more than thirty years, and was always true to its interest, and was interested in its progress. He was at the time of his death the superintendent of our Sunday school at Lyon, and had for many years been engaged in the Sunday school work, which he much loved. His home was always the home of the preacher. He not only loved the Church, but also his pastors, often speaking of former pastors and telling of how he was attached to them. On Monday, the day following his death, a loving tribute was paid his memory by the assembling at our church in Lyon of a great congregation; and the conscious presence of God with us made the scene hallowed, and its recollection sacred. His body was laid to rest under a beautifully arranged collection of flowers in the Shuffordville Cemetery to await the last awakening. May God bless his companion and four sisters who are left behind! His pastor, H. M. YOUNG.

Whereas, it pleased our Heavenly Father on March 31, 1913, to remove from our midst our beloved sister and mother in Israel, Mrs. W. L. Lipscomb; and whereas, we appreciate the fact that she was a member of the First Executive Committee appointed by our church for the earliest promulgation of Woman's Missionary work; and whereas, she has been a faithful and efficient member of our Society from its organization, having served as president from 1892 to 1900; therefore be it Resolved by this Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First M. E. Church, South, of Columbus, Miss.:

First. That while we now in humble submission to the will of our Lord, whose law and precepts were to her yea and amen, we feel that in her we have lost a large part of our spiritual strength, a wise counselor, and a faithful leader.

Second. That her membership with us is held in sacred remembrance, we having partly shown our appreciation by awarding her a life membership (Mrs. A. H. Pegues having claimed the privilege of contributing the required amount), and also by supporting a Bible woman in Brazil bearing the name of Lulu Lipscomb Waters, in honor of herself and her departed missionary daughter.

Third. That we pray that her example and influence may continue with us as an inspiration to fuller consecration and increased faithfulness to our Master's cause.

Fourth. That we offer our sincere sympathy to her family, with the prayer that the gospel seed she has sown in their hearts may continue to bear abundant fruit, that she, being dead, may yet speak through them.

Fifth. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, copies sent to her children, and copies furnished our local papers.

Signed: Mrs. GENL. SHARP,
 Mrs. M. E. ERVIN,
 Mrs. T. J. STOKES,
 Committee.

LARGE CLAIMS AND LITTLE PROOF.

There is published in Pittshoro a monthly paper known as the Calhoun Baptist, edited by the Rev. Mr. Reeves, a man much beloved by all who know him. The April number of the Calhoun Baptist contained an article by W. E. Fendley, of Meridian, entitled, "Our Church." In the beginning of his article he said: "I do not claim nor insist on the succession of the name Baptist, but I do claim and insist that we can trace a succession of doctrines back to Christ and the disciples." He wants to know if Christ's promise to Peter after he made the great confession that the "gates of hell shall not prevail" against the Church has failed of fulfillment. We would answer him, No! He claimed in his discussion that he could prove to a mathematical certainty that the Church Christ referred to was the Baptist Church. His "mathematical certainty" proof was that it is an easy matter to put one's finger on the name of the founder of all other Churches and the date of their beginning, but that it is impossible to find either the name of a founder or a date of the beginning of the Baptist Church this side of the time of Christ. He was not quite clear in unraveling the tangle of how it was that in 1841 the Baptist Church had a dispute as to whether they should baptize their infants by immersion or not. He appealed to Dermott, and another Dutch theologian to substantiate his claims, but did not cite Dr. Whitsett, one time Principal of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., who about twenty-five years ago was in Ireland and other places studying the question of the Apostolic Succession and came upon the facts regarding the famous Barber baby baptizing case. I refer to Dr. Whitsett's book on that subject.

I have not said that Dr. Whitsett was not an immersionist. I suppose he was, but he was not backward about writing what he found to be the truth. And by his writings I learn that there is at least one link gone from the chain of Baptist succession. Then, again, is it not a matter of record that Roger Williams, yonder in Rhode Island, baptized a man by the name of Holloman, who, in turn, immersed him. Where does Roger Williams hook onto the chain of Baptist Succession? W. A. BRUNER.

Pine Valley, Miss.

RUSTON DISTRICT NOTES.

Since my last report, a report of Brother Griffin's meeting at Ringgold has been received. He had one of the best meetings the present membership there has in memory. There were twenty-two additions to the Church. A Sunday school was organized since the meeting and sixty-four enrolled, the first Sunday school this present membership has known. Griffin was assisted by Brother Holder, of Shreveport, whose preaching and work were appreciated by all.

I am sending from Nashville to each preacher in the district an envelope containing the New Missionary Policy of the Sunday School, which, if each preacher acquaints himself with it, and then introduces it to his superintendent, will help mightily in the work. We are going to try to bring all collections up this year. The District Conference will meet in Athens, July 22-25. Let all the preachers see that they make no conflicting engagements, as we wish a full attendance of both preachers and laymen.

Tidings From the Field

Richton, Miss.

Dear Mr. Editor: This is the first time this year that I have written to the Advocate. After spending four years most pleasantly in Prentiss, Brother Sharbrough advised that I be sent here. I moved during Christmas week. We were cordially received and for the past four months have been very busy. As a result of the co-operation of the pastor and people, 15 persons have been received into the Church by letter, 5 by vows, and 6 by baptism, making 26 in all. Our Sunday school has increased to 130, and we have five classes in the Wesley Department. The Business Men's Class has grown to more than 20 members. It is real encouraging to see the men of the town in the Sunday school. We are giving full time here at Richton. Station work is something new to this preacher, who has been used to serving from a half to a whole county as a circuit. However, I go out on Friday nights and preach to the people in the mill towns up and down the railroad. Everything here is really nice. My members are loyal and true, and we are hoping for better things in the future.—M. L. White.

Waynesboro Circuit.

The outlook within the bounds of my charge is good and this year bids fair to be a fruitful one. I am preaching to good congregations at each church on my work. They are some larger than they were last year. Our first holiness rally convened at Fedora church on April 25, 1913. We had with us Revs. John Paul, J. N. Tucker, S. E. Taylor, and Dr. M. A. Beeson. Rev. John Paul preached the opening sermon, using as his text I Cor. 12-31. His sermon proved to be edifying to the saints. Dr. Beeson gave his hearers three eloquent lectures, using as his themes: "John The Baptist as a Sanctified Preacher," "The Need of Christian Education," and "Missions." Dr. J. N. Tucker proved himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. He preached two great sermons while with us. His texts were, Matthew 5:1-12 and Hebrews 6:1-2. Brother Taylor did some earnest work in the prayer services. These brethren in their classical and scholarly manner, and with due reverence to Almighty God, proved themselves to be faithful dispensers of the Word of God. Their earnest labors among us were greatly relished by all who were in attendance upon the holiness rally. We feel that we are better Christians than we were previous to that occasion. Some of the brethren expressed themselves very freely to me by saying that there should be a rally held at each church yearly for the sake of bringing the people in closer touch with God and the Church. I say, Amen! The labors of the new year were begun uncompromisingly; therefore we are looking forward to and expecting gracious results in our approaching revival meetings. Both the pastor and people on the Waynesboro Circuit are rejoicing in the Savior's love always.—Hilary Westbrook, P. C.

Patterson, La.

Things are moving on smoothly in Patterson. Brother Wynn has held the second (and his last) quarterly conference for us. Our people here regret to give him up as their presiding elder. We only hope he will do a still better work as President of Centenary College. I am glad the Presidency of Centenary fell upon a man in the ministerial ranks; and I believe as preachers we should advocate our church schools and strive to teach the people the real worth and power of Christian education. The people of Patterson, regardless of church affiliation, know how to treat a Methodist preacher and his wife. The young people gave us a shower the other night that will supply the parsonage with provisions for, at least, two months. The Ladies' Aid has supplied the parsonage with new matting and has paid the insurance on the church and parsonage for three years. In addition to the above, the ladies are assisting in paying the preacher's salary. Our Sunday school is in a good condition; the Senior League is progressing nicely, and the church attendance is better than for years. I rejoice in the fact that in a small way I am permitted to represent the Methodist Church in this section, but not the Methodist Church so much as Jesus Christ who made salvation and redemption possible. I believe that the simple gospel that has been preached for centuries is what we should preach and what the people want. I often ask myself the question, am I preaching the Gospel or a gospel? We may preach a social gospel or one of moral reform and, it seems to me, miss the mark. I believe that we should still stress man's individual responsibility to God and the absolute necessity of his pardoning grace. I believe, emphatically, in the direct witness of the Spirit in such a manner as to give its Divine sanction to our lives. Repentance and faith in God are essential to put us in right relationship with him. The closer we walk with him the less room there will be for heresy of any kind.—C. E. Fike.

Epworth Church, New Orleans.

Sunday, May 4, we used at Epworth Church for the first time a handsome individual communion service. More than ten years ago, when Epworth Mission was first started and was looked after largely by the members of the Carrollton Avenue Church, Mrs. W. B. Campbell, who was then a member of that church, was superintendent of the Epworth Sunday School. She came out from Carrollton in the afternoon and gave of her time and energy to the work of this Sunday school. After the organization of the Epworth Church she became a member of this church. When in charge of the Sunday school she used a birthday box for the members of the school to make contributions for some purpose for Epworth. During these years this money has been on deposit in one of the local savings banks. Some little time ago an effort to raise money for the purchase of a communion service was made. This money, raised so long ago by the mission Sunday school with a little raised by the League, and some collected by private subscription, has made it possible for us to have this service. The people of Epworth feel grateful that this work was done so long ago by Mrs. Campbell, and that we are now enjoying the benefits of her work and the sacrifices of some who have now grown up to be fathers and mothers of families.

Things are going very well with us here, and we hope that Epworth may continue to grow in the future as has been the case in the past. The people are interested in the church, and want to see it prosper. We are making plans for the observance of Children's Day, and hope that it will be a successful occasion.—W. L. Doss.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference convened at Lake at 2:30, p. m., April 15, and closed the following Friday just before noon. Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, our P. E., was with us, and directed all the business of the Conference so that the preachers, lay delegates, and others in attendance were inspired to greater zeal in the Lord's work. All the traveling preachers of the District were present except three; two of the three could not attend on account of sickness; one was detained at home on account of pressing duties in a meeting. Several local preachers were in attendance. Over forty lay delegates were present.

The reports of the preachers and laymen from the different charges were optimistic almost without a single exception. Great revivals were reported at Newton and Montrose, Hickory and Chunky, and Louin. The other charges reported a steady gain in membership, while the three charges named reported about 175 accessions. Ten charges reported the Woman's Missionary work as doing well. There are twelve Senior and five Junior Leagues in the District. An urgent appeal was made by the Presiding Elder that each preacher have a League in each of his churches. He argued that the country churches need Leagues as much as the town and city churches. He said in substance, "The League is the only school for the training of young people for service in the church."

Rev. L. L. Roberts, Financial Agent for Whitworth College, thrilled a large congregation with a sermon, using as a text John 1:29, after which he spoke a few minutes in the interest of Whitworth College. Many were made closer friends of Whitworth College by his earnest words. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of the Mississippi Conference Training School, made more friends for the school at Montrose. He reported the enrollment to date to be 270. He intimated that the half could not be told in representing the good that that school had done and is doing. He did not exaggerate. Rev. H. M. Ellis represented the hospital work at Memphis in his usual attractive way. Rev. Fred Long and Rev. B. F. Lewis stirred hearts to greater activity in the Sunday school work. Rev. H. A. Carter told us about the Orphans' Home at Jackson. We said, Amen, to his appeal. It was agreed that the Newton District should pay $6,000 to the Methodist Hospital being built at Memphis, Tenn. Rev. Robert Selby represented the educational work of the Conference, emphasizing the work of the Divinity School.

All the doors in Lake were open to the preachers and delegates. I am sure that no District Conference was ever more heartily entertained.

By order of the District Conference, the characters of 37 local preachers were passed. By unanimous vote of the Conference, Calvin Cain Evans, Tom Gadis Craft, and Wellington Henry Emerson were licensed to preach. L. C. Freeny and C. H. Strait were unanimously recommended for Deacon's Orders. P. L. Blackwell, T. B. Winstead, J. H. Bassett and W. D. Crout were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and Dallas Stewart and Rev. C. H. Strait were elected alternates. The next District Conference will be held at Morton, Miss. J. F. McCLELLAN, Secretary.

A STATEMENT PROBABLY NECESSARY.

One thing, then another is afloat ever and anon about my practicing or not practicing medicine, etc., but the most recent is that I appeared before the Mississippi State Board and was rejected on the grounds of literary deficiency. Now in order to a correct knowledge of that matter, I wish to inform the public that I have never appeared before the said State Board nor any other such board; and as respects literary deficiency please allow me to say that no one could hardly convince the professors under whose tutorship I was placed in the medical college in which I was graduated that that was in my way at all. Once I arranged to appear before the Board, but prayed earnestly to God to prevent my going, if he did not approve my purpose; and as strange as it may seem I missed the first train, and the second and last train was too late, and therefore ever since then I have been satisfied just to remain with a knowledge of medicine which I had prayed so earnestly to God to help me to get. It has been a great benefit to me in many ways. Before I graduated in a college of the regulars, my knowledge of homeopathy, biochemistry, osteopathy, hydropathy, dietetics, etc., and the grace of God enabled me to bring up eight children with very little medical trouble or nursing for others, and also to be a great blessing to other sufferers and even to young physicians. The only regret that I now have is that I have not finished the chiropractic school, for I have discovered that one knows comparatively little about preventing and curing diseases even after he has mastered all the schools of healing. It should be conceded that they all do good, while some of them do much harm.

I am a preacher and nothing excels or equals preaching; but let it not be forgotten that a knowledge of medicine, and all else that is good, contributes to the mightiness and efficiency of any consecrated minister of our blessed Lord; for he will likely meet all kinds of characters and beliefs, and hence the necessity for all useful knowledge. Let it not be forgotten that I am still a Methodist preacher, rich in grace although poor financially. Let all who read this pray for my family and me.

ISAAC LOCKHART PEEBLES.

Ditcher

The farmers in every locality are looking for men to dig their ditches. Not hand laborers, but men who have the facilities for cutting ditches that are uniform size and depth, with straight, smooth sides—in short they are looking for men who own a Buckeye.

With this machine you can dig anywhere from 100 to 150 rods a day—you can make $15 to $18 a day and can keep busy 9 to 10 months in the year.

Hundreds of men have taken up contract ditching. They're making big money right along. Why not join them—why not get into this business that will make you independent and prosperous.

Catalog 33 tells you how.

Organized in 1893

The formula of Bond's Pills was adopted in 1893 by three of the most prominent physicians of the South, who had many years' experience treating diseases depending on a torpid liver.

Grandly has this splendid combination of anti-bilious and anti-malarial agents sustained the reputations of its originators.

Bond's Liver Pills have long since proved to be a most effective remedy for the troubles arising from torpidity of the liver or the bowels.

The small dose—one little pill—and gentle action, make them almost invaluable.

Intelligent readers will not confound Bond's Liver Pills with the numerous so-called "wonderful" remedies that flood the country, with reckless and misleading claims of astonishing merit.

When you require an honest and gentle liver or bowel stimulant, take one Bond's Liver Pill at bedtime. You will almost certainly wake up well.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send to us. Price 25c everywhere.

DUMB CHILLS AND FEVER.

Douglasville, Tex.—"Five years ago, I was caught in the rain at the wrong time," writes Miss Edna Rutherford, of Douglasville, "and from that time was taken with dumb chills and fevers and suffered more than I can tell. I tried everything that I thought would help, and had four different doctors, but got no relief, so I began to take Cardui. Now I feel better than in many months." Cardui does one thing, and does it well. That's the secret of its 50 years of success. As a tonic, there is nothing in the drug store like it. As a remedy for women's ills, it has no equal. Try it. Price $1.

CHILDREN OF DEFECTIVE MINDS.

The education and training of feeble minded children, in body and mind, received their greatest impetus in America from the life and labor of the Dr. John Q. A. Stewart of Kentucky. Dr. Stewart was the pioneer in this field of education. He devoted the best part of his life to the work and established the Stewart Home and School, a private institution for the education and training of children of arrested mental development. At Dr. Stewart's death in 1898 his son, Dr. John P. Stewart, who had been associated with him for years, assumed the responsibilities of the work. Under his administration the School has grown in influence, equipment and faculty until it is now the leading institution of its kind in America.

Supported by a faculty of specially trained teachers and assistants, Dr. Stewart is giving the unfortunate children of the South facilities for mental and physical development which should be known and understood by the parents and guardians of every backward child.

A GREAT MEETING IN TUPELO.

Dear Brother Meek: Our revival campaign began on April 13, and closed April 30. It was in every respect a great meeting. There were 230 professions, many of them already members of the churches. But many of them had never made profession before. I have already received 49 into the Methodist Church, and have about 25 still to receive. The other churches have received about 40 members. The whole town has received a great spiritual uplift, and we have the prospect of a good year's work.

Rev. John B. Andrews of Siloam Springs, Ark., and his singers, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Smith, were our helpers in the campaign. Bro. Andrews is one of the best and most effective evangelists I have ever known. His preaching is clear and strong, and is singularly free from clap-trap; and his method is direct. And if those who profess under his ministry do not "hold out," it will not be because they have not been faithfully instructed, for he is ever careful to make profession mean something. I would not hesitate to recommend him to any church seeking a revival of real religion.

Brother and Sister Smith are very effective gospel singers; but they are more than this: they are among the most effective personal workers I have met. They are both trained in service and song; and, best of all, are thoroughly consecrated to the work to which they have devoted themselves.

Cordially,
WM. L. DUREN.

Profitable Side Dressing

The use of side dressing is increasing on COTTON and CORN. It pays to do it, if one uses the right goods.

Two applications of 200 lbs. each per acre are recommended by a well-known

Southern investigator and experimenter. He suggests a 5-5-5 formula, or a mixture of equal parts of Acid Phosphate, Kainit and Nitrate of Soda.

Side dress cotton when the plants are 10 inches high and again when the bloom begins to open. Where cotton is inclined to rust, use making two applications of 200 pounds each per acre.

This is also effective against root lice and cut worms on corn, if applied early enough. It will pay you to try it, for Potash Pays.

Order Kainit now before the supply is exhausted. We sell Kainit and Potash Salts, any quantity from one 200-lb. bag up.

Missionary Creed.

We believe in God the father and his Son Jesus Christ.

We believe the heathen are lost in sin and need the knowledge of Christ.

We believe it is our duty to tell them of the plan of salvation that God has provided through the death of his Son.

We therefore engage to send them the bread of life by the hands of our missionaries.

We engage to pray for our missionaries.

We engage to do all in our power for the spread of the gospel in the earth, that his kingdom may come.

True Heroism of our Korean Girls.

The need of well equipped teachers for our schools in Korea, particularly the country schools, is most urgent, and the danger of their being closed by the government unless supplied with teachers is imminent. Realizing the necessity for immediate action, some of the native preachers presented the situation to the girls of the Holston Institute, Songdo. When volunteers were called for, every one of the eleven girls of the highest class rose at one time signifying their willingness to respond to the call of their less fortunate sisters. Miss Wagner, the Principal of the school, counts that day the happiest of her life, because of the spirit of love shown by these girls.

The girls at the Lucy Cuninggim School, Wonsau, showed the same willingness for service, gave up their graduation, and took charge of the country schools in that district. This shows the fine spirit infused into the lives of these girls by the Christian religion and by the example of devoted teachers.

And yet the response to this emergency is a great injustice to these girls. (1) They have to leave school before completing the regular course. (2) It is contrary to Korean customs to send out young girls to fill these responsible positions. (3) It is placing them in positions of great temptation, and some of them are not strong enough to stand alone. (4) They are not properly equipped for such positions, yet for the lack of teachers some of the country schools have been taken by the government, and no religious training is given in them.—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

Can our young women listen to a clearer or more urgent call than this one which shows the needs to be so pressing?

Missionary Items.

Representatives from the Foreign Mission Boards of North America and from the Home Mission Council held a joint meeting in New York City during the month of March. They decided that the time had arrived for a united missionary campaign throughout the United States and Canada. This educational campaign will continue until March, 1914, and will be followed by a continent-wide every-member canvass for both home and foreign missions.

The Atlanta District offers to raise surplus fund of $40,000 for missions during the next two years, the amount to go to the upbuilding of our stronghold in Cuba.

Our Church schools in foreign fields have an enrollment of 10,062 pupils, which is an increase of 35 per cent during the past ten years. Within the same number of years our missionary force has increased 63 per cent, our churches 120 per cent, and our membership 155 per cent.

Our church membership in the foreign fields shows an enrollment of 29,825, and our Sunday schools show 33,515. The Nashville Advocate states that this is a better showing than is made by our Sunday schools in the home land. Can we let the heathen lands outstrip us?

A Change.

Mrs. J. L. Neill, of Hattiesburg, Miss., has been elected Conference Press Superintendent of the Mississippi Conference.

The Mississippi Annual Conference.

At the last day's session of the Mississippi Missionary Conference, Hattiesburg, the following officers were elected:

Pres., Mrs. R. E. Johnson, Gulfport; First Vice-Pres., Mrs. T. B. Clifford, McComb City; Second Vice-Pres., Mrs. A. E. Wyatt, Natchez; Third Vice-Pres., Mrs. Jessie M. Davis, Brookhaven; Fourth Vice-Pres., Mrs. T. B. Holloman, Port Gibson; Cor. Sec'y, Foreign, Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, Hazlehurst; Cor. Sec'y, Home, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Crystal Springs; Rec. Sec., Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst; Treas., Home, Mrs. J. K. Dunn, McComb; Treas., Foreign, Mrs. Z. W. Kendall, Meridian; Superintendent of Publicity, Mrs. J. L. Neill, Hattiesburg; Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. K. T. Moore, Hattiesburg.

District Secretaries — Brookhaven, Mrs. E. W. Reid, Magnolia; Hattiesburg, Mrs. J. R. Ellis, Mount Olive; Jackson, Mrs. Sam Ewing, Jackson; Meridian, Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Meridian; Newton, Mrs. J. C. Clarke, Laurel; Port Gibson, Miss Jessie Porter, Natchez; Seashore, Mrs. B. E. Eaton, Gulfport.

One of the most delightful courses in the feast of good things was the demonstration of a "Missionary School" conducted by Mrs. Clifford, Mrs. Watkins, Mrs. Gilman, and others. Contributing largely to the success of this program was the impersonation of The Young Christian Worker by little Miss Elizabeth Crisler.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

S. T. Trigg, Richton, Miss., says: "I had a sore on my leg for nine years, and tried everything I could get and two doctors, and all failed to cure me. Then I decided to try Gray's Ointment and three boxes cured the old sore sound and well. It is worth its weight in gold." No wonder this man feels grateful towards Gray's Ointment. Think of the suffering caused by a chronic sore for nine years. If you are troubled with old sores of any nature, ulcers, boils, bruises, carbuncles, burns, tumors, etc., try Gray's Ointment. You will recommend it ever afterwards. It is one remedy that can be absolutely depended upon to effectually relieve skin diseases. A free sample can be had from Dr. W. F. He Knows Corns

This Chemist Who Invented Blue-jay

He studied corns for a dozen years, then worked out this way to remove them.

It's a simple little plaster with a little drop of wax.

Apply it in a jiffy, and the corn pain stops at once. You forget the corn entirely.

In 48 hours the whole corn comes out—root, callous, everything. Not a whit of pain or soreness.

That ends the corn.

Why pare corns? Why daub them? Why use old-time pads and plasters? Those are archaic methods.

Blue-jay is so vastly better that folks use it on a million corns a month. Try it on one of yours.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
 B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
 C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
 D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

ABSORBINE JR

THE ANTISEPTIC LINIMENT

Analgesic, Stimulant, Prophylactic, Antiphlogistic, Disinfectant, Resolvent.

Absorbine, Jr. is scientifically and carefully compounded of vegetable extracts and essential oils. Each ingredient has its particular known work to do, and is put there for a specific purpose. Careful Laboratory tests prove conclusively that Absorbine, Jr. will and is remarkably effective even diluted. It contains no minerals or poisons, and is harmless to the most sensitive tissues—no danger in its use.

Physicians can prescribe Absorbine, Jr. with confidence for Varicose Veins and Ulcers, Boils, Suppurating Wounds, Eruptive Skin Troubles, Eczema, etc., because when applied to an open sore or wound, it not only makes it aseptically clean, but destroys the germs, and by gently stimulating capillary circulation, causes a healthy healing, without danger of infection or excessive granulation.

Dentists will find it efficient in treating Pyorrhea, Spongy Gums, Abscesses, Sinuses and all ulcerative conditions affecting the mouth and gums, and relieving pain after teeth extraction. These three qualities commend it to the Dental Surgeon: it is a true germicide (25% aqueous solution of Absorbine, Jr. destroys Streptococcus Pyogenes); it is non-toxic; it is non-destructive of tissue. A ten per cent aqueous solution makes an efficient, safe mouth wash or gargle.

Absorbine, Jr. is economical, as a few drops at a time are all that is needed. Sold by leading druggists, $1.00 for 4 oz. $2.00 for 12 oz. For 17 cents liberal trial bottle will be sent by the manufacturer, W. F. YOUNG, P. O. Box 472 Temple Street, Springfield, Mass., who will also send regular size bottles, all charges paid and safe delivery guaranteed upon receipt of price.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Dr. Seales' Bible class in the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, among other good works, is now providing quarters for and giving attention to a sick man who was found in an unsanitary room with no one to care for him. This class visits the sick and does various other benevolent things, and last year gave $100 to medical missions. Thus are our adult classes helping to do the three things most needed in the Church to-day—to give definite knowledge, to enlist in Christian service, and to develop the spirit of brotherly love.

Recently Rev. W. W. Holmes, our pastor at Ruston, while visiting the public school there found that Prof. Ray, the Principal and a member of our Conference Sunday School Board, knew what each teacher in his large school was teaching at every class period, whereupon Brother Holmes decided that a pastor ought to know as much about his Sunday school; so he determined to have a full course of the Graded literature for his personal use, planning to have it bound in volumes for convenient reference that he might know what each grade is studying each Sunday. Such a plan will, of course, cost the pastor time and study, but is it not worth while? Why should the principal of a day school know more about his work than a pastor knows about his? We think Brother Holmes is on the right track.

SUNDAY SCHOOL FIELD SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary's itemized reports, as rendered to the Chairman of the Sunday School Board from month to month for the present year up to date, sums up as follows: Miles traveled, including a trip to Washington to meet the Chairmen and Field Secretaries of our several Conference Sunday School Boards, 7,150; addresses delivered, 33; councils held with Sunday school workers, 17; councils held with District Sunday school workers (at five of which officers were elected for the coming year), 10; Adult Bible Classes organized or planned for organization, 24; systems of grading and recognition introduced into Sunday schools, 10; Sunday school teachers libraries placed, 3; Teachers Training Classes planned or organized, 8; Workers' Councils organized, 6; Home Departments organized, 8; Cradle Rolls organized, 6; Missionary Departments organized, 9; Elementary Superintendents elected, 3; District Sunday School Conferences organized, 2; District Sunday School Institutes planned and conducted with Dr. and Mrs. Hamill, 7; lesser Institutes held, 1; expense account, including Institutes with Dr. and Mrs. Hamill and the trip to Washington $282.90; raised by the Field Secretary on expense account $179.49; collected on last year's deficit $38.40. In addition to this he has sent out some nine hundred letters and regularly furnished notes for the Sunday school column of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Paragraph 256 of the Discipline says that you "shall have Children's Day." If you do not obey the Discipline, can you expect others to do it?

Have you taken the collection for the 3 cent assessment for the Sunday school work of the Conference. Read pages 27 and 28 of the Conference Journal, 1912.

The preachers of the Port Gibson District are asking for three Sunday School Institutes in that District. This is an indication of their interest in the great work. Rev. T. W. Adams is the presiding elder of that District.

We are glad indeed to note that nearly every one of the presiding elders have arranged for a Sunday School Institute in connection with their District Conference. Under the regime of such presiding elders watch the Sunday school work of the church grow.

The Methodist and Baptist Sunday schools of Mendenhall enjoyed a picnic on Wednesday, May 7. The speakers were Mr. J. E. Byrd, of Mt. Olive, Miss., Field Secretary for the Baptist Sunday schools, and the writer, Field Secretary for the Methodist Sunday schools. Mendenhall is always up-to-date when it comes to Sunday school work.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Shuqualak Sunday school has been re-organized and improved, and will do progressive work.

Artesia reports a good school, with great results accruing from a well-worked Home Department.

Superintendent G. P. Hammerly, of Luka, has a fine Sunday school of 125 members that is doing good work.

There are 4 good Sunday schools on the Long View Circuit. These are all rural schools, and much depends upon them.

Macon, with Mr. W. E. Stokes as superintendent, has an enviable Sunday school record. There are also two good schools on the Macon Circuit.

The Brooksville Sunday school has lately contributed $140 to missions. Mr. A. S. J. Glenn, the superintendent, has a great ideal for his school and is rapidly approximating it.

The Starkville Sunday school has an average attendance of about 200, with several splendid classes of college boys. Mr. Lipscomb is doing a great work for the young people.

The First Methodist Church of Columbus has an average attendance of 221. They anticipate building a commodious and up-to-date Sunday school annex at an early date. Brother Woollard is having a fine pastorate in this cultured old Mississippi town.

Let every charge observe Children's Day as early as possible. There are other special days for midsummer and autumn, and if each is taken in its season, all will receive proper attention and the school will reap the benefit of the varied programs and the diversity of interest.

Rev. J. H. Holder, of Okolona, reports a glorious day on April 20, which was Decision Day. Seventeen were received into the Church on profession of faith—15 by baptism and 2 by vows—and 2 by letter, making 19 in all. The sacrament was administered in the Sunday school. Great good will result from this day in Okolona.

Sturgis has three Sunday schools on that charge, all making good progress. It is the almost invariable rule that whenever you find a well organized, enthusiastic Sunday school, you will also find every other department of the church animated by a similar spirit. A good Sunday school is the finest asset any community, town, or city could have.

Rev. W. V. Shearer's Sunday school at Coffeeville has improved greatly within the last few months. He is planning to organize a company of Boy Scouts and is looking forward to the day when he can have special rooms, literature, and amusements for his men and boys. He has fine material out of which to build a well organized and efficient school.

Buy an Engine with Reserve Power

FARM power needs are seldom the same for any two days together. You never can tell when extra work is going to come up, or extra power will be needed. For this reason it is best to buy an engine a little larger than you ordinarily need. The engine with ten to twenty per cent of reserve power will often save enough to pay for itself just by its capacity for carrying you through emergencies.

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

are large for their rated capacity. They are designed to run at the lowest possible speed to develop their power because that increases the durability of the engine. A speed changing mechanism enables you to vary the speed at will. Any I H C engine will develop from ten to twenty per cent more than its rated horse power. You can use it to run your feed grinder, pump, grindstone, repair shop tools, cream separator or any farm machine to which power can be applied.

I H C engines are made in all approved styles, vertical, horizontal, stationary, portable, skidded, air cooled and water cooled, and in 1 to 50-horse power sizes. They operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol. I H C tractors are built in sizes from 12 to 60-horse power. See the I H C local dealer. OF THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB

The Club which we invite you to join is composed of one hundred subscribers, each of whom clubs his order for a piano or player-piano with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, in a big wholesale factory order of one hundred instruments. Each Club member thus gets the benefit of the great saving in price and yet is responsible only for his own purchase. Nor is he expected to secure other members, the manager securing the other ninety-nine. Your piano is shipped at once, the Club guaranteeing safe delivery and perfect satisfaction, or money refunded.

For the benefit of those readers who have not yet sent for their copies of the Club's catalogue we give below a brief outline of some of the attractive features presented by the Club.

The Big Saving In Price

The difference between the ordinary retail price and the Club's price amounts to approximately one-third. Club members therefore save about one dollar out of three. There are five beautiful styles of pianos and player-pianos to select from and the saving ranges from one hundred and two dollars on the cheapest style to two hundred and fifteen dollars on the most expensive piano. On the self-player piano the saving is one hundred and fifty-three dollars.

Quality and Satisfaction Guaranteed

It is a rule of the Club that every member must receive perfect satisfaction, otherwise he must return the instrument and get all his money back. Owing to the character of the Club, we could not afford to have any dissatisfied members. Thus far, everyone has expressed himself as DELIGHTED.

You try the piano in your own home before finally deciding to keep it, and even after you have accepted it you are still protected by the manufacturer's guarantee against all defects in workmanship and material. There is no chance for dissatisfaction.

Convenient Payments

For the benefit of those who do not find it convenient to pay the entire amount in cash for their pianos or player pianos the management of the Club has arranged a system of easy payments to suit the needs of each individual. We believe that our system is the most perfect ever devised and is the only one that is fair to everybody. It is fully described in the Club's catalogue, a copy of which will be sent upon request.

Protection of Family

The Club's management has devised a plan which removes every possible objection to the easy payment system. It provides that in case of the death of any Club member his family is given a receipt in full for any balance that may be due on the instrument, provided of course the regulations of the Club have been properly complied with.

Exchange Privileges

If you have an old instrument which you would like to exchange, in part payment, for a new piano or player-piano, the Club will be of immense service to you. We have excellent facilities for disposing of these old instruments and are therefore able to give Club members the highest market price for them.

Free Music Lessons

The Club has made arrangements with one of the best Correspondence Schools in America by which our Club members can pursue the study of piano music without cost. These lessons are prepared by the best music teachers and the course is conducted by experts in education by the correspondence method. The charts and instructions are so simple and clear that anyone who really wishes to learn can easily do so.

The above picture shows the Ludden & Bates Self-Player Piano one of the five beautiful styles from which Club members make their selection.

The features described above are only a few of the many attractions which have made the Club a grand success. The plan is fully described in a handsomely illustrated catalogue of 28 pages. Write for your copy to-day. It contains letters from those who have already joined and are delighted with their pianos and players and every feature connected with the Club. Address the managers,

Editorial

"Behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God, within the shadow,
Keeping watch above his own."

Purity and strength go together in the kingdom of God. He who is without holiness of heart and life, no matter what may be his other gifts and acquirements, is a weakling in Israel's army.

A contemporary makes the following suggestive observation, which we pass along: "When you nod in Church do not tell the preacher that you were listening with your eyes shut. He knows how almost impossible it is to keep your ears and mind open when your eyes are closed."

The person who proposed the parade as a means of gaining recruits for the woman suffrage cause may not have been exactly a genius, but manifestly he (or she) was not ignorant concerning human nature, either feminine or masculine. More than this we shall not say.

It is had that Julian Hawthorne should have dragged the name which was rendered illustrious by his father into disgrace; but it is vastly worse for a Christian to dishonor the name by which he is called—the "name" that is above every name." The disciples of Jesus should never forget whom they represent in the world.

The New Orleans Item represents a physician in addressing The Forum of this city as declaring that approximately one-half of the human race is afflicted with the hook worm. It is now in order for some progressive theologian to rise up and explain that this malady, and not any inherited Adamic depravity, is what has been responsible for the moral weakness exhibited by so many millions of the genus homo. Why not? This would be a better explanation of the wide prevalence of evil than some we have heard advanced.

In discussing the question as to why men quit the ministry, The Advance, of Chicago, examined the statement of a preacher giving his reasons for doing so, with the following result: "Noticing the somewhat frequent repetition of the capital 'I's,' we counted the same and found that he had used the 'I' fifty times and the name of Christ—whom he professed to serve—not once. No further reason for demitting the ministry need be sought." Commenting upon this utterance of The Advance, The Christian Guardian pungently says: "This may seem rather hard, and yet we fear it is too true. When the 'I' gets too big, the man cannot serve the Lord who came 'not to be ministered unto, but to minister.'" To all of the foregoing we give a hearty, Amen; but we think the clerical egotist who quits is preferable to the conceited cleric who remains and sets up his unsupported 'I's' against the concurring judgment of enlightened Christendom.

"COUNTERFEIT CRITICISM OF THE SCRIPTURES."

This is the name of a most interesting pamphlet by Rev. Jay Benson Hamilton, D.D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who is doing missionary work in connection with the Trinity Church of that denomination in New York City. Prior to its appearance in print, this very able paper was read before the Methodist Ministers' Meeting in the great American metropolis. As a clear setting forth within a short compass of the dangers of Higher Criticism and the attitude of Methodism, properly interpreted, toward it, we have seen nowhere any discussion that will at all compare with this one.

It is not unusual to hear a minister who himself is thoroughly sound in his faith and teaching remark that he is not afraid of the Higher Critics. The trouble with such preachers in most cases is that they have given the subject very little attention and that they do not really know to what extent the critics are assailing and attempting to undermine the Holy Scriptures. That these men will ever be able to disprove and permanently destroy the Divine Revelation we ourselves do not at all fear; but the trouble is that they may mislead and poison the minds of thousands and wreck their immortal souls. We owe it to our generation to save it, if we can, from being led into such a wilderness of error and from the awful consequences that must follow. Indeed, our first and highest obligation is to the people with whom we are contemporary, to the hundreds of millions of our own age.

The lack of space forbids us to follow Dr. Hamilton in his exposure of the methods of the Higher Critics, in his explanation of what they are attempting to do, and in his blistering characterization of the Methodist preacher who repudiates his solemnly assumed vows and echoes the sentiments of these pharasaical skeptics, not having the moral decency, if such be his convictions, to betake himself out of the fold. One of the most alarming things to which the writer calls attention is the fact that this heretical teaching has already to some extent found its way into the Sunday school literature of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and that when it was brought to the attention of the General Conference of that denomination that body merely temporized with the evil by requiring it to be marked "tentative", instead of absolutely prohibiting it. As is generally known, the Northern Presbyterians have had much more serious trouble than the Northern Methodists in keeping this subtle poison out of their Sunday school periodicals. More and more this blighting contagion, in various ways, is spreading toward the South, and already the time has come when we need to scrutinize searchingly every man whom we place in a responsible position. Only by an unceasing vigilance and a courageous demand that all our preachers and teachers, from the highest to the lowest, shall be true to the doctrinal standards of our Church, may we hope to escape this threatened invasion of revamped infidelity.

We quote the concluding passage of Dr. Hamilton's informing discussion:

"Professor Orr sums up the situation as follows: 'The purpose of the movement is to reduce Jesus at all costs to natural dimensions. He is a man naturally born; his parents were Joseph and Mary. He wrought no miracles. It is doubtful if he ever claimed to be the Messiah. When he died there was an earthly end of him. The resurrection stories are legendary.' It is not saying too much to declare that the Christian Church has come to the dividing of the ways. 'What concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?' (II Cor. 6:15.) The hour has struck for some prophet of God to repeat to the people of God the challenge of Elijah: 'How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord he God follow him; but if Baal, then follow him.' (I Kings 18, 21.)"

Send ten cents to Rev. Jay B. Hamilton, 317 East 118th Street, New York City, and secure a copy of this instructive publication. It ought to be read by every intelligent Methodist in all the land. If we were financially able, we would place a copy of it in the hands of every preacher in Southern Methodism. It is high time that we were getting our eyes open and squarely facing this new and grave danger, which so many seem disposed to belittle.

WRONGLY CREDITED.

In our reply to the Rev. Isaac D. Borders, of Aberdeen, Miss., last week, the quotation which we credited to Bishop Candler was not his personal utterance, as we erroneously represented it to be. It was an extract from an address that was made by a body of Episcopal clergymen in Virginia to the people of their respective parishes some years ago, and which was arranged for publication and circulation among the Methodists of the South by Bishop Candler. This pamphlet, entitled "Theater-going and Dancing," was printed by our Publishing House, which is still handling it. Unfortunately, it is so arranged as not to indicate clearly the authorship of the several parts, and in a hurried examination of it we were misled.

This error, which we ourselves discovered, in no way weakens the force of the quotation which we used last week; but, on the contrary, strengthens it, since, having been commended by Bishop Candler, it now not only comes before us with his sanction, but as the official declaration of a Protestant Episcopal Church assemblage. What Bishop Candler himself has said about the theater we shall let our readers see in the near future, since it is our purpose as soon as we can spare the space to republish his famous sermon on that subject.

Be a seeking and asking Christian. It is such that God blesses with his best gifts. A rounded, radiant character has never come to any one by accident. We must press ever onward and upward if we would reach the heights; and the climbing will develop us and make us fit to step from the shining summits attained into the City Celestial. "Forward" is the only fitting watchword for a disciple of the Son of Man.

PALMETTO LETTER.

One of the last things a friend said to me as I left Mississippi to come to Columbia was this: "Now be sure and write for the Advocate." And a good woman said: "Do write more. I read everything you write." Well, I have scribbled a good deal in my day for the Church papers. I have four volumes of "Steel's Miscellany," and enough left over to make another. And bless your life, if I don't think some of it is pretty good stuff, too. But you Editors don't pay us a cent—too poor, I suppose. Not only that, you actually have the nerve to send a bill! Here is one before me now, politely reminding me that the account is "long past due!" How is that for cheek? But maybe you are in the fix of the Irishman. Pat ran up to a house and exclaimed, "Have you got a spade? Give it to me in a hurry. Moike has fell in the mire, up to his knees." "O well, if he's no deeper than that, he'll pull out." "But he's wrong end up." I suppose these Church papers need all the help they can get, and like Moike, need it in a hurry.

I am delighted with Columbia as a place to live, and am pleased with my work here. The people are genuine Southerners, and you know that suits my temperament. Then Columbia is the seat of a number of institutions of learning: Columbia Female College, The Woman's College, the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, and the State University. I was delighted to find when I arrived here that the President of the University is Dr. Samuel Chiles Mitchell, a Mississippian, with whom we had pleasant association in Richmond some years ago. Dr. Mitchell's wife is a daughter of the great Baptist preacher, Dr. John A. Broadus, one of the best friends I ever had. Mississippi has produced many noble sons, but few, if any, who have reflected greater honor upon her than Dr. Mitchell. He has recently been elected President of a Medical College in Richmond, and has accepted; so South Carolina will lose his inestimable service. It is understood that his departure is chiefly due to the fact that he is persona non grata to the Governor; but it is a real misfortune to the State, for Dr. Mitchell had brought the University into close relation to the people, and has been a true leader in every movement for the uplift of the masses. But our loss is Virginia's gain, and I love Virginia too much to begrudge her the prize she wins in Dr. Mitchell.

I enjoy the pastorate; preaching in the same pulpit every Sunday; trying to bring forth things new and old out of the treasury of Divine truth. I ever enjoy visiting, because I make it definitely religious—talk religion, in the stores, on the street, on the cars, in the home, everywhere, to everybody. I have too little time to stay here in the flesh now to lose a moment. My friends and comrades are going away fast. Walker Lewis is gone, Dr. George Smith, Dr. Bolling, Brother Honnell, and many more, friends of my childhood and companions of my maturer years, and the crossing must be near. But I do not like some things you folks have done who get up the system. You have too much ritual for me, rise and fall too often, and get in too many glorias, and so forth. I like more simplicity. To observe the order of worship as we have it now, one has to cut the sermon down to a mighty brief time. I will not preach too long, and as I forget all about time when I am in the pulpit, I have arranged to have a flag-signal when I reach the forty minutes' limit; but who can preach a sermon in forty minutes? However, it is not wise to run people away by long sermons; so I yield the point and cut the fuse accordingly. But, Meek, it tends to superficiality of thought, and of religion, too. Then the Hymn-book you folks got up bothers me. You let those Northern brethren run over us, and put tunes to many of our dear old familiar hymns that nobody can sing. I have had to stop my choir several times after the first verse, and say "cut it out, cut it out; for pity's sake, cut it out!" As sure as your name is Meek, all change is not improvement. Methodism will lose, and not gain, by trying to be like other Churches. I am going to keep inside of the line, so as to give old Brother Sticklerforthebook no chance to work the Third Degree on me; but as far as I can do so without risk of being cast out of the Synagogue, I am going to cling to the old type of Methodism.

I enjoy sleeping in the same bed every night. I have done that now since December, and it is fine. It beats hunking in a different place every night. I have missed two or three nights. I ran down to Jacksonville, Fla., last week to spend Sunday with my old Texas friend and Presiding Elder, Dr. Chapman, at the opening of his new church; and ran out this week to near-by towns to speak at Confederate ceremonies. Yesterday I was in Union, and while there, was the guest of Mr. Thomas Duncan, a son of Bishop Duncan, who is mayor of the city. Confederate memories are very sacred in this part of the country, and it was a beautiful and touching sight to see the children fairly pave the path of the old Veterans with flowers, as they marched between two long lines of little people to the place of speaking. Macauley said that no people who were indifferent to what their ancestors did are likely to do much for which their posterity will have reason to be proud. South Carolina is loyal to the mighty past, and it is the best guarantee that she will make a record in the present that will challenge the admiration of the future.

The Church of which I am pastor was built in 1878. It succeeded the one burned down by Sherman. When Sherman reached Columbia he was very anxious to put the torch to the place where the first Secession Convention was held. That place was the First Baptist Church. But when the torch-bearers came to apply it to the Baptist Church the colored sexton told them the Church they were looking for was the one around the corner; so the "Cradle of Secession" escaped, and the heralds of civilization burned down the Methodist Church instead. These South Carolina Churches are surrounded with graveyards. The Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist Churches, right here in the heart of the city, are encircled with tombstones. The monument of Bishop Capers stands just outside the Church, and the inscription tells the stranger that he was the "founder of missions to the Slaves." We will leave impartial posterity to decide which represented the higher civilization, Sherman, who in the name of progress burned down Churches, or Capers, who founded missions to save the benighted Negro, brought to our shores by Yankee slave-ships.

I am glad that you have put Dr. Bledsoe's strong utterance on the Mission of Woman in a pamphlet. Let it be put in ten thousand homes to counteract the abominable fanaticism of Laity Rights and Suffragettism. We must protect our women against this danger. I am putting the finishing touches on my Reign of the Petticoat. I don't know that I will print it, but I am going to give it to one of the Virginia female colleges soon, and do all I can "in my feeble way" to cut off the tail of this serpent right behind the ears. My family are still in Tennessee, and for nearly five months I have been "keeping house" by myself. It has given me a chance to get an inside view of the vast domain of woman, that realm of the home which God made her specially to guide and control. And, believe me, Meek, if you have never tried it, you can have no idea of the immense amount of work it requires to keep a nice house nice—of the sweeping, and the dusting, and the rubbing, and the scrubbing. Bless your life, a woman who keeps her house in order has no time for politics. She needs a sight of grace to attend properly to that one thing. Every vote for "Laity Rights" is a shot at the cradle, and a vote for domestic disorder. Just so.

HOW TO HAVE A REVIVAL.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

For some years past our church papers and religious periodicals have been discussing revivals and revival work. Men who, refusing to keep silent concerning the existence of a widespread spirit of worldliness in the Church, have ventured to call attention to the Church's spiritual dearth, have been called pessimists; yet, others, occupying high and influential positions in the Church, have spoken truly and earnestly from platform and pulpit and through the Church press concerning the Church's need of a revival. The sentiment of our best people, the earnest prayers of godly men and women which are going up all over the land, the recent meeting of the Presiding Elders of the Mississippi Conference at which a Committee was appointed to consider the advisability of requesting the Bishop to appoint additional men as evangelists are some among the many "signs of the times" that seem to indicate a general desire for, and a universal recognition of the urgent need of, a revival of "the old time religion." Some years ago, the leaders in the field of religious thought began to predict the coming of a revival era when men, under conviction for sin, would be swept as by force into the kingdom of God; and when the fires of the Welch revival were lighted, it was thought by many who were disposed to interpret that spiritual upheaval in accordance with the tenor of their desires and prayers, that the long expected revival era had dawned. But those Welch revival fires burnt themselves out before catching on other shores. No general revival has swept over the land to bless the world and refresh the Church with showers of divine grace; nor, except here and there, has there fallen upon our listening ears from the field of battle, where the forces of righteousness are arrayed against the forces of evil, any shout of victory.

Why have not the passing years brought to us the revival for which we have longed? We have prayed and our hearts have been burdened for the Church and for the lost. Our whole land is parching with the prevailing spiritual dearth, and our hearts are crying out, "O Lord, revive thy work, in the midst of the years, revive thy work." Why, in answer to our cries, do not the clouds passing above us break in showers upon our heads? How may we have a revival?—that is the question; and, since the writer, for some years has been engaged in revival work with at least some degree of success attending his efforts, and has made a study of revival methods, may he not, without presumption, attempt to answer that question?

As we come to a consideration of this much-discussed and important question, let us not overlook the fact that it has two sides—the divine and the human; that is, God's side and man's side. Of course, God can not, and must not, be left out of consideration, for he is the source of our power. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." Jesus Christ commanded his disciples to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. The Gospel of the Son of God still has its old-time power to save lost men when it is preached by men who have tarried on their knees before God till they have received that power which comes down from above. I want it distinctly understood in all that shall follow in this article that there is in my thought always a clear, clean-cut, recognition of the absolute necessity of looking to God for power. All this, however, is the divine side. I speak reverently when I say that it is God's business to furnish the power; so that which most immediately concerns us is the human side.

Now, having recognized God as the source of power, the next need is a man through whom God can pour that power into the Church and the world. God can use only one kind of man for that purpose—the man who has surrendered himself, soul and body, to God. Next, this man must not only have faith in God, but it is essential that he accept the Bible as a whole and believe in all its parts as the very word of God. I am not speaking lightly when I say he must accept "the fish tale" as well and the story of creation; for God can not use a man whose mind is influenced by the modern, so-called higher Biblical criticism.

So, then, having considered God as the source of power, and the kind of man God needs, the next element in this discussion is the message which this man must deliver to the Church and the world. I trust no one will misunderstand me when I say that this message is not the gospel of love—at least, not at first. The gospel of love may melt the hearts of children, but it will not produce conviction in the hearts of hardened sinners. To accomplish this most desirable end the law must be preached—that law which smells of the sulphur and brimstone, and the fires of the old-fashioned hell of the Bible. I know it has been said that such a theme does not agree with modern thought. Then, modern thought needs something to disagree with it, and the quicker the patient gets relief the better it will be for all concerned. The gospel of love may seem, at first, to effect the desired end, but when the "visiting brother" or evangelist is gone, what was thought to be a revival will prove to be only a "flash-in-the-pan." If you want a revival of permanent value, preach the law. The apostles and leaders of the early Church, and the pioneers of Methodism, preached the law; and men, under conviction for sin, fell from their seats as if they were shot. A revival growing out of any thing short of a profound conviction for sin is not worth the effort. The voice of "modern thought" may cry out against the preaching of the law, but Jesus Christ said, "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." After hearts of stone have been broken in pieces by the law, then preach the gospel of love all radiant and shining with the light of hope and life and salvation for lost men.

(To be concluded next week.)

THE VANDERBILT BIBLICAL INSTITUTE.

The Vanderbilt Biblical Institute will be held in Wesley Hall from June 18 to June 25. Every available hour during the eight days is to be occupied to the best advantage. Ample arrangements will be made for entertaining all who desire to attend the Institute from a distance in Wesley Hall, where board may be had for $1 a day, or $5 for the entire session.

Among those of our own Church who will appear on the program are the following: Bishop W. R. Lambuth, Dr. Edwin Mims, Dr. G. H. Detwiler, Dr. J. S. French, Dr. E. B. Chappell, Dr. Thomas Carter, and Dr. C. E. Morgan, all of Nashville, and Prof. Wm. R. Webb, of Bell Buckle, Tenn. Those who will appear with messages from other Churches are, Dr. Washington Gladden, of Columbus, Ohio; Dr. Shailer Matthews of Chicago University; Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, of Stamford, Conn.; Mr. Wm. T. Ellis, of Philadelphia; Dr. Wm. Adams Brown, of the Union Theological Seminary, and Bishop W. F. McDowell.

All told there will be thirty-three lectures, two sermons, and the class-room work on a prescribed course of reading. Those who desire a full program or further particulars concerning the Institute may obtain the same by writing to Rev. Harry King, Secretary, Wesley Hall, Nashville, Tenn.

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY WILL OPEN JUNE 4, 1914.

The trustees of the American University at Washington, D. C., on May 14 defined the policy of that institution and directed the Chancellor at once to carry it into effect; the day when the University will open was also definitely determined. This policy is the outcome of long and careful review and investigation. It provides for the organization of a College for Graduate Study. This College is made possible largely through the gift of the late President of the University Trustees, Dr. David H. Carroll, of Baltimore, Md., whose recent generous bequest to the University will be used as endowment for the College. The College for Graduate Study, for the present, will undertake work in three fields. First, it will maintain an Institute for Research to be operated in connection with the various departments, bureaus, institutions, museums and other educational resources of the national government at Washington. Second, it will carry on a series of public lectures and dissertations incorporating some of the features of the Bampton Lectures at Oxford and the Lowell Institute Lectures at Boston. Third, it will support a comprehensive system of fellowships that shall be carried on in connection with the leading educational institutions of Europe and America. Several fellowships for foreign study and travel already have been ordered to be assigned. The various reports of the University showed the most prosperous condition in its history, there being a continued advance in financial resource. The first Convocation Day will be Thursday, June 4, 1914.

Washington, D. C.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Tuesday evening, April 22nd, marked the beginning of the forty-third session of the Columbus District Conference, which was held at Pheba, Miss., in the western edge of Clay County. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. W. W. Woollard, of First Church, Columbus. Brother Woollard was at his best, and the delegates who had arrived during the afternoon, together with a large crowd of the citizens of Pheba, listened to the sermon with genuine pleasure and profit.

The business session of the Conference opened Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, with Rev. J. E. Thomas, our efficient presiding elder, in the chair. The roll call showed almost all the preachers of the District in attendance, with a good number of laymen. After organization, we at once proceeded to business, and there was not a dull moment during the entire session. The reports of the pastors, taken as a whole, show our District to be in most excellent condition; the finances are far ahead of last year. The preachers' salaries have been advanced and Conference Collections are well in hand. Two new parsonages have been bought, some two or three are being built, and extensive repairs will be made on others during the year. From the standpoint of church buildings and parsonage property, as well as in many other respects, the Columbus District will equal, if not surpass, any District in the North Mississippi Conference.

The Conference was honored by several visiting brethren of the Winona District, as follows: Rev. B. P. Jacob, the presiding elder, Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Winona, Rev. J. T. McCafferty of Eupora, Rev. T. J. Halfacre of Kilmichael, and Rev. G. W. Bachman, Conference Colporter. Other representatives of our various church enterprises present were Rev. H. M. Ellis, who presented the Hospital movement; Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College; Rev. H. E. Carter, of our Orphans' Home, and Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, our own Conference Sunday School Field Secretary. All of the claims which they represented were presented in a manner both forceful and inspiring.

In addition to Rev. W. W. Woollard, the preaching was done by Revs. J. R. Countiss, E. S. Lewis, T. H. Lipscomb, and F. H. McGee, and no comment is necessary, for all who have heard them know what to expect in the way of good preaching when these brethren are in the pulpit.

Concerning the Hospital enterprise, a resolution was adopted accepting the apportionment of $10,000, which was made to the Columbus District as its share in raising the amount apportioned to our Conference by the Hospital Commissioners, and a committee was appointed to apportion this amount to the several charges in the District.

The following resolution was also unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the Columbus District Conference, in annual session at Pheba, Miss., endorses most heartily the editorial policy of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and, Whereas, in view of the approaching session of the General Conference, a change in editors at this time would be prejudicial to those interests of the Church now pending, upon which the present Editor has stood, we believe, rightly and strongly; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Columbus District Conference urgently requests the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Dr. R. A. Meek, to remain at his post, at least until the General Conference shall have concluded its next session.

"Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Editor and to each member of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate."

This being the fourth year of our presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Thomas, on the District, resolutions were adopted expressing our love for him and our confidence and interest in him, and commending him to the people to whom he may, in the future, be sent.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: A. H. Pegues, A. S. J. Glenn, W. E. Stokes, and W. F. Lagrone. Dr. S. M. Rainey and J. N. Roberts were chosen alternates. Brooksville was selected as the place of meeting for the next session of the Conference.

After the adoption of a resolution of thanks to the people of Pheba for their universal kindness and hospitality, and to the pastor, Rev. T. J. Hopper, for his untiring efforts in our behalf, the Conference adjourned, with the feeling that it was the best District Conference that we had ever attended. JAS. J. BAIRD, Secretary.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 1913 session of the Brookhaven District Conference was held in the Methodist Church at Georgetown, Miss., May 6-8.

There was nothing lacking in the hospitality accorded by the citizens of Georgetown. Everything that could contribute to the comfort of their guests was done by the thoughtful and attentive people of the community.

All the pastors of the District were present, with the single exception of Brother J. A. Wells of the Topisaw charge who was detained at home on account of illness in his family. Four local preachers and forty-one lay delegates were in attendance. The large congregations of people from the community were very gratifying to the Conference.

Rev. Robert Selby, the presiding elder, delighted everybody with the grace, courtesy and dignity with which he presided over the deliberations.

The various interests of the Church within the District were diligently inquired into, and there was vigorous and thoughtful discussion of many topics of vital importance. Sermons of a high order were preached by Rev. L. L. Roberts, Dr. W. H. LaPrade, and Rev. H. M. Ellis. The work of the Woman's Missionary Society was ably presented by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, and Mrs. E. W. Reid, the Wednesday evening hour being devoted to this work.

A single ballot for delegates to the Annual Conference resulted in the election of Brothers A. B. Connally, Z. Z. Linton, F. B. Catching and J. S. DeCell.

Several visiting brethren favored the Conference with their presence, among these being Brother G. W. Bachman, the man with the books; Rev. H. M. Ellis, representing the Methodist Hospital; Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson; Rev. George H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District and president of the Conference Board of Missions; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Secretary of the Conference Board of Church Extension; Mr. R. A.

Maddox, Field Secretary for the Conference Sunday School Board, and Prof. George L. Harrell of Millsaps College, Conference Lay Leader.

Brothers D. F. Guice and E. L. Whiddon were recommended to the Annual Conference for re-admission into the traveling connection. In compliance with the terms of a resolution adopted by the Conference, Mr. E. W. Reid, of Magnolia, was appointed District Agent for the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson. Wesson was selected as the place of meeting next year.

The otherwise very pleasant session of the Conference was saddened by the death of Dr. W. W. C. Chelting, a prominent young physician and well beloved citizen of Georgetown. The funeral service was held in the church Thursday, at the morning hour, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends.

Church News

Rev. John C. Elkins, of Galt, Cal., has been accepted by our General Board of Missions and appointed to work among the Spanish population in Havana, Cuba. He closed his pastorate in Galt on May 11, and will enter upon his new work on June 3.

Dr. B. B. Warfield has been appointed to assume the duties of acting President of Princeton Theological Seminary on August 1, at which time the resignation of Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, which was made public in the early part of April, will take effect.

A great revival meeting has just been conducted in our Church at Jefferson City, Mo., of which Rev. F. M. Burton is the pastor. There were fifty accessions to the Church. Rev. C. C. Selcman, of Webb City, Mo., did the preaching in a most acceptable manner.

During the last ten years our Church had a numerical increase of 392,664, or an average gain of 39,266 members each year. During the same time the Sunday school enrollment increased 405,955, or an average annual gain of 40,524. The yearly growth of the Church and the Sunday school lacked only about 1000 of being equal.

There are six Protestant denominations now engaged in missionary work in Korea: The Methodist Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, South, and four Presbyterian bodies—the Presbyterian Church of the North, of the South, of Canada, and of Australia. There are in Korea 179,367 members of Protestant Churches, and 362 missionaries.

The new Johnson Memorial Church, which has just been completed in Huntington, W. Va., at a cost of more than $100,000, will be opened for public worship on June 15. Dr. W. F. McMurry will occupy the pulpit on the first Sunday and Bishop E. R. Hendrix on the following Sunday. Rev. U. V. W. Darlington is the pastor of this congregation.

At a meeting held in Columbus, Ohio, on April 28, a Joint Commission, representing the Methodist Protestant Church and the United Brethren Church, unanimously decided to report a plan for uniting the two denominations under the name of "The United Protestant Church." An amicable adjustment of all differences concerning doctrines, polity, vested interests, educational institutions, and Benevolent Boards, was agreed upon.

The American Tract Society was organized in 1825 and has published and distributed gratuitously since then tracts to the value of $2,566,487. Recently the Society undertook to build for itself a permanent home on its vacant lots in New York City. The building was erected, but there is a debt of $1,200,000 now due on it, and pressure for payment is being brought to bear upon the Society. Unless $500,000 is speedily raised and applied to this indebtedness, this old and exceedingly useful Christian organization will be seriously crippled.

Before leaving the ministry of the Northern Methodist Church for that of the Congregational Church, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman organized and practically built the Metropolitan Temple Church on the Manhattan West Side, in New York City. His successor in that field was Dr. J. W. Hill, who attempted to make this church the headquarters for peace advocates, especially those advocating industrial peace. His plans were recently rejected by Bishop Wilson, the resident Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who declared that the best work that Methodism can do for peace is to offer salvation to sinners. The Metropolitan Temple will hereafter be used as an evangelical center instead of an industrial peace center.

The General Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which will convene in Waynesville, N. C., June 25, promises to be one of the greatest meetings ever held in our Church.

While the full list of speakers has not yet been published, the Committee on Program has announced the following as among those who will deliver addresses: Mr. J. Campbell White, Bishop J. H. McCoy, Dr. Robert E. Speer, Mr. W. T. Ellis, Bishop W. R. Lambuth, Dr. W. F. Oldham, Dr. W. W. Pinson, Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer, Rev. Charles Stelzle, Dr. O. E. Brown, Mr. H. F. LaFlame, Bishop R. G. Waterhouse, Miss Belle Bennett, Mr. T. S. Southgate, Dr. Egbert W. Smith, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Mr. J. E. McAfee, Bishop W. B. Murrah, Dr. John A. Rice, Mrs. J. A. Spillman, Bishop E. D. Mouzon, Dr. W. D. Weatherford, Dr. G. H. Detwiler, and Dr. Geo. R. Stuart.

A religious census of the Mississippi State convicts on the Rankin farm (all white) was taken on Sunday, April 27, with the following result: Members of no church, 29; Baptists, 25; Methodists, 20; Roman Catholics, 10; Presbyterians, 3; Christians (Campbellites), 3; Episcopalians, 2; Jews, 2; Mormons, 2; Lutherans, 2; Church of God, 1; Church of Christ, 1. This is a place where we are willing, without the least reluctance, to yield our Baptist brethren the palm of leadership. However, we are pressing pretty closely upon their heels and have no reason to boast. A Methodist can "fall from grace," and it is easy to understand how our members could get behind the bars; but the interesting question is, how did these Baptists and Presbyterians, who cannot fall, get there? Did they never have any religion, as their brethren adjudged that they did, or is the State of Mississippi punishing elect saints who will yet show up all right?

We are indebted to Mrs. M. W. Haggard, the Secretary of Vanderbilt University, for the following information:

"The Commencement program of the University has just been announced. The Literary Address will be delivered by Mr. John Temples Graves, of New York City, one of the most popular orators and most distinguished newspaper editors of the country. The Commencement sermon will be furnished by Dr. Washington Gladden, who is one of the great preachers of the country and one of the best interpreters of the present social forces in American life. The alumni banquet will be of unusual interest this year because of the fact that Hon. J. C. McReynolds, Attorney General of the United States, will be present and respond to one of the toasts. Mr. McReynolds is a member of the Board of Trust and one of the most honored alumni of Vanderbilt University. The Alumni Address will be delivered by Dr. Edwin Mims of the Department of English, and the Alumni Poem will be written by Mr. Charles Allen Lloyd, M. A. '07."

BURNING MORTGAGES.

This is an unwise custom that prevails very largely throughout the Church. The first thing to do with a mortgage is to pay it, then have the satisfaction or release properly recorded, after which the mortgage and satisfaction piece should both be filed with the papers of the Church. There surely is a better method of celebrating the paying of a debt than the spectacular way of burning the mortgage, or burning another piece of paper that is substituted for the mortgage.

Occasionally a mortgage is burned without the release or satisfaction having been secured. We should be pleased if the custom of burning mortgages should entirely disappear from the Church. —The Christian Republic.

REV. J. W. SANDELL DEAD.

Dear Dr. Meek: Rev. John Wesley Sandell, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, passed peacefully to his reward from his home in Magnolia at 9 o'clock Saturday evening, the 17th inst.

The funeral services were held in the Magnolia Methodist Church at 4 o'clock Sunday, being conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. B. W. Lewis of Summit, J. C. Ellis of McComb, and R. L. Bunyard of the Magnolia Baptist Church.

A more extended notice will be furnished later.

OUR SCHOOL AT MONTROSE.

By H. Walter Featherston, D. D.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the President, reported to our District Conference an enrollment of 270. It has been suggested that a large majority of these would have attended the public schools, had we no school at Montrose. This is probably true; but the fact in no wise discounts the value of our Montrose School or of the work done there by President O'Neil and his faculty of Methodist men and women. That our Church, through such men and women, can put its directing, inspiring and training touch upon 270 young people is a matter of tremendous import to us. It is probably true that every boy and girl in Millsaps and Whitworth would get an education in one of our higher State schools if Millsaps and Whitworth did not exist; but that fact does not in the least discount the value of our colleges. We cannot do without them.

Another fact was developed at our District Conference: There are twenty-six young men in the District looking to the Methodist itinerancy. Almost all of these are unable to reach any other fitting school than ours at Montrose. I am in personal touch with these young men, and have urged them to secure the very best educational equipment possible; and yet I know that but few of them will ever be able to get to Millsaps or Vanderbilt. Some of these will make fine workers—a few of them much more than ordinary preachers—even should they never reach Millsaps or Vanderbilt. We must do the best we can for them. It is a condition that we face, and not a theory. Montrose must meet that condition. The day of the small college is not passed. Montrose finds herself compelled to put in a college course to meet the needs of these and of others—both girls and boys—who are not able to get a college education at the larger colleges. This district, with its ten thousand members, most of whom are rural people, must have a Methodist college here within their reach.

President O'Neil is fully alive to the situation, and is meeting the issue in a spirit that is sure to win.

At the same time the Mexican government also recognized the new Republic of China.

According to a recent announcement made by Postmaster General Burleson, all fourth class postmasters will hereafter be required to stand a competitive examination, and the offices will be filled by those passing the most satisfactory examinations. This order, if made effective, will spoil the fond hopes of a great many petty politicians.

For the first time since the dedication of the Soldiers' National Cemetery in Gettysburg in 1863 the Memorial Address will be delivered by a Southerner. It is stated that Congressman James Thomas Heflin of Alabama has been tendered an invitation to deliver the address this year and has accepted. This act of consideration on the part of the Northern soldiers will be duly appreciated by the South.

Dr. C. D. Watkins, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., has been selected as Superintendent of the New Orleans Charity Hospital. He will take charge of the institution on October 1. The plan of placing a physician at the head of this Hospital was decided upon by the Board of Managers upon the recommendation of Dr. S. S. Goldwater, a hospital expert. Heretofore the executive head of the institution has been a Sister Superior of the Romish Church.

Hon. While there he will have conferred upon him by the Edinburgh University the honorary degree of LL.D., and will probably be made an honorary associate member of the Highland and Agricultural Society, which is to give an exhibition that he will attend in July.

According to secular reports, the nunneries maintained in connection with Buddhist temples in Southern China are to be closed by the Chinese Government, and all women therein over the age of 30 are to be kept at public cost, and those over fifteen and less than thirty years of age will be

A PLEA FOR TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

By Geo. W. Hively.

II.

A number of years ago two men were riding along a public highway, through a part of Virginia that was somewhat broken. Looking out upon the seemingly barren hills, one of the men, a stranger in the State, said to his companion: "What do you people raise in Virginia?" Doubtless with some feeling of patriotism, the reply was, "We raise men in Virginia!"

And surely a State that could name among her sons such men as the brave and chivalrous Lee and the immortal Washington might well say, "We raise men in Virginia!" The more we spend for the formation of character, the less we will have to spend for reformation.

When we look at our drink bill, and consider the immense amount of whiskey, beer and wine that is used annually by the American people, is it any wonder that we have to build so many jails and penitentiaries and reformatories of various kinds? I am no pessimist; on the other hand, I am an avowed optimist. I believe that the heaven of Christianity is spreading year by year. I also believe that the noble band of Christian men and women will eventually drive King Alcohol beyond the habitations of men. True, our number is small, compared with "the hosts of iniquity," but God is with us, and "there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few."

We have a number of prohibition States in the Union, but are their laws as rigidly enforced as they might be? The fact that liquor is sold in some prohibition States is indicative of a thirst for strong drink, even among some who voted the Prohibition ticket. In many counties it is a very difficult matter for a grand jury to return an indictment against those who are unlawfully engaged in selling whiskey, due largely to the fact that those who patronize the so-called "blind tigers" will help to shield those who are dealing in "wet goods." Does not this reveal a sad state of affairs? The man who drinks whiskey, even in a moderate way, does not make a good citizen, because his morals are corrupted.

Young man, do you drink intoxicating liquor as a beverage? Then remember that you do so at the risk of your life, for it will defile your body, corrupt your morals, mar your intellect, and may be the ruin of your immortal soul. Strong drink has destroyed more Lords than now sit in the House of Peers, more Senators than now gather in the Halls of Congress. Even the so-called finest of wines are far from being pure.

It is true that the abuse of a thing is no reason why it should not be used. When used by a physician, alcohol may have a place to fill and therefore may possibly be very helpful. But the medical profession to-day is using less alcohol, because substitutes are being found which are less hurtful to the human body. You may call it ale, beer, rum, gin, whiskey, wine or champagne, but if it contains alcohol, it is the same old devil—only clad in a new suit of clothes.

A young man was sentenced to be hung for murder. A crowd assembled to witness his execution. Before the trap was sprung he made this statement: "If any of you are ever tempted to take a glass of whiskey, think of me standing before you to-day, with this rope around my neck, and look in that glass of whiskey and see if you can see a rope there." He was then hung for murder. Is not red rum murder? Spell murder backwards and you have red rum: Spell red rum backwards and you have murder. Furthermore, the indulgence in strong drink exposes the system to the fearful diseases that prey upon the human family. The habitues of the grog-shop are the first and surest victims of epidemics. But the destruction does not end here. The drunkard bequeathes to his offspring diseased appetites and impaired constitutions, and carefully prepared statistics show that a large per cent of the inmates of prison houses and insane asylums are the children of drunken parents. It has done more than any other agency in existence for the coffin industry and to fill the graveyards, prison houses and insane asylums, and the populating of the lost world. "Yea," saith Intemperance, "I have stretched out more midnight shadows, I have rolled more Juggernauts, I have damned more souls in hell, than any other emissary of diabolism. My sweetest music is the seven-hundred-voiced shriek of the sinking steamer as she went down beneath the waves of the deep blue sea, because her captain was drunk."

Long before distillation began, Cyrus, the Persian, refused wine, declaring that there was "poison in the cup." Alcohol is a poison, but it is only one of the several poisons used in whiskey and beer.

A SADDENED HOME.

Dear Brother Meek: This morning Brother E. L. Alford, our pastor at Anguilla, Miss., passed through Vicksburg with the remains of little Elizabeth (one of the ten-months' old twins of his and Sister Alford) on his way to Magnolia to place the little one in the family burial ground at that place. Before they had gotten as far south as Rolling Fork the other one, little Mary, who had been left at home with her mother very ill died with the same trouble. Brother Alford went on to Magnolia at noon to-day, and the mother will pass through Vicksburg with the remains of the second child at 6 p. m., and tomorrow morning the two little ones will be buried. Let us remember Brother and Sister Alford, and pray the good Lord to bless and comfort them in this hour of such deep sorrow. We know that "of such is the Kingdom of heaven," and we know where to find them.

"THE STEWARDS' MEETING—A DELIGHT OR A DOSE?"

Where is the pastor among us who has made the most of the regular meeting of his Board of Stewards? Who is the pastor that has made this important meeting a sort of an executive committee to discuss the ways and means of advancing the Kingdom? I am fully persuaded that few, if any, of us pastors have realized the mighty power the Stewards' meeting may be made for promoting the progress and prosperity of the church. It is the common meeting-place where pastor and representatives of the people can speak frankly with each other about the financial and spiritual state of the church. It gives the pastor an opportunity to get the view-point of the laymen as to the condition of the church. It is a business meeting where busy men come together to plan and to pray about the "Master's business."

The wide-awake pastor will at once see the vast importance of the Stewards' meeting and strive to raise it to the very highest point of efficiency. Our Book of Discipline says: "It is the duty of the preacher in charge to hold a meeting of the Stewards of his charge once a WEEK, if practicable, to receive their reports." In some churches, perhaps, it may not be practicable to meet once a week or even once a month, but cannot every pastor have at least a quarterly meeting of his Stewards? I suppose that most pastors do attempt to do this. But in many places it is possible to hold a regular meeting once a MONTH. And these meetings, if properly planned and conducted, can be made either a delight or they may become a dose to those attending. I am sure that my brethren will not misunderstand me if I offer a few suggestions concerning these meetings, though, no doubt, many pastors who will read these lines have had as great success (or greater) in holding a monthly Stewards' meeting than I have.

1. Let the Board of Stewards organize early in the year by electing a chairman and a secretary and treasurer.
2. Set a definite day to hold regular monthly meetings (say 1st Friday).
3. Fix the place where the meetings are to be held. In the pastor's study, at the parsonage, or in the home of the chairman is usually the best place. If at parsonage, light refreshments may be served by the pastor's wife, after the business is concluded.
4. Adopt by-laws or regulations governing the actions of the Board. Let everything be done decently and in order.
5. Adopt an "order of business," not allowing the meeting to last more than one hour. I have found the following order of business helpful: Call to order by chairman; prayer by pastor or a steward; roll call by secretary; reading minutes last meeting; report of house committee (embracing incidentals, session, etc.); report of pastor (read written report giving pastoral visits, new members, weddings, funerals, etc.); report of treasurer on support of ministry; report from Sunday school superintendent; report from Epworth League president; report from Women's Societies of church; suggestion from each steward concerning progress of the church; unfinished business; new business; reading from Discipline (not over 3 minutes); adjournment. Our meeting never lasts more than one hour, and no undue haste is exercised by the chairman. After the meeting a social hour is enjoyed by all. About twice a year let the pastor invite the stewards and their wives to the parsonage for a dining and spend a time of good-fellowship together. This is very necessary and helpful. Try it and see!

Now, I have not mentioned a single thing but what any pastor can do, has done, and perhaps is doing, in his Stewards' meeting. These are commonplace things. But it is this that counts. It was the greatest and most skillful artist and sculptor who said: "Perfection is made up of infinite trifles, but perfection itself is no trifle."

But perhaps some diligent pastor will say, "I find it impossible to get my stewards to attend the regular monthly meetings." Write them a personal note every month, reminding them of the meeting. Put it in a sealed envelope with a 2-cent stamp on it. Use the telephone. Never fuss with them for not coming; perhaps they have good reasons for not doing so. Let them know that you miss them. Mail them a brief summary of what was done at the meeting, if they are absent. Let them know what you are doing. But enough of this.

Let every one of us pastors resolve to make the regular meeting of the Board of Stewards a delight and not a dose. Let us make it so attractive that every steward will look forward to coming with joy. Make the meeting more helpful and profitable than his club or lodge. The King's business demands your best service.

A. INMAN TOWNSLEY.

MRS. MARY L. HOPPER.

The bard of Israel sang, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." How holy is "the joy of the Lord" over the home coming of his children. So the Heavenly Father called his child, and our mother slipped away from earth and went home to God.

Mrs. Mary Lavinia Hopper was born June 22, 1838, in Wayne County, Miss., and died June 26, 1912, in Waynesboro, Miss., aged seventy-four years and four days.

Her father was John West, the son of Vincent and Levina West, who came from near Raleigh, N. C. Her mother was Eleanor West, the daughter of Malachi and Mary Odom. Malachi Odom, who married Miss Mary Russell, came from Georgia.

Mrs. Hopper possessed a brilliant mind. After careful preparatory schooling in childhood, she studied for some years at the famous academy of Mrs. Sarah D. Pierce, at Pierce's Springs, Miss., winning distinguished honors, and wielding a potent influence for good over the student body. Upon this liberal foundation she built, and by diligent private study and judicious reading, she achieved a breadth of culture far above the average. Quite a period of her life, she devoted to teaching, with eminent success.

On December 22, 1868, she was married to John C. Hopper. She was a "wife from the Lord," and the queen of her husband's heart.

Their modest home, amid the pine hills, she fashioned by culture and piety into an Edenic bower, fragrant with the flowers of love, where she became the "joyful mother" of six children. With complete abandon, she laid herself—a "living sacrifice"—upon the altar for her children, by which she wrought the lofty ideals of her own heart into their characters. This same unselfish devotion she lavished upon her step-children. To her children she left the rich legacy of a sublime womanly character, and the example of a holy life. In the pensive eventide, when the shadows stretched across the valley and the light grew dim in her eyes, "her children rise up and call her blessed."

As a Christian, she adorned "the doctrine of God our Savior." The circuit preacher baptized her in infancy, and at old Hebron Church, in a revival meeting, when ten years of age, she was "born of the Spirit," and received into the Methodist Church, under the ministry of (Rev. Samuel Jones) Uncle Sammy Jones. With singular fidelity her whole life was consecrated to Christ and his Church. Prayer and Bible study was her daily occupation. Modesty—the crown jewel of woman—shone with beauty in the constellation of her virtues. Like Dorcas, she was "full of good works."

With motherly love, she supported and educated two Cuban orphan boys in her home. Like the renowned Shunammite, she revered the "holy man of God," who always found a gracious welcome to the "prophet's chamber" under her roof. The life of this "Mother in Israel" lingers in the church as the aroma of "precious ointment." It was her love and prayers that broke the writer's heart and led him to Christ, and with grateful love he pens this tribute to her memory. In Meridian, Miss., under the ministry of the writer, and in his church, she received the experience of "entire sanctification." When the Holy Spirit filled her heart, she testified and said, "I have been like a bird on weary bruised wings, but now I am hid in the Rock—Christ—and have perfect rest, while the storm rages on the outside." This sanctified experience she professed and lived.

God had chosen her "in the furnace of affliction." Weak eyes were a life-long suffering to her, and the light gradually faded away to the end. The feebleness and blindness of her husband was also a great sorrow, and to him she ministered as an angel of mercy, until on November 3, 1903, he fell "asleep in Jesus," leaving her broken hearted. In these chastisements she was resigned to God's will, and triumphantly said, "As the hold on the things of earth weakens, my faith in the precious Savior grows stronger."

In her last days she experienced great physical weakness, and rapidly declined; then without suffering the end came, as sweetly as a babe falls asleep, as peacefully as a wavelet dies on the shore. At the birth hour of a new day, as the eastern skies blushed with the coming light, and surrounded by her children, the saintly spirit of our mother crossed the bar, and went out on the gold-flushed sea of eternal life.

The funeral was conducted in the Methodist church by her pastor, and she was laid away in the village cemetery to await the resurrection of the saints at the coming of Jesus.

W. W. HOPPER.

THE WAYS OF LIFE.

The apostle Peter, in his pentecostal sermon, quoting David, thus described in a word the Christian hope: "Thou hast made known to me the ways of life." The interests of mankind in any century, in any clime, all reduce to this—life. Life then must be the continual study of those who are to live it. How can I live if I must live? The cry of the heart is for One who will "show us the way of life." This phrase, as used by David and endorsed by Peter, suggests progress. A living thing must always advance, and everything that is spiritually alive seek a goal. Purposiveness and direction are of the very essence of the moral situation. We come to ourselves, we find the measure of true existence, when we "follow Jesus in the way"—the way of life, the path of service. The lives of the noblest men in history have always been characterized by this onward-David Livingstone "so long as I go forward."—Exchange.

WHAT NETTIE LEARNED.

Nettie was sitting near a window, and the rays of the sun fell upon her, making her warm and comfortable. Outside the weather was decidedly disagreeable.

As she sat by the window, Nettie wished that she could do something great. She had been reading a paper about a woman by the name of Florence Nightingale, who became famous by her kindness in nursing the sick.

"O I do wish I could make people happy like Miss Nightingale did," said Nettie almost aloud. "If I could do something like that, why, I would be the happiest little girl in the world."

She slid from her chair to the floor, and, going to the dining-room, she asked her mother many questions about Miss Nightingale and her great work in caring for the sick. The more she heard of this remarkable woman, the more Nettie wished that she were older, so that she could equal her achievements.

"I wish that I could be a Florence Nightingale," said Nettie to her mother.

"You can be a Florence Nightingale, if you will," said the mother, "and you will not need to leave home either. Maybe the world would not know much about the nice things you would do, but every night before you fell asleep, you would feel very happy to know that you had performed many acts of kindness."

This little talk with her mother set Nettie to thinking, and she promised herself that from then on she would try to make those about her happy.

At noon she helped the maid wash and dry the dishes, and received a kiss in reward for her kindness.

When papa came home from work she had his slippers ready for him by his armchair and he gave her a hug and kiss for being so thoughtful.

Even sister, who was often very cross when anyone bothered her while she was studying, gave her a kindly tap on the cheek for being so quiet.

Then she rocked the cradle until baby went to sleep, and before she herself went to sleep that night, both her mamma and papa had pressed many warm kisses on her lips.

As Nettie knelt in prayer beside her bed that night, her heart sang a glad little song, for she had been a Florence Nightingale in her own little world.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

GOING TO THE GRANDMA'S HOUSE.

Every day when Ted went to kindergarten he had to pass the Home for Aged Women. Often he would see three or four dear old ladies with caps on at the windows. There was one whose room was in the second story. If Ted and Rob looked that way, she waved her hand to them.

Teddy asked mamma why there were so many grandmas in that house. So she told him all about the dear old ladies who had no homes of their own, and how happy and comfortable they were there all together. After that Ted always called it the "Grandma House."

One day when he passed, there were carriages before the door and people going in and out. At dinner he told about it. Sister said they were having a reception at the Home, and people could take gifts if they chose.

In the afternoon Ted was left with Jane, who wanted to clean windows upstairs. So she told Ted he must play with his blocks in the sitting-room. Ted was lonesome. He emptied out his block-basket, and, going to Jane's nice, clean pantry, he emptied the crock of sugar cookies into his basket. He couldn't find his hat, so he took one of Brother Edgar's. To himself he said: "Now I must have a cane, 'cause the gentleman I saw going into the Grandma House had one."

With papa's very best gold-headed cane, and his basket of sugar cookies on his arm, away Ted trudged down the street to the Grandma House. A pleasant-faced maid let him in. When she saw his funny hat and big cane, she whispered a few words to the matron.

"My dear, what do you want?" said the matron. "Oh! I've come to visit the grandma ladies; and I've brought them some sugar cookies, 'cause I know my grandma likes sugar cookies."

So Teddy went from room to room with his basket of cookies.

The old lady whom he saw so often at the window told him stories, and showed him the presents which had been left at the Home that day. She called them "donations."

By and by the matron said she was afraid that the little boy's mamma would worry about him, and that he had better go home. When he walked in, mamma said, "Why, Teddy Page, where have you been?"

"Oh!" said Teddy, "I've been donating to the Grandma House, and I had a splendid time. The lady who let me in said I was the most popular gentleman there."—Little Men and Women.

LET EVERY CHURCH OBSERVE IT.

To the Pastors and Superintendents of the Louisiana Conference.

I am sending out this week my third letter in reference to Children's Day. We want every Sunday school within the bounds of our Conference to observe the day. It was announced at Monroe that this effort would be made and the co-operation of the pastors and Sunday school officers and teachers who were there was earnestly requested.

At that time the Board was in debt about $748, and it was evident that it would have to withdraw its Field Secretary and abandon its progressive policy unless it could greatly increase its income. I accepted the treasurership of the Board with the understanding that I would make every endeavor to get the revenue needed. With that in view I have written about 1,500 letters. Our Field Secretary and Presiding Elders have agitated the matter. Dr. and Mrs. Hamill pressed the matter during the Institute and several other members of the Board have done the same in person and by letter. So, if any school fails to observe the day it will be merely because of indifference.

I have no doubt of the outcome. I feel sure that Children's Day is an assured fact among us for this year and for the future. Properly observed, it will prove a great blessing to our schools from every standpoint.

The first reports are very encouraging. I have had returns from five schools as follows: Lake Arthur, $14; Rayville, $23; Second Church, New Orleans, $7.15; Haughton, $14; Jena, $30. Rayville has 55 members and the offering was more than 40 cents per member. Two years ago Jena gave $1 and last year $10. These schools have set the pace. Will the others keep it up?

In order to do its work efficiently your Board should have an annual revenue of at least $2000. The Minutes of the last Conference show a membership of 28,096 officers, teachers and pupils in our Sunday schools. An offering of ten cents per member would give over $2,800. Our 60 per cent will be $1680 and the General Board would get $1120. As the schools are only asked to give one offering each year for the extension of Sunday school work in our own State, we feel that the goal of ten cents per member should be easily reached.

I notice that our friends, Miss Kilpatrick in North Mississippi and Mr. Maddox in South Mississippi, are also urging the celebration of the day. I hope that our agitation will help them and that their agitation will help us. If Brother Meek can spare me the space I will report the schools whose contributions are sent to me and all the contributions should be sent to me.

Editorial.

THE CURTAIN.

The writer once upon a time observed that all men did not think alike. We have recently had a demonstration of that fact. He went on to express the hope that in all discussions involving difference of opinion, kindness and courtesy would prevail. Of course, every man has his own standard of good taste and decorum, and may be expected to speak and write in accord therewith, but let us believe always that brethren mean always to be fair and considerate.

Enough and to spare has been said concerning amateur theatricals, so that with a reiteration of my position that they are comparatively innocuous, so far as I am concerned the curtain may fall. Regarding the professional stage, if the editor had published my original article instead of giving us his impressions of it, men could judge for themselves to what extent I was a sinner. As it is, that is outside the record; if he wishes to go into that he should introduce the original testimony.

My ordination vows are not involved, but if they are there is a tribunal to which I am amenable; newspaper trial is hardly permissible. If there is any policy I ought to pursue, I fancy God will reveal it to me, so that I hardly need to have any suggestions made respecting a suitable procedure for me. The main thing for me to do now, as always, is to endeavor to be true to the Christ ideal; to follow the gleam, to speak out bravely, to leave the rest to Heaven. I. D. BORDERS.
Aberdeen, Miss.

NOT YET RUNG DOWN.

The Editor's Rejoinder.

Brother Borders still prates "of kindness and courtesy." We wonder what had become of them when he accused the Editor of conducting the Advocate in a manner that "poorly befits a Christian journal," about as sharp a thrust as he could well make. Apparently, his idea of kindness and courtesy is to bear with patience and meekness the blows that he sees fit to strike and to give none in return. When a combatant makes war with the sword he should not complain if he finds that there are others also who can wield it.

Our Brother accuses us of going behind the record in our reply to his recent article. Certainly his Commercial-Appeal communication which had been scattered all over the country was public property, and we had a right to use it. We did not disclose the contents of his contribution which we rejected any further than to say it was in commendation of the professional stage, which could not do him any injustice, as he had already openly taken that position in the Commercial-Appeal deliverance and in his article appearing in the Advocate last week. Our reason for referring to the rejected article was two-fold: first, that we might excuse ourselves for admitting into the Advocate a contribution apologizing for the public theater; and secondly, to show that we had not been hasty or inconsiderate in dealing with our brother.

The gentleman says that if we wanted to make reference to his rejected article we should have introduced the "original testimony." The "original testimony" is in his possession, not in ours. If he will kindly send it to us, now that the question is up, we shall take the greatest pleasure in giving it to the public; or if he has destroyed it and means to intimate that we have to the slightest extent misrepresented the character of his "testimony," we shall be glad to publish a certified statement as to what it was from gentlemen of impeccable integrity who saw it. If our friend thinks that the publication of his excluded article would help his cause, we can only commiserate his judgment. We repeat it, let the utterance come along and we shall give it a conspicuous place in our columns. If it does not appear, our readers may feel assured of the reason why.

Brother Borders says that his ministerial vows are not involved. We affirm that by every fair rule of construction they are involved. When he stood at the bar of the Conference he promised "to conform to the Discipline of the Church." When, therefore, he publicly commends the professional theater, thereby encouraging our Methodist people to do what the Church has officially declared to be hurtful and has warned them against, he does not "conform to the Discipline of the Church," but takes issue with it and sets it at defiance. Let it be clearly understood that he has not been advocating the view that the Church should change its position, and urging our members to be loyal until that is done; but his course has been utterly to ignore the Discipline of the Church, while publicly extolling the professional drama. To contend that a Methodist preacher may do this and not clash with his vows is nothing short of an absurdity.

Our correspondent inveighs against "a newspaper trial." The Editor is not responsible for this matter being in the newspapers. He did what he could to keep it out of the public prints, while our friend was chafing to get into them. But if he may publicly violate the Discipline of the Church, why may we not publicly speak out in its defense and call attention to his forgotten vows, especially as a private and brotherly remonstrance had had no effect? This we have done, and this, by the help of the Lord, we shall continue to do, if there is no one else to perform the task. If this be a "newspaper trial" and a violation of the laws of "kindness and courtesy," our friend and his sympathizers may make the most of it.

Brother Borders says there is a tribunal to which he is amenable. So there is, and he has yet to pass it. And if he does not desist from publicly and brazenly clashing with the Discipline of the Church, we predict that he will find that passage somewhat more difficult than he seems to imagine. If a Methodist minister may publicly and persistently commend the professional stage and go unrebuked, then indeed have we fallen upon evil times. The wonder to us is that he has not been admonished by those under whose supervision he is working long ago, though for aught we know that may have been done. He speaks of following "the gleam." We hope that it will be the gleam that comes from the Cross and not from the footlights.

We are informed that some of our North Mississippi brethren have publicly expressed their dislike of our way of battling for the Church—that they think our style of discussion is too direct and sharp. We admit that we are but a poor and imperfect champion, and we regret that some of these gentlemen who know so well how a discussion ought to be conducted did not speak out in defense of our Discipline before we were pursued and forced to do so. And even now we shall be happy to take a back seat if some other brother with a tenderer stroke will only rise up to represent the cause. Our only demand is that he shall do it bravely and faithfully.

Much as we should like to oblige Brother Borders, we cannot at present ring down the curtain on this issue. This discussion is not yet ended. As we have elsewhere stated, we want our readers to hear Bishop Candler on the subject. Nor are we done with amateur theatricals. As yet, we have not really entered into the merits of that question. We shall do so as soon as we can find the time and space. Until then, we ask our brethren not to be misled by the unsupported affirmation that all our colleges have such performances. This is by no means true, as we stand ready to show. Let us debate this issue fairly and thoroughly, and, if we can, reach the right conclusion. No brother need fear if he will come into the columns of the Advocate and show the Editor the proper respect, that he will not be treated with the utmost courtesy and the kindest consideration. But when men strike hard blows they should be chivalrous enough to accord us the same privilege.

It is a bit amusing how some people think an editor ought patiently to submit to being paddled, and never to paddle back. It is possible that in some instances the inspiration of such critics is that they themselves once undertook to apply the paddle and are yet nursing their old wounds. It is wonderful how long these sometimes remain red and rankling.

A CHANGE OF LEADERS.

Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., of Starkeville, Miss., who for many years was President of the North Mississippi Conference Home Mission Society, and who also served in that capacity for the United Societies of that Conference for the past twelve months, was a most efficient officer, and her voluntary retirement from the place of leadership was generally regretted. The fine service which she rendered did much to strengthen and establish the woman's work in North Mississippi and will not soon be forgotten.

As has been announced in our columns, Mrs. Scales has been succeeded by Mrs. Victoria Thompson Hoyle of Tupelo. As an Epworth League and Sunday School worker the new President has for years been known throughout Mississippi and beyond its borders, and she has also, amid her other Christian activities, always taken a deep interest in the cause of missions. With a sound religious experience, a clear and practical judgment, the gift of impressive public speech, and an uncommon force of personality, Mrs. Hoyle may be expected to make her influence strongly felt among her worthy fellow-workers in the Magnolia State.

We do not believe that if the women of North Mississippi had had the privilege of selecting from the entire Connection they could have found a more capable leader; and we heartily congratulate them upon the choice that they have made.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

The communication from the Bishops of our Church entitled "An Episcopal Address" and published on the first page of the last issue of the Advocate has already begun to bear fruit. The following letter was received just as we were about to go to press:

"Dear Brother: I read the Bishop's address to our congregation last night at the beginning of our service and asked for subscriptions to the Advocate. Eight new subscriptions and three renewals were the result. It did not take five minutes time from our service. J. L. Nelli, Hattiesburg, Miss."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Next Monday evening, at 8 p.m., the second quarterly conference of all the Southern Methodist Churches in New Orleans will be held at one time in the First Methodist Church.

Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., spent last Sunday with Brother L. C. Wilson at Franklin, La. In Brother Hill's absence, the Rayne Memorial pulpit was filled by Dr. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder.

A letter to this office dated May 16 from Rev. M. F. Adams, our pastor at Lorain, Miss., contained five subscriptions, and the following encouraging words, "I expect to send in another club in a week or so."

The many friends of Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, the pastor of our church at Batesville, Ark., will learn with regret of the recent death of his beloved wife; and he may be assured that they will remember him at the throne of grace.

A note, just received from Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, brings the news that, in addition to the Columbus District, the Durant and Winona Districts have pledged assistance in maintaining a ministerial student at Millsaps College. Let other districts do likewise.

Brother S. B. White, the efficient superintendent of our Sunday school at West Point, Miss., in a personal note to the Editor, says: "We have 400 on our Sunday school roll, not including the Cradle Roll and Home Departments, and an average attendance of 250."

The Annual Address at Millsaps College this year will be delivered by Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Fitzhugh is one of the most brilliant speakers in the South, and a great treat is in store for the Millsaps College community and the city of Jackson.

From Ruston, La., Brother W. E. Upchurch, the Secretary of our Sunday school at that place, wired us last Monday as follows: "Children's Day observed yesterday. The attendance was the largest in the history of the school, 554 being present. The collection was fine."

The literary graduates at Whitworth College this year numbered 18, and two were graduated in music and one in voice. As a college president, Dr. Cooper ranks with the best to be found anywhere. He is a safe and able administrator, and what is better still, he has a heart of the purest gold.

We learn from Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., our pastor at Carriere, Miss., that he began a revival meeting there last Monday night. He has the assistance of his three brothers, Revs. Barney, James, and Osmond Lewis. The meeting will continue for about ten days, and a successful series of services is anticipated.

The Editor will be in North Mississippi for the next few days. If letters addressed him are not promptly answered, this will explain the cause of the delay.

Rev. H. S. Johns, of Baton Rouge, Chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, was in New Orleans last week and called at the Advocate office. The Editor regrets that he missed seeing him.

In response to an appeal made by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, the Secretary of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, the Columbus District has agreed to assist in the maintenance of a needy student at Millsaps College. This is a good work.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., who has a revival meeting in progress, reports that the congregations are growing and that the interest seems to be deepening. He states that Rev. W. S. Lagrone, who is assisting him, is preaching some most excellent sermons.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon writes that he is at present engaged in a tent meeting with Rev. L. E. Alford at Coral Miss., and that a good interest is being shown in the services. Brother Whiddon requests us to state that any of the brethren who may desire his assistance in revival work may address him at Brookhaven, Miss.

A Brookhaven (Miss.) dispatch to the Times-Democrat, sent on May 17, says: "Miss Mary Ellis, of Memphis, Tenn., a daughter of Rev. H. M. Ellis, gave a graduating recital in music on the piano at the Mary Lampton Auditorium, of Whitworth College, this evening, distinguishing herself and the institution with her playing.

Miss Eliza Isles, the faithful deaconess of the Houma (La.) Mission, has our thanks for some subscriptions to the Advocate sent in on the 12th inst. To the business items of her communication, she added the following statement: "God is blessing our efforts in this field with a gracious increase. We had a good service last night. The Mothers' Service was also well attended."

Rev. A. S. Lutz has been engaged in a revival meeting in his church at New Iberia for the past few weeks, and according to the reports at hand, the meeting has been a most beneficial one. Brother Lutz is entertaining the Lafayette District Conference this week, and a most delightful session is assured, so far as the entertainment is concerned.

The revival meeting which has been in progress at Second Church, New Orleans, for the past two weeks, closed last Friday night. The services were well attended, the church membership was greatly quickened, and there were some conversions. Brother W. E. Thomas, the pastor, is doing a good work in the down-town section of New Orleans.

A note from Rev. J. W. Raper, written from the Baptist Memorial Hospital of Memphis on May 14, stated that he was doing well, and that he hoped to be able to return to his home at Drew, Miss., in about a week. We regret to know of the illness of this faithful itinerant, and we pray that he may have both a speedy and complete recovery.

Rev. J. L. Neill is having a most successful pastorate at the Broad Street Methodist Church of Hattiesburg, Miss. His congregation is just completing a handsome new parsonage at a cost of $2500. Brother Neill has a habit of looking carefully after the interests of the Conference organ, and a letter received from him last week brought us some renewals.

Rev. R. P. Goar, of Tula, Miss., writes: "Will all the delegates who expect to attend the Holly Springs District Conference, which will convene at Tula, Miss., on June 17, and who expect to come by rail, please write to Mr. J. B. Cole and Mr. J. S. Aswalt at Tula, so that they can arrange to meet them at Oxford and convey them out on Monday, June 16?"

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Brother J. A. Clardy, of Maben, Miss., for a fine club of subscribers from his community. It always especially pleases us when a layman manifests such an interest in the circulation of the Advocate. It shows that he is concerned both for the welfare of the local church and, to some extent at least, for the prosperity of connectional Methodism.

The Carrollton Avenue Church of New Orleans has decided to proceed at once to secure the funds necessary for the erection of a handsome new church. The Board of Church Extension has signified its willingness to aid in the enterprise by both a donation and a loan, and a finance committee has been appointed, headed by Rev. J. G. Snelling, the pastor. The plan is to begin work on the new structure this fall.

Rev. N. E. Joyner (we might say of the Louisiana Conference, for he has been away so short a time), a missionary in Mexico, has been selected to deliver the Commencement Sermon for Mansfield College, on June 1. Brother Joyner is a gifted preacher and a devoted friend of the Louisiana Conference school for girls, and no doubt will bring a practical message to the graduates and patrons of that institution.

According to a dispatch from Mansfield, La., published in the New Orleans Picayune last week, Mr. D. G. Petty, President of the Mansfield College Board of Trustees, died at his home in Mansfield on last Thursday. Mr. Petty was one of the strongest laymen in the Shreveport District, and was a wise executive and true friend of Mansfield College. His death is a severe blow to that school, as well as to our church in Mansfield.

From a personal letter from Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Methodist Hospital of Memphis, Tenn., we take the following encouraging news item: "All the District Conferences I have visited, without a single exception, accepted the amounts assigned to them by the Hospital Commissioners and arranged to have them apportioned among the charges. The hospital cause is winning, and we will be at work before long."

Writing from Shaw, Miss., under date of May 14, Brother M. K. Scruggs says: "We have had revival services here for a week, the preaching being done by Rev. L. W. Cain, of Leland. There have been a number of accessions to the various Churches, and Rev. E. N. Broyles, our popular and beloved pastor, is happy over this gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The singing, which was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Ashford, a Baptist, was greatly enjoyed."

Dr. W. H. Huntley, the accomplished presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, hopes to see a large delegation go from the charges under his supervision to the General Missionary Conference which is to convene on the Southern Assembly grounds, near Waynesville, N. C., on June 25. In seeking to stir up an interest in this great gathering Dr. Huntley is setting a commendable example. Every preacher and layman who can, ought to attend.

A number of the New Orleans Churches celebrated Children's Day last Sunday morning, but so far as we have been able to obtain reports, none excelled the Algiers school in the way of a collection. When the envelopes were all in, they were found to contain $49.75. Brother Sid Daniels, the veteran Sunday school man of the over-the-river section of the Crescent City, refused to allow the school to fall below a good even number, so he added twenty-five cents and made the collection even $50.

As will be seen from the account of the opening exercises of his new church at Laurel, Miss., which appears in this issue of the Advocate, Dr. J. M. Weems has recovered sufficiently from his recent attack of illness to be again in his pulpit. Dr. Weems laid the first brick of this beautiful new structure, and his people would allow no service to be held in it until he had first consecrated it with a fitting sermon. We earnestly hope that this faithful itinerant will soon become strong and vigorous physically.

Rev. J. S. Purcell, our pastor at Rolling Fork, Miss., sends us the following sad note: "We are in sorrow and deep sympathy with Brother and Sister E. L. Alford, of Anguilla, Miss., who have lost by death their babies, Mary and Elizabeth. Elizabeth died on May 13 and Mary on May 14, just twenty-four hours later. They were twins and about ten months old. The dead were taken to Magnolia, Miss., to be laid to rest beside two other children who sleep in the cemetery there. Let us remember this bereaved family at the throne of grace."

We have been favored with an attractive invitation to the Commencement exercises of the Franklin High School at Columbus, Miss., by Miss Mattie Maxwell Pegues, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Pegues, who is one of the graduates. It seems but a short time since we christened Miss Mattie Maxwell, then a babe, at Tupelo, Miss., and we can scarcely realize that she has grown sufficiently to be finishing in a High School. We are grateful to have been remembered in this manner by the daughter of friends whom we have long esteemed.

We rarely get out an issue of the Advocate that the mails do not bring us notices, accompanied by requests that we insert them in the forthcoming number, after our forms have been closed and the paper is on the press. It always grieves us when we cannot oblige the brethren, but, as we have repeatedly stated, the forms of the first side of our paper are closed on Monday afternoon and those of the second side in the early afternoon of Tuesday. It takes time to set up the type for a paper, make the necessary corrections, and print it. The Advocate is mailed on Wednesday.

In forwarding us some subscriptions from Potts Camp, Miss., Rev. J. G. Johnson writes optimistically of his work. He says: "All is going well with us here. The people have treated us royally since we came among them last December. They have presented me with a nice suit of clothes, and they paid a considerable part of the expense incurred in taking our afflicted son (who I am glad to say is much improved) to Memphis for medical treatment. In all, they have given me something like $75 above my salary. There are some choice spirits among them. We are looking forward to a fruitful year."

In a short letter written by Brother W. D. Wendel, of Pontotoc, Miss., from the Baptist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., he says: "I was operated on last Tuesday (May 13) and am doing finely to-day. My wife and boy are at home. My boy was recently operated on for adenoids and is all right now. The doctors say that I will be a new man when I have recovered. Urge the brethren to send delegates to the Epworth League Conference to be held in Pontotoc from June 10 to 12. We want the pastors to come. Let's make it a success." Thus, this hustling pastor works while on his couch, not even taking the time to be sick.

We have received an invitation to the Commencement exercises of Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., the leading educational institution, next to Vanderbilt University, in Southern Methodism. Trinity always gives a fine closing program, and that of this year is up to the usual high standard. The Commencement sermon will be preached by Dr. George P. Eckman, of the New York Christian Advocate; the Alumni address will be given by Dr. C. C. Woods, of St. Louis, and the Annual Oration will be delivered by Rear Admiral Roht. E. Peary. We like Dr. Few's way of making his baccalaureate address on Sunday evening when he has ample time. These exercises will be held from the first to the fourth of June, inclusive.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Ruston, La., will preach the Commencement Sermon of Centenary College at the First Methodist Church in Shreveport on Sunday, June 8, in the morning, and Rev. E. K. Means will deliver the Y. M. C. A. sermon at the Noel Memorial Church at 8 p. m. the same day. Hon. Charles A. Holcombe, of Baton Rouge, will deliver the Alumni Address on Tuesday, June 10, at 9 p. m., his address being preceded by a debating contest between the Union and Franklin Literary societies of the College. Rev. Jasper K. Smith, of the First Presbyterian Church of Shreveport, will deliver the Graduating Address on June 11. Senior Class night on June 6, a declamation contest on June 9, and the Annual Meeting of the Board of Trustees on June 10 are other features of the Commencement week program.

In forwarding some subscriptions a few days since, Rev. J. W. Faulk referred to his work as follows: "The Sibley (La.) charge is doing well. We had our second quarterly conference on May 14. Most of the reports were encouraging; the finances were very well up. Something over $50 had been raised and expended for parsonage furnishings. The new church that was begun at Taylor by Brother Porter and which was still unfinished was blown off its pillars and damaged in a storm some time ago. The little band there felt that they had already gone to the limit in their contributions, but they are bestirring themselves to raise the money necessary to repair and complete the structure. The Church Extension Board gave us $100 which encourages us to press on. When finished, this will be the best house of worship on the circuit."

Rev. W. W. Williams, of Hugo, Oklahoma, in renewing his subscription takes time to say: "I have been a subscriber to the Advocate and one of its regular readers for more than forty years; and, in my judgment, it has never been a better paper than it is at present." We appreciate these generous words, though we are departing from our usual practice in letting them appear in print. The Advocate is so far below our ideal as to what a church paper ought to be that we are little disposed to claim much merit for it. We cannot even try to make it what we should like to see it, because of the necessary limitations under which we have to work. But these kindly expressions serve one good purpose: they tend to soften the wounds made by those who privately write unkind things to the Editor because he does not do precisely what they wish—often consisting of demands that would violate every regulation of the office. We have learned long since that things are pretty well evened up in life, anyway—that the sweet and bitter are never far apart.

ARMOR-PLATED BOYS.

It is important these days that there should be armor-plated boys. A boy needs to be iron-clad as follows:

- His lips—against the first taste of liquor.
- His ears—against impure words.
- His hands—against wrong-doing.
- His heart—against going with bad company.
- His eyes—against dangerous books and pictures.
- His pocket—against dishonest money.
- His tongue—against evil speaking.

Sister CLEGG, wife of Brother C. M. Clegg, a beautiful Christian character, after a long and distressing illness, was called to her final home on the morning of May 8, 1913. At 2 p. m., May 9, we met a large company of relatives and friends at the Pine Hill Church, near Wantubbee, to hold the funeral service. Like Abel, she being dead yet speaketh. As a wife and mother, she left an impress for good on the home. Her memory in her church and community will be as ointment poured forth. May the God of all comfort keep to the end the sorrowing ones.

C. H. ELLIS.

Dr. S. M. WATSON of Pleasant Hill, Miss., passed away on the 6th inst. He had been ill for some time with Bright's disease, and had not done any practice since last October. He was 64 years and 6 months old. He was a good physician, a good man, and a loyal member of the Methodist Church. His remains were laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill cemetery the day following his death. After a short service had been held in the home by the Rev. T. H. Porter and his pastor, he was laid to rest by members of the Masonic fraternity. He leaves a wife and four boys to mourn his loss.

A. M. BENNETT.

On Saturday morning, April 26, the death angel visited the home of Brother ROBERT C. LISTON and bore his spirit back to God who gave it. It was not the writer's privilege to be acquainted with Brother Liston long. He was a man who was beloved by all who knew him. He was a soldier in the war of the sixties, having volunteered in April of 1862 and having remained faithful until the end. He joined the M. E. Church, South, a short time before he became a soldier, and remained a faithful member until death. He served the Church of his choice in an official capacity for a number of years. He was a kind and loving father, and a citizen who will be missed in his community. Weep not, dear children! So live that when your summons comes you may enter into that rest that remains for the people of God. His remains were interred in the Bethel Cemetery, after the funeral had been conducted by his pastor.—F. J. Oakes.

Mrs. LOUISA B. ELLIS was born in Mississippi, Sept. 28, 1843, and died at Harrisonburg, La., April 15, 1913. Sister Ellis had lived a devout Christian for more than forty years, and the grace of God, in sustaining and comforting power, was abundantly ministered unto her during the last days of weakness and suffering. Hers was a noble life, shining with purity, beaming with unselfishness and sympathy, and filled with the Spirit of God. Trials and painful experiences were powerless to crush her heart, for she "endured as seeing Him who is invisible." The peace and joy of the Holy Ghost were daily experiences with her, and when the summons came the future was bright with hope. She leaves two children to mourn her going away—Mr. F. O. Ellis, and Mrs. Essie Hobbs. Her marked characteristic was seeing the good, instead of the faults of others—she believed in being "tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

J. J. KELLY, P. C.

Many hearts were made sad by the news of the unexpected death of Mrs. FANNIE E. SMITH, which occurred Feb. 1, 1913. She was sick only five days, but her illness was most alarming from the beginning. She was ready when the summons came. She asked her husband to take care of the children and not let them forget their mother. She joined the Methodist Church early in life and was a good and true woman. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother, and a faithful friend who was always ready to help the sick and needy. During her illness all possible medical aid was given. Mrs. Smith was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ellis, and was born in Yazoo County, Miss., Feb. 7, 1895. She was married fifteen years ago to Mr. Ira J. Smith. It was a happy marriage. He found in her a helpmeet in every place as wife and mother. She is survived by her husband, four sons, and one daughter. May the great Comforter abide with them, and the memory of her life linger in their lives and lead them heavenward.

J. W. ELLIS.

Mrs. OLIVE CURTISS COOK, an elect lady, died at Hazlehurst, Miss., on March 15, 1913, and was buried the next day at Vicksburg. Mrs. Cook was born at New Orleans in November, 1831, spending her girlhood there. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church at twelve years of age, being a consistent member until her death. She was married to Rev. Edwin G. Cook (known generally as Col. Cook), at Jackson, La., Dec. 23, 1856. In 1867 the family moved to Hazlehurst, where Col. Cook died in October, 1894. Mrs. Cook was a woman of great intellectual force and broad culture. Her early association with men of distinction and breadth, in Church and State, led to intimate acquaintance with matters of world-wide importance, in which she took deep interest. Her religious views were broad, without heresy, and her spirit was catholic, without loss of intense-ness. She was a close and apt student of the Bible and of the hymnology of the Church; her own religious experience was one of conscious salvation, and the attitude of her soul that of devout worship—her last audible words being, "Glory to God in the Highest!" Up to two or three days before her death her mental force was not abated, nor her vision of her Lord at all dimmed. She died, as she had lived, full of faith and of Christian joy.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Father, in his infinite wisdom, has called our sister and co-worker, Mrs. FOREST HORNE, to her heavenly home, be it therefore Resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Winifred Auxiliary, tender our sympathy to the bereaved family.
2. That we shall always cherish the memory of this good woman who endeared herself to all by her many deeds of kindness, but that we bow in submission to the will of God.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, to the Mississippi Messenger, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Auxiliary. Signed:

Mrs. ALGI OLIVER,
Mrs. ALEX TROTTER,
Mrs. HENRY MAULDIN.

DR. W. W. CATCHINGS.

(Resolution adopted by the recent session of the Brookhaven District Conference at Georgetown.)

Whereas, this Conference has learned with great sorrow that Dr. W. W. Catchings, an official of the Georgetown Methodist church and an esteemed citizen of the town, has been taken from us by death, therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to the family of Dr. Catchings our sincere and deep sympathy in their distress, and to the community our great regret that it has lost so valuable a citizen. Signed:

W. H. LAPRADE,
W. H. LEWIS.

Tidings From the Field

Logtown, Miss.

I have just closed some good meetings on Logtown charge. There were 13 valuable accessions to the Church. Brother Peebles, Conference evangelist, conducted the services and he gave eminent satisfaction to all. He is fine help and willing to go anywhere regardless of remuneration. I certainly appreciate his work on this charge.—H. Mellard, P. C.

Kilmichael, Miss.

The Kilmichael charge is progressing nicely. We are making progress. Brother T. J. Halfacre is doing some good preaching and is a "mover" when it comes to work. He succeeded in launching a movement to buy a home for the preacher. The committee bought a nice parsonage, and it is now a settled fact that the pastor of Kilmichael charge has a comfortable residence. Pray for us, that we may still keep on in this glorious fight.—A Member.

Ringgold, La.

We closed a meeting here in Ringgold a few days ago. There were about 60 conversions, 21 of whom joined the Methodist Church, quite a number, also, going to the Baptist Church. Brother A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, did the preaching with great power and success. I have two or three other meetings yet to hold on this charge, and ask that the Advocate readers remember us in our work and meetings in prayer before the throne of grace.—D. L. Griffin, P. C.

Mississippi City, Miss.

Just a word to let you know something of how our work is progressing. We have just closed a meeting at the Wesley House in Biloxi. Brother Crook, from the Terry charge, came to us on the 27th of April and labored faithfully until the night of May 8. The people fell in love with him and wished for him to remain a week or two longer with us. Ideal weather favored the meeting, and every night we had a full house. Some few services we did not have room inside the building for all who came. Seven were added to the Church, and all of us were blessed. I feel that Brother Crook's coming was providential. Our meeting in Mississippi City is set for the 6th of next month and Brother John Paul of Meridian is to help us. Brother Lloyd Decei is to conduct the meeting in Handsboro, beginning on July 4. We are to have two other meetings outside of the regular work on the charge sometime during the year, but the time has not been definitely set as yet. Brother Breehan and Brother Fayard are to help in these. We are working and praying for a great revival on this work this year. Pray for us. The prospects are all good.—Paul F. Daniel, P. C.

Boonville, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We had Brother E. S. Lewis to preach the High School Commencement Sermon here last Sunday, and it is needless to say that it was a helpful message. The school closed a great session. Four girls and five boys were graduated. We hope to recruit Grenada and Millsaps with these fine girls and boys. Our church here maintains its usual high standard of excellence. We have added twelve by letter this year and four on profession of faith. Rev. T. H. Dorsey will be with us in a meeting beginning the third Sunday in June. We expect a great meeting.

Our faithful Board of Stewards had paid both of our Missionary assessments before the second quarterly conference (April 27). Of course, they feel good over it. Those of us here who read the Advocate hope you will conclude that it is best to continue your connection with the paper. Brother Mitchell tells me conditions throughout the district are better than last year. No man could be more faithful than he is in the discharge of his duties. I hope that we may see you at Sherman during the District Conference.—S. A. Brown.

West Monroe, La.

I am sending you a brief synopsis of things done on West Monroe charge since Conference. Our greatest achievement is the building of a seven room parsonage, complete throughout. It is a modern bungalow, a model of convenience, and a thing of beauty. The plans were furnished by a fine architect, and the material and work first class. The Woman's Home Mission Society has placed new furniture in it. Our church has been re-covered, re-papered, repainted. We have also purchased a new piano that my predecessor had in the church on trial. The Colony has likewise re-covered its church. The charge has been made smaller since Conference—Brother Barr is now filling Desaird. West Monroe takes three-fourths time. The salary for the pastor was placed at more than twice what was paid last year. What is not paid is mostly subscribed. Soon after our arrival here we were the recipients of the usual refreshing shower (large). The breeze began blowing again last Friday at 8 p. m. It struck us anew in a way long to be remembered with groceries, linen, and silver. These achievements have come by gifts from a small membership, none of whom are men of means. Our P. E., Brother Schuhle, is very much loved by all. Brother Miller is making a hit at Monroe.—H. W. Ledbetter, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas God, who doeth all things well, has called our friend and co-worker, Mrs. A. D. ELDER, from this land of suffering to a realm of bliss, be it Resolved:

First, That the Coldwater Home Mission Society has lost one of its most useful members, one who always had its interest at heart and who responded to every call.

Second, That we deeply deplore her death and shall miss her sadly, but that we rejoice in having known one who by her self-sacrificing nature and consistent Christian character endeared herself to all who knew her.

Third, That we extend to the bereaved husband, children, brothers, and sisters our sincere sympathy, and invoke for them the consolation that can only come from God.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that our secretary be instructed to place the same upon the minutes of the society. Signed:

A NOTE OF APPRECIATION

Dear Dr. Meek: Allow me space for a few lines. Tears of joy were made to flow as I read the resolution unanimously adopted at the recent session of the Brookhaven District Conference at Georgetown, Miss., relative to my absence and the illness of my wife, and I take this method of informing the brethren of said conference of our heartfelt thanks for their sympathy and prayers. It was so good and thoughtful of the brethren to remember us at this time. At this writing (May 13) the doctor thinks my wife has passed the crisis and that she will be convalescent in a few more weeks. May the Lord bless the members of said District conference and all others who have aided us in any way during these days of affliction, according to Numbers 6:24-26. J. A. WELLS.

DISTRICT LEAGUE MEETING.

Dear Brother: The first session of the Hattiesburg District Epworth League Conference met with the Broad Street League on the 7th and 8th of May. W. B. Alsworth, the District President, had arranged a program covering each of the departments of the work. The papers and discussions were as good as any I have ever heard at the larger League meetings. During the sessions inspiring and instructive papers were read by Rev. L. E. Alford, Rev. J. C. Chambers, and Mr. August Campbell. Almost every one present entered into the discussion of these papers. Rev. M. L. White and Rev. C. W. Crisler rendered valuable assistance by their presence and counsel in each of the sessions. The officers of last year were all re-elected.

The most important business was the adoption of a resolution asking that the Leagues of the Mississippi Conference take the support of a single missionary in the Cuban Conference. This resolution will be acted on at the League Conference meeting in Laurel in the early part of June.

The time and place of the next meeting were left for the executive committee to decide. J. L. NEILL.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference will convene in Wilson, La., on June 5 and continue to June 8. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. J. D. Harper at 8 p. m., on Thursday, June 5. The program arranged includes an address by the presiding officer to the pastors and laymen present, addresses by Rev. W. W. Drake, and W. S. Holmes, and Judge R. R. Reid, and sermons by Rev. H. W. Bowman and others. The reports from pastors and laymen will be heard on Saturday, June 7, and Sunday will be entirely devoted to worship and gospel preaching.

Bishop Candler has been invited to preside, but an answer has not yet been received from him. The presiding elder desires to meet every pastor and lay delegate at the conference. Be sure to send your name to Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Wilson, La., telling him when you will arrive. Let all come praying for a conference of great inspirational and spiritual power. Yours with brotherly love, W. H. COLEMAN, P. E.

ON THE DEATH OF REV. C. McDONALD.

(Adopted by the Newton District Conference in its recent session at Lake, Miss.)

Whereas our Heavenly Father has, in his infinite wisdom, seen fit to remove from us our beloved brother, Claiborne McDonald, and whereas Brother McDonald has been for many years an honored member of our Conference and an influential citizen of our State; therefore be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we feel sorely bereaved in the death of Brother McDonald; that we miss his genial presence and wise counsel in our Conference sessions; that the Mississippi Conference has lost one of its most loyal members; and that the State has lost one of its best citizens. Resolved, further, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, lastly, That we request our secretary to send a copy of these resolutions to the bereaved family; that they be spread on the minutes of our Conference, and a copy be forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: J. H. BASSETT,
T. J. O'NEIL,
J. T. ABNEY.

CABBAGE SNAKES.

Some years ago a Tennessee doctor, who "didn't mind getting his name in the papers," lost a patient. He discovered that the unfortunate man had eaten some cabbage the day before and "Sherlock Holmes" like, the doctor proceeded to his garden to examine his cabbage patch. After a patient search he found on a head of cabbage a long slender worm which he did not remember ever having seen before. Aha! cried the scientist, I am hot on the trail of a great discovery! In order to verify his theory he invaded the cabbage patches of his neighbors, and there too he found the unfamiliar worm. About that time he heard of another man who had died in a neighboring county and he decided to "investigate" the case. He found that this man also was fond of cabbage and had therefore, in all probability partaken of the succulent leaf.

By this time the innocent worm, familiar to every student of zoology, had assumed the dignified title of a "cabbage snake" and the doctor was ready for the newspaper reporters. Obliging publishers in all parts of the country copied the reports and the people read and shuddered. The bottom dropped out of the cabbage market and train loads of perfectly good cabbage rotted on the railroad side-tracks. And then they all woke up.

It was the same way with the terrible tales about Coca-Cola. Some one started a report that it was an alcoholic and intoxicating drink and as a result Coca-Cola was barred from the army post exchanges. The manufacturer appealed to the War Department; the chemists of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Agricultural Department analyzed the product and lo! and behold there wasn't any alcohol in it. And then they all woke up.

Then some one else started the rumor that Coca-Cola contained cocaine, the deadly, habit-forming drug. Some people believed the report and obligingly passed it on to their friends and neighbors. Even state legislatures got excited and took up the matter of prohibiting its sale. Then they had the chemists analyze it, and found that it didn't contain any cocaine at all. And then they all woke up.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

We, the committee appointed by the quarterly conference of this (the Oloh, Miss.) charge to draw up resolutions concerning Brother M. M. CRUSE, whom God has seen fit to remove from our midst, offer the following:

Resolved, 1. That we have lost a most accomplished leader of the choir, an effective Sunday school superintendent, and a faithful and devoted member of our Church.

2. That we are grieved at such a heavy loss to our local church, and do determine, by God's help, to exemplify his life as he did the life of Jesus Christ.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy spread upon our minutes.

A. H. STEELE,
L. M. HOWELL,
Committee.

I certainly would have died, if I had not been relieved by taking Cardui. Now I am stronger, and in better health than I ever was in my life. I can't say half enough for this great medicine." Do you need relief? Try Cardui for your womanly troubles. Its long record of successful use is your guarantee. Thousands of ladies have been helped to health and happiness by Cardui. It will surely help you. Try a bottle today.

REPORT ON EDUCATION.

(Report of the Committee on Education adopted by the Brookhaven District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Georgetown, Miss., May 8, 1913, and ordered published in the Advocate.)

Dear Brethren: Your Committee charged with the duty of preparing a report on the subject of Education offers the following:

The pastors' reports indicate that some have preached on the subject of Christian Education as the Discipline requires and that others propose doing so in the near future.

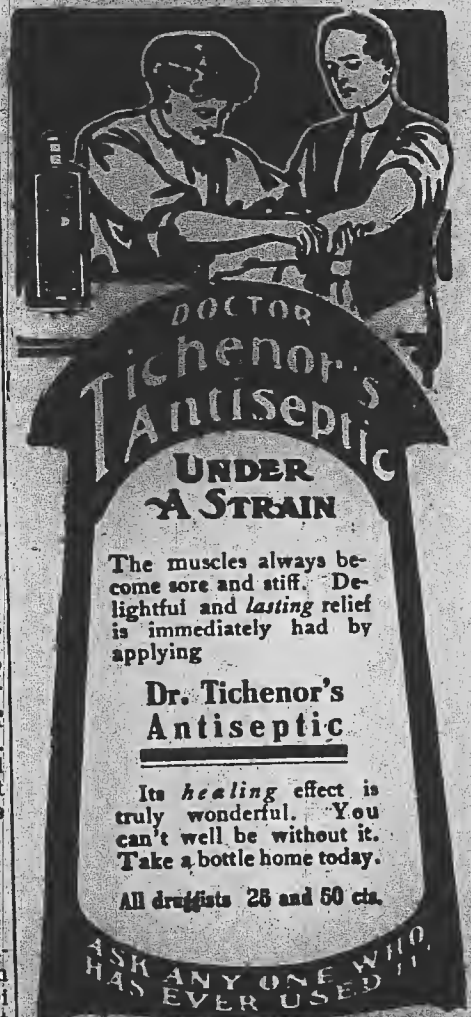

Your Committee would call the very careful attention of our pastors, officials, and people in general to the importance of rallying enthusiastically to the support of our own educational institutions. We are well wishers in our attitude towards private, State, and church schools of other denominations; but it is our conviction that we must provide, and provide well, for the education of our sons and daughters in our own schools if we would contribute a generation of well equipped young men and young women to the strengthening of the Church among the people called Methodists. We need not expect the schools of the other Churches or undenominational schools to develop the best type of Methodists. We must have our own schools and support them with our means and with our patronage.

We especially urge our pastors to recommend to their people Millsaps College for the education of their boys and Whitworth College for the education of their girls. We are gratified to note with reference to this latter institution that the campus has been much improved and beautified by the recent erection of the Mary Jane Lampton Auditorium, made possible by the generosity of the Lampton brothers, and by the erection of the President's home, the gift of Dr. Cooper.

We would respectfully urge the pastors of the District to give attention to the claims of worthy young men struggling to acquire an education with a view to entering the ministry or some other useful calling; that they remind their men of means of the Loan Fund provided for by the last General Conference to assist young men preparing to enter the ministry, and where practicable to secure contributions to the fund.

Years of Suffering

Catarrh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarrh."

JUST HALF IN BED.

Clyde, Ky.—Mrs. I. A. Decker, writes from Clyde: "I recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to any woman in need of a remedy. For five years, I was unable to do my own work. Half my time was spent in bed. At last I tried Cardui. Now I am well and happy, and can do my own work." Don't suffer pain, headache, backache, and other womanly miseries, when your own druggist has on his shelf a remedy for such troubles—Cardui. Get a bottle for your shelf. As a general tonic, for weak women, nothing has been found for 50 years that would take its place. Try it. It will help you.

Travel in China.

Perhaps no country in the world embraces so many modes of travel as China. Suddenly shoved upon the modern stage she has hastily donned a fringe of steam lines along the borders, while over the country as a whole, traditional modes of travel are in vogue, going back as far as Adam. A review of these various modes would be the history of transportation in pantomime. I shall attempt an enumeration of them with some comments and a few illustrations:

1. Of course, such a commentary begins with the feet. Foot-travel is the most popular and cheapest form of locomotion. One is amazed first, at the number of people who travel afoot; second, at the distance they go; and third, at the immense disproportion of this form over every other form of travel with the masses. Scientific Chinese terminology denotes the animal kingdom as "moving things," and the vegetable as "planted things." The former might as well denote the males of the human species, and the latter largely describes the females, especially those whose feet are bound.

2. Next in popularity and cheapness comes the boat, which provides shelter by the way and can utilize the natural power of wind and current. Incidentally it provides a home free of rent for its owner, and thousands of families have no other habitation than their boat. Waterways abound in China—rivers, lakes, and uncounted canals—which serve as highways for immense populations.

3. Perhaps third in popularity is man-power transportation, which occurs in three forms:

(a) The wheelbarrow, having a flat top, or else a high wheel in the center. These are slow and cheap and often a continuous squeak is provided without extra charge. (b) The sedan chair, carried by two men on their shoulders. It can be used over any sort of ground; is found either closed or open, and, in remote mountain districts, consists simply of two narrow planks suspended from two poles, one plank to sit on and the other to rest one's feet. (c) The jinricksha. This is a by-product of missions, having been invented by a missionary in Japan as a baby carriage for his gardener to pull. It is very common in the port cities and its use in the interior is growing rapidly.

4. Next comes beast-power travel. China having been for so long a non-military nation, horses are scarce and the breed poor, but they are somewhat used for pleasant rides. Donkeys, and, in North China, camels, are ridden as in Palestine. In many places is used the springless Peking mule-cart which is luxury spelled backward. Other places use the "shen-tze," a sedan chair with stiff poles supported on the back of two mules and calculated to put one in a frenzy. It is not so bad when the mules keep step on level ground, but when they don't

5. Last, and most useful, as everywhere, comes steam-power travel. Hundreds of steam launches ply up and down the canals, harbingers of civilization and progress. Hundreds of miles of railroad have been constructed, and many important lines are now projected all over the Republic's vast area. Dr. Sun Yat Sen is now giving his time to the promotion of railroads, and there is no service more important that he could render his country at this juncture. It need only be added that bicycles, automobiles, motor launches, and electric cars are quite in vogue in the port cities, and the government is now beginning to use aviation for military progress.—Rev. W. H. Stuart, in Missionary Survey.

Social Service Items by Fourth Vice-President, Louisiana Conference.

Mrs. E. R. Kennedy of Lafayette, La., says the following: "I am sure you will be glad to have a few 'news-items' from Lafayette. Our missionary society has grown from thirty members to a membership of sixty-seven. I shall not attempt to estimate the growth in spiritual life and missionary activity of these women. We meet on the first Monday in each month for a business session. On the second Monday we have our mission study class and a social meeting. We have divided the membership into four circles with a leader for each circle. These leaders are requested to raise $100 ($25 each, aside from dues) for our pledge in the Home and Foreign Departments this year. Our women are preparing a box of clothing for the little ones in the Orphanage at Ruston; and they have also expended this quarter about $86 on the local parsonage.

"Committees have been appointed from the Civic League to visit the jail, the colored schools, and to better the conditions in every way possible in our home town. We feel encouraged at the outlook of the temperance cause in Louisiana, and even in Lafayette, which is one of the strongholds of the liquor traffic. Mrs. Armour's visit did much to create sentiment against the sale of intoxicants and there is much interest and enthusiasm in our local union, not only against the licensed saloon, but against its twin evil, gambling. We have forty-eight members with a wide awake president and a fine corps of officers. May God speed the day when State-wide prohibition shall sound the death knell of the liquor traffic, not only in our own Louisiana, but throughout the United States of America!

"Another great work in Lafayette is the 'Atheian Club' organized for Bible study. This movement grew out of the Home Department of the Sunday school, and the studies in the Home Department quarterlies form the basis of the Bible class work. This club is interdenominational and is a great uplifting influence in the community. It is now planning to create a local fund to secure a room in the sanitarium for the needy sick. We find that Bible study is the foundation of all social service and we are hoping to extend this work until other communities may fall in line and know for themselves the value of the systematic study of God's Word."

THINKS THE EDITOR IS RIGHT.

Dear Brother Meek: "Anent Amateur Theatricals" has just been read. From the sacred precincts of our home is borne to you the truest expression of commendation and endorsement. We have indeed fallen upon perilous times. May a great and good God save our children and homes from the teachings that pander to or indirectly endorse the theater hall or the theatrical tendency! With prayer that continuous health and spiritual boldness and directness may be given you as our Advocate Editor,

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

A member of the Central Texas Conference explains the phenomenal Sunday school growth within its bounds in recent years by the fact that Bishop Atkins has held several Conferences there in succession, and at each session inquired carefully into the life and growth of the Sunday schools and urged the pastors to put emphasis upon its work, claiming that the only way to save the world is to save its childhood, and that the Sunday school of to-day will be the Church of tomorrow. Thus does this Bishop, who was formerly the Sunday school Editor of our Church, every where he holds an Annual Conference.

Mr. A. S. Matthews, the superintendent of our Grace Sunday School in Dallas, and the author of the system of Sunday school records bearing his school's name, believes the keeping of Sunday school records should be done by the best office men to be found, and relates that he called on a lumberman of means who had not been to Sunday school for twenty years to become his Sunday school's secretary. He accepted and kept model records without missing Sunday school for four years, once riding in an automobile forty miles to be present. Brother Matthews holds that the explanation of this brother's faithfulness is found in the interest that grew out of the responsibility imposed on him in a work that he considered worth while. No man or boy is willing to give his time to something that seems to be trifling, but if a work is given him that he considers "a man's job" he is glad, as a rule, to do it, and this applies to keeping Sunday school records as well as to other things.

At the recent annual meeting of our General Sunday School Board in Dallas our former Standard of Excellence was changed to the following Standard of Efficiency:

1. Cradle Roll.
2. Home Department.
3. Wesley Bible Classes.
4. Teacher Training or Students.
5. Our church helps, graded or ungraded, with graded organization.
6. Missionary instruction with offering.
7. Temperance instruction.
8. Definite decision for Christ urged.
9. Annual observance of Children's Day, with offering as required by our Discipline.
10. Workers' conference regularly held and session of school every Sunday.

Thus it will be seen that a "workers' conference" and a "graded organization" are added to the former list of requirements for a standard Sunday school in our Church, and all should take notice and build their organization accordingly.

This refreshing card came from Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, our pastor at Jena, on Monday after the fourth Sunday in April: "Our Children's Day was a glorious success. Best Sunday school attendance in the history of the church; fine program effectively rendered; collection passed expectation; raised $30. Our two Adult Bible classes each gave $10. Boost Children's Day. Collection in 1911, $4; in 1912, $10; in 1913, $30; that will please Holloman." Now that sounds like progress, which it is; but it didn't come by chance. Brother Kleinschmidt personally saw that the program was well prepared and that the people understood the need for the offering, and then furnished each member of his Sunday school with an envelope for his offering, a week before the collection was taken. To follow this plan and gather together the school's offering and then the congregation's is the method used by some, and it always bears fruit. If our own church Sunday school enterprises are worth fostering at all they are worth supporting, and we commend this contribution from the Jena Sunday school as an example to provoke others to good works. If the First churches of New Orleans and Shreveport make a contribution of proportionate liberality on the basis of preachers' salary last year (Jena having paid $587), they will each give about $250 to this fund. The other churches would come below that, but very few churches would give less than the amount contributed at Jena. Then would the Sunday School Board have funds like other Boards of the church to carry forward and enlarge its work.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

John Wannamaker says: "If I had my life to live over, I would not devote less time to Sunday school work, but twice as much if I could."

Beautiful Mothers' Day services were celebrated in many of our schools and classes and no more beautiful or uplifting special day is in our Red-Letter-Day calendar.

Rev. J. A. Poe has a nice new church at Saltillo and has organized a Methodist Sunday school there. The people are much interested and great progress is expected in their community.

Rev. A. W. Langley, Verona, writes very interesting things of the Plantersville Sunday school. Every child in the town is in Sunday school, and the older people are taking more interest than usual.

The key-note of Sunday school activity is loyalty to Christ, and that loyalty, to which is added the same strong feeling for fellowmen, embraces all the mottoes, organizations, songs, and social service of modern Sunday school life.

Mr. C. S. Youngblood reports good work, enthusiasm, and interest in his progressive Sunday school at Glen Allen. This school gives generous and loyal support to the Sunday School Board, observes special days, and in the meanwhile keeps growing.

Rev. Thos. Mills recently had a splendid Children's Day at Kossuth. He will observe this helpful service at all of his churches and at one mission appointment that he has lately established. His Kossuth Sunday school contributes one Sunday's collection each month to missions.

Marvin Church, on Corinth Circuit, had a delightful Children's Day service on May 4. The church was beautifully decorated, the program was good in every way, and the children were well trained. The Field Secretary enjoyed speaking to the large and attentive audience at 11 o'clock. Mr. Northington, the busy pastor, is preparing for a similar service at Box's Chapel the first Sunday in June.

Seasonable plans should be made for class outings. Just now when it is so alluring out-of-doors, picnics, campfires, hikes, fish-fries, and a worthwhile walk are delightful, and an outing with an object adds much to such an occasion. A purposeless frolic does not bring half the satisfaction at the hour of sunset, as the good out-of-doors hours with an objective, however, simple.

BROTHER LOWREY ENDORSED.

Dear Brother Meek: I have read with deep interest Rev. P. O. Lowrey's article on the Louisiana Sunday School Convention recently held in Alexandria, and I heartily agree with him in saying that "while we shall ever be ready to co-operate with other denominations in co-operative and fraternal work of a practical sort, we are persuaded that we are doing more than our share in this, and that we should begin to look after the needs

You Will Need Extra Power

WHEN you buy your engine, get it big enough to do more than your present work. If it's an IHC engine it will last a long time. Your farm work is bound to increase in volume. Very likely you can save yourself the price of another engine four or five years from now, by getting an engine a size larger than you need now.

Over-speeding and straining harm any engine. There is one correct speed for each IHC engine, a speed at which the parts balance and at which the engine runs without harmful vibration. When you buy an engine powerful enough to handle your work easily while running at the correct speed you add years to its life. Get your engine big enough and buy an

IHC Oil and Gas Engine

An IHC oil and gas engine will deliver 10 to 30 per cent above its rated horse power when occasion requires, but it gives the longest service when carrying a normal load. All parts are carefully, accurately ground and perfectly balanced. The best material obtainable is used. Combustion is perfect and the maximum power is secured.

Sizes—1 to 50-horse power. Styles—stationary, portable, skidded, vertical, horizontal, tank-cooled, hopper-cooled, air-cooled. Fuels—gas, gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, distillate or alcohol. Kerosene-gasoline tractors, 12 to 60-horse power.

of our own people and conserve their gifts and their efforts to better advantage for our own Church."

It seems to me that some do not wish to co-operate with us. A certain Baptist church recently elected two members to represent their Sunday school at a Parish Convention to be held the following week in a Methodist church. One of the delegates, a young lady who desires to be a missionary to Africa from her Church, arose and asked that she be excused from acting as a delegate for she did not believe in the Methodist doctrines, and did not wish to act as a delegate to a convention that would be held in a Methodist church. She must have failed to catch a vision of a lost world, and that "all must be at it and always at it" trying to snatch sinners as "brands from the burning." NEWTON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Institute convened at 8:30 a.m., in Lake, Miss. Dr. Featherstun announced Hymn No. 653. Rev. C. C. Evans led in prayer, and J. F. McClellan was requested to act as secretary. The roll was called and 17 travelling preachers, 4 local preachers, a number of lay delegates to the District Conference and a large congregation were present. Rev. Robt. Selby, P. E. of the Brookhaven District, was introduced, and by request of the Institute spoke in the interest of the educational work of the Church.

The question, "Is this District meeting its obligation in the matter of Missions?" was discussed with much interest. Nearly all the preachers spoke on the subject. P. L. Blackwell, C. M. Davis, and W. D. Croft wanted to know how we are to determine as to when we have met our obligation in the matter of missions. They claimed to have met their obligation in this matter when the assessment for missions had been paid. It was the general conclusion that the District is not meeting its obligation in missionary work.

Dr. J. M. Weems was called home to attend a funeral, and Dr. H. Walter Featherstun was requested to preach at 11 o'clock a. m. We were sorry to see Dr. Weems go; but few could have preached a more thrilling sermon than Dr. Featherstun did. He preached from Romans 1:14, during which and after the gleam of joy with tears of gladness was on the faces of many. It seemed that everybody in the church shook hands with Dr. Featherstun pledging themselves to a forward movement in the work.

The evening session was under the direction of Rev. M. M. Black. Rev. M. R. Jones led in prayer. Brother Black emphasized the fact that our Conference is far behind many of the Conferences in its contributions to Missions. After Brother Black's address, the preachers and laymen pledged themselves to pray everyday for Missions.

At 8 p. m. the Institute convened. After singing, Rev. M. M. Black led in prayer and read a lesson from the 42nd Chapter of Isaiah. Dr. A. F. Watkins was introduced and by request of the Institute addressed the audience in the interest of Millsaps College. It was no trouble to listen to him. We think he is the right man at the right place.

Brother T. B. Winstead, District Lay Leader, delivered an interesting address urging the laymen and preachers to push the work of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Mrs. H. W. Featherstun read an interesting paper on Woman's work for Missions. Dr. Featherstun pointed out the fact that the 22 women's societies with their 400 members in the District lacked about $700 of paying as much last year for missions as the 10,000 members of the District paid.

NEW CHURCH OPENED.

On May 11, the beautiful new building of the Fifth Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was opened for service, and the congregation with their friends filled the large auditorium to its capacity at both the morning and evening services. The completion of the structure was gratifying to all, but it was an especial occasion of thanksgiving to Dr. J. M. Weems, the veteran pastor, whose long work in the Master's cause this worthy building will fittingly crown. Dr. Weems has been instrumental in guiding in the erection of a number of beautiful churches for his denomination in Mississippi, but none have been so beautiful, convenient and creditable as is this one which has just been completed here. The Building Committee, who gave unsparingly of their time and their thought in the work, consisted of Messrs. S. M. Jones, chairman, J. B. Bridges, B. V. Wright, W. P. Davis, Dr. P. H. Saunders, and the pastor.

It was fitting that the first service should have been conducted by Dr. Weems, who delivered a sermon having especial reference to the occasion, the text being "The House of God," from Matt. 21:13. The choir, consisting of Miss Olivia Sharborough, soprano; Mrs. J. B. Williams, alto; C. H. Kirkland, bass; R. W. Fitzpatrick, tenor, and Miss Rose Carter, organist, had arranged most beautiful and appropriate music.

The evening service was given over to the celebration of the anniversary of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was conducted by Rev. John C. Chambers, of Collins, who preached upon the friendship of David and Jonathan one of the incidents upon which this organization has founded its principles. "Nearer my God to Thee," was most beautifully sung by Miss Olivia Sharborough.—The Laurel Daily Argus.

INTERCOLLEGIATE GAMES AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The following resolutions were passed with but one dissenting vote at the recent session of the Newton District Conference:

Whereas, It is the sense of this District Conference that Intercollegiate Games in Millsaps College are not conducive to the moral or intellectual development of the student body; and whereas, certain press reports from a recent game of ball between Mississippi College and Millsaps College reflect upon both Colleges; therefore be it Resolved:

1. That we deeply deplore the very unbecoming conduct of the student bodies of these institutions after a game of ball in which the Millsaps team was defeated.

2. That we the members of the Newton District Conference now in session at Lake, Miss., do hereby enter our protest against intercollegiate games at Millsaps.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded by the Secretary to the Faculty and Trustees of Millsaps College, and a copy furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

AVAILABLE FOR WORK.

Rev. H. B. Gilmore, a local deacon in our Church, tells me that he is ready to assist any pastor who may need him in revival meetings during the summer. I have been his pastor for three years, and can heartily recommend him for such work. He was ordained a deacon at our last Conference at Hazlehurst. Address him at Hattiesburg, Miss. Sincerely,
J. L. NEILL.

A GREAT MEETING AT FOREST, MISS.

We have been greatly revived and strengthened again at Forest, and if we do not "hold out" it will not be because the preaching was not strong, practical, and spiritual. Of the men who have aided me in meetings in a ministry of eight years I recall none whose preaching I like better than Brother Norsworthy's. It was strong, sane and effective, and the proof was seen when the people responded liberally in raising a large purse for the evangelist. Our revival began April 30 and closed May 11. It was in many respects a great meeting. The Church received a spiritual uplift, and nine new members were added. We feel sure that the large congregations that heard the preacher were not only entertained but wonderfully helped by the sermons that were filled with truths gleaned from the word of God, which word the preacher himself believed to be inspired. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, whose permanent address is Yazoo City, Miss., was my helper, and did all the preaching. He not only possesses rare preaching gifts, but knows how to be a real help to a pastor. He strengthens the people's loyalty to the Church, and binds pastor and members closer together. He is so unselfish that you can't help but love him when you come to know him. I recommend him to any church or pastor seeking a real revival.

EDITOR OF THE ADVOCATE COM- MENDED.

(Resolution adopted by the Brookhaven District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, relative to Dr. R. A. Meek and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.)

Whereas, Dr. R. A. Meek, editor of our Conference Organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, has announced through the Advocate and from the platform of our Annual Conference his determination to retire from the editorship of the paper; and

Whereas, it is the sense of this Conference that Dr. Meek has ably edited our Advocate, that he is watchful and zealous for the Church, assailing erroneous and strange doctrines and making a strong plea for righteousness in both public and private life; Therefore he it resolved, by the District Conference for the Brookhaven District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Georgetown, Miss., May 7, 1913,

That we urge Dr. Meek to reconsider the matter and give his consent to continue in the important position which he now occupies.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI LEAGUE MEETING.

To the Pastors, Leaguers and Friends of North Mississippi Conference.

The two Epworth Leagues of Pontotoc are delighted to have the honor of having the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference meet with them June 10, 11, and 12, and extend a big, hearty welcome to all. Send your names to Rev. W. D. Wendel, Pontotoc, Miss., and your best interest will be looked after. Please send names ahead of time so that we may be better prepared to make you feel at home from the beginning.

Those in attendance upon the meeting may well anticipate a spiritual feast in every sense of the word. The program will be out in a few days. The Pontotoc Leaguers will do all they can to make things pleasant for all, and assure the delegates that they will be gladly entertained in the different homes. Let's make this a great Conference.

EPWORTH LEAGUES AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Mississippi Epworth League Conference will be held at Laurel from June 9 to 12, inclusive, at which time delegates from all League Chapters, both Senior and Junior, within the Conference are requested and urged to be present. All organized Sunday school classes are requested to send delegates to this Conference, especially the classes in those churches which have no Leagues. The Secretary of the Laurel Leagues, Mr. John Kittrell, requests that the names of all delegates be sent in as early as possible to him for obvious reasons. Drs. Parker and Winton will constitute the visiting "team" from Nashville.

SOME EVIDENCES OF MORAL PROGRESS.

(An extract from an address recently delivered before the Union League of Chicago, Ill., by Hon. W. J. Bryan, Secretary of State of the United States Government.)

The world is making progress in morals as well as in intelligence. And if I had to decide the question I would be compelled to say that at the present time the evidence of a world-wide moral awakening is even more abundant than the evidence of the world's intellectual advance. And here, too, I am embarrassed by the very abundance of the evidence.

Some fourteen years ago the great Frenchman, Dumas, wrote a remarkable letter. He said he thought he saw the signs of a coming new era which he described as the era of brotherhood. He said that man was about to love his fellow man with a passion that he had never known before. Two years after this letter was written Tolstoi read it and he declared that he, too, saw the signs of the coming of this era of brotherhood, and before either one of these had spoken, England's great commoner, in one of his remarkable speeches, had declared that there was visible throughout the world a profound and mysterious movement that was bringing mankind nearer together. These men were like men upon a mountain top who catch the first glimpse of the rising sun while darkness still fills the valley. But the sun has now risen so high that all the world is flooded with light. And I venture to say that this era of brotherhood foreseen and foretold is not merely coming, but that it is here. There is a better understanding of the doctrine of brotherhood than there ever has been before. There is more of a sense of kinship among men. There is more altruism on this globe than the globe has previously known, and more in the United States than in any other country in the world. Yes, with all our worship of the almighty dollar there is more altruism in this country to-day than any other nation can boast of, and our nation is to-day showing more unselfish and altruistic interest in all the people of the world than any other nation now existing or that has ever been known to history.

Let me call your attention to a few of the organized efforts that are being made to raise the moral standards of the world. Let us begin in this country. Within the last ten years more than a million men have been brought together in men's clubs and Bible classes in the various Churches. Ten years ago there were not many of these comparatively. To-day there is scarcely a church of any size of any denomination that has not a men's club or Bible class. I have had occasion to visit some of these Bible classes taught by prominent men in the community; Bible classes that within the last three or four years have sprung from nothing to a membership of several hundred. After these individual clubs had been organized, they were brought together in national brotherhoods.

The Church with which I am connected organized its national brotherhood some six years ago, and now nearly every important denomination has a national brotherhood, and these in turn have been federated under interdenominational committees. We have great societies, some within single churches and some inter-church. Take the Christian Endeavor Society, for instance. It is a brotherhood of four million and a half; more than a third of that brotherhood has been added within the last four years. The Young Men's Christian Association has a brotherhood of over a million; more than half of that membership is in the United States. The Christian Endeavor Society was born in this country and the idea was exported. The Y. M. C. A. was born in Great Britain and the idea was imported, and if you will let me digress for a moment I will take the opportunity to say that I am glad that there are things as valuable as ideas that can be imported without having to go through a custom house.

You may not know how large an amount of money is spent through these various organizations that are to-day charged with the task of elevating the moral standards. Take this one organization. Do you know how the expenditures of the Y. M. C. A. compare with the expenditures on national politics? Do you know that we spend more than twice as much to-day every year on the Y. M. C. A. as we spend in a national campaign? Outside of this country people complain of the expensiveness of our national campaigns, and yet if you will take the expenditures of the parties in the last national campaign you will find that they were not altogether equal to one-half as much as we spend annually on the Y. M. C. A. And when you remember that we only have one presidential campaign in four years you will see that in order to understand the proportion you must multiply the two by four and that gives you eight times as much spent on this one organization working among men as in national politics. Isn't that a good showing? But it is even better than that, for with publicity we are likely to spend less in national politics, while the Y. M. C. A. work goes on increasing every day so that it will not be long now before the ratio of eight to one increases to sixteen to one. And then who will object to 16 to 1? This is one, only one organization.

We have the Young Women's Christian Association, a companion organization. * * * In every church, in every denomination, everywhere you will find these organizations working for the moral development of men. Not only that, but outside of the churches you find organizations ethical in character, like the Hull House, that is known now all over the world, established in this city by Jane Addams some twenty-three years ago, and now nearly 600 organizations of that character have sprung up in the United States. Outside of these are the fraternities, growing in number and in membership, and every one of them preaching the doctrine of brotherhood.

Go outside of the United States and you will find that the same is true. There is not a nation with any degree of civilization in which you will not find an awakened conscience addressing itself to some ethical question. In China, for instance, it has been the opium question. They have made a tremendous fight against opium, and now at a tremendous sacrifice of national revenue they have about won their fight. And before waiting for it to be entirely finished they commenced on China's second vice, the vice of gambling. In most of the countries of Europe you will find that the liquor question is the moral question of paramount importance. I was in northern Ireland some two years and a half ago and met the man who organized what is known as the 'Catch-Me-Pal' Total Abstinence Society. It began with a meeting on the street between a minister and five drunken men, and one of them asked the minister to get the other four to sign the pledge. He invited them to come to his house when they were sober and to sign, and they came, and when the five had signed they went out and got five more, each man bringing back his pal, and five more signed, and then the ten went out and got ten more, and they organized this society, which, when I was there, had reached a membership of 120,000 and had changed the lives and habits of whole communities. And a Belfast lady told me a story that was the outgrowth of the work done by this society. She said that many drunkards had been reformed, and that a minister, speaking to the wife of one of these reformed men, said: 'Your home life must be more pleasant now, since your husband has quit drinking,' and she said: 'Oh, yes, he is more like a friend now than a husband.' And such a change can be accomplished and can take place under favorable circumstances.

France, one of the greatest wine producing countries in the world, has decided to teach in the schools the effect of alcoholism on the system. But the most startling piece of news comes from Germany. Some two years ago the Emperor, speaking to the naval cadets at Vevey, dared to attack what he described as the traditional beer-drinking habits of his people, and told these young men that in any contests that might arise the country must depend upon them, and that it could not do so unless their brains were clear and their nerves steady, and then he warned them that alcohol would rob their brains of clearness and their nerves of steadiness and in the name of the Fatherland he appealed to them to join total abstinence societies, and held up for their own example the total abstinence societies of the British navy. And when I read this appeal of Germany's Emperor to the young men of that country to be strong for war I asked myself: "May we not appeal to the young men of this country to abstain from the use of alcohol, that their brains may be clear and their nerves steady for the battles of peace and progress that lie before us?"

Dr. Jessie Bowman Young, for forty years a leading minister of the Northern Methodist Church and at one time Editor of the Central Christian Advocate, took a superannuate relation recently. He will make his future home in Chicago.

THE CHURCH VERSUS THE THEATER.

By Bishop W. A. Candler, D. D.

Text (Acts xix. 29-31): "And the whole city was filled with confusion; and having caught Galus and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theater. And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not. And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theater."

The present seems to be a favorable time to give some of the reasons why the Methodist Church forbids her members attending the theater. By a general rule peculiar to her own organization, and by an ancient vow which, in common with several other large and influential denominations, she requires of every one who seeks admission to her communion, the Methodist Church denounces the theater as a diversion which "cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus," and reckons it as a part of "the vain pomp and glory of the world," which must be renounced on the very threshold of a religious life. This rule has existed from the very beginning of the Church's history, and from the days of Mr. Wesley until now has been uniformly held by the authorities, whose duty it has been to interpret it, as decisive against the theater. No member of the Church can plead any valid reason for misunderstanding at this point. The vow renouncing "the vain pomp and glory of the world" is still more ancient. We can find it historically recorded within three centuries of Christ. It was used by the Primitive Church, and has been adopted by the Catholic Church, the Episcopal Church, the Lutheran Church, and by the Methodist Church. There have been slight modifications of it by the several Churches which have adopted it, but its meaning has been left unmistakable; and among those things which have been held as incompatible with it theater-going has always been reckoned from the beginning until this day. Let us suppose, now, a candidate for membership stands at the altar of the Church, and when this vow is propounded responds negatively; what would be the duty of the minister in such a case? The service would certainly have to be arrested and the candidate denied admission until he yielded to the demands of the Church. Suppose, after such person has been admitted to membership, he persists in violating this solemn obligation. Can he be retained in the Church upon a lower platform than that upon which he was required to stand to obtain membership? Is the gate more strait than the way is narrow?

The text of this discourse was not selected because it contains any prohibition of the theater; it does not. It was chosen because it shows the theater is an old institution, the character of which, by this time, may be fairly regarded as defined. It has existed for centuries, with a uniform history and a definite character, with the exception that it has grown worse perhaps in these latter days. Some contend that Christianity has purified the theater. I do not wish to talk sharply, but he who affirms this proposition is certainly ignorant or inattentive to the facts of the case. Recently I have gone over many of the plays of the Greeks and the Latins, and in their whole literature I do not find as much filth as may be found in one or two modern popular plays. All the writings of Sophocles do not contain as much indecency as may be seen in the "Black Crook" or the "School for Scandal." Where in the dramatic writings of the ancients will you find as much that is vicious as has in the last few weeks been presented in the play "As in a Looking-glass"—a dramatization of a scrofulous English novel which has been applauded by the largest audiences in one of the most fashionable theaters in New York?

Others would put aside this whole question by saying, "It is a small matter. Why make an ado over a mere amusement?" Diversion is a subject of real importance. During the period of recreation the moral system is relaxed, and when the system is relaxed, physically or morally, the pores are open to take in whatever poison may be about in the surrounding atmosphere. And a man must absorb some of the spirit of his fellow-men about him. Another thing, it is exceedingly capable of abuse for this reason: If you go to recreate you can't stop to study whether you will get any benefit from it or not. It would not be recreation then. If you don't study its character before you get into it you won't do so afterward. More people lose their religion right here than backslide by absolute immorality. Sins of worldliness are really more dangerous than graver faults because they are least liable to be repented of.

Many say we preach more against theater-going and dancing than we do against stealing. That is true. What is the use of preaching against stealing when no one in the congregation is going to steal? You begin at the border when you are backsliding. When you are backslidden you may get to stealing. You will have to break down at the border first, however. Suppose the United States became involved in war with another country. Do you suppose we would begin our fortifications on the Blue Ridge Mountains? No. We would put them at Savannah or elsewhere on the coast. The British would not care for a fortification in the Blue Ridge Mountains, but they would probably attack the border at New Orleans, where Jackson once had some trouble with them. We must fortify the border, where the world comes in contact with the Church. The Church is in the world, but the world must be kept out of the Church. As Mr. Moody has said, "The Church in the world is well, but the world in the Church is perilous, as a boat in the water is a convenience, but water in a boat is a danger."

The need of recreation is founded in our nature; the need of religion is founded in our nature; and what is unfriendly to religion is unfriendly to the uses of recreation. The natural instincts of our nature run parallel, and what is unfriendly to religion will be a bad recreation. Going to the theater is not a recreation at all. Recreation brings you rest. If any thing makes an appeal to passion it produces weariness, and the theater makes its appeal to the passions—the comic and the tragic elements.

The Methodist Church is against the theater, because the latter is detrimental to religion, as it plays only upon the comic and tragic emotions, to neither of which Christian principles can be subjected. It undertakes to make amusement out of the most solemn and serious passions of the soul. The most common element in the theater is the passion of love, which lies under our social system and family life, the foundation stone of our civilization; and yet at the theater this affection is presented in a tragic or comic form for the sake of amusement. The theater takes the element of hate and uses it in a like manner. Lord Macaulay has said the Puritans opposed bear-baiting, not because it hurt the bear, but because it amused the by-standers. I think they put it on the right ground, unless we regard the pain of the bear as more important than the morals of the spectators. When we get to seeking our amusement by practicing cruelty to animals, it is time to call a halt; and yet an amusement is made of that passion which lies under our very social system, under our family life, and in doing so we strike at the very taproot of civilization. You will see coming out of such diversions men who will make a jest of vice or virtue. The reporters in our papers frequently head accounts of serious occasions with jesting words—as "From Hemp to Heaven"—which may mark the earthly conclusion of an immortal life. They have learned in the school where the great passions are held up in the most picturesque way for the sake of amusement. Do you say there is no harm done where virtue is thus tarnished and the moral perceptions of the people are thus blunted? This is horrible sport; we are making amusement out of the wrong thing.

A step further. The theater treats sacred things profanely. Here a woman comes along and prays on the stage, making prayers for amusement; and the Christian people go there and pay to have that woman get down and make a mock of praying to their great God. I have seen that. I have heard quips and turns made upon the Scriptures. Even Shakespeare, with all his genius, could not hold the drama back from this offense. It now and then crops out even in his noble writings. From highest to lowest stage plays seem to exist under a law of degeneration. Honest theatergoers will admit that their own experience confirms these allegations.

Again, the theater is an unchaste place. Its plays, the double meanings attaching to its phrases, and the witticisms that grow out of those double meanings, all make out the charge I bring. Who go to the theaters? It would not hurt my little boy to go; he is too young to understand it. Old men and old women are not there generally; they are too old to be hurt by it and too old to desire it. But the majority of the people who go there are between fifteen and thirty years old. Can a place such as I have described, with its patronage such as it is, fail to damage its patrons? It is inevitable; the very nature of the case prevents its being otherwise. A vast deal of the wit that passes for wit in the theater is feathered from unclean birds. The newspapers tell of an actor in England that committed fifteen thousand murders on the stage and was divorced three thousand times. That was using the things that break up the sweetness of life, that shadow the home and disgrace the parties, that turn out little children unfathered and paupers upon the world; that was using these things for the sake of diversion!

Again, theater-going involves moral cannibalism. You would not like for your daughter to turn out an actress. No; you would be distressed at that. You would not like your son to be an actor; that would sorely grieve you. Do you propose to patronize the theater that keeps somebody else's son or daughter in a business that you feel is hurtful to them? It is moral cannibalism to be feeding upon the characters of men and women that go around the country in a business which inevitably damages them. It is feeding like cannibals upon people that are God-created and Christ-redeemed.

Let us have some authorities for these charges.

The old fathers were opposed to theaters. Tertullian said: "Stage plays are the pomps of the devil, against which we have renounced in baptism," and calls the play-house "the devil's church."

Cyril of Jerusalem said: "The devil's pomps, which we renounce in baptism, are those spectacles or plays in theaters and all other varieties of the kind from which the holy man of God, desiring to be freed, prays, 'Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity.'"

Saivian says: "Thou hast once renounced the devil and his spectacles, and by this thou must needs know that thou dost return to the devil when thou dost unwittingly return to stage-plays."

St. Augustine calls theaters "cages of uncleanness and public schools of debauchery."

Archbishop Tillotson calls the theater "the devil's chapel, a nursery of licentiousness and vice."

Even pagan writers condemn the theater. The heathen Plato says, "Plays raise the passions and pervert the use of them, and the consequences are dangerous to morality," and for this reason he would banish them.

Livy tells us theaters were brought to Rome upon the score of religion to pacify the gods and remove a mortality, but that the remedy was worse than the disease and the atonement more infectious than the plague.

Livy's contemporary, Valerius Maximus, says: "It was devotion that built them. The State first blushed and then bled on account of their existence."

Seneca says: "Nothing is more destructive to good manners than to run idling to see sights, for there vice makes an insensible approach and steals upon us in the disguise of pleasure."

Tacitus tells us: "The German women were guarded against danger and kept their honor out of harm's way by having no play-houses among them."

Ovid advised the Emperor Augustus to suppress plays as the promoters of licentiousness and dissoluteness.

To the same purpose Plautus and Juno speak. Plutarch commends the Lacedaemonians because they would not endure plays under any form or regulations.

Tully tells us that his predecessors counted all plays discreditable and scandalous, insomuch that any Roman who turned actor was esteemed as degraded and was disfranchised by the censors.

The Theodosian Code reckoned actors as persons of blemished reputation, and did not permit their pictures to hang in any creditable place.

Plautus, Terence, Eschylus, Sophocles, Euripides are purer than the modern stage writers, and even Aristophanes, the worst of all, condemns himself for writing impurity.

Plutarch says the Greeks grew so insanely fond of the theater that it corrupted them into indolence, luxury, and effeminacy until they were prepared to bend to Philip's yoke.

More modern authorities also condemn the stage. Macaulay in modern times called the theater "the seminary of vice."

Allison said: "The corruption of the theater is inevitable."

Rousseau, resisting the introduction of the stage into Geneva, calls it "a monument of luxury and effeminacy."

In Cromwell's time theaters were suppressed. At the Restoration they returned, and a committee of the British Parliament said there was no way to reform them but to burn them down.

Wilberforce said: "Decorum, modesty, regularity retire, while riot and lewdness are invited."

Dr. Channing says: "The theater has nourished all intemperance and vice. It is an accumulation of immoral influences. Exhibitions of dancing are given fit only for brothels."

Lord Kames says: "In the play-house a young man loses his disgust of vice; and contempt of religion and a declared war upon the purity of the female sex are converted from being infamous vices into fashionable virtues."

Rollin, in his history of the Greeks, heads one of his sections thus: "Fondness for theatrical representations is one of the principal causes of the decline, degeneracy, and corruption of the Athenian State." He also says: "During the representation of a piece at Athens the news came of the defeat of the Greeks before Syracuse; and, although the theater was filled with the relatives of the fallen, scarce a spectator there that was not represented on the field by some bleeding or slain friend, the audience simply muffled their faces, and then commanded the play to go on." Have you ever seen any thing like that in this American country? I have known a mother to leave her child crying in the nursery in the hands of a hired nurse while she went away to "lead society" at the theater.

Prynne says: "Many are the laws which have been enacted; much the care that has been taken by sundry States and censors in all ages to lop off the enormities, allay the poison, purge out the filth and gross corruption of these stage-plays, and so to reduce them to a laudable and inoffensive use, but yet these Ethiopians still retain their black infernal hue, these vipers their soul-devouring poison still; these Augean stables are polluted—yea, more, defiled—now as ever before; no art, no age could ever yet abridge, much less reform, their exorbitant corruptions and enormities. Their hurt doth far transcend their good; their abuses far overpoise their use. They are so crooked and distorted in themselves that no art can make them straight; there is no other means left to reform them but to utterly abolish them."

The old Continental Congress said:

"Whereas true religion and good morals are the only solid foundation of public liberty and happiness;

"Resolved, That it be, and it is hereby, earnestly recommended to the several States to take the most effectual methods for the encouragement thereof, and the suppression of theatrical entertainments, horse-racing, gambling, and such other diversions as are productive of idleness, dissipation, and a general depravity of principle and manners."

Even actors condemn the theater. Dumas, who wrote "Camille," said: "You do not take your daughter to see my play. You are right. Let me say, once for all, you must not take your daughter to the theater. It is not merely the work that is immoral—it is the place. The theater being the picture or satire of the passions, it must be immoral."

Edwin Booth, in a letter to the Christian Union, said: "I never permit my wife or daughter to attend the theater without previously ascertaining the character of the play."

Macready said: "None of my children shall ever, with my consent, or on any pretense, enter a theater, or have any visiting connection with actors or actresses."

Sheridan Knowles, upon becoming a Christian, renounced the theater as utterly evil.

Mrs. Siddons said it was "a business unworthy a woman."

Frances Kemble said in the Atlantic Monthly that acting was a business unworthy of man or woman, involving unhealthy excitement and a personal exhibition absolutely odious.

Montague Stanley called it "a most ungodly profession," and said of theater-goers: "They are leading others by their example to do as they are doing, and they are verily guilty of their brother's blood when he falls into the snare of ungodliness and is taken. They are upholding a system of enormous wickedness. It is useless for any person to say that the theater would go on whether he paid his money or not. It would not go on if it was deserted by the audience. Every individual who contributes a fraction at the door of a theater for admission is a partaker with all those sitting around him in the common sin of supporting a vast machinery of corruption."

But to all the argument I have offered and against all the authorities I have arrayed some will still demur.

One will say: "There are two sides to this question." This is true. So there is to the moral law. So there always will be where right and wrong exist together in the same world. There are two sides to this question—the side of the world and self-indulgence, and the side of the Church and a consecrated life. On the side I have espoused are found all the Churches as they have expressed themselves at the moments of their greatest purity and power. They are unfortunately not agreed about many things, but against the theater they have spoken with a marvelous unanimity. Is it quite safe, not to say in keeping with that charity which vaunteth not itself, for one to resist this consensus of the Christian world? Of such independence of indulgence Professor Austin Phelps has well said there is in it "a loss of wise Christian modesty. It is possible, but not probable, that the individual is right in his dissent from the instinct of the Christian Church. He may be inspired above his peers, but such is not the usual method of divine revelation. His self-conceit feeds on his modesty. If he believes himself thus exalted. There is a loss of fraternal affection also. It is a selfish thing in me to stand up against the current of Christian feeling for my right to attend a theater or a masquerade. My combative nature ought not to be roused against good men and praying women for a mask and a farce. They can afford it; but can I? Sooner or later I must come to myself and grieve over my irreparable loss."

Another contends that "it holds the mirror up to nature." But to what in nature? Are the natural phases of such passions as love and hate to be reflected in comic or tragic attitudes? Is that a wholesome representation of nature? It represents only that comic and tragic part which is manifested in silly laughter and hysterical tears. Is it all of nature to laugh and to cry? This is nature with the wrong thing exposed. It is a harm to exhibit some things in nature.

Some affirm that it is "a school of manners and morals." To this strained defense of the stage good old Jeremy Collier nervously and aptly answered, "It cures a pimple by giving the plague."

It cannot be a recreation and a school both, for people do not go to school to seek recreation. We do not go to school to seek fun, and if we did it would vitiate our education. The people who go may learn a quotation from Shakespeare, and then in nine cases out of ten they will get it wrong and think that it was written by one of the prophets. The revelry, suppers, and wine-parties after the play, not to mention worse things which follow, disprove the claim made for the stage as a school of morals. If it were such an excellent teacher of morals as some would have us believe, these evils should not follow so quickly upon its instruction; on the contrary, we should now and then, at least, find a conversion in the play-house. But do we find converts there? Do we look for converts there?

One who would shield his sin from attack by hiding it behind the great name of Shakespeare says: "It is as bad to read Shakespeare as it is to see his plays on the stage." If that were true, it is enough to answer: then it is as good to read them as to go to see them acted; so the next time you will do well to sit down and read Shakespeare at home, and save your $1.50. Anybody knows that reading a play coldly, calmly, and quietly is not as dangerous as seeing the thing robbed of its sober truth and clothed in the sensual surroundings that generally belong to it on the stage. You would have to jab a man's eyes out to make this pretext a valid argument. There is no truth in it. The half-educated suppose the stage is the proper place for Shakespeare's plays, but the educated and the best critics of him do not allow this violence to them. A good many people should not read Shakespeare, particularly the people who go to the show. They would have to read history and philosophy to understand him, and show-going people do not generally take that much time for reading.

Some cry out: "Why do you not reform the stage instead of denouncing it?" True preachers have no time for such vain work. They are too busy trying to save the people. Many good people at one time or another have tried to reform the theater. The largest success they have ever accomplished has been financial failure by the effort. Divested of the things that make it vicious, the theater is bereft of the elements that make it popular. When an amusement is as far gone from "original righteousness" as is the theater, it is easier to throw it away and make a new one than it is to reform it. The stage is too rotten to save; the sound timbers in it are too few to make them worth recovering from the decay by which they are surrounded and affected.

There are some persons too intelligent to be ignorant of the truth about the theater, and too honest to deny it, but who wish some sort of justification for their continued patronage of it. Such a person, admitting all I charge, still says, "I attend good plays only; I am very careful about my attendance." To patronize any is to subsidize all, and to become a partner in the whole business. But as a matter of fact these persons are not as careful as they imagine. One such, talking with me, admitted that he always patronized "Camille," a play the immorality of which the author himself did not have the hardihood to defend. And yet my high-toned friend only witnessed pure plays! The plain truth is, the people witness the plays that it is fashionable to witness. The moral part of the question is not taken into account. The people go to see what they desire, and their desires depend upon one consideration and another, and do not run in the way of moral improvement when they go to the play-house.

If a people could understand that they are making history while they are making it, they would make a great deal better history. But we never know we are making it until we have made it. Suppose that the history of the United States should be written, viewed from the time of the secession, we would have to say, "In 1860 the nation elected to the Presidency a plain Western man for his hard sense and honest convictions. He was taken to the capital and was killed in the theater. In 1867, when the South was groaning under a load that few people have been called upon to bear, and when the North was grief-stricken over the sons who went to the South never to return, the wealthy class of New York, who had grown rich off the misfortunes of the nation, spent $3,000,000 on the theaters." That would be a fearful thing. How would it sound that the two richest nations on earth have, instead of sending out the two thousand young men who are ready to go through the gates opening into fields of usefulness as missionaries in foreign lands, have spent millions and tens of millions of dollars in seeing farces and tragedies based on such passions as love and hate? And yet such is the solemn fact with Great Britain and the United States. We give mites to Missions and waste millions on hurtful diversions.

Shall we ever succeed in arresting these evils? Yes. The Bible, in letter and spirit, is against the theater, and nothing shall stand against that Word. I believe that a millennium is coming when the power of Jesus Christ will be felt in every heart. But in that millennium the world will not listen to the rippling footfalls of the dancers or the tumultuous applause of play-goers. We shall go forward, not backward. I worship toward the rising sun. The theater-goers are in a losing cause. They will not succeed. The law of the survival of the fittest will not suffer them to succeed.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Woman's Missionary Societies, and other organizations are now spreading information that will broaden the horizon of the people, and cause them to regard such institutions with disgust and contempt.

If Methodism is going to compromise with these evils, its mission is to be renounced. It can no longer sincerely propose to "spread scriptural holiness over these lands." Then let us cure the schism which separated us from the English Church, and go back to that communion. We cannot go back! We must go forward. We must overcome these evils, coming out from the world and renouncing that conformity to its sinful customs which provokes the contempt of the sinners whom it courts, not to mention the indignation of the God it dishonors. May God help us to be faithful and true!

According to the terms of the will of the late Mrs. Dodd of Atlanta, Ga., Mercer University, of Macon, Ga., a Baptist institution, is to receive $100,000 as a student loan fund.

The latest religious census of Germany shows the Protestant population to be 39,991,411, or 61.59 per cent of the entire population, and the Roman Catholic population to be 23,821,453, or 36.69 per cent.

The pastors of the ten churches of Little Rock, Ark., will conduct a union revival campaign throughout the entire month of June. They have chosen Rev. Forney Hutchinson, the presiding elder of the Little Rock District, to lead the campaign.

After a spirited debate led by Dr. T. M. Lowrey of Memphis, Tenn., in favor of the Southern Presbyterian Church withdrawing from the Federal Council of Churches in America, the Assembly of that Church in session at Atlanta, Ga., on May 22 voted against the proposed withdrawal.

Dr. F. M. Thomas, of Memphis, Tenn., has been announced to deliver the Commencement sermon of Emory College on June 8. Dr. J. F. Prettyman, of Washington, D. C., will deliver the Literary Address on June 10. The students and patrons of old Emory have good things in store for them.

According to the Texas Christian Advocate, Bishop Collins Denny met with a painful accident while attending the meeting of the College of Bishops in Dallas recently. He slipped and fell while at the home of Rev. O. F. Sensabaugh, presiding elder of the Dallas District, and sustained a broken rib.

Dr. H. K. Boyer, D. D., Superintendent of the North Carolina Methodist Orphanage, was taken violently ill with appendicitis while attending the meetings of the General Boards in Dallas, Texas, recently and underwent an operation in a sanitarium there. We regret the illness of this worthy man, but are pleased to note that he is rapidly recovering.

An election was recently held in Guthrie, Okla., in order to allow the voters of the city to decide whether or not that commonwealth should give the grounds and buildings on Capitol Hill of that place to the Northern Methodists as a site for the Methodist University of Oklahoma. The election resulted favorably and that Church will soon receive a clear title to property valued at $399,447.83.

Miss Eva Olive Dutcher, of New York City, was graduated from the Union Theological Seminary of Schenectady, N. Y., being the only woman in her class to receive the degree of B. D. She has announced her intention not to attempt to enter the pulpit, but to use her knowledge as a teacher of the Bible in schools for girls. Her chosen field of labor is a large one, and we predict that she will accomplish greater results there than she would should she take to the pulpit.

The Northern Methodist Church will hold a convention to be known as the National Convention of Methodist Men in Indianapolis, Ind., from Oct. 28 to 31. The delegates are to be nominated by pastors and district superintendents, but the number of delegates are to be limited to 3000, of which number 1500 must be laymen and 1000 regular pastors. Already there have been more than 12,000 nominations made, from which number the 3000 will be selected.

The Southern Sunday School and Epworth League Conference will be held at Lake Junaluska, near Waynesville, N. C., from August 6 to 17. An attractive program has been arranged which includes lectures and sermons by such tried and faithful leaders as Bishops Atkins, Kilgo, Candler, Denny, and McCoy, and Drs. O. E. Brown, C. M. Bishop, H. M. DuBose, W. D. Weatherford, H. M. Hamill, T. N. Ivey, E. B. Chappell, and C. B. Bulla, President H. N. Snyder, Senator W. R. Webb, and Professors Julius Magath and Edwin Mims.

The Southern Baptist Church, which closed its annual gathering in St. Louis last week, made three important changes: (1) It decided to withdraw from all federation with other Churches in the foreign field, and hereafter conduct its foreign work independently of all other denominations. (2) It completed the movement begun in part some time ago to establish a strictly denominational Sunday school literature, and hereafter it will not be represented on the Committee that prepares the International Uniform Lesson Series. (3) In view of the importance of having trained men in the pulpit it decided to assume the entire expense of giving every candidate for the ministry in that Church a course in one of its theological seminaries.

REPORT OF BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE HOSPITAL COMMITTEE.

Dear Brethren: We, your Methodist Hospital Committee, submit the following report:

1. We desire to thank our Field Secretary for the impressive and deeply spiritual and practical message that he has brought to us, and in behalf of the Conference to pledge our hearty co-operation.

2. We recommend that the Brookhaven District accept its pro rata—which is $8,000—of the amount pledged to the Methodist Hospital by the Mississippi Conference.

3. We recommend that our presiding elder appoint a committee of one from each charge to raise the share of the several charges, the presiding elder to be Chairman of the committee and to make the apportionment of the $8,000 to the charges.

4. We further recommend the Sunday school plan suggested by the Field Secretary for collecting the amount that is to go to the erection of the Children's Annex of the Methodist Hospital.

(Signed) D. P. BUTLER, M. D., Chairman.
W. B. HOGG,
J. L. SMITH, Secretary.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL.

The Western Methodist has had little or nothing to say about this "pastor." We have regarded him as a mountebank, with a keen eye for money. We did not wish to advertise him. Considering him unworthy of notice, we have not taken the pains to hunt up his record. But it happens that the Religious Telescope, the official organ of the United Brethren Church, has hunted up his record, and we give it here for the benefit of any of our readers who may be pestered with "Russellism." The Religious Telescope gives us the following:

"We have little to say now regarding Pastor Russell's life. For five years he contested his wife's suit for separate maintenance, who was rewarded by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania with a decree in which these words were found: 'His course of conduct toward his wife evidences such insistent egotism and extravagant self-praise, that it would be manifest to the jury that his conduct toward her was one of continual arrogant domination that would necessarily render the life of any sensitive Christian woman a burden, and make her condition intolerable.'

"The Court of Common Pleas, to which Mrs. Russell appealed for alimony, denied Pastor Russell's plea that he was penniless. The Court heard evidence showing that he had transferred property worth $317,000 to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, of which he was the president. Referring to one transaction involving a sheriff's sale of property worth $20,000 for less than $200, the court said: 'The purpose of this whole transaction was to deprive the wife of her dower interest, and was a fraud on her.'

"In his trial the evidence produced against him in the alimony case was that he accumulated a fortune through stock speculation and donations from his followers, who were taught to believe that the millennium is due in October, 1914.

"Nor have we anything to say about the court testimony as to Pastor Russell's moral conduct, further than to reproduce a few words: 'I am like a jellyfish; I float around here and there; I touch this one and that one, and if she responds I take her to me, and if not, I float on to others.' These words appear as those of Pastor Russell to a stenographer, who confessed to his caresses and various other liberties which are not taken on proper moral grounds.

"But these things are most too suggestive to repeat. This is the man who arrogates to himself the privilege of explaining the Bible to us poor, unenlightened mortals. He it is who is telling men that they have other chances for heaven in the next world. He is the one who is preaching universal salvation, provided only men follow in the footsteps of his life and belief. There may be a reason for Pastor Russell's denying the existence of a hell. We do not want to buy wheat or the gospel at this counter."—Western Methodist.

A packet of about 500 love letters written by Robert and Elizabeth Brownling was recently sold at public auction in London, England, and brought the sum of $32,750. The first bid was $3000, but the bids mounted up rapidly.

Congressman James Thomas Heflin of Alabama recently took a straw vote of the members of the House of Representatives and found that sentiment there is 5 to 1 against woman suffrage, and that sentiment in the Senate also is strongly anti.

In memory of her husband who died of a disease that eluded all medical skill, Mrs. George William Hooper of San Francisco has transferred to the University of California $1,000,000 for the establishment of a department of medical research.

One of the results of the Panama Canal already manifest is an increased activity in the industry of ship building. The latest order for new ocean-going vessels was placed last week with an American concern by a Chilean corporation for six boats to run between New York and Valparaiso.

Mr. J. Jay Dugan, of Springfield, Ill., claims to have found records that show that John Wesley was made a Blue Lodge Mason on Oct. 13, 1788, by St. Patrick's Lodge No. 367, at Ponpatrick, Ireland. Mr. Dugan claims also that Charles Wesley was a member of the Masonic fraternity, but that he has been unable to learn just when or where he was made one.

On account of the wedding of Princess Louise, daughter of Emperor William of Germany, and Prince Ernest August of Cumberland on last Saturday, Berlin has been the scene of more royal visitors than has been on her streets at one time in many years. Among the monarchs of Europe present, besides the distinguished father, were the King of England and the Czar of Russia.

David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford, Jr., University since 1891, resigned on May 19 in order to accept the office of Chancellor of the same institution, to which office he was elected on May 23, the office having been created on that date by the Board of Trust of the University for his special benefit. His salary will be the same as heretofore. Prof. John Caspar Branner will become the new President.

The citizens of West Virginia will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the admission of that State into the Union during the week of June 15-21. More than $40,000 is to be spent by the State on the celebration, and it has been determined to make it distinctly educational and historical. Data concerning the growth of schools, agricultural and manufacturing industries, and transportation facilities is being gathered.

The Bureau of Social Hygiene of New York City, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is President, made public a report last week in which it was stated that there are 15,000 scarlet women plying their nefarious trade in Greater New York. The report stated that the dance hall justifies all that has been said against it, and out of seventy-five dances investigated in high and low society, only five were found to be decent. Those five were not named, so the public has the social dance at the odds of 14 to 1 against it.

Secretary of War Garrison recently issued an order prohibiting the sale of liquors in the Panama Canal Zone. There were 35 saloons there which brought an annual revenue of $43,800, but the Secretary considered the sobriety of the workmen on the Panama Canal of more importance than revenue. If no saloons are needed in Panama, where the government has large interests at stake, then are they needed at the doors of the Methodists of Louisiana who have everything they have in the world, including their sons and daughters, at stake?

After having been urged by representatives from Washington not to do so, the California Legislature enacted into law the Webb Anti Alien Land bill, and it was later signed by Governor Johnson. The Japanese Government very naturally resented the passage of the bill, for it most directly affected immigrants from that country. Last week President Wilson cabled the Japanese Government that the action of California was by no means representative of the feelings of the American people, who, on the contrary, hold the yellow men of Nippon in high esteem.

Italy has at last undergone an awakening of conscience and has made illegal the lottery. For many years the lottery has flourished in that country, until the government's income from lottery licenses amounted to almost half her total revenues. With one stroke this immense income has been cut off, and the Italian government will stand. The argument that a government can not exist without the license money from outlawed businesses is wrong. If the United States should wipe out the liquor business as Italy has the lottery, and China the opium curse, this nation would suffer comparatively little from the loss of revenue.

The following item appeared recently in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of Atlanta under the caption, "Hasn't Ruined Business Here":

"The prohibition law has not ruined business in Atlanta. In 1907 the building permits in the city were $4,554,771, in 1912 they were $9,978,444. In 1907 the property valuations amounted to $91,440,350; in 1912, the figures had gone to $154,827,487. In 1907 the arrests for drunkenness numbered 6,480; in 1912, 3,021. In 1907 the tax receipts were $1,234,660; in 1912 they had reached the huge sum of $2,059,787. Bank clearings also show a big gain. In 1907 these amounted to $254,945,800; in 1912 they had reached to $691,941,254. Two facts are demonstrated by these figures: (1) Prohibition does not increase drunkenness, and (2) prohibition does not ruin the business of even as big a city as is Atlanta."

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

Should a Baptist Wife Join the Church of a Methodist Husband, or a Methodist Wife Join the Church of a Baptist Husband?

The above question frequently arises and hence should be considered. Of course, it is known that each wife is at liberty to do as she chooses; but still another question arises and that one is, which wife by doing so will lose and which will gain? It is clear enough that a Baptist wife will most likely gain everything by joining the Church of her Methodist husband and the Methodist wife will most likely lose everything by joining the Church of her Baptist husband. If a Baptist wife joins the Methodist Church, she is recognized as coming from one branch of the Christian Church to another, and, too, her baptism is not changed. Hence, she does not lose her Church nor her baptism and, therefore, loses nothing. In the next place she gains; for she is allowed to eat the Lord's supper with all Christians; and again, that hustling doctrine is given her to keep hustling till she is in heaven. Thus, she will gain all the time, and finally when she reaches heaven will, as our Lord expresses it, "Inherit all things." (Rev. 21:7.)

Now what about the Methodist wife? It is this and nothing less: She will lose despite everything; and, if not very guarded, will lose heaven itself if she joins the Church of her Baptist husband. In the very act of joining the Baptist Church she not only loses inevitably her Church but her baptism also, even if she unfortunately has been immersed; for no one can immerse so satisfactorily to the Baptist Church as a Baptist preacher, and hence she must go under the water again however well satisfied she may be with the first immersion. She must believe that the Baptist Church is the only true Church of God that exists or ever existed, although it was never in existence until the beginning of the seventeenth century, and, too, in the face of its own teachings that there was a Church of God at least in Christ's day and of Christ's own words, when he said of his Church, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:18.)

The next loss she sustains is that of not being allowed her Methodist liberty of eating with all of God's people, for she must eat only with Baptists and not with only a certain class of them—"Us and our crowd only." Now just think of a liberal Methodist getting down on such a low, selfish plane as that after having lived on a high Methodist plane of unselfishness! The next loss a Methodist wife sustains when she joins the Church of a Baptist husband is that of giving up that Scriptural doctrine that one can lose her religion and in order not to lose it she must live right, and, too, that of subscribing to the doctrine that one cannot lose her religion after once getting it, whether she does any good at all or even lives right or not. Two evangelists of that Church declare that if one is saved he is so safe that if he should shoot the life out of any human being and die the next minute he would go right straight to heaven and live with God forever. Now just think of a Methodist giving up a doctrine that if she believes it, and lives it, she cannot miss heaven, for a doctrine the Devil himself was the first to preach, and by Adam and Eve's believing it and practicing it all the ills and woes of this life are on us! The Devil said to them: "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4), although God said they would die. It is a doctrine which is not only unscriptural but is the creation of old Satan, and is contradicted by every department of life's activities. It is a doctrine which if one believes and lives according to it she will surely and inevitably be lost forever.

Now what is the fair, unbiased and rational conclusion? It is this: a Methodist wife cannot join the Church of her Baptist husband without a loss, and without running a risk of losing heaven and everything; but a Baptist wife will gain by joining the Church of her Methodist husband. If she will live faithfully its doctrines to the close of her earthly life, she will be sure to gain heaven, and "all things." Not only is it true that a Methodist cannot join the Baptist Church without loss, but a Methodist cannot join any other branch of the Church of God without losing; and yet one of any other branch of his great Church will gain by joining the Methodist Church. If any one can show me that I am not correct I shall be quite thankful to him, for I would be untrue and dishonest to simply believe a thing because I was taught it, or because some one believed it that I am specially fond of, or believe it because I just simply like it and it suits me.

HOW TO HAVE A REVIVAL.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

II.

Now, having these three essentials of a revival—God, the source of power, the man through whom that power can be poured into the world, and the proper message—the next and only sensible thing to do is to meet the conditions of a revival. It may appear to some that I am excluding God, but I am going to say that I believe in the reign and sure operation of law in the realm of the spiritual as well as in the physical world. Dr. Drummond has indicated the projection and application of the laws of nature into the unseen world. Whether we accept or reject the teachings of Dr. Drummond, it is true that just as we meet physical conditions to produce physical results, so must we meet spiritual conditions to produce spiritual results—that is, a revival. But are there revival conditions? Yes, and ignoring these conditions, or refusing to search for them, is the reason that some ministers do not seem to know how to hold a revival. But who made these conditions, and where may they be found? God prescribed them, and they may be found in the Bible, the source of all authority for the minister of the gospel.

If you will refer to 2 Chron., 15th Chapter, you will find a large number of these divinely prescribed conditions, and if you will look deeper into the word of God, I am sure you will find more. The only way to learn how to have a revival is to study the conditions of a revival, for the same conditions—not methods, mark you—that produce one revival will, as sure as the operation of spiritual laws is certain, produce another. So, then, let us briefly study the conditions as we find them in the 15th Chapter of 2 Chron., keeping in mind the fact that we have here the account of one of the most remarkable revivals recorded in history. For lack of space, I can do but little more than point out the conditions as I find them recorded:

1. The casting out of idols. When King Asa heard the words of Oded, the prophet, "He took courage, and put away the abominable idols." Remembering that any thing we love more than we love God is an idol, you will understand that we, too, must put away the idols; for are there not a thousand things that we love more than God? Take, for instance, the item of dress. But let me walk "softly" here. No, that will not do, for too many of us who are preachers have walked "softly" too long already. Dress, dress, dress! Many men and women stay away from the house of God because they can not array themselves in "fine linen" as others do. I have known women to remain away from church on Easter Sunday because they did not have a new spring hat. There is a rule in our Book of Discipline which admonishes Methodist people against "the putting on of gold and costly apparel." The idol of dress, and all else that we love more than God must go, if we are to expect a general revival.

2. Paying God what we owe. Read 2 Chron. 15:11. The Jews gave one-tenth into the treasury of the Church and Christians can not afford to do less. Indeed, we ought to do more than the Jew, but one-tenth is the minimum. The Methodist Church has become a Church of great wealth; if we would pay God what we owe we could not only endow our institutions and maintain our present mission work, but we could enlarge all the present enterprises of the Church and start new ones. The trouble is we are withholding from God that which belongs to him, and while we do so we need not expect the revival for which we have been praying. This kind of talk may have a metallic sound to some ears; but if we really want the revival of which we have been talking so long, we might as well go to the root of the matter and find out why we have not already had it. If we believe the Bible to be the word of God—I am now getting down to bed-rock—read Malachi 3:10. Our withholding from God is one of the fundamental reasons that the Church is to-day suffering from a spiritual drought, and if we are not going to pay God what we owe him we might as well quit talking about having a revival.

3. Consecration. This is an essential of a true revival of religion too well known for me to enlarge upon it.

4. There must be a covenant among us to seek God. When King Asa had succeeded in arousing the people of his kingdom to a realization of their condition, they came together and "they entered into a covenant to seek the Lord God of their fathers with all their heart and with all their soul." The record says, "And he was found of them." So shall he be found of us, when we seek him as they sought him—with the whole heart.

5. There must be personal work. I find no record of God's having saved any one except through human agency. The Bible is full of examples of men who allowed God to use them in saving others. One of the apostles brought his brother to Jesus. Four men brought a man sick of the palsy, and when they found the press about the door too much for them, they climbed up outside, tore up the roof, and let him down at the feet of Jesus. But why multiply instances? Has not our own experience taught us that personal evangelism is one of the greatest forces in the world for bringing men into the kingdom of God?

6. Burden of soul. The attitude of the minds of men toward sin has undergone a change and sin is regarded as a mistake which may gradually be eliminated by a process of culture and education. Men no longer realize the awfulness of sin. The thought of Christians has been influenced by this modern attitude toward sin, and so they are no longer burdened for the lost. Even Christian parents look with complacency on their children if they live morally and keep out of trouble—just so they are decent and respectable. They forget that they are lost without God. We need to feel the burden of souls. This was the burden on St. Paul's heart when he said, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." Moses felt this burden when he fell on his face before God and cried, "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin! Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin;—and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book." The whole Church needs to be burdened for the lost, if she would rejoice over the birth of new-born souls at her altars. "When Zion travaileth, she bringeth forth sons and daughters."

7. As we study this revival recorded in 2 Chron., 15th Chapter, we find the statement that "all Judah rejoiced." Here is an indication that one condition of a revival is the free play of the emotions. The cold, stately, intellectualism of the present day has crushed out the emotional side of our natures which is the best part of us. It has come to pass that men are ashamed to cry and women look out of the church window to hide their falling tears; and no longer is the shout of victory heard in the camp of Israel. Sometime since, I saw the statement that the purpose of "The Men and Religion Movement" was to make its appeal to the intellects of men rather than to their emotions. If that statement was true, that movement is foredoomed to failure as a revival factor. A logical appeal to the reason may convince the intellect, but if the will of man is to be moved to action in the acceptance of Jesus Christ, the appeal must, at last, be made to his emotions. Deny it who may, this is a fundamental law of psychology. The way of approach to men is through the open door of their emotions—miss that, and you lose the way. Call it "excitement" or "emotionalism, if you will, but here is the open portal through which God passes into the realm of man's inner life. To this door of entrance through man's emotional nature, our Lord referred when he said: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock."

Now, of course, there are other conditions, such as prayer, repentance, faith in God, etc., which must be met, if we would have a revival. I have pointed out a few which, perhaps, have been to some extent overlooked. The point upon which I want to place the emphasis is the fact that we must meet conditions as God has laid them down in his Word, if we would have a revival. I know this plan may and will cost us something—it will cost some men much—; but, if we are not willing to pay the cost, God will not send the revival, for he is a God of conditions. We hear much of revival "methods," but I have said nothing here of methods because there are no methods—nothing but conditions. The Lord help the Church and the ministry to meet the divinely prescribed conditions, so that it may happen unto us as it happened to King Asa when the revival swept over his kingdom: "They fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the Lord his God was with him."

THE GREAT MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

I desire at this time to call the attention of the preachers and laymen of the Louisiana Conference to the great Missionary Conference to be held at the Southern Assembly Grounds near Waynesville, N. C., June 25 to 29. Many will remember that the great conference held in New Orleans twelve years ago marked a new era in the missionary work of our Church, and led the way to the projecting of new enterprises and the inspiring of a new missionary spirit in the Church. With remarkable unanimity our Board of Missions, our Bishops, and the leaders of the laymen's movement have agreed that the time has come for a similar gathering which shall register the high water mark of our missionary zeal, and combine the forces generated by the New Orleans Conference and the great Laymen's Conference at Chattanooga. To this end, a great program has been prepared and every condition and preparation is being provided for an event that will undoubtedly awaken our Church to a new vision of the tremendous possibilities of the present missionary situation and of our responsibilities as a Church. I am anxious that our own Conference shall share to the fullest measure in the blessings of this great Conference, and therefore take the liberty of urging a large attendance from Louisiana. Many of our people take summer trips, and there is no more inviting place to spend a part of the hot season than the Assembly Grounds, where this Conference is to be held. Certainly it will be an inspiration to any preacher or layman to take advantage of this unusual opportunity. The entire trip can be made from New Orleans or any part of Louisiana for $40 or $50, including board. Fraternally,

THE POWER OF LITTLE THINGS.

"When every little hand
Helps sow the Gospel seed,
And every little heart
Doth pray for those in need,
When every little life
Such fair, bright record shows,
Then shall the desert bud
And blossom as the rose."
(Southern Churchman.)

WHAT THE SIGN MEANT TO BENNY.

Benny is a little lame boy, the only son of his mother, and she a poor widow. He had never been out of the city, and his knowledge of grass was limited to the fine lawns with their sign. "Keep off the grass." One morning last June his mother took him for the first time to the great park on the outskirts of the city.

The wide stretch of meadow, with the signs "Common" on its border, caught his eye at once, and, clutching his mother's gown, and bobbing on as fast as he could, he cried: "O, hurry, hurry, mamma! It don't say, 'Keep off the grass!' here; it says, 'Come on!'"—Exchange.

TICKETY TOCK.

Once on a time there was a clock that stood upon the mantel piece in the dining-room of a little boy's home, ticking merrily night and day, "Tickety, tickety, tock."

It told the little boy's father when to go to work, and it told the little boy's mother when to get the dinner, and sometimes talked to the little boy himself. "Go to bed, sleepy head," that is what it seemed to say at bedtime.

The little boy's mother always knew just what it meant by its tickety-tock, and, late one afternoon, when he was playing with his toys, she said:

"Listen, dear, the clock has something to tell you:

"Tickety, tickety, tock," it is saying:
Tickety, tock, it is time to stop playing,
Somebody's coming, so loving and dear,
You must be ready to welcome him here."

Then the little boy jumped up in a hurry and put his hobby-horse in the corner, and his bricks in the cupboard, and his tin soldiers in a straight row on the shelf.

"Now I'm ready," he said, "but—"

"Tickety, tickety, tock,
Time to tidy yourself," said the clock.

"Oh!" said the little boy, when his mother told him this; but he stood very still while she washed his hands and his rosy face and brushed his curls till they were smooth and shining.

"Now I'm ready," he said; and—do you believe it?—the very next minute the door opened and in walked the little boy's father.

"I knew you were coming," said the little boy, "and so did mother. The little clock told us."—Selected.

THE NICEST PLACE IN THE WORLD.

The sun was shining down through the trees on Little Brother Rabbit and Grandma Badger. She was telling him a story; it was all about the Nicest Place in the World. Pretty soon Grandma Badger's head began to nod, and it nodded and nodded and nodded until it nodded itself right into Sleepy Land. Then Little Brother Rabbit got up and stretched himself; then he hopped off, looking very busy. Pretty soon, whom should he meet but Friend 'Possum, who said to him: "Where are you going, Little Brother Rabbit?"

"I'm going to look for the Nicest Place in the World," said he.

"Isn't that a long way off?" said Friend 'Possum.

"I don't care," said Little Brother Rabbit.
"Well, then, neither do I," said Friend 'Possum;
"I'm going, too."

So they hopped along and they ran along until they met Neighbor Bluebird, who said: "Where are you going, Friend 'Possum?"

"I'm going with Little Brother Rabbit."

"Where are you going, Little Brother Rabbit?"

"I'm going to find the Nicest Place in the World."

"Isn't that a long way off?" said Neighbor Bluebird.

"I don't care," said Little Brother Rabbit.

"Nor I," said Friend 'Possum.

"Well, then neither do I," said Neighbor Bluebird; "I'm going, too."

So they hopped along and they ran along and they flew along until they came to the great big black cave where Grandpa Bear lives. He was sitting outside, enjoying the warm sun and the smell of the pine trees.

"Where are you going, children?" said Grandpa Bear in his kindly way.

"I'm going with Friend 'Possum," said Neighbor Bluebird.

"Where are you going, Friend 'Possum?"

"I'm going with Little Brother Rabbit."

"Where are you going, little Brother Rabbit?"

"I'm going to find the Nicest Place in the World," said Little Brother Rabbit. "They say it is very far off. Do you know where it is?"

Grandpa Bear looked at the sky and saw that the sun was setting. Then he looked at the ground and saw that the shadows were growing longer. Then he sniffed the air and smelled the night coming along, so he said: "Indeed I do, and it isn't far at all. You must walk to the big oak tree on the edge of the pond. Then walk to the little pine tree at the beginning of the road. Then walk to the middle-sized maple tree at the foot of the hill, turn to your right, and you'll walk directly into the Nicest Place in the World."

So they hopped along and they ran along and they flew along until they came to the big oak tree. And they hopped along and they ran along and they flew along until they came to the little pine tree. And they hopped along and they ran along and they flew along until they came to the middle-sized maple tree. Then they turned to the right, and where do you think they were? Right in front of their own house.

Then Neighbor Bluebird looked at Friend 'Possum and laughed, and Friend 'Possum looked at Little Brother Rabbit and laughed, and Little Brother Rabbit looked at them both and laughed. Then he said: "Didn't Grandpa Bear know, though? Home is the nicest place in the world."

GOD IS LOVE.

The apostle in 1 John 4:8 says, "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." And in the 16th verse he says, "And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him." When we have "the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us," we not only love God but we love everybody, and while we hate sin, we love the sinner and have no ill will toward any one; for when God gives us love, he also gives us compassion and a kindly spirit for the erring. Mr. Moody said in his sermon on "The Love of God surpassing knowledge:" "We built a Church in Chicago some years ago; and were very anxious to teach the people the love of God. We thought if we could not preach it into their hearts, we would try and burn it in; so we put right over the pulpit in gas jets, these words, 'God is Love.' A man going along the street one night glanced through the door and saw the text. He was a poor prodigal. As he passed on, he thought to himself, 'God is Love! No! He does not love me, for I am a poor miserable sinner.' He tried to get rid of the text, but it seemed to stand out right before him in letters of fire. He went on a little, then turned around, went back and went into the meeting. He did not hear the sermon, but the words of that short text had got deeply lodged in his heart and that was enough." He went away rejoicing.

Men often get the idea that God hates them because they have sinned and wandered away from him. God hates sin, but loves the sinner. If the prodigal son had not known that his father still loved him, he would never have returned to him. It is when the sinner learns something of the love of God for him as it is revealed in Christ, that his heart is all broken up and he is able to "repent and believe the gospel." The nearer the Christian gets to the end of his journey in this life, the more does he realize that God is love. Hence we have the testimony of dying Christians who exclaimed with their latest breath, "God is Love." The sainted John Fletcher, when about to pass away, said, addressing his wife: "O Polly, my dear Polly, God is Love!" John Wesley, just before he breathed his last, said, "The best of all is, God is with us." He then gave instructions that his sermon on "The Love of God to fallen men" be scattered abroad and given to everybody.

"Beyond this vale of tears
There is a life above,
Unmeasured by the flight of years,
And all that life is love."

CHURCH EXTENSION MAPS.

By Rev. George C. Rankin, D. D., Editor Texas Christian Advocate.

The Board of Church Extension has a series of maps indicating the extent of its work and it will send these to any pastor for the asking. They ought to be hanging up in every church in full view of all our people. It will astonish them to see at a glance the results of Church Extension operations throughout the Connection. We often turn to ours and gaze upon its figures with astonishment and admiration. Then, let all our pastors accentuate the importance of our Church Extension Board and its work when they stand before their several congregations. It will add fifty-fold to the enlargement and efficiency of this wonderful branch of church enterprise.

THE MYSTERY OF GODLINESS.

There is one thing that always interests every one, and that is a mystery. The thing we can't understand often grips us and makes us slaves to its hidden secret. There is an element of mystery about all religions, and to some there is nothing but mystery. A man will not worship a thing that he fully understands, nor hold an act as divine which is within the possibility of human strength. The heathen clings to his idol, not because he has faith in it, but because he has a superstitious fear that it possesses some strange power to harm him if he does not worship it. There is an element of mystery about Christianity. You may call it superstition if you please, but there are few of us who have not some fear that if we do not obey the teachings of Christianity we will be sufferers. Paul says, "Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness." We have some superstitions—every one of us; but if our religious life is prompted by our fears we are resting our hopes on an uncertain basis.

There are some things about Christianity that we may know: (1) We may know that our sins have been forgiven. (2) We may be certain that we are living righteous lives, for God has given us a thermometer called conscience, which, when properly taught, is a perfect balance that rightly weighs truth against error. (3) We must know the instability of this world, for indeed, it is evident that nothing in this world is permanent. Knowledge vanishes away; tongues cease; life itself is held by a tiny thread that may be snapped any minute; mountains tremble; cities are swallowed up; nations rise but to fall again, and we look with fear to the point where time shall cease and this world shall pass away. (4) We may know that God is with us in sufficient power for every difficulty; for we have his promises, and those of us who have tested them know that he is able to perform that which he has promised to do.

What then is the mystery of godliness? It is not in some magic effect upon us while receiving the sacraments. It is not in the the priestly powers of the clergy, for there is but one mediator between God and man—Jesus Christ—and we know whatever the powers of the clergy may be they can not stand between us and God. It is not in church government, although men have almost fought over questions of polity. It is not in creed, for the minds of men are ever learning and then unlearning so-called important truths concerning Christianity.

What then is the mystery of godliness? There are two important things that we are taught about Christ that we cannot fully understand. We may have theories and be satisfied with them, but we can not say that we actually know the mystery of these two things. First, we can not give a satisfactory explanation as to how Christ, who was with God before the foundation of the world, became the babe of Bethlehem. We talk about the immaculate conception, and some would-be wise critics tell us that there is not sufficient proof to warrant a belief in it; but it is one of the plain teachings of the Christian religion; and while you and I can not comprehend this mystery, we are asked to believe it without understanding it.

The second mystery of Christianity is the resurrection. "Behold, I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed." We are told that Christ rose from the dead. We believe it; but no man on earth can explain how he was raised up, or how he was able to leave this world for his heavenly throne. "If Christ be not risen from the dead, then is your faith in vain." Absolutely essential to the salvation of every soul is a firm faith in the Sonship of Jesus and in his resurrection from the dead. These two essentials of every creed are two of the most inexplicable points in Christian doctrine.

TREASURES.

What a magic word! The field is so suggestive. Think of the great fortunes put by through industry and thrift, through co-operation and accumulation, that give privileges unusual to those who are the recipients; they command the comforts, luxuries, and fineries that constitute material treasures; they give "purple and fine linen," gold and silver for use and to beautify, and jewels from earth's Golcondas to ornament and please. Think of the courts of rulers, even like those which were of the third Napoleon or of the English Elizabeth, where the grandees of earth gather in brilliant companies. Think of the estates with their palaces, like that of Fontainebleau where the kings of France were sheltered for eight centuries; its marble halls, its upholstered furnishings, its great rooms with tapestries and paintings, its grounds and gardens of flowers and shrubbery, of patterned walks with fountains and cataracts in between. There is such a world of treasures in the developments of commercial and economic affairs; business houses filled with things valuable, ships with their costly cargoes, banks with their millions of money. Thoughts of all these things held so dear rush through the mind when one thinks of treasures. They seem to shape largely the wishes and acts of people. The social gamut seems to depend so largely in its supposed awards upon the possession or non-possession of these treasures.

And he who built the heavens and set their jewels doubtlessly had a great purpose in the richness with which he adorned the earth. These treasures have their significance and worth. Purpose is written all over the face of creation. One can hardly despise the good things put here for man's use and pleasure. Yet their use is not to be perverted. Midas obtained his wish that everything he touched should turn to gold, but in the end it proved his discomforture. The food he ate hardened into gold in his mouth. It starved his physical being. This fabulous story tells a truth in that treasures may choke the life in its richest benefits.

These treasures are not in possession of all people, neither are their usages perverted by all who do possess them, but there are many who take them as the end of life, and even numbers who do not realize them in actual material matter, dream of their possessing them with the same detriment, or even worse, as actual possession often works. There comes to mind the story of the prince who selected from three sisters the youngest as a wife because she dressed poorly in comparison to the other two sisters and he thought her economical, but after the marriage he learned that she was the most extravagant of all and her former appearance had been necessarily poor because of deprivation.

"Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven," are words uttered by Christ. The very perfection of the plan of God in the richness with which he has adorned earth would be perverted by some and used as the end of things within itself. It is often hard to believe that there is something greater than the greatness of temporal affairs. The dazzling glory of earth is taken to be the end to be sought. Men become so engrossed; business is business, life is life, reality is here and now; the past is soon forgotten and the future is out of mind. But it is not all of life to live, neither is it all of death to die. One must force themselves, wrench loose the tentacles of the mind, from earthly treasures long enough to view the treasures of another world. Then the trouble should be over. If the material treasures of the ephemeral present are so valuable, what a wealth untold must be the treasures beyond.

These temporal treasures are not worth the price of life and death. Let one not be so blind as to value their lives by the possession of these perishing things. Are men born in pain and misery and woe merely for a day of temporal success, then die and never be heard of more? Such is the doctrine, practically, of the materialist. But what a world is indicated beyond all these things. There are the real treasures. This heaven where one is advised to lay up his treasures is spoken of in a concrete way over against the earth with its earthly treasures. But when Christ said, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also," he brought heaven into a definite and continued existence, as well, within the hearts of men. The outward treasures are but stepping stones for the attainment of the inward treasures everlasting.

Goodness, positive righteousness, holiness, set in the truth of Christ's teachings, to be borne by his messengers to all men, are treasures excelling. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." And it is through the spiritual ends of creation that one is able to appreciate the plans and purposes of God. Otherwise, even the earthly treasures turn to leaves. All cannot have earthly treasures, but they can lay up treasures in heaven. Lazarus was far richer than Dives. In the face of the day of reckoning, it is hard to see the sanity of living in the mere enjoyment of earthly treasures. Gold will melt, diamonds will return to the dust of carbon, mansions will decay, ships will rot, but treasures in heaven are intact and eternal.

So much depends upon how this life is lived. It should be a preparation, a laying up of treasures, for the life to come. The ultimate satisfaction will be realized when one hears the words: "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many." It is the end in view that characterizes the whole of life. It is according to where the treasures are laid up. So often one hears the cry that people are put in this natural world to be natural, to enjoy life, to live while they live. These are fine words, but they must not be taken as a license for investing all one has in just temporal treasures. One of the great facts about the laying up of spiritual treasures is that it enhances the value of the treasures of earth. It builds character, creates strength, makes conquerors, in the realm of the practical. The stronger the men, and the greater, the more valuable even will their temporal treasures be in that they are used properly. It will take more than pearly gates and streets of gold to build a heaven. There must be that ineffable spirit world where heaven actually exists in eternal treasures of righteous and holy characters.

The greatest treasures even on earth, then, are beyond the temporal and perishable. The end of all things is a preparation for a life to come. In this fulfilment one finds the proper relation with earthly treasures. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." C. A. B.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. G. Shankle delivered the Commencement Sermon for the Minden (La.) High School in our church at that place, of which he is the pastor. There were eleven graduates, and, according to the press dispatches from there, Brother Shankle delivered an able sermon.

The Lafayette District Conference closed a most profitable session at New Iberia last week. The lay delegates elected to the Annual Conference were Messrs. V. Mitchelltree of Jennings, J. H.

Williams of Henry, Joseph Morgan of Indian Bayou, and A. P. Holt of Crowley.

We acknowledge the receipt of an attractive invitation to attend the Commencement exercises of the Mansfield Female College at Mansfield, La., on June 3.

Rev. J. D. Simpson is engaged in revival services at Pickets, Miss. He is being assisted by Dr. H. G. Henderson of Lexington, and a good meeting is expected.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, delivered the Commencement address at the closing exercises of the Mount Olive (Miss.) High School last Monday.

An account of the Winona District Conference, written by Mr. J. R. Bingham, appears in another column of this issue of the Advocate. This makes thirteen years in succession that Brother Bingham has acted as Secretary of the Winona District.

The New Orleans District Sunday School Association, which has not accomplished all that it had been desired that it should accomplish, was reorganized last week. Rev. C. A. Battle was elected President, and Rev. W. L. Doss, Vice President.

Rev. J. E. Gault, our pastor at Calhoun City, Miss., delivered the Commencement sermon for the Pittsboro High School last Sunday. Of his sermon, the Jackson Daily News says, "He interested and edified his audience with the subject, 'Placing the Affections High.'"

The revival meeting which was to have been held in the Algiers Church of New Orleans by Rev. D. A. Morris, has been postponed until later in the year. In the meantime the Algiers congregation will devote its energies toward the raising of funds for the building of a new church.

Rev. Mr. Klein, an evangelist of accredited ability, will begin a revival meeting at Como, Miss., next Sunday. The meeting will continue for two weeks, after which, on the third Sunday of June, he will assist Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the pastor, in a revival at Sardis.

Rev. A. M. Bennett, of Pleasant Hill, Miss., sent in another list of renewals this week. He reports that he has secured the renewals of every old subscriber to the Advocate on his charge except two, and that there are prospects of securing these two, together with some other new ones, in the near future.

A donation party has been planned by the members of our church on the Hesterville (Miss.) charge to be given June 14 for the purpose of furnishing the parsonage at that place. The new parsonage is a handsome cottage, and the pastor, Rev. T. S. Houston, is to be congratulated on his success in bringing it to completion.

Rev. I. L. Peebles and Rev. O. C. Seevers, of Meridian, are assisting Rev. L. E. Whit in a revival meeting at Leakesville, Miss. According to the Leakesville paper, large crowds are in attendance and both Brother Peebles and Brother Seevers are giving eminent satisfaction in presenting the gospel in sermon and in song.

With the opening of the immigrant station in New Orleans, our Church faces a new task—that of aiding in caring for the thousands of foreigners who will annually pass through this port in search of homes. Dr. J. M. Henry has appointed Rev. A. J. Gearheard to take charge of this work temporarily, and to arrange for a Methodist Desk in the station.

Rev. Wiley Ferguson is conducting a revival meeting at Philadelphia, Miss., where he is the popular pastor. He is being assisted by Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Fernwood. On last Sunday Brother Ferguson filled the pulpit at Fernwood, and, according to a press dispatch from that place to the Picayune, delivered a practical and spiritual sermon.

"We are moving along very well on the Dumas (Miss.) charge; our Sunday schools are doing good work, and we are praying and working for great revival meetings this year." Thus writes Rev. J. D. Boggs, the earnest pastor of the Dumas Circuit. Brother Boggs also enclosed a subscription to the Advocate and said some nice things about the paper, all of which we appreciate.

We received a letter containing an interesting account of a revival meeting which was held at Kentwood, La., recently, written by Rev. R. S. Waiton, the pastor. The letter was followed up at once by a nice list of subscriptions to the Advocate. A successful revival meeting invariably results in an increase in the number taking the Advocate, if that cause is properly presented.

Rev. Ira B. Robertson of McNair, Miss., an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, was a caller at this office this week. He is in New Orleans visiting his daughter, Mrs. E. A. Bladwin. While at this office Brother Robertson was accompanied by his granddaughter, Mrs. J. A. Davilla, and his great grandson, Master John Edward Davilla, both of whom live in this city.

Rev. P. H. Howse, the pastor, recently held a successful meeting at one of his appointments on the Seminary Circuit, Mississippi Conference, in which he had the assistance of Rev. G. W. Huff. There were seven accessions to the Church and the congregation was greatly uplifted. Brother Howse reports that during this fine weather everything is moving along smoothly at every point on the Seminary charge.

Rev. W. A. Terry, our pastor at Madison, Miss., reports that his people are taking good care of him and that his church is making progress along all lines. We are not surprised. Brother Terry has a way of doing the work of a pastor in such a manner as to merit being well cared for. His letter contained the names of eight new subscribers and two renewals for our subscription files, for which we are thankful.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Missionary, was in New Orleans last Thursday to attend the meeting of the New Orleans District Sunday School Association which met at Felicity Street Church. He made the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday morning before leaving the city, and reported that the Conference Sunday school interests are in better shape now than they have been for many months.

Rev. A. I. Townsley, the active pastor of the Rayville (La.) charge, was a welcome visitor at our sanctum last Saturday. He was returning home from Baton Rouge, where he had been engaged in a revival meeting at Second Church. Brother Townsley reports that Methodism is looking up in his section of the State, and in spite of floods and other calamities, the interests of the Church are not being neglected.

We are in receipt of a handsome announcement of the marriage on last Thursday in Winona, Miss., of Dr. Marcus Lafayette Berry and Miss Annie McGilvary Bradley. Miss Bradley is the charming daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Bradley, who live at Winona. The Advocate extends heartiest congratulations, and wishes for the happy couple a long and prosperous life. May their pathway be strewn with many blessings and perfumed with many good deeds done.

A series of Sunday school Institutes are to be held in the Mississippi Conference under the auspices of the Conference Sunday School Board, of which Rev. B. F. Lewis is the efficient President. The Institutes will be held in Bond, Shubuta, Montrose, Prentiss, Crystal Springs, and Canton, and the program arranged for each place includes addresses by Mr. E. E. French of Nashville, Mr. R. A. Maddox, Mrs. G. D. Cameron, Miss Daisy Magee, and Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The reports from Brookhaven, Miss., are all favorable concerning the Commencement exercises of Whitworth College. The sermon on Sunday, May 17, by Dr. H. M. DuBose, of Atlanta, Ga., was especially commended. The Lincoln County Times, in commenting on Dr. DuBose's sermon, says: "Dr. DuBose held his great audience spell-bound with his skillful word painting, rich in imagery, illustration, and eloquence, and filled, withal, with spiritual earnestness."

Brother D. V. Portis of Wahalak, Miss., has never been quite convinced that the Advocate is a $1.50 paper, so he insists on sending $2 with which to pay his subscription. We have in hand a letter from him remitting the above amount for his renewal and also heartily commending the attitude of this paper on worldly amusements and standard Methodist doctrines. Brother Portis is an old-time Methodist—the kind that never needs straightening out in theology or practices.

"The work is moving on smoothly here, congregations are good, and we have the best Sunday school in the history of this church," writes Rev. G. A. Guice of Poplarville, Miss. But his letter was not merely an encouraging report of his work: it contained evidence that his report was a correct one, for there was inclosed a check to pay for a handsome list of subscribers. There is nothing that is quite so convincing to the Publisher that a work is prospering as a big list of subscribers.

We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. George L. Harrell, of Millsaps College, requesting us to announce that the Alumni of Millsaps College will give their annual banquet in the Royal Hotel in Jackson on Monday, June 9, at 10 o'clock p.m. Mr. Harrell is specially anxious that all the alumni of Millsaps be present, if possible. A delightful program has been arranged for the evening hour of June 9, and every arrangement has been completed to arouse a deeper interest among former students in their alma mater.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon has just closed a ten-day meeting at Coral, Miss., where he helped the pastor, Rev. L. E. Alford. The results of the meeting were several conversions and accessions to the Church and the raising of sufficient funds to assure the erection of a new church building at once. Brother Whiddon also preached the Commencement sermon at Sumrall for the Sumrall High School. He has a large tent and is specially anxious to hold meetings in places where new churches are needed, or where there are no church buildings.

According to a report in the Lexington (Miss.)

Advertiser, Dr. R. G. Henderson preached an effective sermon in his pulpit at that place last Sunday on the subject, "The Reward of Devotional Giving." Immediately after the sermon a collection was taken amounting to more than $2000 for the purpose of improving the church property. Dr. Henderson is following up the Sunday's collection with a personal campaign with the hope of increasing the amount to $2500. We have not been apprised of the nature of the improvements that are planned to be made.

Rev. W. D. Bass of Corinth, Miss., recently returned from Fulton, Ky., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. A. J. Meaders, in a revival meeting. The results of the meeting were a large number of conversions, both young people and heads of families; 44 additions to the Church, and 13 infants baptized. Brother Meaders has been for the past 19 years the Secretary of his Conference. Brother Bass reports that he has some spare time which he would most gladly give to the brethren desiring his assistance in revival meetings.

According to reports from Baton Rouge, Dr. F. N. Parker, who is now a professor in Trinity College, Durham, N.C., will return to this State for the summer. The Louisiana Conference has not a man in it who is more popular than Dr. Frank, and the general feeling is that the home Conference is being the loser every day that he spends outside the State. While there is no doubt that North Carolina appreciates an able Bible teacher, and would gladly keep Dr. Parker indefinitely, there is some prospect, according to reports, of Louisiana retaining his services at home in the future.

In a personal letter from Rev. J. B. Andrews from Meridian, Miss., where he is aiding Rev. J. R. Jones in a revival meeting at Central Church, he says: "Our work here is prospering. There were about 20 at the altar last night, and we had an old fashioned shout in the camp." The letter was dated, May 20. Brother Andrews is from Siloam Springs, Ark., and is considered one of the most effective evangelists in our Church. His position on the essential doctrines of Methodism is strictly in harmony with the old-time Wesleyan Standards, and he is satisfied with the Methodist way of doing things.

The second quarterly conference of all the churches of New Orleans was held at one time last Monday evening in the First Methodist Church. After the regular questions were asked, the official members of the several charges resolved themselves into one body for the discussion of plans for the future interest of Methodism in the Crescent City. Sunday school problems were discussed; mention of this year being the centennial of Methodism in Louisiana was made, and steps were taken looking forward to the organizing of a City Church Extension Society. The consolidated quarterly conference was highly satisfactory to all present.

In a letter from Rev. W. V. Dodds we gather the following interesting news items concerning his charge—Houlka, Miss.: His work is moving forward along all lines; the people of Van Fleet, where our church building was completely destroyed by a storm some time since, are planning to rebuild; Mr. B. G. Wells, of Ecru, Miss., a house wrecker, for the consideration of $110 put the church building in Houlka in practically perfect condition, in spite of the fact that it was so badly twisted by the recent storm that it was generally thought that it would be necessary to demolish it and rebuild from the foundation. Brother Dodds is delighted with the work done by Mr. Wells and recommends him to the brethren who may in the future need his services.

Obituaries.

Mrs. VIRGINIA H. VAIDEN died at her home six miles south of Pleasant Hill, Miss., on May 12. She was 78 years of age and had been ill for several weeks. Since quite a young woman she had been a member of the Christian Church and tried to live up to its highest standards of Christianity. A full consciousness of spirit-life filled her last hours. "Death is only a dream," she said, and asked that the song of that name be sung at her funeral. She leaves many children and grandchildren to mourn her death. She awaits them in the world eternal. Many of her descendants are helpful members of our Church.
 A. M. BENNETT.

Judge ALBERT G. NORRELL was born in Rankin County, Miss., Dec. 18, 1845, and departed this life May 2, 1913. Several years ago Judge Norrell had a stroke of paralysis and thinking that his health might be benefited by spending a while on the coast, he, a few weeks before his decease, went to Biloxi and entered a sanitarium, where he died. Judge Norrell served in the Civil War under General Forest, joining the army when a boy. After the war he became a lawyer and at different times represented Rankin and Yazoo Counties in the Legislature of Mississippi. He also served as a Commissioner for 16 years, and was the first Federal Judge in Utah. It was an inspiration and a pleasure to be associated with this man of God. He was faithful to his Church, attending her services when others would have found an excuse to remain away. We shall miss his shining face, his hearty amens and his earnest prayers. A great statesman, a good citizen, and a devout Christian has gone to his everlasting reward. May God comfort and richly bless all who are bereaved.
 R. E. RUTLEDGE.

N. L. BALL was born in Pike County, Miss., January 17, 1837, and during early manhood joined the M. E. Church, South, and remained a loyal member of the same up to his death. He served in the Civil war with honor and fidelity to his commonwealth. During his residence in Marion County he served sixteen years on the Board of Supervisors, being a valuable asset to that body. On Dec. 24, 1859, he was married to Miss Cynthia Bracy. To them were born eleven children, nine of whom and their mother survive him. March 24, 1913, at 5 a. m. he died at his home three miles south of Columbia after an illness of several weeks. All medical skill and attention of loved ones could not stay the command of our Heavenly Father. His spirit finally sought its eternal home surrounded by loving relatives and friends. Brother Ball was devoted to his family. As a citizen, his influence was valuable in maintaining a high standard of spiritual life under all circumstances. Interment was made in China Grove Cemetery, sixteen miles west of Columbia. Owing to the absence of the writer, Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, assisted by Rev. T. H. King, officiated. We pray that the faithful wife in her declining years may find consolation and peace in God, the Father.
 CHAS. E. DOWNER.

HENRY P. SCARBROUGH was born near Spring Cottage, Miss., October 15, 1841, and at the age of twenty identified himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. For several years he rendered valuable service as a steward. On January 24, 1866, he was married to Miss Nancy P. Graham. To them were born eight children, six of whom, with their mother, survive him. Rev. Dan Scarbrough, a son, who for several years was a member of the Mississippi Conference and who transferred to the California Conference, was unable to be present at the funeral. "Uncle Henry" possessed a Christian character that one would make no mistake in emulating. As a husband and father he was gentle and sympathetic, devoted to home and its interests. He left the greatest heritage possible to his loved ones, a life of unselfish service and an influence that will live indefinitely. On Sunday morning, March 30, 1913, he and his wife had reached Terry's Chapel Church where he became prostrated from an attack of his heart. He died at 9 p. m., in his home two miles north of Foxworth. His remains were laid to rest in Fortenberry Cemetery one mile west of Foxworth. Services were held by Rev. M. B. Sharbrough and Rev. Will Alsworth, as the writer was absent.

 CHAS. E. DOWNER.

With saddened hearts, and yet as those who gather to celebrate a great victory, we placed the mortal part of ELIZABETH ADELINE FULLILOVE on March 14, 1913, to rest until the crowning day. She was born in Monroe County, Alabama, January 14, 1832, and died at her home in Keatchie, La., March 13, 1913. She came to Louisiana with her parents when quite a child. She was married to William L. Fullilove, January 14, 1848. Of this union three children were born, two of whom survive her: Mrs. E. A. Schuler, of Keatchie, La., and Mr. Charles F. Fullilove, of Cheyenneville, La. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year of its beginning as a separate Church, and as a saint she from its altars has gone hence. She was an active worker and regular Church attendant up to the end, having attended services at the Church but a few days before her death. She was indeed ripe for the other world. No one was more loyal than she to what she conceived to be the Master's work. As a friend she was true; as a mother, self sacrificing; as grandmother and great-grandmother, always mindful; as a Church member, supremely loyal; as a follower of our Lord, faithful and true; as a child of our Father, filled with assurance, the highest product of faith; the truest type of Southern womanhood. She was, indeed, a polished stone fit to shine with the brightest in the everlasting diadem of glory that shall crown His glorious brow throughout the endless ages of eternity. She was more than worthy of all the love wherewith we loved her. May the grace of God, that enabled her to be lovable, great, and good, keep those whom she loved, and comfort their hearts.

Tidings From the Field

Mangham, La.

We held our Children's Day service at Union Church, where Brother C. M. Noble is the Sunday school Superintendent. It is the only Methodist Sunday school in our charge. It was a great success. These people came from all parts of the charge (Mangham) afoot, on horseback, in buggies, surreys, autos and gasoline launches. We had a happy crowd, which was large for our small work on the river. Our collection was commendable, being $26 for the day, which, with $4.50 from the other churches, makes $30.50 for Children's Day on the charge. I have failed only twice since the institution of Children's Day to have the service. My work is doing well, especially in the support of its pastor, and I hope it will do well along all lines.—Robert Randle, P. C.

Sardis Circuit, N. Miss. Conf.

The first Children's Day in my work was observed yesterday, May 18, at Davis Chapel, four miles west of Sardis, and was a grand success in every way. To begin with, the weather was just suited to the occasion, the decorations were beautiful, and the program was carefully prepared. All the songs, exercises, and recitations were good and spiritual, beginning with "Safely through another week," and followed by a prayer by the pastor, in which he remembered the theme of the day and closed by leading the congregation in repeating the Lord's prayer in concert. The service lasted one hour. The offering talk was made by a sixteen year old boy, and the collection amounted to even $10. We had a fine congregation and all pronounced the entire service a success. Mrs. G. G. Hay is the Superintendent of the Davis Chapel Sunday school.—J. B. Conner, P. C.

Wilkinson, Miss.

Dear Brother Editor: Reaching my work on the first day of February, I found myself face to face with the forces of evil, and began at once to call the hosts of the Lord together and to advance upon the foe. The people gave me a cordial reception all over my work, and, as a result of our united efforts as pastor and people, we have received one fine young man into our ranks and are expecting many others ere long. The Master is leading us to victory. We have organized four Sunday schools and all are doing good work. I have been very busy in an endeavor to visit my people, who make up six congregations very widely separated. The good people all over my charge are working faithfully and we are praying and working for a glorious revival in every congregation. We ask the prayers of all the Christian people, as we labor in this field already "white unto the harvest."—J. H. Belew, P. C.

DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Durant District Conference met at Sidon, Miss., on May 14, 1913, with Presiding Elder W. S. Shipman in the chair, and J. B. Streater, Secty. Sixteen of the nineteen charges were represented by their pastors and 14 laymen. The visitors present were G. W. Bachman, Colporter; T. H. Lipscomb, Conf. Secretary of Education; Miss Kilpatrick, Conf. Sunday School Field Secretary; Brother R. M. Weaver, representing the Sunday School Board; J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, and W. M. Williams, Manager of the Orphans' Home.

The preaching was done by Dr. H. G. Henderson, H. H. Williams, and V. C. Curtis. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: C. A. Pitchford, Parham Williams, R.

P. Johnson, and F. A. Howell, with R. E. Willburn and J. B. Streater as reserves. Goodman was selected as the place for holding the next District Conference. The following resolutions were adopted by the conference:

1. Resolved, That we hereby express our sincere thanks to the good people of Sidon for their unbounded hospitality which has been extended to us.

2. Resolved, That we hereby express our appreciation of our presiding elder, Rev. W. S. Shipman, and we hereby request the presiding Bishop of our next Annual Conference to reappoint him to this District.

3. Resolved, That we hereby reaffirm our hearty sympathy and interest in the tri-State Methodist hospital movement, and that we are ready to lend all possible assistance to this work. That our charges are open to H. M. Ellis, the financial agent, or his representatives, and that we are ready to co-operate with him to the extent of our ability in raising the necessary funds to build and equip the said institution.

4. Resolved, That we hereby recommend that a monthly, or some systematic offering be made regularly to the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, and we recommend, also, the observing of the annual work day.

5. Whereas, Dr. R. A. Meek is now closing his quadrennium as Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and whereas, The Advocate was never more ably edited, and whereas, in this age of theological criticism, doubt, and unrest, we need strong and safe men at the head of our church papers to give expression to the thought of the Church, therefore be it Resolved, That we do hereby endorse the policy of Dr. Meek in his able editorship, and that we commend his stand for orthodoxy, conservatism, and truth in behalf of the Church, and we hereby ask the Publishing Committee to retain Dr. R. A. Meek as Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

6. Resolved, That we respectfully memorialize the next Annual Conference to appoint a committee to study, and report on the question of woman's laity rights in our Church.

7. Resolved, That the presiding elder is hereby requested to raise $200 in the District for the maintenance of a young minister at Millsaps College.

I will close this report with an extract from the report of the committee on Moral and Social Reform:

"The time in which we live is so filled with complex problems that there is a call for a larger vision of Christian service, and greater activity on the part of the Church. We have much to encourage us in the moral uplift of the nation. There was never such a crusade against all forms of vice as is on to-day. The forces of darkness are formidable and well entrenched, but a better day is coming. It is too often a fact that those who are in league with, or are in sympathy with the lawless element are in possession of the municipal government, but better men are being demanded for the offices. Fines, sentences to terms in jails, prisons or reformatories are merely makeshifts as a cure for the great evil of lawlessness, until the Church through the light of the gospel of Christ shining out from the life shall show a more excellent way. The Church is strong enough in the land to accomplish anything, and when it is awakened to its mission, all moral, social, and political evils will be under control. Therefore, we should preach, teach, and pray, and the victory is ours. The day calls for a fearless, consecrated, Godly preacher with an evangelical sermon.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The following extract from Rev. C. D. Buila's annual report concerning the Wesley Adult Bible Department of the Church to the recent meeting of the Sunday School Board is suggestive as to the progress that is being made in this department of Sunday school work:

"More than eleven hundred classes have been enrolled during the year. There are now twenty-five hundred enrolled classes with a membership of eighty thousand. More than one hundred men and women are in the membership of the classes that enroll in the Wesley Bible Class Department daily. At no time in the history of the Church have men and women been brought into the Sunday school in such numbers as in this day. Those organized classes are links between the Church and the non-Church going people. We shall not venture a prophecy as to the outcome of this providential movement.

"At your meeting in May, 1912, you made provision for the organization of Wesley Intermediate and Wesley Senior Bible Classes. Boys and girls of the early and middle adolescent years seek companionship—Boys' clubs with boys and girls' clubs with girls. The Church must organize the boys and girls and guide the 'party' instinct toward the upbuilding of character. The athletic, the social, and the educational work of a number of organizations appeals to boys at a certain age. But it is not necessary to resort to all manner of organizations for boys when the organized Bible class may be made to meet their spiritual, as well as their physical, social and intellectual needs. They cannot be loyal to several organizations. They need only one and that should be in the Church. They will outgrow other organizations, but they will never outgrow the organized Bible class."

On the second Sunday in May the Field Secretary was guest of honor at an all-day rally of several Sunday schools of different denominations in a union Children's Day service at Mineral Campground near Sodus. The place is six miles inland from a railroad and takes its name from the splendid mineral springs that furnish ample water for such a gathering of several hundred people. The large tabernacle likewise furnished ample and comfortable seating room. The children rendered a well prepared program of song and recitation, and a choir from adjoining Sunday schools furnished special music. This, with a typical, sumptuous dinner of such "dinner on the ground" occasions, made a program that attracted people from far and near. This gave us a fine audience that needed teaching concerning better Sunday school work, and we had a fine opportunity to deliver ourselves in two regular addresses and to meet the workers in counsel about direct phases of Sunday school activity. Rev. W. R. Smith, the pastor of the Congregational Methodist Church at this place, together with "Father Ryan," an aged minister of the same Church, and whose saintly life has been a benediction in this section for many years, with their families, are exerting a fine religious influence among the people. The Wallace Agricultural High School—eight miles inland—is doing a fine work here, too, in developing educational and agricultural ideals among the youths of this section, and hence the growing demand for better Sunday schools and churches is natural. Wherever children are taught in day school by trained teachers, the Church must furnish a good grade of Sunday school teachers for them or else lose its influence over them.

Our Sunday School Board's Treasurer reports the following amounts as having been received from Children's Day collections up to May 12: Jena $30; Rayville $23; Haughton $14; Lake Arthur $14; Second Church, New Orleans, $7.15. These all beat last year's records, some of them magnificently, and if a like increase holds throughout the Conference our Board will be encouraged that its work is approved and appreciated. All amounts should be sent directly to the Treasurer, Mr. T. W. Hollomon, Alexandria.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Chester Charge has good Sunday schools. There are 90 on the Antioch roll.

Hesterville Charge has 4 good schools. The one at Hesterville is really a model one.

There are 285 children in the Popular Creek Sunday school. Brother Oakes has 8 good schools in his work.

The Durant District is making good Sunday school progress and greater things are expected of these fine people.

The Beizoni Sunday school, under Superintendent Sorrell, is increasing rapidly and has a good corps of teachers.

Two out of the four Sunday schools on the Mars Hill charge are evergreen, and all will enter that good list next year.

Moorhead has 90 on the Sunday school register, and Mrs. Terry continues to do a splendid work with her Primary Department.

The new church at Ackerman has nine commodious new Sunday school rooms and immediate growth doubtlessly will be noticed.

Eupora has an average attendance of 125, and Mahan an average of 65. With such records one can readily judge the fine type of work done.

Lambert Sunday school has an enrollment of 70, and new work is being planned. These are some of the encouraging reports from the Winona District.

Louisville, in the Durant District, had 152 present the 1st Sunday in May—1-3 of the population of the town. Prof. Rundle still teaches the fine Wesley Class there.

Indianola has 91 in the Sunday school, with an average attendance of 50. They are expecting to do good work even during the heat of "the good old summer time."

There is a good and influential rural Sunday school at Marie—indeed the Winona District is making great strides along this helpful, beautiful, and corner-stone type of work.

The Lexington Sunday school has reached the high water mark. It observed Children's Day in a beautiful and appropriate manner on May 11, thus setting a fine example.

Kilmichael Circuit has five good schools and Dr. Wilburn, a busy physician, has an Adult Class there with 85 on the roll and an average attendance of 65. The teacher is invariably present.

The Sunday school at Acona, with Mr. R. P. Johnson, of our Sunday School Board, as superintendent, is making an excellent record along all lines; and there is also a good school at Black Hawk.

Bellevue Circuit has four live Sunday schools, with a really great school at Bellefontaine. Dr. Arnold, a busy but consecrated physician, has a Wesley Adult Bible Class with an average attendance of 50.

Rev. S. A. Brown writes that everything in connection with his Sunday school is prosperous. The regular attendance is 150, and Children's Day is scheduled for June 8. He adds that his teachers are faithful; that the Holy Spirit is certainly honoring the efforts of his children, and the whole school feels the uplift and inspiration.

Write these words of Martin Luther in your notebooks, all you adults who do not attend Sunday school: "Why is it that we, the elders, are spared to the world, except to train up and instruct the young? It is impossible that the gay little folks should guide and teach themselves, and accordingly we must do it."

Inverness has an unusually good record, 40 church members and 100 in the Sunday school. But when the fact that they have a fine and interesting teachers' meeting is made known, the cause is obvious. At Isola there are 35 on the church roll and 50 in Sunday school, and these fine folk also have a good teachers' meeting.

Despite a large and growing congregation, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, has gotten 20 teen age boys together and will soon organize them into a live Boy's Club or a company of Scouts. Such a class as that can transform a town and build citizens so well worth while that every Sunday school should realize its strategic importance and go and do likewise.

In every Children's Day program find something for every class in the Sunday school to do. The day should be one in which all the members, enthusiasm and talents of the entire school are utilized and should not let one class slip out of vital and working connection with its ideals.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Sunday School Institutes, June 9-22.

The Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference has arranged a tour of Sunday School Institutes for the Conference, as follows: Canton, June 9, 10; Crystal Springs, June 11, 12; Prentiss, June 13, 14; Bond, June 16, 17; Montrose, June 18, 19; Shubuta, June 21, 22.

The speakers will be Mr. E. E. French, Superintendent of Supplies, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. R. A. Maddox, Field Secretary; Mrs. G. D. Cameron, Missionary Superintendent; Miss Daisy Magee, Elementary Superintendent, and B. F. Lewis, Chairman of the Board.

These Institutes will begin on the evening of the first day mentioned, and close with the evening service of the second day. Departmental Conferences will be held in connection with the Institute work, so that all questions can be discussed.

All Sunday school officers and teachers, and pastors and Sunday school sympathizers are invited to be present. Entertainment will be provided by the local church, if those attending will send their names to the pastor of the church in time. Come and let us make this a great time for our Sunday schools. B. F. LEWIS, Chairman of the Board.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference.

If you have a Junior League not listed in the last Conference minutes, please give me the name of the Junior Superintendent, as I am mailing report blanks and other special leaflets to all that I find in the minutes. Not knowing the names of all the Junior Superintendents, some of these packages will be sent to you and you will aid me greatly if you turn them over to the proper persons. I am anxious to get a correct list of all Junior Superintendents before our League Conference at Laurel from June 9 to 12. If your Junior League will be represented by a delegate, notify me and also send name to Mr. John Kittrell, Laurel, Miss.

Paint Lick, Ky.—Mrs. Mary Freeman, of this place, says: "Before I commenced taking Cardui, I suffered so much from womanly trouble! I was so weak that I was down on my back nearly all the time. Cardui has done me more good than any medicine I ever took in my life. I can't possibly praise it too highly." You need not be afraid to take Cardui. It is no new experiment. For fifty years, it has been found to relieve headache, backache, and similar womanly troubles. Composed of gentle-acting, herb ingredients, Cardui builds up the strength, preventing much unnecessary pain. Try it for your troubles, today.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.

The Second General Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held on the Southern Assembly Grounds, Lake Junaluska near Waynesville, N. C., June 25-29, 1913.

The indications are that the aggregate attendance will be quite large, covering a wide area of the Church.

NOW

As every one attending said Conference is expected to register in advance by sending name, address and $1.00 registration fee, stating amount and character of entertainment desired to Rev. C. F. REED, Secty.,

810 Broadway,
Nashville, Tenn.,

it is HIGHLY IMPORTANT that such notice be given at once for two good reasons. First, that the most desirable accommodations may be secured in ample time. Second, to prevent unduly rushing the Entertainment Committee at the last moment.

May we, therefore, ask all who have any expectation of going to the Conference to sit right down before taking another meal and send in name and registration fee?

The brief moral is—DO IT NOW.

J. R. PEPPER, President.

MEETING OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The first Annual Meeting of the North Mississippi Woman's Missionary Society, M. E. Church, South, was held at Grenada, Miss., May 3-7. All the officers and District Secretaries were present except the 3d Vice-President, who was detained by illness in her family. The large delegation present gave close attention to the program that had been so efficiently prepared by those who had it in charge.

We were indeed fortunate in having with us Mrs. A. L. Marshall, Editorial Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council, from Nashville; Miss Womack, who is doing such a splendid work at Meridian as deaconess; our own Miss Knapp, deaconess, who has opened up for us a much needed work at Corinth, and Mrs. S. S. Harris, a returned missionary from China, who gave such realistic reports of the work, and the needs of China that new determination was awakened in the hearts of all to make the Home Base stand firm in its efforts to help this new Republic to begin on a firm Christian foundation. Local and visiting ministers showed deep interest in the sessions. The Secretaries of the Departments reported an increase in both members and money. The Foreign came nearer to raising its pledge of $3000 than ever before, and the Home Department raised something like $45 more than the $1000 pledged. Out of the 105 auxiliaries reported by the Home Secretary and the 77 by the Foreign Secretary, 53 are united. The Treasurers' reports showed, aside from local work, $11,855.56 raised by the two departments for missionary purposes, there being almost an equal amount raised by each department. It was with great regret that we learned that Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., wished to retire from the work. Mrs. Scales had served for two years, most efficiently, as President of the Home Mission Society. When the union was effected she was chosen as president of the United Society, and amidst all the confusion of reconstruction she has kept a cool head and has steered the work safely, so we feel that her position will be hard to fill, yet in the person of Mrs. Vic Thompson Hoyle, of Tupelo, we feel that the work has been placed in safe hands.

The new officers for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. Vic Thompson Hoyle, Tupelo; 1st V. Pres., Mrs. S. M. Thames, Hernando; 2nd V. Pres., Miss Lillie Hartwell, Water Valley; 3rd V. Pres., Mrs. J. W. Conger, Vaden; 4th V. Pres., Mrs. Walter Trotter, Winona; Sec. For. Dept., Mrs. T. M. Clark, Verona; Sec. Home Dept., Miss Louise Dunstan, Winona; Treas. For. Dept., Mrs. G. C. Jones, Belen; Treas. Home Dept., Mrs. W. W. Willburn, Lexington; Rec. Sec., Miss Mamie Buckley, Winona; Supt. Supplies, Mrs. Susie Thomas, Starkville; Auditor, Mrs. C. B. Vance, Batesville; Supt. Hospital Memorial, Mrs. L. C. Short, Como, and Supt. Press and Literature, Mrs. Walter Campbell, Winona.

District Secretaries.

Aberdeen District, Mrs. Chas.

Roberts, Nettleton; Columbia District, Mrs. J. W. Woodward, Columbia; Corinth District, Miss Corinne Rogers, New Albany; Durant District, Mrs. Geo. Beall, Jr., Durant; Holly Springs District, Mrs. T. J. Binford, Water Valley; Greenville District, Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, Cleveland; Sardis District, Mrs. J. V. Sanford, Sardis; Winona District, Mrs. H. M. Bryan, Carrollton.

FROM OUR MISSISSIPPI PRESS SUPERINTENDENT.

In a personal letter from Mrs. Neill, our new Press Superintendent for the Mississippi Conference Society, she writes as follows: "I will send you items as often as I can, but unless the auxiliaries respond a great deal freer than they did when I had charge of this office about three years ago, I am afraid we will not come up to the standard set for us. Now please don't think I am a pessimist, I am just telling you this so you won't expect too much of us. We will do the best we can though, and pray that the work may bring forth much fruit for the Master." Let us give Mrs. Neill a pleasant surprise, by keeping her supplied with live missionary items. It won't take much effort on our part, and will mean so much to her.

Without the Fifth Commandment, and without the thirteenth chapter of Romans, respect for parents and for authority in general is more highly developed in heathen China than in Christian America. And without a knowledge of the Prince of Peace the Chinese have yet outstripped our Western nations in the art of keeping peace. What a vision, then, of the fulfillment of the prophecy, "Peace on earth, good will to men," is presented when we think of a Christian China and of her contribution to the development of the world's interpretation of Christianity!—R. D. Smart, Jr.

At the recent annual meeting of the Mississippi Conference Society a resolution was introduced in regard to the Sailor's Rest at Gulfport, Miss. Rev. W. H. Huntley, presiding elder of the Sea Shore District, spoke in behalf of the work. The President and Secretary of the Board of Missions, and several visiting ministers took part in the discussion. Rev. W. T. Griffin, who has charge of the work, was present, and while he manifested much interest, he did not take much part in the discussion. It was the unanimous opinion of the Missionary Conference that the work should be continued.

DO ONE OR THE OTHER!

If you are troubled with boils, carbuncles, old sores, bruises, burns, festering wounds, ulcers, or some other painful skin ailment, or tumors, etc., either write Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample of Gray's Ointment, or get a 25c box from your druggist, or by mail from the manufacturer. This splendid preparation arrests all pain and prevents complications from these skin eruptions which so often prove disastrous, and is considered to-day, by eminent physicians the world over as a most effective remedy. You can always depend upon Gray's Ointment for speedy and permanent relief from any skin eruption or inflammation and as a preventive of blood poison. It is a friend that will never go back on you. Your medicine chest is incomplete without it. Write for free sample.

REVIVAL AT KENTWOOD, LA.

On April 27 we began a revival at Kentwood, assisted by our presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Coleman. Brother Coleman presented the gospel in a very forcible and attractive way for four days. On the last night that he was with us, there was a spirit of deep conviction upon the people, and we felt assured that God was going to give us a victory at Kentwood.

According to our plans, Dr. C. K. Dickey, pastor of our church at Somerset, Ky., succeeded Brother Coleman on Friday, May 1. Dr. Dickey having been an old college friend of the pastor, we felt safe in turning over the meeting to him as a leader. It was agreed by the pastor and his assistant that we would set up an old-time altar, and that we would work and pray for old-time conversions. We had seen people converted at the altar in the old State of Kentucky, and we believe that God is no respecter of persons or places. Hence the altar was erected and the call made, but none came. We, therefore, saw that if God was to have a victory much praying would have to be done. We began a series of cottage prayer meetings in different parts of the town. One remarkable thing about some of these prayer meetings was that on two or three occasions the pastor found almost the entire congregation on the mourners' bench. The prayer meeting had been set to pray for conversions, and those who came, after an examination, confessed that they themselves needed conversion.

The first person who came to the altar was a man about 40 years of age. He had been a Christian, but had neglected his duty and consequently had backslidden. Dr. Dickey had him to bow in the presence of a large congregation. Prayer was made for him and he prayed aloud for himself. As he prayed he wept bitterly and in time the Lord saved him. He arose and testified that the Lord had received him again. This man's conversion and testimony, near the beginning of the services, convinced our people that we were expecting a complete surrender to God, and that we had not planned a mere "hand lifting" or "hand shaking" meeting.

As to results, eternity alone will be able to give a full and an accurate account, but as we see results at present they are as follows:

The entire corps of Sunday school teachers, the majority of the members of the Missionary Society, and some others from the congregation were thoroughly revived. Ten persons from fifteen to forty years old were converted or reclaimed at the altar. Nine persons were received into the Church by profession of faith and three by certificate. Nine subscriptions or renewals to the New Orleans Advocate were taken.

It was quite a pleasure to us to work with Dr. Dickey. Sixteen years had passed since we were together as students in the Kentucky Wesleyan College. We soon found that Brother Dickey had been growing in grace and also in knowledge. He is a man of strong faith. He lives very close to God at all times. His one purpose seems to be to magnify his Lord and Savior, and the Lord sets his approval upon his ministry. The people of Kentwood will not soon forget his strong sermons and his earnest efforts to lead them to Christ. We would consider any pastor fortunate to secure the assistance of Dr. Dickey in a revival.—R. S. Walton, P. C.

THE WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Wise foresight and skillful planning by Rev. B. P. Jacob made the Winona District Conference a success from first to last. The sermon by John Ritchey Thursday evening set a high standard, which was closely followed. By setting aside the authorized version, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb preached a helpful and wholesome sermon from a text impossible to understand without the aid of learned critics. The sermon by J. E. Cunningham was thoughtful, spiritual, and felicitous.

Reports by pastors showed a good degree of prosperity, and brought to view the need for great diligence in occupying new fields which are white unto harvest in our wonderful Delta. It is to be hoped that our next Annual Conference will arrange two Districts wholly within this Delta. Indeed, there is work there for three presiding elders, but we are too conservative and spend too much time tithing anise, mint, and cummin to do more than two-thirds of the needed going forward. If resolutions would bring in the kingdom the world would have been saved long ago. We need to work more and pass fewer resolutions. Therefore resolved that we resolve to go to work.

The educational interests were well represented by Dr. Watkins for Millsaps, Brother Countiss for Grenada, and Brother Lipscomb for the General Board. These beloved brethren greatly refreshed our spirits by their genial companionship and helpful ministrations. The Sunday School Board sent to us their very best in R. M. Weaver and Miss Kilpatrick, also beloved. The Conference gave formal expression to its pleasure and appreciation of their presence. H. A. Sorrels, R. Thayer, J. R. Bingham, and T. L. Wilburn were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, with N. C. Eudy and E. V. Hughston as reserve delegates. E. V. Hughston, of Greenwood, was elected District Lay Leader. The Conference telegraphed its love and sympathy to Rev. J. W. Raper, now in the Baptist Hospital of Memphis. If our numerous resolutions ever end in fruition we will have our own hospital for our own people and for others. By resolution we accepted "our part" of the apportionment. Will we pay it? When? Nothing is so easy as to pass resolutions, except to appoint a committee. We are experts at both.

The coming of Bishop Murrah on Saturday deepened and widened the interest of the first day. He is a masterful president. He preached on Saturday and Sunday with pith, point and power. The Church is reaping richly from his visits to the Far East. But we need him here. Therefore resolved that he be appointed to us next time. Our educational and other interests need his wise guidance. Ovid A. Clark and C. R. A. Brantley were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the travelling connection.

This resolution was adopted: "Resolved that we as a District Conference sincerely regret the announced purpose of Rev. R. A. Meek to withdraw from the Advocate as its editor; that we urge him to reconsider his decision if possible, and leave the way open for his re-election by the Publishing Committee at the proper time, and that we most heartily commend and endorse his editorial utterances, and general management of our Advocate."

Rev. H. M. Ellis powerfully and persuasively presented the proposed Methodist Hospital, which we have built forty times in resolutions twice resolved. Rev. W. M. Williams captured everybody for the Orphans' Home, which long since passed the resolution stage. The conference resolved and appointed a committee to raise annually $200 to be loaned without interest to students for the ministry attending Millsaps College. We have a fine young man ready for next session.

Everybody was delighted with Belzoni and her hospitable citizens, and will be only too glad when we can go there again. Friends of John T. Turner, J. M. Spencer, and Rev. T. J. Newell of blessed memory, so long and so helpfully identified with the Winona District, were greatly gratified to find their representatives so prominent and so useful in the affairs of that growing city and of our aggressive church. Being the first people there we built our house of worship near the river landing, at a time when there was no other landing. The town of that day has now become a city with two railways, as well as one

VARICOSE VEINS.

"Varicose Veins" is the name that has been given to veins that have become permanently and pathologically dilated. Varicosities are not confined to any particular part of the body, but when referred to as "varicose veins" most commonly occur in the lower limbs. They manifest themselves as irregular protuberances on the surface, soft to the touch, and causing a bluish appearance in the surrounding skin. They become extremely painful, especially to those constantly on their feet. The cause is an obstructed circulation of the blood causing undue pressure on the walls of the veins, which give way and dilate. Unless relieved, obstinate ulcers are liable to form; and in some cases the veins and skin burst and serious hemorrhages occur.

The treatment of varicose veins is quite difficult. A prominent physician has said, "The difficulty of treating ordinary ulcers or varicose veins has always been the source of much irritation to the physician and surgeon, and especially so when the leg is the part involved." Absolute rest is demanded, in order to relieve the blood pressure, and the use of elastic bands or stockings to support the walls of the blood vessels.

In the last few years Absorbine, Jr., which is an analgesic, germicidal, stimulant liniment and discutient, has been found very efficient in the treatment of even vicious cases of varicose veins of long standing. It relieves the pain, stimulates the circulation, and disperses the morbid matter which has accumulated. Being composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils non destructive of tissue, it may be applied without danger even if ulcers have formed; and because of its germicidal and healing properties, will prove beneficial.

Absorbine, Jr. is manufactured by W. F. Young, P. D. F., of 466 Temple Street, Springfield, Mass., who will on request send descriptive booklet and, if you enclose 10c in stamps, a liberal trial bottle.

Sold by leading druggists at $1.00 for 4 oz. bottle and $2.00 for 12 oz. bottle; or delivered to you by the manufacturer, all charges paid and safe delivery guaranteed, at these prices.

After using Cardui a week, I began to improve. Now I feel better than in six years." Fifty years of success, in actual practice, is positive proof that Cardui can always be relied on, for relieving female weakness and disease. Why not test it for yourself? Sold by all druggists.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference convened at the Methodist Church at Flora, Miss., Wednesday morning, May 14, at 9 o'clock. The opening sermon had been preached the evening before by Rev. R. P. Fikes. After devotional exercises, led by the capable presiding elder, Rev. P. D. Hardin, C. N. Guice was elected secretary. The work of the Conference was done rapidly, yet sufficient time was given to everything, and no interest of the Church, nor work of the District Conference was neglected. The presiding elder was brotherly and considerate throughout.

We enjoyed the presence of Rev. I. B. Robertson, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference. He was a blessing to us. Revs. A. M. Ellis, J. L. Green, W. M. Williams, R. Seiby, T. W. Adams, L. L. Roberts, and W. F. Long added to the interest and effectiveness of the Conference by their presence and addresses. Mr. R. A. Maddox, Mrs. Sam Ewing, and Mrs. G. D. Cameron represented the Sunday school and Missionary work of the Church.

After the presentation of the work of the Seashore Divinity School by Brother Seiby, a layman of the Conference introduced a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, urging every church in the District to raise the money and send the pastors to this session of the School. Of course the preachers all said Amen! and are hoping to hear from this action of the laymen.

Resolutions commending the Editor of the Advocate and Brother Maddox, the Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, and one concerning the death of Brother A. G. Worrell, were passed by a rising vote, and the secretary was ordered to send them to the Advocate for publication. The preaching of the Conference was done by Revs. R. P. Fikes, H. M. Ellis, J. W. Ramsey, A. F. Smith, and N. B. Harmon. Rev. J. L. Green was elected to local deacon's orders.

Of course, it goes without saying, the hospitality of Flora abounded and Brother McKeown and his accomplished wife have the situation there well in hand.

J. M. Morse, G. P. McKeown, R. P. Fikes, and W. A. Terry were elected on the ad interim committee for licensing and recommendations to the Annual Conference.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan was elected lay-leader for the District. R. W. Millsaps, S. B. Watts, C. L. Roy and W. E. Harris were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with J. M. Sullivan and R. A. Maddox alternates.

Revs. J. D. Ellis and R. Bradley, Chaplain and Assistant Chaplain of the State Farms, were present and told us of the work that is being done in a spiritual way for the convicts.

Taking it throughout, it was a delightful and profitable session. The reports of the preachers were encouraging, and the yearning of their hearts was for spiritual things. The report of gracious revival seasons from some of the charges and the plans for them in the others, were indeed refreshing. The Conference adjourned sine die, Friday, May 16th, at noon.

C. N. GUICE,
Secretary.

REVIVAL AT LAUREL, MISS. (KINGSTON.)

Dear Doctor Meek: On Wednesday evening, May 21, we closed a 17 days' revival meeting at the Kingston (Laurel) Methodist Church which was undoubtedly one of the best meetings I ever attended. Fourteen persons united with our Church, eleven on profession of faith and three by letter; several new family altars were established; scores of church members, some of whom were without definite religious experience, were greatly blessed and led to make a new and thorough consecration, and nearly all the Christians of this portion of the city, irrespective of denomination, received a great spiritual uplift. Ten of the new members are heads of families. Several of the services were a veritable Pentecost, so sensibly was the Holy Spirit present, and there were a number of bright conversions of the old-time sort. The meeting was conducted by Rev. Dan Kelly, our Conference Evangelist, who is absolutely fearless in his denunciation of sin, but whose heart is aglow with love for the sinner. Brother Kelly preaches the Word with marvelous pathos and power, and never fails to captivate his hearers. Brother John Kelly was on hand with his cornet, and helped greatly in the music. During the latter part of the meeting we worshiped in the Kingston Baptist Church, which was kindly tendered us by our Baptist brethren, our own house of worship being inadequate to accommodate the large crowds in attendance.

One of the most gratifying features of the meeting was the fraternal spirit which was manifested by the pastors and people of the other churches of our city. As Brother Kelly was nearly a week late in arriving, Rev. Geo. D. Booth, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. J. H. Cranford, pastor of the Kingston Baptist Church, and Rev. E. Hall, of the Protestant Methodist Church, each preached once for us in the first week. We are very grateful to these brethren for the excellent service they rendered.

At the closing service of the meeting a collection, which amounted to $58, was taken for the purpose of putting our house of worship in good repair. New pews of handsome pattern were ordered several weeks ago, and will be installed next month. Including those who joined during the recent meeting, forty new members have been received this year. Our Sunday school is larger and better, I am told, than it has ever been. Brother S. Freeman is the efficient superintendent. For these and other gratifying results we thank God and take courage.

Yours fraternally,
M. M. BLACK.
Laurel, Miss.

COLUMBUS, MISS., SECOND CHURCH.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed the greatest meeting in the history of Second Church. The services were conducted under a large tent and the preaching was done by Rev. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La. Dr. Holder is a strong, forceful preacher and a tireless worker. He leaves nothing undone to lead sinners to Christ. The singing was led by Prof. Price, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who impressed the people with the gospel by the power of song as, perhaps, they had never been before. Our membership was wonderfully revived, and scores were converted and gave their names for membership in the various churches. We all feel much better prepared for our work and we hope to see yet greater results from our great meeting. On Thursday, before the meeting began on Sunday, the members and friends of the church, led by the Women's Missionary Society, gave the pastor's family a most glorious pounding, which included almost every thing to eat. We certainly appreciate such deeds of kindness as this and the more so, when it is done by such people as the ones who pounded us here, and is done in the way they did it. We have some of the finest and most loyal people in this church that I ever served. We are expecting the Lord to do great things for us. As my meeting is now over I would like to help a few of the brethren in their revivals during July and August. I have had several years' experience in revival work with the best revivalists of the Church, and the Lord has blessed my work in the past in giving me some great meetings. Write me at 1402 Bell avenue, Columbus, Miss.—J. H. Bass, P. C.

A NEW FARM LABOR SAVER.

Any farmer who has dealt with the common type power-driven hay press, has felt the tremendous waste of time and money necessary in lining up the pulleys, leveling the engine, and wages of extra hands required in getting the machine ready for operation.

The advent of the new John Deere Self-Contained Motor-Press marks a new era. A small but powerful gasoline engine is supported on the same truck with the baler. To start the press into operation requires only the turning of a fly wheel. There is no lining up of pulleys, no leveling the engine, and consequently a much larger proportionate time for actual baling. The saving effected in this connection is worthy of notice. Besides, the lightness and compactness of the outfit permits of more ready transportation.

Interesting book and information on this subject may be had free, by asking John Deere Plow Company, Moline, Ill., for book No. M-135.

FAITHFULNESS THE NOBLEST VIRTUE.

Men love the showy gifts, but they are by no means the best. The finest trait of character that any one can possess is fidelity, and this is within the reach of all. Not every one can be brilliant, or learned or eloquent, but there is none who cannot be true to his convictions—to the obligations of life. The noblest work of God is the dependable man—the man who is incapable of betraying a trust. Such a man would rather go down in defeat than to win by compromising principle. He had rather be right than to wear the world's proudest laurels. Who does not admire the Roman sentinel who died at duty's post and whose skeleton for seventeen hundred years stood guard in the buried city of Pompeii? Who does not honor the character of Robert E. Lee who, at the outbreak of the Civil War, turned away from the glittering prizes held up before him by the powerful and resourceful North, to cast his lot with the weak and poorly prepared South? Where is the man whose heart is not thrilled by the story of the noble six hundred who made that famous charge on the field of Balaklava?

"Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die."

But the greatest example of fidelity in the world's history is that of our Lord. The promise of all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, could not swerve him from duty's thorny path to the cross. He must be "about his Father's business." The infinite obligations of his mighty mission were ever present in his mind. "It is finished," he exclaimed amid the awful agonies of the crucifixion. St. John in his glorious vision of Christ, described in the 19th Chapter of Revelation, first tells us that he was "Faithful and True;" and then that "on his head were many crowns," and that he was the "King of kings and Lord of lords." Faithfulness to God is the only way to real nobility and the highest glory. "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." And not merely those who are conspicuous in their fidelity to the Master, but also those who are faithful to him in obscurity will hear this sweet plaudit. The Omniscient Eye will overlook none. But the true alone will find their way into the final Paradise.

"LAITY RIGHTS" IN THE NORTHERN CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, North, has approximately 3,200,000 members, and its last General Conference was composed of 821 delegates. Of the delegates to the last General Conference of that Church only 24 were women, of whom 7 were from foreign Annual Conferences and 5 were from Negro Conferences in the United States. Twenty of the reserve delegates elected to the General Conference were women, six of them being elected by Negro Conferences in the United States and three by Annual Conferences in foreign lands.

The number of women in the last General Conference, held in May, 1912, at Minneapolis, was smaller than the number in the General Conference, held in Baltimore in May, 1908, although the female delegates from Negro Conferences numbered about the same in both the Conferences of 1908 and 1912.

Such results seem hardly to justify the amount of agitation for "laity rights" by which that great Church was disturbed so long. In its white Conferences in the United States no female delegates were elected outside of the States of California, Ohio, Illinois, Washington, Michigan, Kansas, Indiana, New York, Massachusetts, and Wisconsin. One reserve female delegate was elected by their St. Louis Conference.

It seems that in our sister Church, although it occupies a section of country more radical than the South, very few women care for "laity rights." Perhaps most of their women are detained at home by the conditions and obligations involved in motherhood, so that they could not attend a General Conference if elected. Most of their women, if they are like the women in our Church, will not exercise their "laity rights" even in a Church Conference. But perhaps when the words "laity rights" are used only membership in the General Conference is meant. Very few want that, and the few are given place and power from which most of the mature women of the Church are barred by the sacred facts of maternity. Why discriminate against motherhood?

MR. CARNEGIE'S PROPOSED GIFT TO VANDERBILT.

The press dispatches report that Mr. Andrew Carnegie has conditionally offered to give $1,000,000 to the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University, $200,000 of which is to be given at once for the erection and equipment of buildings, while the interest on the other $800,000 is to be paid annually for the maintenance of the school through the Carnegie Corporation. It is stated that Mr. Carnegie wants the management of this Department to be turned over to a small board of seven members, one of whom shall be Chancellor Kirkland and three others of whom shall be men eminent in medical and scientific work. The Executive Committee of the Board of Trust are said to have already agreed to the terms of the gift and to have signified their willingness to accept it.

This is a large donation, and if given in the right spirit and under proper conditions, it should have hearty commendation. But before we applaud the offered benefaction we must be more definitely informed as to the terms prescribed. It is well known that Mr. Carnegie is not a friend to church schools; his discrimination against them in the matter of pensioning teachers is the most damaging blow that was ever struck them. Chancellor Kirkland also has abundantly demonstrated that he cannot be trusted to take care of the interests of the Southern Methodist Church. What we fear is that the requirements laid down by the great money magnate will necessitate a complete repudiation of the Church's influence in this Department of the University. We hope, however, that such is not the case, and that the proposed transaction is of a character to command the approval of loyal and high-minded Southern Methodists.

THE FEW.

Ideal conditions in the Church are to be hoped for, of course, for the future. When that day comes the citizenship of the State will be co-extensive and identified with the kingdom of heaven upon earth. But what we are concerned about in these remarks is the distribution of the work of carrying forward the kingdom. In that ideal day all men will labor, shoulder to shoulder, every one as he is able, to carry out the purposes of the Church as it represents the Kingdom. But until that day comes, the distribution of this labor will remain glaringly unequal. And it looks as though we will have a long time to wait.

Among church people one often hears the complaint that this person or that person is failing to do his duty. How the Church would move if only everybody would do what he ought to do! There are the collections. Say the Church has three hundred members. Suppose everybody would give as he should. How easily would all the obligations of the church be met and over-balanced! There is the Sunday school. Why does not every mother see that her children get up and start to Sunday school on time? The air is filled with wailings because others fail to do their duty.

Far be it from any Christian to encourage such neglect, or even to have people think he approved it. But one must certainly do his part and not wait for the other person to do his. One might wait forever. And many good causes have failed, not so much because some refused to do their duty as because those who were willing to do their part waited for others to do theirs. While one should not try to usurp the place and duties of others, it is well to go ahead and carry the burden alone if there is none willing to assist. The kingdom has moved forward in this way since the beginning. It is not ideal, but it has proven effective.

Somehow, there seems to be a concentrated power in the few. Two or three who move onward, smiling and happy, can remake a dead church. Through wise leadership interest may be aroused and the whole membership inspired to larger action. God uses the few in most of his great enterprises. Most individual churches are made possible through the faithfulness of the few. And while the church community moves on indifferently, enjoying the church life and its unparalleled benefits, and does not appreciate the burdens it places upon the shoulders of the few, that soul-born consciousness of sacred duty done and loving service rendered, a thousand times repays for the suffering and toil. Hear the words of the Master: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—C. A. B.

HON. BIRD COLER CONDEMNS AMERICAN EDUCATION.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

The interest of the American people in the matter of education is unprecedented in the history of nations. Beside the vast sums appropriated by States and municipalities for common schools and the legislative appropriations to State universities, immense gifts are made every year by private individuals to institutions of learning and boards of education. Such gifts are without precedent in ancient or modern times, and the volume of these gifts grows greater with each passing year. Let us note a few which have been made since the opening of the year 1913: Mrs. R. N. Carson has left by will $6,000,000 for Carson College. Mr. Ferris Thompson has left $3,000,000 to Princeton University. The will of the late Robert P. Doremus, a business man of New York City, was recently probated and it was found that his entire fortune of between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 had been left to Washington and Lee University. Other gifts besides these have also been made; but these are sufficient to show how strongly the current of generosity upon the part of the rich among us sets toward educational institutions.

All of this is certainly creditable to our country. It shows that other motives than the motives of commercialism are operating in the hearts of at least some of our people of wealth. Evidently many of them believe that there is something better than money; something into which money can be turned and thereby its value be increased. By these great gifts the givers declare their faith in the truth that "man shall not live by bread alone."

But, while recognizing the generous purposes which inspire such gifts, it is not improper to ask, Are the givers doomed to disappointment in the fruit of their giving? Is much of the education given in the United States resulting in the good which it should accomplish? Many thoughtful men are answering flatly and positively, "No."

Here, for example, is the Honorable Bird S. Coler, a notable political leader in New York City, who in his recent book entitled "Two And Two Make Four," denies outright that our educational work is promoting the welfare of the nation. He says in one place in his book, "The public schools in this country are not making for righteousness. There is not an educator of any note in this country who has not admitted this. The metropolis of this country is thug-ridden. It has developed a new type of criminal, a conscienceless, fearless young brute who murders for hire, and recognizes no moral accountability and no social obligation." Mr. Coler attributes this result to the godlessness of American education, and he says, "The relationship of the godless school to the growing viciousness among our people did not come to me as a religious man but as a practical man, a public officer administering a municipal office."

Mr. Coler not only condemns the common schools because religious instruction is excluded from them; but he is even more emphatic in his condemnation of colleges and universities which exclude Christian teaching. He insists that morality can not exist if religion perish, and that no sort of ethical culture can take the place of positive faith; and he deprecates the creation of "a great fund for such colleges as shall abandon Christ after having been founded in his name."

However one may differ with some of the things which Mr. Coler puts into his book, his conclusion that irreligious education results in immorality can hardly be denied. In this view he is supported by both philosophy and history. Historians and philosophers, including even some skeptics, have reached the same conclusion. Thomas H. Huxley said, "There must be a moral substratum to a child's education to make it valuable, and there is no other source from which this can be obtained at all comparable with the Bible." Victor Cousin asserted, "Any system of school training which sharpens and strengthens the intellectual powers without, at the same time, affording a source of restraint and countercheck to their tendency to evil is a curse rather than a blessing." So Archibald Allison declares that the spread of knowledge detached from religion depraves any people. He says, "The reason of its corrupting tendency in morals is evident—when so detached it multiplies the desires and passions of the heart without increasing its regulating principles; it augments the attacking forces without strengthening the resisting powers; and thence the disorder and license is spread through society. The invariable characteristic of a declining and corrupt state of society is a progressing increase in the force of power and a progressing decline in the influence of duty."

Certainly our civilization shows many marks of such a declining state of society. The increase of murder, divorces, and defalcations of every sort, points to tendencies of the most unrestrained passion. The sense of duty seems to have dropped out of the lives of many of our people; and this lack of the sense of moral responsibility is not observed in the uneducated classes alone, or chiefly. Those classes who claim the highest culture show many of the most serious departures from common morality. They are educated, but they neither fear God nor regard man. Some of them affect to lament the degradation of the slums, even while they are themselves practicing the vices which have led many thousands of fallen people into the slums.

It is evident that we are not deriving from education all the good which it should yield. When popular intelligence and popular immorality increase together, it is manifest that some element of a proper education is wanting. That element Mr. Coler thinks is religion; and he is right.

"Knowledge is power," but power may be good or bad; and it is clear that increase of knowledge with increased immorality is bad power. Impotent ignorance is better than insurgent intelligence.

But the American people are not going to be content to live in ignorance, or to have their children grow up without education. They are going to eat of the tree of knowledge, even though their eating results in despoiling their Paradise.

Wherefore it behooves all patriots to concern themselves to find some way of imparting the indispensable religious element in education which is now so conspicuously wanting. There seems to be no practical way of doing this except by magnifying and strengthening the schools of the Churches. Our rich men should lay down on these altars their offerings for education. Both their duty and their interests should impel them to this course. Secular education is begetting all sorts of godless aspirations and socialistic ambitions. Another twenty-five years of the kind of education which has prevailed during the last twenty-five years will menace the very life of our social system and our free institutions. The Honorable Bird Coler is no alarmist and no pessimist. Moreover, he has been in position to observe the effects of schools thoroughly secularized. He holdly proclaims the conclusions to which his observations have led him. Let any man study carefully the facts of the case, and doubtless he will reach similar conclusions.

Another thing needs to be said: Colleges which profess to be religious institutions must make good their profession. It is nothing less than educational simony for a school to feed upon the Church, and claim a religious character, in order to secure the support of the Church, and then do its work in a worldly and godless way. Religious colleges must answer to the public candidly and honestly the question, "What do ye more than others?" It were better to have schools downright irreligious than to have hypocritical establishments which deny or dishonor the cause for which they were founded.—From the Atlanta Journal.

CHRISTIANITY IN JAPAN.

(Among the missionaries who attended the meeting of the General Board of Missions in Dallas, Texas, recently, were Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Haden, of Kobe, Japan. Dr. Haden has been working among the Japanese for eighteen years, during fifteen of which he has been a member of the Faculty of the Kwansei Gakuin, our Methodist college in Kobe. The following excerpt from an interview which Dr. Haden gave a reporter of the Dallas Morning News will doubtless be read with interest since it is news fresh from the field by one who is qualified to speak.)

How about the progress of Christianity in Japan? was a question propounded to Dr. Haden, and to which he promptly replied: "I will tell you first what I once heard the late lamented Col. A. E. Buck, United States Minister to Japan, say: 'Before going to Japan as United States Minister I was not a believer in foreign missions, and always declined to contribute to them. I made my contributions to home missions, while, to even up, Mrs. Buck made hers to foreign missions. After going to Japan I declined to be satisfied with what could be learned regarding Christian work on the trans-Pacific steamers and in the hotel lobbies, and, like honest men should do, I decided to make an investigation of the methods and value of the work of the missionaries. I reached the conclusion that foreign missionaries had done more for the real progress and welfare of Japan than all other agencies and influences from the West combined.'

"I would like to set this testimony over against the careless and irresponsible statements of certain globe trotters who write and speak wisely, but not knowingly, in regard to Christian work in Japan and other countries of the Orient, without having met a single missionary, having seen a single educational institution, or having investigated any department of Christian work.

"The progress that has been made by Christianity in Japan within the last thirty years has been surpassed by no other country in the world. For thirteen years—from 1859 to 1873—after the missionaries began their work in Japan, Christianity was an outlawed religion. No one could become a Christian without danger of losing his life. In February, 1873, those edicts against Christianity which had been in prominent places all over the empire for 200 years suddenly and quietly disappeared and have not been seen since, except as curios. In 1889, largely for the benefit of Christianity, when the Constitution was promulgated, it contained an article granting religious liberty to all Japanese subjects. At the present time all Japanese count this as one of the most precious of all their possessions. Early in 1912 the Japanese Government itself called the famous 'Three Religions' Conference. In this conference there were representatives from Buddhism, Shintoism, and Christianity, the late Bishop Honda of the Methodist Church being one of them. The meaning of this was:

"1. The Japanese Government admitted its failure to work out its moral problems independently of religion.

"2. It acknowledged Christianity as one of the great moral and religious forces of the Empire. "Nothing could show more conclusively the wonderful progress made by Christianity in the empire of Japan in the last forty years. The Bible is the 'best seller' in Japan, the textbooks excepted; whereas a few years ago book sellers did not dare to keep it on sale. Public sentiment has so changed, and the demand is so widespread that it can now be bought in almost any bookstore in the land. The secular publishers are eagerly seeking the contract for the publication of the revised version of the Japanese Scriptures now being prepared by the Revision Committee. The number of students in the Christian theological schools of Japan is more than double what it was ten years ago; and the number of boys in the church schools is more than double what it was ten years ago. The number of the members in our Southern Methodist Church is more than double what it was ten years ago. Christian work in Japan is not sensational nor spectacular, but is strong, normal and healthy. Japan will not become Christian in ten or twenty years, but if the Church at home will join a strong, sympathetic band with the Church in Japan, the Japanese Empire, by and by, will be counted among the Christian Nations of the world."

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

It is matter of regret that much of the history of Methodism within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference is unavailable, but there remain many fragments that may yet be conserved for the use of the present and future generations. It is due the memory of those who endured the hardships of pioneer life and toiled to plant what we enjoy in the way of religious and church blessings that something of their lives and deeds should go to permanent record. While these are all written in heaven they are needed also on earth, that we and our children in reading them may be awakened to a greater appreciation of the heritage which they, under God, have given to us. To these ends, we shall give to the readers of the Advocate some sketches of the preachers who labored here in those early days and of the churches they established, hoping that at least some may be interested in reading them.

About eighty-five years ago, white people began to form settlements in the territory then recently purchased from the Indians in North Mississippi, and with them came the ever alert itinerant Methodist preacher. Prior to 1840 the whole State of Mississippi was included in the Mississippi Conference, excepting the eastern tier of counties, which belonged to the Alabama Conference. In the year 1835, the Mississippi Conference was held at Woodville, beginning on November 20, by Bishop Soule. In the account of this Conference given in Jones' "History of Methodism in Mississippi," Vol. 2, page 360, we read: "The people had flocked into the Chickasaw Purchase so rapidly that it was thought best to form them into a district, which was called the Chickasaw Mission District, with Robert Alexander in charge. He had under his care three missionary circuits of very indefinite boundaries, called Tallahatchie, Chickasaw and Cold Water. Samuel W. Speer was on the first; Joseph T. Sneed on the second, and William Craig on the third."

Of Rev. S. W. Speer we wish to write in this article. He was born near Nashville, Tenn., August 9, 1815, and was admitted into the Tennessee Annual Conference in 1832, being seventeen years of age. From a narrative received from him in 1896 and filed with our historical papers, I copy in part his own account of his coming to Mississippi and his work on the Tallahatchie Mission.

He says: "In November, 1835, the Tennessee Conference was held in Florence, Ala., with Bishop Soule presiding. I asked for a transfer to the Alabama Conference. Conference closed early Tuesday morning and the Bishop left that afternoon for the Mississippi Conference to be held at Woodville, Miss. I was told that night that the Bishop was going alone through the Indian country and that I ought to go forward and join him—that he was twenty miles in advance of me, and that by an early start I could overtake him by the next night. By early dawn the next morning I was on the road; travelled all day; stopped for the night; was on the way early next morning and soon came up with the Bishop, after sixty miles of steady travel. I told him my errand and he received me kindly. When breakfast was over, we departed southward. He told me of the immense crowds of people that had stopped in and about the hotel the previous night—a company of showmen and hundreds going to the land sales at Pontotoc.

"At sunset we reached Columbus and were kindly cared for in the family of Col. Bibb. Rev. W. Alexander was the stationed preacher. We were on the Military road—a road to New Orleans, by which Jackson marched his army to meet the British. At night we reached Dewitt's, an Indian tavern which was kept in good style.

"The next day we made it to Lee Floris' by sunset; this was near Pearl River, and the next day we reached Madisonville and were entertained most kindly by Collins Pearce, the prince of tavernkeepers. His brother, Levi Pearce, afterward became a preacher in the Mississippi Conference. During the day as we were crossing Pearl River a negro trader with a hundred well dressed negroes came up on their way to the Southern market at Natchez."

Further details are omitted from the narrative of their journeyings through Jackson, Clinton, and other places to Natchez, where the Bishop preached on Sunday—thence to the seat of the Conference. Mr. Speer writes: "On arriving at Woodville ten of us were sent to the palatial home of Hon. Edward McGehee, about two miles in the country, where we received every comfort and attention that we could ask. At the close of the Conference I was read out for the Coffeeville (Tallahatchie) Circuit—Yallobusha County, three hundred miles away. I had company for half the distance.

"I arrived at Coffeeville, the central point in my work, early in December and found a pleasant rest in the home of Col. Thos. B. Ives, near the town. My first business was to take in the situation and adjust myself to my new field of labor. The circuit was in Yallobusha County. The Yallobusha River was on the south; Yockany River, on the north; 'the great swamp,' on the west; and Turkey Creek on the east, with Tillatoba Creek running west through the center. Coffeeville was the chief point, it being the county seat. Other appointments were Henderson, four miles south; Alfred Turner's, three miles west; Porter's, six miles further west; Tillatoba, on the edge of the swamp; Pharsalia, six miles north of this; Col. Wm. Fly's, six miles up the Yockany, and Moore's, below the Yockany bridge. On the circuit there were substantial men and women, true to the cause of Christ and to the Methodist Church. Col. Thos. B. Ives was from North Carolina, a man of means and willing to use them for the Church. Dr. Thos. Baily had been a travelling preacher; Pleasant Baily was a local preacher; Alfred Turner and his wife were from North Carolina. They would stand by you in trouble or prosperity, true as steel.

"The Porter family were from Giles County, Tenn. Rev. Elias R. Porter was a man of prominence; his sister Martha married Dr. Austin of New Orleans. Col. Wm. Fly, the father of Rev. A. T. M. Fly, was a man of means and influence. The country was new, and but recently settled by people from different States. The greater part of them were moral and many of them were consistent church members. They were eager to attend preaching, and were well behaved and attentive. There was employment for all; there were no loafers to hold up the corners of the saloons; and the saloons had but little patronage.

"At Coffeeville we had a log church of moderate size; at other points we preached in private houses. The northern part of the circuit was in the Chickasaw nation; the southern part in the Choctaw. The latter had gone West; the former were yet here, and their lands were being sold at Pontotoc.

"We had a hard beginning, but by patient labor and trust in God, as the days advanced things grew brighter. With the opening spring the work began to revive and everything steadily grew better and more encouraging. At our last quarterly meeting in Coffeeville we had a season of unusual power. The presiding elder preached with unusual unction and force, and the church was awake and in the Spirit. There were about thirty conversions, clear and well defined, and as many accessions to the Church. The finances of the circuit went far beyond the most sanguine expectations, and with all my losses in three horses, amounting to $150, I went to Conference with more money than I knew how to use—the only time in my long ministry that I had more money than I had need of."

Brother Speer continued a member of the Mississippi Conference a number of years, filling important stations and serving five sessions as Secretary. He was one of the delegates from that Conference to the Louisville Convention in 1845 which formed the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He died near Nicholasville, Ky., on October 5, 1901—a member of the Kentucky Conference, having been superannuated five or six years.

In this article the correct spelling of his name as given according to his own signature—not Spear as it appears in some records.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE MINISTRY OF LOUISIANA.

Dear Brethren: We are planning some aggressive work for the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League and in order that we may succeed we need your co-operation.

In Rev. E. O. Ware, Editor of the Baptist Chronicle, we have a State President who is a fearless, uncompromising fighter. Our Executive Committee and Board of Trustees are composed of vigorous and far-seeing men, successful at the bar, in commerce, and the ministry. We are mobilizing our forces for the purpose of securing some needed legislation at the next session of the Legislature.

Among the measures we advocate are:

A law against the sale of "near-beer" or other subterfuges in "dry" territory.

A State law corresponding with, and supplementary to the Web law prohibiting shipment of liquor from "wet" into "dry" territory.

The enactment of a bill increasing penalties for the violation of prohibition laws.

The passing of an act authorizing special elections on the liquor question in Congressional Districts.

We plan to win the remaining "wet" parishes to the "dry" column as rapidly as possible, these steps all leading up to the time when the entire State shall be ready for a state-wide law prohibiting the making and selling of the world's greatest brain poison.

By securing a hearing for our representative you will render valuable help. The enemy is organized and has plenty of brains and money; but we have the people if we are allowed to get to them. Write to us offering suggestions and speak to your legislators about assisting us in securing needed legislation.

A. W. TURNER,
Superintendent (La.) Anti-Saloon League.

SOME MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE.

All Mississippi pastors who wish the Anti-Saloon League Year Book, 1913, please send name to this office. I should be glad to have you enclose five cents postage, if you wish. If not, will send it anyway. If anyone will agree to hand a copy of "Destroying the Destroyer" to his city or county officials, or both, we will gladly mail them the copies for this free. This should be done. If you care to enclose two cents each for postage, it will help us that much.

The prize essays on "The Effects of Alcohol on the Human Body," and also those on "The Effect of Alcohol on Character" are beginning to come in. The time has been extended to July 1, in order to give all who have entered ample time to compete. Literature bearing on these questions will be furnished if requested. There are many contestants. We want all to enter who will.

Friends of the League are requested to be on the look out for travelling whiskey drummers who take orders for liquor shipments. Some one should give a couple of orders and then let the officers do the rest. The drummers so far caught now wish they hadn't been. More liquor criminals are being convicted at present than ever before. The people are after them in great shape. Let's stop all violations of the law.

G. W. EICHELBERGER,
Supt. Mississippi Anti-Saloon League.

Church News

Bishop Warren A. Candler will write the Bishops' Address to the next General Conference. The members of that body may anticipate a stirring message.

A revival meeting, in which the preaching was done by the Rev. Mr. Biederwolf, an evangelist of national prominence, was recently held in Greensboro, N. C. More than a thousand are reported to have professed conversion during the meeting.

Dr. James Madison Shelbourne, of Bristol, Va., was on May 26 inaugurated President of Howard College, a Baptist institution of Birmingham, Ala., to succeed Dr. A. P. Mantague, who has accepted the presidency of Columbia College of Lake City, Fla.

Evangelist Abe Mulky recently closed a revival meeting at Rush Springs, Okla., which resulted in more than 150 conversions and 108 additions to the various churches of that place. Sixty-eight joined the M. E. Church, South. Rev. R. H. Denny is the pastor at Rush Springs.

Rev. Lincoln McConnell, for many years a minister in our Church in Missouri and one of the Middle West's most successful evangelists, has been called to the pastorate of the Baptist Tabernacle of Atlanta, Ga., the pulpit made famous by the ministry of Dr. L. G. Broughton. Mr. McConnell was the first pastor of the Wesley Memorial Church of Atlanta.

Mrs. V. A. C. Stockard, the founder and owner of Cottey College of Nevada, Mo., recently deeded that property which is valued at $200,000 to the trustees. While Cottey College is not a church school, its founder and faculty are Methodists, and its trustees are mostly members of the Southwest Missouri Conference. It is said that the probabilities are that the school will be turned over to our Church within a few months.

Rev. D. E. Camak, a member of the South Carolina Conference, will turn over to that body at its next session a building and plot of ground valued at $50,000 to be used for school purposes. The school will be known as the Textile Industrial Institute, and is located at Spartanburg, S. C. It was built for the benefit of the workers in the cotton mills of that section of the State. Already a $7,000 property has been offered to the institution as a nucleus for an endowment.

In the Southern Christian Advocate of May 22, there were accounts of three revival meetings. In one held at Darlington, S. C., in Epworth Church, the results were 96 accessions to the Church; another at Hartsville resulted in 34 accessions, and the third was held at East Chester which resulted in 26 additions. This indicates that revival fires are beginning to burn in the Palmetto State.

The General Board of Education, at its recent meeting in Dallas, Texas, made the following appropriations: Paine College, $11,000; Lane College, $2000. White schools: Columbia Junior College, $2000; Davenport College, $1000; Flat Rock High School, $1000; Hiwassee College, $1000; Morris-Harvey College, $1500; Reinhardt College, $1000; Rutherford College, $1000; Sandy Valley Seminary, $1250; South Georgia College, $1000; Weaverville College, $1000; Young Harris College, $1000; Western College, $1000; Clarendon College, $750. Other appropriations were: Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University, $13,000; Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, $5000 (with an additional appropriation of fees of the Correspondence School, provided the total does not exceed $12,000); Vanderbilt lawsuit, $8000; general expenses, $10,243.32.

Evangelists Brown and Currie of Siloam Springs, Ark., have recently closed a very successful meeting in First Church, Houston, Texas, and are now in a meeting at Trenton, Tenn. Rev. W. F. Packard, the pastor at Houston, reports that the meeting conducted in his church was one of the best ever held there. There have been 200 accessions to that church since the last Conference, and more than 850 during the past three and one-half years, making the present total membership about 1400.

The congregation of the Park Place Methodist Church, of Richmond, Va., has decided to erect a new structure. On Sunday, May 18, a subscription was taken at the morning service which amounted to $18,427. The new building will cost, without furnishings, approximately $40,000. Work will not be begun until the entire amount needed is subscribed.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Since the Trustees took immediate control of our Conference School this institution has contributed from its own earnings more than $5,000 to the education of worthy pupils. With the completion of an entirely new system of hot water heating for the new building, and putting into perfect condition the splendid system in the main building, at a cost of $3,000, before the opening of next session we will have spent $10,000 in repairs, additions, and improvements to buildings, grounds and equipment since Rev. J. R. Countiss has been president. The Methodists of North Mississippi owe a debt of gratitude to W. L. Clifton and J. R. Countiss of greater magnitude than they realize.

The Annual Conference has helped the college by a generous yearly contribution, without which we could not have succeeded. The Trustees have in no wise been hampered by the Conference with restrictions; and the Trustees have been true to this trust and have labored persistently and unselfishly for the best interests of Methodism. In turn the Trustees have given a free hand to President Countiss, and in no instance have there been differences between us in matters of administration. The highest ideals of Christianity as represented by Methodism are taught and practiced at Grenada College.

Our graduates fill important positions, notably Mathematics, English and Latin, in the best graded high schools of our State. Brother Countiss is unable to supply the demand.

We need many things which North Mississippi Methodists can supply with ease. I mention one only and the easiest, viz: One hundred boarding pupils for next session.

The attendance last session was the best we have ever had, and the outlook for next session is better than it ever was at the close of a session. The same help and like sympathy heretofore extended by the Conference will make our coming session the best yet, and will pave the way for greater things. President, Faculty and Trustees will continue the same diligence, zeal and care heretofore exercised.

The recent Commencement was a notable occasion, every feature of which was wholesome and was marked by perfect propriety.

The Commencement sermon by Reverend I. D. Borders was strong in thought, deeply spiritual, and felicitous and forceful in expression—the product of a clear, cultured brain, a pure mind, and a heart true to the Great Teacher. The general verdict was, "The most appropriate commencement sermon I ever heard."

The evening sermon by Reverend James H. Felts, which was learned, vigorous, practical, powerful, saturated with the vital elements of religion; and, was a potent plea for adequate preparation for the work of life. Such preaching is the need of our times, a fit fellow of the morning discourse.

Of equal merit was the Alumni Address by Rev. J. A. Hall on visions and achievement, as illustrated in the lives of Bible characters and in the teachings of others who have influenced the thinking of the generations.

The Baccalaureate Address of Rev. T. W. Lewis was abreast of the best progressive thought of the age, of strong grasp, keen analysis, clear discrimination, deep insight and broad view; and was additional evidence (though none was needed) that First Church, Memphis, has for preacher in charge one of the foremost men in Methodism.

Now let the Motto of all North Mississippi Methodism be, "One hundred boarding pupils for Grenada next session."

J. R. BINGHAM,
President Board of Trustees.

NOTICE.

The Annual Meeting of the Louisiana Conference Epworth League will be held in Shreveport, June 11-15. We hope every Chapter in the Conference will be represented at this meeting.

Please elect delegates at once, and send names to Mr. C. O. Beauchamp, Shreveport, chairman of Entertainment Committee. A good program has been prepared, and the Shreveport Chapters extend a cordial invitation to all ministers and Leaguers to be present.

PINE RIDGE CHURCH BURNED.

Our Church at Pine Ridge, in St. Helena (La.) Parish, nine miles from Kentwood, was burned to the ground Saturday night about 12 o'clock. It is the general opinion that the building was burned by some one. Blood hounds were secured and an effort was made to track the parties. After the work of the dogs three arrests were made and the accused parties are now lodged in the jail at Greensburg. This Church was dedicated in 1911 by Rev. J. B. Fulton. It was considered one of the best church buildings in the parish. For years it had been connected with the St. Helena charge, but at our last Annual Conference it was placed on the Kentwood charge.

Japan has appropriated $600,000 for the proper representation of that nation at the World's Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915.

A loan company capitalized at $4,000,000 has been organized in Ascension Parish, La., for the purpose of bringing into that parish a larger population of thrifty farmers. The new settlers will be furnished the necessary funds for improving their farms at a low rate of interest.

The city of Dayton, Ohio, on May 25 completed a week's campaign for funds to be used in protecting that city against future floods. The result of the week's work was $2,000,000. The National Cash Register Company gave a half million dollars.

A contest of more than ordinary interest is being carried on in France, where the Socialists are opposing a $100,000,000 appropriation for war equipments and are trying to effect the passage of a bill appropriating $130,000,000 for the furthering of the public school interests of that country.

The State of Missouri now has a law upon its statute books called the County Unit Law. It permits every county in the State, except those in which are located St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, to vote as a unit in local option elections. The friends of temperance say that within two years' time, with the exception of the three cities named, Missouri will be a prohibition State.

On May 22, General Marie G. Menocal was inaugurated President of the Republic of Cuba. He is a soldier, an efficient administrator, and a man of affairs. He has both wealth and business standing. He speaks the English language fluently, is friendly toward America, being a graduate of a university located in the United States, and favorable predictions are made concerning his administration.

Prof. Hanus, of Harvard University, says that the time has come for the teachers in public schools to return to the practice of corporal punishment. He thinks that children who know that there is not to be an application of the rule or rattan take liberties with teachers that they would not otherwise take. This writer's experience as a teacher of a country school of sixty boys and girls prompts him to agree with Prof. Hanus. The "love cure" is all right, but a birch rod as a first aid to the unruly is a powerful stimulant.

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad has published a statement to the effect that it will not receive liquor shipments in any quantity addressed to any person living along its lines in dry territory. As was to be expected, the liquor interests are preparing to sue the company on the grounds that a railroad is a common carrier and, therefore, can not refuse any article of commerce that is shipped in accordance with the terms of the law. The Webb Bill permits liquor shipments into "dry" territory for legal purposes, or to an individual for his own use.

As a result of a protest entered by the Protestant ministers of New Orleans, the City Park Board of this city recently rescinded its former action granting a permit to restaurateurs to sell liquor with meals within the limits of City Park. This agitation also had the further good effect of causing the city administration to see what a thoroughly liquor-subsidized Park Commission might do in the future, so last week it passed an ordinance making it illegal hereafter for the Park Commission to grant liquor permits to any one within the bounds of any of the public parks of New Orleans.

PERSONALS.

The Lafayette District Conference passed a resolution asking that the Rev. Robert H. Wynn, the popular presiding elder of that District, who has recently been chosen President of Centenary College, be allowed to serve in both positions until the next session of the Louisiana Conference.

On last Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. L. Herman, members of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church of New Orleans, were the recipients of a handsome present from the Board of Stewards of that church in honor of their silver wedding celebration. Mr. Herman has been a member of the Carrollton Avenue Board of Stewards for many years and is the Superintendent of the Cambronne Mission Sunday school. He is one of the most highly esteemed Methodists of the Crescent city.

Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, writes as follows: "By official action the First Methodist Church of Jackson has changed its name to the Galloway Memorial Church, and Galloway Chapel, located in the same city, has become Millsaps Memorial. Work on the new house of worship of the first-named congregation is progressing satisfactorily, and the latter is rejoicing over the complete liquidation of its indebtedness. The work throughout the district is encouraging."

We acknowledge the reception of an attractive invitation to the Commencement exercises of Centenary College of Louisiana, which will be held June 8-11, for which we are indebted to Rev. Henry T. Young, a member of the graduating class. The number who will finish at this institution this year is seven, of whom three—Rev. H. T. Young, Rev. L. A. Sims, and Rev. C. W. Cudd—are members of the Louisiana Conference. Centenary College is doing a noble work for the young men of this State.

We have received the following postal card from Rev. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Lafayette District: "We had a record-breaking attendance at the Lafayette District Conference held in New Iberia, May 19-22. Including pastors, pastors' wives, local preachers, lay delegates, presiding elders, and representatives of Conference interests, there were 61 present, besides a good local attendance." We are glad to hear of this fine showing made by the Lafayette District.

Rev. A. W. Hoffpauir, a local preacher living at Indian Bayou, La., was in the Advocate office last week, having come to the city to place his wife in the Touro Infirmary. We regret to learn of Sister Hoffpauir's continued ill health. She underwent an operation at the Touro last winter, and has never fully recovered from it. Brother Hoffpauir reports that the church at Indian Bayou is enjoying great prosperity under the ministry of his uncle, Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, who preaches to from 500 to 1000 people every Sunday night.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Yazoo City, Miss., says: "We are getting a good response to our appeals in behalf of the Galloway Memorial Fund for the Old Preachers. Fourteen charges have reported over $400. There are 161 charges in the Conference, and if all will present the cause and take a collection, the amounts secured will go a long way toward providing the help so urgently needed by our superannuates. We are now planning for a special campaign in the interest of this fund. We are resolved to pay our old preachers at least $400 or $500 annually."

Bishop John C. Kilgo, of Durham, N. C., will deliver the Commencement sermon at Millsaps College next Sunday at 11 a. m., and will also preach before the Young Men's Christian Association at the evening hour on the same day. Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, will deliver the Annual Address on Tuesday morning, June 10. Mr. Fitzhugh is an able lawyer and brilliant speaker, and has rendered the Church an important service in the great legal battle now being fought to prevent the alienation of Vanderbilt University from Southern Methodism.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Singleton will leave the latter part of this week for New York City, from which place they will sail for Europe to attend the World's Sunday School Convention in Zurich, Switzerland. During Brother Singleton's absence, the pulpit of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, of which he is pastor, will be filled by the following ministers: June 8, Dr. J. M. Henry; June 15, Revs. E. N. Evans and F. R. Hill, Jr.; June 22, Rev. J. W. Moore, D.D., and Rev. C. A. Battle; June 29, Revs. A. J. Gearheard and F. R. Hill, Jr.; July 6, Revs. E. N. Evans and J. G. Snelling; and for six Sundays beginning with July 13, by Rev. Frank E. Singleton, of Dublin, Texas.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, who recently underwent an operation, in the Baptist Memorial Hospital in Memphis, is, we are pleased to state, rapidly recovering. In a letter, written on May 27, Brother Wendel stated that he expected to be able to leave the Hospital within a week. He desires to express through the Advocate his thanks to the brethren who have cheered him with their communications and remembered him in their prayers during his illness. He reports that everything is now ready at Pontotoc for the North Mississippi Conference League meeting, which will convene there on June 10; and he earnestly hopes for a large attendance of both the young people and the preachers. Trains arrive from the north at 11:15 a. m. and 4:15 p. m.; from the south 8:50 a. m. and 4:50 p. m.

ENTERTAINMENT AT WAYNESVILLE.

I have just returned from Waynesville and Junaluska. I went over the ground with Bishop Atkins, Dr. Cannon and Brother Pepper. Everything is progressing nicely and the prospect for the Missionary Conference is bright. I was chiefly interested in the provisions being made for housing the crowd in the absence of hotel accommodations on the grounds. These provisions I found to be:

1. The town of Waynesville is only about three miles from the Assembly Grounds. It is constructed largely with a view to the comfort and convenience of summer visitors. It has the entertaining habit. Five thousand visitors have been known to be in the immediate vicinity at a given time. The town has entered with wholehearted loyalty and enthusiasm into the plans for entertainment, and has put itself at the disposal of the Committee.

2. A dozen hotels with a capacity ranging from 50 to 200 guests; about 50 boarding houses with a capacity of from 20 to 40, and practically all the private homes of the town, are thrown open to guests at from $1.50 to $2.50 per day. Rooms have already been secured in Waynesville alone for 3,000 and the Committee has not finished its canvass. There is room for a large number outside the city, within easy reach, if needed.

3. A train will be run to and from the Assembly Grounds as often as necessary. This train will stop five times to discharge passengers near their homes. This will put all within easy walking distance, over good walks. The fare will be about the same as on street cars.

4. The evening meal will be served on the grounds, so that visitors need not return till after evening exercises. This also provides for recess at noon from 12:30 to 4 o'clock.

5. And finally, these arrangements are being made for those who register. Those who do not register before going take their own chances. Those who register early get choice of entertainment. The registrations are coming in. There are prospects of a large attendance. We believe all will be taken care of. But the Committee on Entertainment is reserving homes for registered delegates only. My advice is that those who mean to attend register without delay to insure the best accommodations, and to avoid confusion and inconvenience on arrival.

JAMES RAY.

There lived at the close of the seventeenth and the beginning of the eighteenth century, about the time that Alabama was admitted into the Union (1819), a Mr. Nathaniel Ray and Miss Margaret Eads, who moved from near Atlanta to Tuscaloosa, Ala., with their parents. Here, on Feb. 25, 1821, they were happily married. At the close of 1822 Elizabeth, a daughter, was born. On Feb. 8, 1824, Catharine was born. James, the subject of this memoir, was next in order, and was followed by Anderson Ray, a Methodist local preacher, who died near Canton, Miss. A daughter, Parmelia, now Mrs. Spencer, who lives in Washington, was the next child, and the last of their six children was Jackson Ray, who lives near Canton, Miss.

James Ray was born at Tuscaloosa, Alabama, February 18, 1826. After spending about thirty-four years in the State of Alabama, looking after his mother, brothers, and sisters, he came to Mississippi in 1860 and located in Panola County, and afterwards made his home seven miles east of Philadelphia, moving from there to Waldo, where he spent the remainder of his life. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Tuscaloosa, Ala., at the age of 9 years. When he was 12 years of age his father became afflicted, and afterwards passed to his reward. He, being the oldest son, took the burden of responsibility and bore it as a man, refusing to marry until his brothers and sisters were of a sufficient age to bear their own responsibilities, and even then his advice was heeded and his counsel sought after. The community soon discovered that, because of his love and devotion to his mother, brothers, and sisters, and his strict adherence to his church and business affairs, in little Jim was the making of a great man.

He was married to Miss Mary E. Freeman on November 14, 1856. Three children were born of this union: Mrs. Sue Ella Hooper of Dennis, Tex.; Mrs. Mary Hooper of Edinburgh, Miss., and Mr. J. W. Ray of Waldo, Miss. The mother of these children lived only a few years. Brother Ray was married again, to Mrs. D. J. Jones on November 30, 1864. To them were born four children: Eugene Ray of Oklahoma City, Okla.; Mrs. Margaret Edwards of Madison Station, Miss.; Miss Minnie L. Ray of Madison Station, Miss., and Mr. H. Lamar Ray of Philadelphia, Miss. The third time he married Miss Hattie Lou Smith, Rev. C. McDonald performing the ceremony. She still survives him, living near Morton, Miss. All of his children were given a fair education in the county schools. Eugene graduated from Hiwassee College, Hiwassee, Tenn., and Lamar attended Millsaps College.

Uncle Jimmie Ray was the grandfather of thirty-one grandchildren and the great-grandfather of seven. He was a great farmer, who always had farm products to sell, and needed to buy none. He was a steward in the Methodist Church sixty-six years, resigning because he was physically unable to perform the duties of the office. He was among the first subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, getting the first issue and continuing to take it to his death. He was a member of the Methodist Church seventy-seven years. In all of these he made enviable records. He was one of the most liberal men the Methodist Church has ever known; broad, unselfish—sacrificially so, which the following tributes from his pastors will show:

Brother W. H. Saunders, who was his pastor, says: "There are many people who are Christians in faith and practice about whom, if you were asked to speak, you would have some secret evasion of mind lest you would overdo the thing, but in the case of Brother Ray it is the other way. When you have said the best you feel that you have not done the case justice. The blessing of a life like that of Brother Ray's to a community is incalculable; for in faith and practice he lived a Christian life. To be with Brother Ray and study his life, one could easily see that there was a consciousness of the presence of his Lord and Master, and that he communed with his Father in Heaven."

Brother W. D. Dominick, of the Mississippi Conference, a nephew of Brother Ray, says: "His Christian life from a boy was beautifully consistent, quiet, undemonstrative; this marked his life unto his death. He believed in supporting the Gospel. He was punctual in attendance upon divine worship. He was most always at church with his family. He sought to bring them up in the Methodist Church, and was anxious for them to be religious. He was a true, faithful, and helpful friend. He was a kind, generous, and good neighbor, and was respected highly as a good citizen. As a business man, he was energetic, and he was a splendid farmer. He was one farmer who not only made his farm self-sustaining, but profitable. He had accumulated a competency. He always had a helpful hand for people in need and distress. He was public spirited. He wanted good schools and liked to see public improvements. He was a fair, just, well-rounded Christian character. He lived a long, useful, quiet, and helpful life."

Rev. L. J. Jones, who was his pastor, says: "Brother Ray was one of the most consecrated Christians I ever knew. His home was always a mansion of joy and happiness to his pastor and family. We often hear of preachers being pounded, but Brother Ray was a man who pounded his pastor continually with the things necessary for his comfort and the comfort of his horse. When I saw that he had gone to heaven I wondered whom God would raise up to take his place. Sleep on, my brother, and take your rest! You are fresh in our memories. Your influence will live on."

Rev. P. H. Howse, who was his pastor for two years, says: "Brother Ray and I sustained the near relation of pastor and steward. In this office I always found him true, faithful, and thoughtful. His home was open wide to all good people, and especially to his pastor. His earnest prayers were always helpful and his consistent life was a constant sermon in his sphere of acquaintance. Peace be to his dust! We shall meet him with the glorified."

Brother J. W. Chisolm, who was his pastor, says: "I learned to love and reverence Brother Ray in my visits to his home. I always received inspiration from the life of this consecrated layman. As a young preacher I coveted his counsel, and my heart was made larger and my vision broader as I sat and listened to him recount his experiences. With a great faith in God, he was a true Methodist and his character was unimpeachable."

Rev. W. H. Lane, who was his pastor for two years, says: "I found Brother Ray to be loyal to God, to the Church, and to his fellow-man. He was very much devoted to his Church and all that belongs to the cause of Christ. He had nothing too good for his preacher and family. During the two years I was his pastor I never met him on the road or anywhere else that he did not inquire of the needs of myself and family."

Rev. J. T. O'Neil, who was his presiding elder four years, says: "I knew Brother Ray as a decrepit man, but in his old age he bore marks indicative of a robust body, strong intellect and uncompromising moral stamina. Brother Ray was, in his dotage, a genial man. The radiance of his presence was hallowing indeed. One had but to know him to love him. He was very fond of children, and always delighted in making the little ones feel easy in his presence. His home was a sweet haven for the tired traveler. His conversation was pleasant and elevating. The sturdy manhood and attractive character manifest in Brother Ray's family and the copious compliments of his neighbors attest the strength and beauty of the character built by this good man. He has gone to be with God, but a savory influence lingers in the paths he trod here on earth erstwhile, to bless succeeding generations. Indeed, 'He being dead, yet speaketh.'"

Rev. J. C. Long, who was also his pastor, says: "For three-quarters of a century Brother Jimmie Ray lived a consistent member of the Methodist Church without a single charge being brought against him. It was my privilege to be his pastor two years, and, notwithstanding that he was over 80 years of age, he never missed an appointment. His seat was never vacant. His smile and counsel were always cheering and pleasant."

Brother Ray died December 16, 1912, aged 86 years and 10 months, at his beautiful country home at Waldo, Miss., surrounded by his family, knowing everyone and fully conscious. His daughter, Mrs. Mary Hooper, says: "It was a pleasure to be around him—his mind was clear and bright for one of his age." On December 17 a large crowd gathered at the Old Carolina Church in Neshoba County and his body was laid to rest underneath the sod. The beautiful ceremony of his Church was read by Rev. J. C. Long. After all, the writer also had the privilege of being his pastor, and it gives him great pleasure to corroborate the facts stated by other pastors, and also to write this memoir, because of the love he had for Uncle Jimmie Ray and his family. And he prays that the blessings of God may be upon them, and that they shall be as great and brilliant as he.

THREE LITTLE 'FRAID CATS.

(Animal stories often illustrate admirably what takes place in human affairs. Not all men are brave who talk bravely.)

Three little kittens in coats so gray
Went out with the Old Mother Cat one day.

Said the first kitten, "If we only might see
A monstrous great rat, what fun it would be!"

Said the next little kitten, "I'd seize hold of his head,

And bite him and squeeze him until he was dead."

Said the third little kitten, "Should I see a rat, I'll eat him all up in much less time than that."

Suddenly something jumped out of the wood,—
All three turned and ran as fast as they could.

And never once stopped till they came to their house;

Yet it wasn't a rat, but a wee baby mouse.

THE SENTRY.

"I wish I was a soldier!" said Tom. One of grandfather's stories made him feel that way.

"You might be a soldier in a way," said grandfather, looking up from the pair of shoes he was tapping.

"How?" demanded Tom. "I wish you'd tell me."

"Soldiering, you know, wasn't all fighting. We marched and made camp and stood sentry. Some of those things a man or boy might do right now."

"How?" asked Tom, again.

"It won't be any play, you know," grandfather warned.

"I know," answered Tom. "Go ahead and tell me."

"Look out of the window," said grandfather, slowly. On the river the men were hard at work cutting the big blocks of ice and floating them up the open channel to the slide where the machine carried them to the high doors of the ice house.

"Yes," said Tom. He did not quite understand just what grandfather meant.

"Well, there ought to be a sentry there. After school little boys and girls that can't swim and are too little to be trusted on the ice, any way, play there along the edge of the water, and the men are too busy to watch them; and the first thing you know one of them is going to fall in.
I'd like to see a volunteer that can swim, a boy about twelve years old, go on sentry duty there—not to boss the little folks, but to keep them away from the edge, and if one of them falls in, to go right after him. I was so worried yesterday afternoon that I nearly went out there myself."

Tom thought a moment. "It would be better if I had a pair of skates," he said.

"I suppose so, but that night I was telling you about I didn't even have an overcoat. I know," grandfather went on, "it doesn't look like anything very big, but just by keeping those little folks away from that open water you may save somebody's life, and that is about the biggest thing a soldier or anybody else can do."

As soon as school closed, Tom went to the river; and there, just as grandfather had said, were thirty or forty children playing near the edge of the open water. Tom saw grandfather at the window and waved at him, but he did not tell the children he was a sentry; he simply coaxed some of them off to play a game of tag, and soon all were hard at it and far away from danger.
That, of course, did not last till supper time.
When grandfather looked out a half hour later, some of the children were back, and Tom was pacing to and fro watching them closely. At six o'clock he burst in, fairly stuttering with excitement. "Grandfather," he exclaimed, "I'm going to have a pair of skates!"

"How's that?" returned grandfather.

"It's true. Just now Mr. Cotton, who owns the ice house, came down and said: 'What are you doing here?' At first I thought he didn't like it; but we talked a lot about it, and he wanted to know why I wasn't skating, and finally he said:

'Well, these children have worried me, too; and if you'll come down here every night after school till we get through cutting ice—that will be Friday if the weather keeps cold—I'll let you pick out any pair of skates in Dumfries and I'll pay for them.' Only, grandfather," continued Tom,
"it wasn't really work, you know. Is it all right to take money for it?"

"Oh, yes," answered grandfather, "I think so.
We soldiers used to get money for sentry duty."

THE KEY TO HEAVEN.

In an old Franciscan cloister, far away in Germany,

Lay the Convent tailor dying; holy old lay brother, he.

Holy Brother Bonaventure, he had labored long and well:

On his bed, amid his brethren, lay he dying in his cell.

All the solemn prayers were uttered, all the sacred rites were given;

Spoke the dying from his pillow, "Bring me my Key to Heaven."

"Key of Heaven?—Call the Prior—" And the Prior quickly came,

Bringing to the sinking friar an old missal of that name.

Slow the dying head was shaken. "Key of Heaven?" Quick as thought

Crucifix and Rule and Chaplet to the monk in turn were brought,

All in vain—the brethren marvelled; what could be the Key he craved?

Surely such demand unusual was the plea of one who raved.

Last, uprose an aged friar, howed obedience left and right,

From the nook beside the fire brought a something small and bright;

Brought it to the bed and placed it where they saw it through their tears.

'Twas the needle of the tailor, wherewith he had wrought for years.

Ah! to see the dim eyes brighten! Ah! to see the white lips smile!

Round the tool the chill hands tightened—broken words he spoke the while.

"Many years old friend, we've labored—ev'ry stitch I made with thee

Was for God's dear glory taken—for the blest eternity.

Now, when life's last chords are riven, blessed needle!" soft he cries,

"Thou shalt be my Key of Heaven, thou shalt ope my paradise!"

At that instant fled the spirit. Smiling in his waxen rest
Lay the Brother Bonaventure, with the needle on his breast,
And the monks around him kneeling (startled at such swift release) Question, with the deepest feeling, "Doth he truly rest in peace?"
"Brethren!" prays the weeping Prior, "May his end to all be given!
May the life-work of each friar, be indeed his Key of Heaven!"

AMATEUR THEATRICALS FURTHER DISCUSSED.

We have little disposition to ride a hobby and we trust that we shall soon be able to dismiss the question of amateur theatricals; but we stated in a recent issue of the Advocate that we would discuss this subject somewhat more fully, and we shall now proceed to redeem that promise. What are the grounds of our opposition to such performances?

1. We call attention to the fact that many of the most serious objections that are urged against the professional drama apply with equal force to the amateur exhibition. In his masterful sermon against the theater, which was published in this paper last week, Bishop Candler says: "The Methodist Church is against the theater because the latter is detrimental to religion, as it plays upon the tragic and comic emotions, to neither of which Christian principles can be subjected. It undertakes to make amusement out of the most solemn and serious passions of the soul. The most common element in the theater is the passion of love which lies under our social system and family life, the foundation stone of our civilization; and yet at the theater this affection is presented in a tragic or comic form for the sake of amusement. The element of hate is also taken and used in a like manner. * * * A step further: The theater treats sacred things profanely. Here a woman comes along and prays on the stage, making prayers for amusement; and Christian people go there to see that woman get down on her knees and make a mock prayer to her God." Every syllable of this forceful indictment holds against the play given by local talent as well as against that given by professionals. If it be harmful for the latter to thus trifle with the noblest passions and sentiments of the human heart, it cannot possibly be right for the former to do it. Yet it is impossible to have a play that will hold the attention of an audience without doing this very thing. Nor is Bishop Candler alone in the view set forth above. Dr. J. M. Buckley, who as a thinker and scholar has no superior in world-wide Methodism, in his admirable work, "Christians and the Theater," takes substantially the same position and strongly insists that the parading of the virtues and vices of real men and women in a fictitious manner upon the stage necessarily exerts a deleterious influence upon the spectators. For the lack of space we can quote but a single sentence from this distinguished minister: "The excitement of the sympathies upon fictitious objects is enervating and pernicious."

2. The foregoing argument applies to all dramatic performances upon the stage, and, in our judgment, lodges a complaint against them which cannot be easily set aside. But additional reasons why the Church and Christian people should put up the bars against amateur theatricals are not wanting. As is well known, many of these performances, especially in the cities, are of a positively vicious character. They are held in the regular public play houses; the scenery and costumes used are practically the same as those employed by the professionals, and they have dancing and everything else that characterizes the professional drama that they can. Indeed, the more closely they approximate the professional exhibition the greater success the performance is adjudged to be. It is not unusual for those working up a play with local talent to go to see traveling troupes to get suggestions, and sometimes a professional actor is engaged to give the local performers their training. One only needs to be a little observant to see that these affirmations are true. In New Orleans within the past few days the young ladies and young men of the two leading educational institutions of the city gave an exhibition in one scene of which there was a general dance; the Sunshine Society, an organization composed of lads and lassies, held a carnival at the Athenaeum in which there was a mock marriage and much tripping of "the light fantastic toe," and a lady's elocution class gave at the Tulane Theater a "terpsichorean and dramatic entertainment" in which fifty children participated, dressed in a manner that doubtless would have excited the admiration of vaudeville connoisseurs. In the New Orleans Item of last Saturday appeared the following glaring headlines: "Girls in trousers for Japanese play. Newcomb Seniors score as actresses. Numerous dances and choruses introduced." To an alarming extent such things are going on in all the larger municipalities of the country; and we ask if the Church, the Bride of Christ, can afford to lend her endorsement to the slightest extent to such things? We submit that for her to go into the theatrical business at all must necessarily have such an effect. Young people cannot be counted upon to discriminate; hence to approve of any class of amateur theatricals, virtually amounts to giving license to attend them all. The Church does not act in so unwise a manner in dealing with cards and the dance. These amusements, under some conditions, might be comparatively harmless; but she knows that under other circumstances they are hurtful; so she rightly outlaws them and throws the whole weight of her influence against them. Is there any more reason why she should sanction the amateur theatrical than the amateur dance or the amateur game of cards? If there is we fail to see it.

3. The amateur theatrical tends to strengthen and build up the professional stage. We have made this point before, but it will bear repetition. There is a nexus between the two that nothing can separate. Just as surely as the social card game makes professional gamblers; just as surely as the private home dance opens the way to the public ball room; just so surely is it true that amateur dramas largely give to the world its professional actors and actresses and furnish the patrons of the public opera house. This is so obvious to reason and common sense that it ought not require argumentation to prove it. If a young man (or young woman) is trained in the art of acting until he has a passion for it, is it reasonable to expect him when he leaves school to let that passion calmly wither away and die in his bosom? If people are taught to have a fondness for the drama by the amateur exhibition, are they not apt to seek to gratify it by attending professional performances? What kindles in the breasts of our youth the histrionic aspirations that lead them to the footlights if it is not the amateur training that they receive? They do not, as a rule, venture to undertake so difficult a role until they have somewhere been made to believe that they have talents that will bring success and the sweet applause of the public. Are instances showing the connection between the amateur exhibitions and the professional stage desired? We shall as briefly as possible give a few.

According to the press dispatches, only a short time since a Texas young lady went from a church concert to become one of the singers in an opera in New York City. It was announced in the Times-Democrat of May 14 that a young lady student in a New Orleans College of Oratory had written a play to be given by amateurs that would probably soon thereafter be turned over to professionals. Who doubts what would be the effect of such an occurrence upon that young lady and her friends as regards their attitude toward the public drama. The Morning Musical Club of this city gave a concert at the Tulane Theater in April in which one of the chief performers was a woman who for two seasons had won fame as a prima donna on the French opera stage. Thus are professionals and non-professionals frequently brought together in performances. Two young Southern girls who had been given an itch for operatic singing before the public were recently carried to New York by the advertisement of a Berlin (Germany) professor of music who was seeking to secure "a great American voice." If such a voice can be developed, who doubts where it will be heard and what will be the career of its possessor? When pretentious amateur theatricals are gotten up where do those planning them go for their costumes? As we have already said, they go to those who make them for the professionals. Recently some persons in Mississippi in preparing for such a play in a church school ordered the attire needed from Chicago at a considerable expense. Only about a year ago two stage-struck young ladies ran away from a Southern school and made their way to St. Louis bent upon a theatrical career, but were fortunately rescued by heart-broken relatives who pursued them. It is impossible to keep the general public from linking together in thought and speech the amateur and professional play. Note the following press comment upon an amateur performance given at a church college a short time since: "Many a trained and seasoned player has done less well than did some of the young people last night. * * * As Rosalind, Miss . . . showed a wonderful training and exceedingly natural and pretty grace. Not a few of her witching smiles and glances and other pretty 'business' might be followed by actresses of many years' experience." Not long since a correspondent wrote us of a Southern female church school where it was said a French play had been given with young ladies wearing masculine attire before the promiscuous public; and it was also stated that the young women in attendance upon this institution are now and then taken to the professional theater to see performances that are considered proper. Thus does the smaller evil lead to the greater.

These citations are merely a few pointers that have been picked up at random. We have not the slightest doubt that careful and extended observation covering a period of three or four years would startlingly and conclusively demonstrate that the amateur and professional stage are exerting upon each other a reciprocal influence that is constant and powerful. If teachers who awaken in their pupils a passion for public acting would only keep track of them during the vacation season when they visit the city, they would behold some of the unhappy results of their pernicious instruction. We have yet to see a star performer in amateur exhibitions who has any decided conviction as to the evils of the professional theater.

4. The action of some church schools and other church organizations in encouraging theatricals is merely history repeating itself. This is by no means the first time that the Church has shown a disposition to take the theater under its wing. This was done in the Middle Ages and the results were very far from satisfactory. When she had well-nigh the exclusive operation of it the Church could not keep the stage pure and wholesome. How then can it be reasonably expected that she can use it to an advantage in this age when the conditions are vastly more adverse to such an undertaking? There seems to be in the public drama an inevitable tendency toward degeneration which no influence has ever been able to restrain. Referring to the effect of having amateur theatricals in our colleges, a distinguished educator who is at the head of a great institution, says: "It is educating the young people either for the stage or cultivating a taste for theaters. I feel that we ought to take a stand against the appearance of such an evil. The department of oratory or expression is a good avenue for the Devil to get in his work. It is difficult to keep from following the world and patterning after worldly schools in expression, gymnastics, etc. They are entering all kinds of dances—folk dances and fancy steps—in the gymnastics of these days." It is wonderful how quickly good people can have their ideas of propriety confused in regard to such matters. For instance, Shakespeare's "As You Like It" seems to be a favorite with church schools; yet we consider it a most objectionable play. In the first part of it there occurs a brutal wrestling match, such as would scarcely be allowed in any of our towns; as it stands in the works of the great dramatist it is streaked with vulgarity and could not be read in the presence of ladies; Rosalind, the heroine, performs nearly all the way through dressed in the clothing of a man; if the exhibition is given in a female institution, male actors must be brought in from the outside or a number of young women must appear before a promiscuous audience rigged up in trousers; and according to the directions given in the book, among the last things is a general dance. Are such spectacles as these edifying in the chapel of a Christian institution of learning? We assume, of course, that the vulgarity and dance would be done away with, but there are, as we see it, other objectionable features which could not be eliminated. Moreover, it is not announced to the public that an expurgated edition of the play was rendered; so the endorsement of a Christian college is given to the whole drama. And we may be sure that professional actors will not be slow to turn this fact to their profit in advertising.

Such are what we conceive to be some of the more important reasons why the Church should exert her influence against amateur theatricals. What can be said in their behalf as an offset to these objections? It is claimed that they afford entertainment and amusement. We reply that there are too many unobjectionable things that can perform that needed service to justify bringing into use practices that are fraught with grave possibilities for evil.

But it is alleged that they have a pronounced educational value. This we do not believe. It is well known that when ministers write and memorize their sermons it restricts the scope of their general studies. So, when students stop to memorize a single play of Shakespeare they have less time to study and grasp the products of his genius as a whole. The best interpreters of the mighty Bard of Avon have not, as a rule, been actors. Nor can it be shown that those who perform in amateur dramas are more graceful, or self-possessed, or gifted in oratory than those who do not. The stage has not given to the race its most distinguished masters of public speech. Magnificent institutions like Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia which once had dramatic clubs have let them die out. If they had regarded them as of anything like indispensable value, of course, they would not have done this. For instance, they would not think of letting their department of English, or Mathematics, or Ancient, or Modern Languages go down.

We have been much gratified to learn from the inquiries that we have made that most of the male colleges of our Church do not foster theatricals. Among those that do not have them we mention the following (and there may be others that belong on this roll of honor): Trinity, Hendrix, Emory, Wofford, Emory and Henry, Birmingham, the Southern University, and Centenary College of Louisiana. And it affords us special pleasure to include in this list the Wesleyan Female College, of Macon, Ga., one of the best equipped institutions for the education of young women in the South. Neither does Johns Hopkins University, the foremost of all Southern schools, have anything of the sort. It is perhaps, however, proper to state that two of these institutions reported the existence of Glee Clubs (which, when rightly managed, we consider comparatively unobjectionable), and that in two or three instances some doubt was expressed as to the harmfulness of the better class of plays.

As we see it, one of the most regrettable results of the Church giving her favor to amateur theatricals is that it disqualifies her to speak out effectively against the excess to which such things are being carried at our State institutions. A few days ago we were in a Mississippi town in which is located one of the great female colleges of that commonwealth, and scattered all about the streets were circulars which read as follows:

"COSTUME DANCES AND MUSIC PROGRAM; COLLEGE CHAPEL, MAY 27, 8:30 O'CLOCK; PRESENTING * * * TWO SURPASSINGLY GREAT DANCERS; BENEFIT ALTAR GUILD OF SAINT PAUL'S CHURCH."

We were deeply grieved to see that such a performance was to be given at an institution largely supported by money taken by taxation from the Christian people of Mississippi; but we frankly confess that we feel that our hands are so tied that we cannot vigorously combat this evil until our own schools shall have been placed above criticism in their attitude toward public theatricals. The voice of the Mississippi Conferences ought to ring out in indignant protest against such exhibitions as that mentioned above; but how can such action consistently be taken under present conditions? By every token, the hour has fully come when we should take higher ground in regard to these matters. We give it as our deliberate judgment that if the present trend of things is kept up for two or three decades practically all barriers will be broken down and our Methodist people generally will be found to entertain much the same view of the professional theater that most of the members of the Episcopal Church do to-day. Shall we be true to the spirit of the New Testament and the teachings of our fathers, or shall we let worldliness triumph and strip Methodism of its power? This is the issue which squarely confronts us in these opening years of the twentieth century.

THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

It was our pleasure to attend the recent session of the Greenville District Conference, at Cleveland, Miss., which was an occasion of much interest. Bishop Murrah was present and his presiding and preaching gave great satisfaction. The praise of Rev. H. S. Spragins was heard on every side. We have never known a more popular presiding elder, and he well deserves the high esteem in which he is universally held. We predict that his administration will contribute much to the upbuilding of our Delta Methodism. Rev. J. T. Lewis was at the Secretary's table and discharged the duties devolving upon him most efficiently. Notwithstanding the many hindrances that they have had, the reports of the pastors were hopeful and gratifying. Not a pessimistic note was heard. A truer, worthier band never toiled in any field. The following were present from outside the District to represent special causes: Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. W. M. Williams, Rev. H. M. Ellis, Mr. R. M. Weaver, Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, and Rev. G. W. Bachman. In company with Bishop Murrah and Mr. J. D. Barbee, we were entertained in the charming new home of Mrs. E. T. Clark, where all needful things and good fellowship abounded. It always refreshes and invigorates us to tarry, even for a brief period, within the bounds of the Greenville District, every part of which is like home to us. May the blessings of God abide upon every shepherd and every flock in this fertile section, and crown their labors with a large measure of success!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb assisted Rev. O. H. Armour in a meeting at Tchula, Miss., last week.

The Alumni Address at Millsaps College this year will be delivered by Mr. D. G. McLaurin, of Canton, Miss., of the Class of '97.

Bishop Murrah preached the Commencement sermon at the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala.—his Alma Mater—last Sunday.

A movement is under way to sell the old district parsonage at Greenville, Miss., and purchase a new and modern residence for the presiding elder.

Rev. E. S. Lewis is having a most profitable meeting at West Point, Miss. The preaching is being done by Rev. J. O. Hanes, of the North Alabama Conference.

At the last quarterly conference of the Kingston Methodist Church of Laurel, Miss., it was decided to change the name of that church to the Second Avenue Methodist Church.

Rev. W. S. Selman is pleased with the progress of the work on the Rienzi (Miss.) charge. He is at present seeking to extend the circulation of the Advocate among his parishioners.

The new catalogue of Whitworth College is a most attractive one. Parents who have daughters to educate would do well to write for a copy. Address Dr. I. W. Cooper, Brookhaven, Miss.

We regret to learn that Rev. T. S. Randle, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, has recently been ill at his home in Brundage, Texas. We pray that he may speedily recover.

Rev. C. Wesley Baley, our energetic pastor at McCool, Miss., favored us with an additional list of subscriptions a few days since. This makes 13 that he has recently sent in, and he says that there are more to follow.

Besides those mentioned elsewhere, we acknowledge having received lists of subscribers during the past week from the following ministers: Rev. Chas. E. Downer, Foxworth, Miss., 5, and Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Montrose, Miss., 3.

At a meeting of the teachers in the Sunday school of the Second Methodist Church of New Orleans last week it was decided to undertake to secure enough cash subscriptions to build a Sunday school addition to their present house of worship.

Rev. L. E. Wicht reports a gracious season of refreshing at Leakesville, Miss., where he had the assistance of Rev. I. L. Peebles and Brother Seevers in a series of revival services. His account of this meeting will appear next week.

From Greenwood Springs, Miss., Rev. L. T. Sargent, the diligent pastor, sent us a club of subscribers last week. We appreciate his kindness, and pray that the blessings of heaven may continue to rest upon him and his worthy flock.

Mrs. Virginia Nolte Mackie, a woman of moderate circumstances who died recently in New Orleans, left $1000 to the Louisiana Orphanage at Ruston and $1000 to the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, of which she was a faithful member.

Rev. Algie Oliver is having a successful pastorate at Matherville, Miss. He has lately given the parsonage a new coat of paint, which adds much to its appearance. We are indebted to Brother Oliver for a club of subscribers sent in a few days ago.

From Merigold, Miss., under date of June 1, Rev. E. Nash Broyles wrote as follows: "We are having a great meeting here. Brother W. S. Lagrone is doing the preaching and Brother Price is leading the singing. The whole community is stirred. There have been many accessions."

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., pastor of Epworth Church, New Orleans, was absent from his pulpit last Sunday on account of illness. Brother Doss is confined to his bed with an attack of fever. We hope his sickness will be of short duration and that he will soon be about his loved employ.

Rev. H. A. Maples, of Leeds, Miss., forwarded the Publisher a club of subscribers on May 27. It is needless to say that we appreciate his good work in behalf of the Conference organ. Brother Maples stated that everything is moving along nicely on the Nebo Circuit, of which he is pastor.

An effort is being made to secure the Lewis Brothers' Male Quartette to lead the singing at the Seashore Camp Meeting this year. "The boys" have not yet consented to take charge of the music, but if popular demand has any weight with them, they will not likely be able to refuse to do so.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb has won his way into the hearts of the people of Starkville, Miss., and the members of his flock are unanimous and enthusiastic in their commendation of his work. It was our pleasure to spend a day in his parish last week, and such were the representations made to us.

The Greenville District Conference authorized the raising of $200 to assist in the maintenance of a ministerial student at Millsaps College. This is the fourth District in the North Mississippi Conference to take such action, the other three being the Columbus, Durant, and Winona Districts.

Rev. B. W. and Jas. M. Lewis passed through New Orleans last week and favored our office with an appreciated call. They had been assisting their brother, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., in a meeting at Carriere, Miss., where their labors were crowned with much success, and were en route to their homes.

Our work at St. Mark's Hall in New Orleans has never been in as prosperous a condition as it is at present under the able management of Rev. W. E. Thomas. New members are being added to the Italian Church there every Sunday, and plans are being made to organize an Italian Sunday school.

Through the courtesy of Mr. W. H. Patton, the President, we have on our table a copy of the program of the Clarke County (Miss.) Sunday School Association, which met this week at Pachuta, Miss. Several speakers of note were expected to be present, and the exercises arranged for the occasion promised a feast of good things.

Dr. I. W. Cooper preached the Commencement Sermon for the Coldwater (Miss.) High School on Sunday, May 25. He also delivered addresses before the Shuhuta and Hattiesburg High Schools last week. Dr. Cooper has been much sought after for Commencement addresses this year, having made no less than ten engagements for such service.

Rev. C. P. Moss is rounding out his fourth year at Durant, Miss., with all departments of the church in good working order. His service in that interesting charge has continuously made for the upbuilding of the kingdom, and he is held in high esteem by all the people of the community, who will give him up regretfully next December.

Rev. W. S. Shipman, the presiding elder of the Durant District, whose praises are heard on every side in the territory under his supervision, visited his family at Bell Buckle, Tenn., last week. It is reported that Brother Shipman may locate his family in Jackson, Miss., this fall in order to give his children the excellent school advantages to be had in that city.

Rev. S. W. Vowell, our pastor on the Rural Hill Circuit (North Mississippi), brought us under obligations for a club of subscribers a few days since. He reports his work as moving on very well. Brother Vowell has been in the traveling ministry only two years, but his industry and enthusiasm have already won for him recognition as a useful itinerant.

We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, of Shreveport, who is known and honored throughout Louisiana for her good works, has lately been seriously ill with typhoid fever. It affords us much pleasure, however, to be able to state that she is now convalescent, and we trust that her strength will be completely restored at an early date.

Rev. J. C. Elkins, recently a member of the Pacific Conference, and Mrs. Elkins, are in New Orleans on their way to Havana, where Brother Elkins will have charge of our work among the Spanish population in that city. These worthy workers had expected to go straight through to Cuba, but missed their steamship connection and will not now be able to sail before June 10.

Rev. M. F. Adams, of Lorman, Miss., is proving himself to be one of the Advocate's best friends. He gave us last week an additional club of 5 subscribers, for which we extend to him our hearty thanks. Brother Adams, who is a son of Rev. T. W. Adams, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, is one of the most promising young ministers in the Mississippi Conference.

We were favored last week with an invitation to the Commencement exercises of the Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, which began on May 30 and closed on June 2. The Baccalaureate Sermon was preached last Sunday at 8 o'clock p. m. by Rev. Roger Nooe, pastor of the First Christian Church of Frankfort, Ky. This excellent institution is reported to have had a successful year.

Major R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., celebrated his eightieth birthday on May 30. He is hale and hearty, and we pray that his valuable life may yet be spared for many years. He has built himself an imperishable monument by founding the splendid institution of learning that bears his name, and Mississippians will ever honor him as one who wrought worthily and lived to high purpose.

Dr. J. M. Moore, Secretary of the Home Department of the General Mission Board, has been secured by Dr. J. M. Henry as one of the preachers for the Seashore Camp Meeting, which will begin at the Camp Ground in Biloxi, Miss., on July 7. Dr. Moore is an able preacher, and those who attend the camp meeting this year may feel assured that they will have the pleasure of hearing some strong sermons.

Rev. L. I. McCain is reported to be critically ill at the Bogalusa (La.) Sanitarium, where he was taken last week after being seized with an acute attack of appendicitis. An operation will be performed as soon as his condition will permit. We are sorry to learn of the illness of this gifted brother; and we pray that God may have him in his gracious keeping, and that he may soon be restored to his family and to his pulpit.

Obituaries.

The reaper has come again into our circle and taken from us a precious bud. On Wednesday, May 14, we laid to sleep in the cemetery at Itta Bena, beside his little sister, HENRY HOLLOMAN ROBERTSON, infant son of M. E. and Stella Robertson; born Oct. 3, 1912; died May 13, 1913. These dates span but a short period, and one full of anxiety, yet long enough to expand that niche in the parental heart and intensify the loneliness of the vacant cradle and the empty arms. Seven short months of earthly habitation, but an eternity in the Father's House. Gone from a mother's tender embrace, but safe in the arms of Jesus; "for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

GRANDFATHER.

DR. WILLIAM T. BEALL, who was for many years a Methodist local preacher, died at the age of 81 years in Wilmet, Ala., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Brandon, on Feb. 18, 1913. Dr. Beall was a native of Maryland and was born at "Home Cottage on the Hill," in Charles County. When he was seven years of age his parents moved to Mississippi and settled at Bachelor's Bend, near where the city of Greenville now stands. He graduated in medicine, and for many years practiced his profession in the town of Cayuga, in Hinds County. His love for the souls of men prompted him to ask for license to preach as a local preacher in the Methodist Church, which office he filled with great satisfaction to his friends and the pleasure of his brethren in the itinerant ranks. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Louise M. Rind, who was the mother of his children. His second wife was Mrs. Wood, of Moss Point, who also preceded him to the heavenly home several years ago. Several daughters and one son, Rev. Sam Beall of Texas, survive him. To these he has left the heritage of a good name, which is far more to be desired than gold and silver.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Brother HENRY T. SCARBOROUGH died at his home, near Columbia, Miss., March 30, 1913, at the ripe old age of 72½ years. From the testimony of those who knew him well, the following words of his son, Rev. Dan Scarborough, not written for publication, do not exaggerate his virtues: "He always lived right and set his children an example worthy of emulation. He was a kind father and a loyal citizen who always stood for the best interest of the country. His life was without reproach. He would have died before he would have told a falsehood or done a dishonest thing. No amount of money could have induced him to lay down his honor, or to betray a cause which he regarded as right." Brother Scarborough joined the M. E. Church, South, when 20 years of age, and remained faithful to it until called to the Church above. He was truly a religious man. He went through the Civil War, fought in some of its severest conflicts, and was seriously wounded at Shiloh. He was married at about twenty-eight years of age to Miss Nancy T. Graham, who survives him. Of eight children born to them, six are living. The morning before his death he was seemingly in his usual health, and walked more than a mile to church, but was taken suddenly ill on his arrival. Having become better, he was taken home, where he spent a cheerful evening with his family, but early in the night another attack quickly ended his life.

M. B. SHARBROUGH.

Columbia, Miss.

Sacred to the memory of CHARLES EDWIN GODWIN. The subject of this sketch departed this life on March 18, 1912, near Utica, Miss. He was born July 25, 1848. He had been a member of the Church all of his life, and was a consistent Christian, and a true and faithful Mason. He was twice married: first to Miss Kate Breeden. Twelve children blessed this union. Mr. B. C. Godwin of the Jackson Lumber Company is his son, and there is not a better, truer man in the State. One of his daughters is now keeping books for Kennigston and is an honor and credit to his name. His wife died in Feb., 1904. He was married the second time to Miss Lelia L. Regan, daughter of J. A. and M. E. Regan, of Claiborne County, Miss. No children by this marriage survive him. I find words inadequate to express the beautiful childlike devotion that existed between this brave and stanch man and this beautiful young woman, who was the light and joy of this home. No man ever made a better father and husband than did Chas. Godwin. The pure and sweet devotion that existed between this couple was something beautiful indeed. Yes, it is but paying the dead a just tribute to say that he was one of the best and truest citizens that ever lived in Hinds County. The manner in which this brave and patriotic man was taken away from his loved ones, being stricken down in the very prime of his life, made his going all the more pathetic and regrettable. The grief of this devoted and beloved wife is an everlasting monument to woman's fidelity.

"Be still poor heart and cease re-pinning.
For behind your cloud is the sun still shining."

"There is no death; the stars go down,
To rise upon some fairer shore.
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forever more."

Brave and patriotic Charles Godwin is not dead, but only sleeping. On the great morning of the Resurrection there will be a sweet reunion in heaven. Pain, sickness and sorrow will have been forgotten. The trials and tribulations of this earth will not enter there. The beautiful and spotless sunlight of heaven will send peace and joy to every heart, and there we can truly exclaim: "Oh death! where is thy sting? Oh grave! where is thy victory?"

There our departed friend will find sweet peace forever, basking in the sunlit smiles of heaven, where every flower is bathed in hope's eternal dew, and is lit by the holy smile of God.

A FRIEND.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas God, in his all-wise providence, called on Jan. 11, 1913, from this world to a brighter habitation our much loved friend and sister, Mrs. Sarah Francis Gandy, who was born Dec. 30, 1843, and whose life was such a benediction to all who knew her, therefore be it Resolved:

1. That we extend our heartfelt sympathies to her bereaved ones and especially to her children in this sad and trying hour.

2. That we as Christians will strive to follow her example in faithfulness, perseverance, and loyalty to Christian duty.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of her daughters, Mrs. Will Mosley, Mrs. Ed Mosley, Mrs. Ras Dyess, and Mrs. W. C. Dyess, also to each son—Messrs. Duff, Brink, Noel, Clan, John, Author, and Frank Gandy, and that a copy be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Signed:

Tidings From the Field

Pine Grove, La.

Our second quarterly meeting has come and gone. Our people are so delighted with the presiding elder, Brother Coleman, that they wish these meetings would come oftener. We have a good field of labor here. We have five organized churches and one log camp that demands one appointment a month. We have two home missionary societies which are doing very well. I have organized two new Sunday schools since Conference. The interest in the work generally is increasing, and the outlook is good for a prosperous year. We are very much at home among these good people, as we had previously spent one quadrennium with them and planted some fruit trees that are bearing for us now. God bless the old Advocate.—J. S. Rutledge, P.C.

Sidon, Miss.

The Durant District Conference, which convened here on May 14, was a most interesting gathering. Brother Shipman, our presiding elder, presided. Of course, Brother Streater was Secretary. Every one seemed glad to be here, and to enjoy looking after the Master's business. We had some good, helpful sermons and talks from preachers and laymen in attendance. Brother Cain, our pastor at Leland, Miss., got here the day the Conference closed, and that evening began protracted services, which lasted until the following Wednesday night. I am sure every one who attended the meeting was benefited. I have never heard more earnest, helpful sermons in my life. Brother Cain told us at the first service that he did not intend to use any "clap-trap methods," or try to reach people through their emotions, but that he would appeal to men and women through reason and common sense, and he certainly kept his promise. Eighteen young people connected themselves with our Church on profession of faith. The ages of these converts ranged from 10 or 12 to 24, including 4 young men from 18 to 24, and several bright girls from 12 to 16. We received good material. The whole membership of our church was benefited. The ladies have started a prayer meeting, and will meet once a week in the afternoon. There has also been established what we call a "young men's prayer meeting" (which likewise will be held weekly); however, the gray heads are not excluded. I am glad to say that we expect great results from these meetings. We are fortunate in having the advice and help of Brother H. C. Morehead in our church work here, but right now he is confined to his home, and is quite feeble. I think he overtaxed his strength while the meeting was in progress. I went to see him yesterday afternoon, and in the course of the conversation he said in substance: "I get on shouting ground every day, as I sit here and think of what my Divine Lord has done and is doing for me." I am glad to be able to tell you that Sister Morehead has greatly improved, and that we hope for her ultimate recovery. However, she is quite feeble yet and only takes liquid diet. These servants of God "are happy on the way," despite their physical ailments.

I desire to add that while the meeting was in progress, at a Sunday afternoon service for men only, every one in the house came up and gathered around the altar, declaring by this that they would do all in their power to have a good, clean town. S.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS.

(The following resolutions were passed at the recent session of the Jackson District Conference, and at the request of that Conference are sent to the Advocate for publication.)
Commending Mr. R. A. Maddox.

Resolved, That we have heard with pleasure the representative of our Conference Sunday School Board, and commend him to all our pastors and superintendents; and that we endorse the action of the Board in employing him for another year. We would urge the Sunday schools to raise the 3-cent assessment to support this work.

Signed: A. F. Smith, W. A. Terry.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

We greatly regret the inability of the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Dr. R. A. Meek, to attend our District Conference. We give our unqualified endorsement to his editorial management of the Advocate. He is ably defending and advocating the doctrines and policies which we as Methodists have always held dear, feeling that they are our priceless Scriptural heritage. We feel that we cannot allow him to resign his place, and request the Publishing Committee to do all in its power to retain him, pledging the Committee our heartiest support.

Signed: H. J. Maddox, R. P. Fikes, J. A. Lindsay.

In Appreciation of Judge A. G. Norrell

Be it resolved, That this District Conference put upon its record an expression of our appreciation of the life, leadership, and service of our deceased brother, Judge A. G. Norrell; that though we realize that he is absent from us in the body, we feel that he is present with us in the spirit. We commend his life as one worthy of emulation.

Signed: S. B. Watts, J. M. Sullivan.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference will be held at Columbia, June 12 to 15. Rev. F. M. Freeman will preach the opening sermon at 11 o'clock on the 12th inst.

The afternoon session will be devoted to the Sunday school interests of the District. Rev. Jno. F. Foster will address the Conference on the work of the Adult Bible Class. The Field Secretary, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, will have charge of the Round Table Studies following the address.

The 2d day's morning session will be devoted to the Missionary interests of the District. Representatives of Conference boards, colleges, Conference organ and orphanage are invited to attend.

The following are the committees:
For License to Preach—Dr. S. H. Werlein, C. M. Thompson, J. A. Alford.

Admission on Trial—A. S. J. Neill, R. H. Harper, J. M. Alford.
Deacon's Orders—Jno. F. Foster, B. H. Shepherd, S. L. Riggs.

Elder's Orders—F. M. Freeman, W. D. Kleinschmidt, J. J. Kelly.

The pastors will send the names of delegates who they know will attend to Rev. C. M. Thompson, Columbia, La. H. W. MAY, P. E.

EVANGELINE MISSION AND ELSE.

The writer, through the kind invitation of the pastor, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, spent a few days on the above charge. The pastor has the work well in hand in this most difficult mission field. The work here is rendered the more complex from the fact that it is made up of defunct churches and brand-new points, which are in the strictest sense French mission points. The Bayou Chicot Church, organized in 1803, has the record of being the first Methodist church organized west of the Mississippi River—in fact it is claimed to be the oldest Protestant church west of said River. At Ville Platte, one of the strictly French missionary points, the pastor is enterprising the building of a new church. Ville Platte is a fast growing town of 2500 people, and is the parish seat of the new parish of Evangeline. Now is the day of opportunity in this town, and the door is wide open for the Methodist Church to enter. Will she measure up to her great opportunity? It will depend upon the liberality of our noble laymen who have the ability to make possible the enterprise that is being projected in this needy field. The citizens of the town have contributed generously, but a great many willing donors were forbidden to contribute by the priest, of whose church they were members. Brethren, to fail now will tend to make it harder, if not impossible, to do our work there. I pray the Lord to move some generous layman to respond by sending a liberal contribution to Rev. L. Hoffpauir, Gold Dust, La.

It was my delightful privilege to worship with the splendid people of White's Chapel last Sunday, and to preach morning and evening to large and attentive congregations. The pastor had discovered there splendid material for the organization of an Epworth League, and at the close of the evening service a League was organized with more than 20 members. There is a great opportunity for a fine League here.

The presiding elder, Brother Wynn, held the second quarterly conference at White's Chapel Monday night. This is the last visit to Brother Wynn as presiding elder, as he has been called to the responsible position of President of Centenary College. We all regret very much to give our beloved brother up, and pray God's richest blessings upon him in his new field.

Brethren, my health is better than it has been for the past five years, and as opportunity affords I am at work for the Master. If you can use me in meetings or otherwise in the next two months, address me at Opelousas, La. A. R. HOFFPAUIR.
May 26, 1913.

AN APPRECIATION.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our brethren and friends who have so kindly written us words of love and sympathy, since the going home of our precious little ones, Mary and Elizabeth. We are passing through deep waters. The home is so sad and silent; the little white bed is removed, and our empty arms and broken hearts make the days seem so long, yet we look upward through our tears for solace from Him who holds them close to His breast.

You can never know what your kind letters meant to us.

Yours in sorrow,
E. L. ALFORD AND FAMILY.
Anguilla, Miss., June 2.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The Board of Church Extension, at its Annual Meeting held in Dallas, Texas, May 1-5, outlined a report for the use of trustees in answering question 32 at the fourth quarterly conferences and instructed the Corresponding Secretary to have same printed for free distribution to such trustees as may desire a printed form upon which to make their reports.

This instruction has been carried out and the form of report, in such numbers as desired, may be secured without cost by writing to W. F. McMurry, Corresponding Secretary, 1025 Brook Street, Louisville, Ky.

PUT THIS IN YOUR BIBLE.

Here is a handy table, which it would be well to cut out or copy for reference in your Bible studies:

A day's journey was about twenty-three and one-fifth miles.

A Sabbath day's journey was about an English mile.

A cubit was nearly twenty-two inches.

A hand's breadth is equal to three and five-eighths inches.

A finger's breadth is equal to one inch.

A shekel of silver was about fifty cents.

A shekel of gold was $3.

A talent of silver was $538.30.

A talent of gold was $13,309.

A piece of silver, or a penny, was thirteen cents.

A farthing was three cents.

A mite was less than a quarter of a cent.

A gerah was one cent.

An ephah, or bath, contained seven gallons and five pints.

A hin was a gallon and two pints.

An omer was six pints.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

CUTTING THE COST OF BALING.

Perhaps one of the biggest items of cost in baling hay with the ordinary power hay press, is that of lining up of belt pulleys, setting and leveling of the engine, and the extra wages of hands required in getting under way. This costly operation must be repeated at every stack.

The press that overcomes this objection is the new John Deere Self-Contained Motor Press. The engine and the baler are on one truck. There are no belts and no pulleys, and no leveling and setting of the engine. The outfit is quickly started and much time saved for actual baling. The powerful eccentric gear drive of this press gives fully 25 per cent more power on working stroke than is possible on ordinary presses.

The wise farmer is demanding this press, for it is always ready to move and quickly set to work. Enables you to spend your time baling instead of moving and setting. Free book No. M135 on this subject can be had by addressing The John Deere Plow Co., Moline, Ill.

STOPPED THOSE PAINS

Copper Hill, Va.—Mrs. Ida Conner, of this place, says: "For years, I had a pain in my right side, and I was very sick with womanly troubles. I tried different doctors, but could get no relief. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I took Cardui, and it relieved the pain in my side, and now I feel like a new person. It is a wonderful medicine." Many women are completely worn-out and discouraged on account of some womanly trouble. Are you? Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Its record shows that it will help you. Why wait? Try it to-day. PAINS ALL OVER.

Houston, Tex.—"For five years," says Mrs. L. Fulechek, of this place, "I suffered with pains all over, especially in my back and side, and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. A friend told me of Cardui. Since taking it, I feel so much better! Now I can do all my housework and pains don't bother me any more at all." Cardui is a strength-building medicine. Fifty years of success have produced, amongst its many users, confidence in Cardui and what it will do. During this time, Cardui has relieved the female ailments of over a million women. Why not yours? Try it to-day. Your druggist sells it.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The possible is not worth striving for, we should undertake the impossible.—Miss Lester.

There should be at least one copy of "In Bathany House" in every auxiliary and that copy should be read by every member of the auxiliary and as many others as might care to read it. The book was written by one of our deaconesses, Miss Mary Elizabeth Smith, and the story portrays very vividly the life and work of a deaconess. It is well worth the money it costs, and the time one would take to read it.

At the recent session of the Missionary Conference a pledge was made by the delegates of two hundred subscriptions to the "Young Christian Worker." Let us follow the example of one woman who writes, "I presented the cause of the Young Christian Worker Sunday morning and secured fourteen subscriptions on my pledge of ten. This paper should be in every Methodist home, especially where there are children."

From Broad Street, Hattiesburg:

At the evening service, May 25, the Woman's Missionary Society had charge of the service. The work of the Sunday school, the Primary Department, the Senior and Junior Leagues, and the Missionary Society were presented by a representative from each. "But the central feature of the program was the presence of, and a talk by, Miss Maud Fall who has been in training the past year at Scarritt Bible and Training School for deaconess work. Beginning with next year's course she will specialize in boys' work. MRS. J. L. NEILL.

Organized in 1893

The formula of Bond's Pills was adopted in 1893 by three of the most prominent physicians of the South, who had many years' experience treating diseases depending on a torpid liver.

Grandly has this splendid combination of anti-bilious and anti-malarial agents sustained the reputations of its originators.

Bond's Liver Pills have long since proved to be a most effective remedy for the troubles arising from torpidity of the liver or the bowels.

The small dose—one little pill—and gentle action, make them almost invaluable.

Intelligent readers will not confound Bond's Liver Pills with the numerous so-called "wonderful" remedies that flood the country, with reckless and misleading claims of astonishing merit.

When you require an honest and gentle liver or bowel stimulant, take one Bond's Liver Pill at bedtime. You will almost certainly wake up well.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Felicity Street Sunday school now has seventy in its Home Department, with a quarterly offering of $10. The visitors of this department have a monthly council where they report and plan their work.

The Sunday school at Bogalusa has about doubled its membership, as well as its efficiency, this year. The superintendent attributes the growth more to the effect of introducing the Graded Literature than to any other cause, as this marked the beginning of new life and growth.

Since the beginning of the year the Ruston Sunday school has organized Junior, Intermediate, and Senior Departments, which are now active, and there are three Adult Classes. Prof. Ray's class of men has forty members, and Mrs. C. B. Carter's class numbers sixty. The offerings go from $5 to $10 each Sunday.

In spite of the fact that only a few adults are being converted, still we continue to do most of the preaching to them, to the neglect of the children—some preachers have never learned the art of preaching to children at all, while others do so only semi-occasionally. "Pastoral instruction of children" sometimes has a very indefinite meaning. If the church of tomorrow is in the Sunday school of to-day, then we should see that the future church is strong in knowledge, in faith, and in good works.

Mr. Marion Lawrance says that he has learned 90 per cent of all he knows about Sunday school work at conventions, which fact suggests the value of getting our workers together for instruction as well as for inspiration. Preachers meet at Annual and District Conferences and in preachers' meetings, the women of the Missionary Society come together regularly, as do also the Epworth Leaguers at times, but our Sunday school workers are strangers to one another, and many are, therefore, lacking in definite knowledge of modern Sunday school methods.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"There is no middle ground as regards influence. Your influence either helps or hinders—lifts up or pushes down."

The "Morris Class" and the "Gleaners," of Eupora, will soon enjoy a joint picnic. These social outings are well worth while.

More than 1000 Sunday school scholars have been converted every day for the last three years. This alone would make the organization well worth while.

Rev. D. C. Foust has organized a Sunday school of about 100 members at Lebanon Church, and is making every effort to bring up the Sunday school end of his work.

Miss Elie Willingham writes of a beautiful and uplifting Mothers' Day in Eupora. Lovely flowers, good music, and an ideal program left an impression not soon to be forgotten.

Mrs. Wadsworth's fine Adult Class at Winona had a beautiful Mothers' Day service, and one that cast the perfume of loving service and mother-memory over the entire Sabbath day.

A third class was promoted from the Primary Class of the First Methodist Church of Corinth, Miss., on May 18. Mrs. Dr. Riley, formerly of Greenwood and a skilled teacher, will have charge of this lively class.

"If boys are not organized in the churches, they will organize on the outside." Again, "The problem of discipline in the teen age in the Sunday school is solved only when every boy and girl has something to do."

Miss Willingham's Morris Class has given another member to the general Sunday school work: Hon. A. A. Pogue, ex-mayor of Eupora, took charge recently of 18 Boy Scouts, and Mrs. Pogue entertained the whole crowd at dinner.

Every Adult Class reaches its highest and best when its members are built up and fitted for Christian service, and then go out and accomplish great things for the Master. No teacher should be otherwise than pleased and grateful when this call comes to even the last pupil in the class.

The president of a really enthusiastic adult class in an equally enthusiastic Sunday school, who listened to the splendid reports from the various classes on May 18, was impressed with what the school could do, with a small incentive, toward holding its own for the summer, and offered to purchase two banners to be held each Sunday by the two classes making the best records in attendance and lessons. In a moment, a teen age class of boys flashed the word along the line that they meant to have and hold one of the banners—and that they will. Yet, some people say you can't get boys interested in the Sunday school or win them to regular attendance. Just try!

Here are some practical social service activities that will interest teen age classes of girls (and these have already been done by other girls, so the path has been blazed and the worth of the goal proven): Sing at the Orphans' Home, Old Ladies' Home or Poor House once a month; make clothes for mission children; give post-card showers to absentees and shut-ins; "go in a bunch" to call on irregular pupils; visit the sick; read to shut-ins; cut out quilt pieces and take thread, etc., to old mothers whose hands ache for some such easy familiar thing to do; start a missionary cabinet, thereby learning the meaning of the words, hear, see, give, and go. Such girls are able assistants in the Cradle Roll and Home Departments. You can do anything with young people if you love them well enough.

HOW COCA COLA REFRESHES.

The remarkable success which has attended the sale of Coca-Cola has been explained in many different ways. Some have attributed it to "good advertising," others to "efficient management," others to its "delicious flavor" and still others to the fact that it was the first in the field of "trade-marked" soft drinks.

In this connection, the opinion of a manufacturing chemist who has analyzed Coca-Cola and studied its history for many years, will prove interesting. He attributes the popularity of the drink in large part to its quality of refreshing both mind and body without producing any subsequent depression. He points out the fact that the chemical composition of Coca-Cola is practically identical with that of coffee and tea (with sugar added) the only material difference being the absence of tannic acid from Coca-Cola. He points to the laboratory experiments of Dr. Hollingworth of Columbia University and of Dr. H. C. Wood, Jr., of Philadelphia which prove conclusively that the caffeine-containing beverages (coffee, tea, Coca-Cola, etc.) relieve mental and muscular fatigue by rendering the nerves and muscles more responsive to the will, thus diminishing the resistance produced by fatigue. These experiments also demonstrate the fact that the caffeine group of beverages differ from the stimulants in that the use of the latter is followed by a period of depression which calls for more stimulation, thus resulting in the formation of a "habit."

The Best Bargain You Ever Made

HOW do you measure the value of a bargain? Suppose you bought an engine that did practically all of your hardest work for you—sawing, pumping, grinding, etc.—and that paid for itself in a short time. Would you call that a good bargain?

An I H C engine will do all that, and more. Having paid for itself, it continues to earn its way by working steadily year after year until you, like our Clay County friend who has used an I H C engine for six years, will say, "My I H C engine is the best bargain I ever made."

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

are thoroughly dependable, and unusually durable. The fine-grained, grey cast iron cylinders and pistons are worked together to a perfect fit. The ground piston rings insure maximum power from the explosion. The ignition apparatus can be understood at a glance. The fuel mixer is the most effective and simplest known. Moving parts are perfectly balanced. Bearings are large and carefully fitted.

I H C engines are made in all styles—vertical and horizontal, portable and stationary, air and water-cooled; in sizes from 1 to 50-horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, distillate, kerosene or alcohol. Gasoline and kerosene tractors, 12 to 60-horse power.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 60—No. 24.

"Prove All Things: Hold Fast That Which is Good."

WHOLE No. 2990.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1913

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

The National Geographic Magazine states that oysters were cultivated in China and Italy 2000 years ago. So it seems that there is at least one good thing that we do not owe to the modernists.

The minister's high calling is not to please his people, but to save them. Elijah was addressed as "he that troubleth Israel," but in reality he stood between the nation and ruin. Too many there are who "love the praise of men more than the praise of God."

No good cause was ever helped either by ignorance or laziness. Satan may indeed turn knowledge into a snare, but he can make of ignorance a greater one. And we had rather risk developing a useful Christian out of an energetic sinner than out of one who has a constitutional fondness for doing nothing. Study to learn of Jesus and work to give him to the world, dear fellow Christian. This is our glorious mission, and we need to be ever busy in its fulfillment. There is no time for trifling.

A layman writing us a few days since said: "We may need to 'standardize' our Church educational institutions, but it is far more important to thoroughly Christianize them." We believe that this is true. It ought to be a rare exception when a boy or girl attends a Methodist school for one session, or more, and leaves it without being won to Christ. We need not fear that we shall render our colleges unpopular if we make the atmosphere about them genuinely religious. What many parents want is a place where their sons and daughters can secure instruction and be positively safe. All over the country they are eagerly inquiring where such institutions may be found.

THE SEASON APART.

One of the regrettable things in this fast age is the decreasing opportunity for solitude. An occasional season apart is indispensable to high living and noble achievements. It is when some earnest man enters into his closet and shuts his door that history begins to be made. Nothing lifts one up like fellowship with a pure and lofty personality. Three years of contact with Jesus transformed humble Jewish peasants into the mightiest men of all the ages. A human being receives his greatest strength and inspiration in communion with God, and such converse can be had only in some quiet place. God sometimes speaks to the nations in tones that reverberate around the planet, as in the storm, or earthquake, or some other terrible catastrophe, but usually his messages are whispered. He who has the roaring thunders at his command prefers to use the "still small voice." Therefore, he is not most heard amid the jargon of the noisy throng, but in the isolated spot where the soul listens alone. Every Christian should have such a place of retirement into which he goes daily to meet and counsel with the Heavenly Father. A life without deep and heart-searching meditation is certain to lack much of the power and riches and fulness that it might have. They who have learned the way into the Divine Presence, and who often travel it, are the burning and shining lights in the Kingdom.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S LAWSUIT.

Some time since Col. Theodore Roosevelt brought suit against Mr. George A. Newitt, editor of the Iron Ore, a weekly paper published in Ishpeming, Michigan, for libel, basing his complaint upon an utterance that appeared in that journal on Oct. 12, 1912, in which the ex-President was accused of frequently getting drunk and using profane language. The trial of this case was recently taken up and was brought to a conclusion on May 31, the verdict being a sweeping vindication of Col. Roosevelt from the charges against him, both the judge and Mr. Newitt concurring in the verdict of the jury and affirming that the testimony was absolutely convincing. Mr. Roosevelt, after the defendant in the suit had withdrawn his accusations, generously waved all claims for a money indemnity, stating that he did not desire to profit financially by the slander which had been published, but only to disprove it.

There are perhaps some who think that so distinguished a man as our versatile ex-President belittled himself by going to law about such a matter, and that it would have been better if he had ignored this defamation by a newspaper; but we do not at all concur in that view. Nothing should be counted more priceless than one's character, and we think that a person has a right to be indignant whenever false reports that are calculated to injure him are placed in circulation, and that such maligners should be taken promptly to task. We by no means agree with Mr. Roosevelt on all questions and we regard him as being very far from faultless, but he is one of the nation's most famous citizens, and it will be worth much to the youth of our land to know that he is a man of sobriety and clean speech. Posterity also is entitled to have the facts in the case.

The reckless manner in which public men are assailed by newspapers in this day is a grave and threatening evil, and how to correct it, without unduly restricting the liberty of the press, is one of our most perplexing problems. Senator Works, of California, recently introduced in the United States Senate a bill dealing with this question and made an extended and forceful address upon it. We were glad to see this, because this matter deserves the careful study of our ablest publicists and statesmen.

Though we have many worthy men upon the tripod, this is the age of yellow journalism, and many of our secular periodicals are both corrupt and indecent. Some of them are positively unfit to enter a pure home and are little else than sewers pouring accumulated filth over the land. If we were asked to catalogue the agencies that are doing most to curse our citizenship and unmake the American Republic, we are not sure but that we should first write down, an unreliable and conscienceless press. We need few things worse than we do a larger number of secular publications that are independent, alert, vigorous, fearless, patriotic, and true to that which is highest and best in our civic and social life—journals that do not exist merely to make money, but to instruct the people and elevate their ideals, to create a sound public sentiment and rightly direct it, and to promote in every possible way the upward march of the race.

A NOTABLE CAREER.

Rev. Felix R. Hill, D. D., who has lately resigned as the President of Centenary College and who will cease to be connected with that historic institution with the close of the present term, has long been one of the distinguished personalities of Southern Methodism. He is a son of the Volunteer State, having been born in Nashville, the Athens of the South. He was educated in the public schools of the Tennessee Capital and at the University of Nashville, where he received the B. A. degree. He entered the ministry at an early age and has filled pastorates in the following towns and cities: Pulaski, Tenn., Murfreesboro, Tenn., Nashville, Mohele, New Orleans (twice), St. Louis, Baltimore, Kansas City, Louisville, and Shreveport. He went from the last named place to his second pastorate in New Orleans, and while serving here, his health failed and he asked the Louisiana Conference for a supernumerary relation, which was granted him. Before the year had passed, however, he was called to the presidency of Centenary College in an emergency, and for three and a half years he has directed the affairs of that institution with unusual ability and success.

Dr. Hill's life ambition, however, has been to be an efficient and useful Methodist itinerant, and wherever he was assigned he gave himself diligently to his pulpit and pastoral duties. The late Bishop Seth Ward is known to have said that he regarded Dr. Hill as perhaps the greatest pastor in the M. E. Church, South. Nothing so delights him as the regular work of the Christian ministry, and during his life he has refused a number of calls to the tripod and schoolroom. It has always been his habit to preach extemporaneously. A discriminating friend, who has been closely associated with him for the past two years, says: "He has a remarkable memory. He can quote more poetry than any other man that I have ever known. He has a wonderful faculty for getting on with people—the term, 'Great Pacificator', might aptly be applied to him."

Dr. Hill has done a monumental work at Centenary and his achievements there have gone far beyond all expectation. The number of students has more than doubled during his incumbency, and though the resources of the institution are meager, its obligations have been met in a most satisfactory manner. We are not informed as to Dr. Hill's plans for the future, but whether he shall stay among them or go elsewhere, he may feel assured that he will have the love and prayers of the Methodists of Louisiana. Never can they forget the splendid service which he has rendered them.

THE ITINERANCY.

There are several arguments in favor of the Methodist itinerancy. One of the most powerful incentives to action is self-interest. This is not always an honorable motive. In fact, Christianity is altruistic in its essence and purpose. Unselfish service of others in obedience to God's will is the essential substance of our holy religion. Self-interest as a governing motive power is eliminated from conduct in the Wesleyan plan of pulpit supply. The minister is not always the best judge of the place for him to work. A man in a rural district may think he ought to fill a city pastorate. On the contrary, the country preacher may, in the godly and wise judgment of the cabinet, be sent to a large town. In other words, the members of the Annual Conferences submit cheerfully to the decision and discriminating discernment of their brethren as to the place where they shall work. It is a very easy matter for a minister to persuade himself that he can do better work where the salary is larger. We have all heard the story of the little son of a preacher whose denomination calls its pastors: He said his father had a call to a charge which paid a good deal more than the one he was serving and that his father was in the office praying over it, but that his mother was packing the trunk all the same; so it is apt to be when human interests and advantage are consulted.

There are fewer Methodist preachers without work and fewer Methodist Churches without a pastor than in any other religious denomination. By our system of pulpit supply every charge has a preacher for one year and perhaps for four years. In the town where the writer has resided for 28 years the Methodist Church has had fewer changes than the churches that call their pastors, and there has been less dissatisfaction than in the other congregations. The itinerancy contemplates giving the poorer country appointments the benefits of the best talent by an interchange of service. It is said of Bishop Pierce that he stated that he knew of very few congregations, if any, whom he would like to preach to consecutively for more than four years and of very few churches that would like to hear him preach for over four years. It is also an advantage that no Methodist preacher stays long enough in one place to become entangled with the affairs and business of the world. The man of God should be a man of one work. Upon the whole, we like our Methodist itinerant system. UNCLE JOE.

BROTHER BORDERS' EXCLUDED ARTICLE.

Dear Doctor Meek: Herewith I send you the original article on the drama, precisely as it was first submitted. Of course it should be understood that if it were being written now, after what has been published, it would address itself to some issues recently raised. For example, it would aver that there is not a line in the Discipline of our Church which forbids the theater. It is only the indecency of the stage which is reprobated, and indecency is detestable anywhere. The phrase in the Bishop's Address which alludes to the stage also inveighs against the obscenity of the printed page, but no man interprets this to mean that preachers should discourage decent literature.

I. D. BORDERS.

Aberdeen, Miss.

The article referred to by Brother Borders appears below.

THE QUESTION OF THE DRAMA.

By I. D. Borders.

It is not my purpose to take issue with the position of the Editor in his recent utterance upon the lawfulness of the theater as a diversion for Christian people. I have too modest an estimate of the value of my opinions for that, but it does occur to me that my own ideas upon the subject are so variant from those which are quite generally received among Methodists as that their statement may not only be permissible but perhaps demanded. I should shrink from saying aught, however, were I not constrained to believe that the position of the Church generally is an untenable one which really prejudices the end it desires to accomplish.

The excerpt from an article by Dr. A. C. Dixon, which the Editor quoted, seems to me to miss the point at issue wholly. The stage is not seeking to make its audiences act or simulate virtue or happiness or whatever is sought to be inculcated by any given drama; it is giving an object lesson in these things. It is not fair to say that Christian preaching is directed toward making man honest, whereas the stage attempts to cause him to affect honesty. Each strives to point out the value of honesty, the stage by example, the pulpit by precept. Of course I am understood to mean the higher exponents of the drama, just as I mean the true, manly ministry of Christ. There are many unworthy theatricals, just as there are doubtless some unenviable, ranting apostles of cant.

The end of all Christian effort is the formation of character which comports with Christ's ideals. Undoubtedly preaching is a powerful and God-appointed instrumentality to this end. But it need not be thought of as enjoying a divine monopoly in this regard. Men are naturally constituted so that they are readily swayed and influenced by public speech, but God has made them susceptible to many other impressions, particularly so to those of example. What we hear may move us, what we see almost certainly does so even more effectively.

Is it not time that the Church should recognize the powerful ally which it might have in legitimate drama, and instead of bringing a railing accusation against all acting, engage in a discriminatory effort to condemn the bad and commend the wholesome? As it is, thousands of our people, misled by our anathema, are denying themselves an avenue of culture and development which would lead them to more useful and to richer living, while many more thousands, knowing in their hearts the wholesale indictment unjustified, are unable to make distinctions which make the pleasures safe, and without guidance, find themselves drawn into hurtful associations. Some of our delimitations are inconsistent enough to provoke a smile. A clean, wholesome drama is under the ban, some say, while precisely the same story unprofessionally acted or recited by a monologist may be under church patronage. It would be quite wicked to see Madame Bernhardt in some great role, but no censure attaches to our viewing her through the moving pictures. Grand opera is wicked, but Caruso in a Victrola is pious enough for the deacon's parlor!

Will I be pardoned if I quote one for whom I have great respect, one whose purity of character I have never seen approached, one whose strength of mind and moral muscle has challenged my ever increasing admiration? My wife writes me in her latest letter:

'About four years ago I read first of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird," and have wished ever since I might see it. When I found it was to be played here I tried to get tickets, and after standing in line twenty minutes before the window was open, I invested in tickets for self and children. I never got so much return from money before. I only wished and wished for you to take in the many beautiful lessons with me. I observe the children have been noticeably kinder to each other and more loving to and thoughtful of me, and I myself was strengthened and encouraged. Such a pity, dear, these lessons cannot be placed before the eyes of more. From Carolyn's size to gray-heads, all were held interested to the end. The first thing Carolyn told William (who could not go) on reaching home was of the beautiful spirit, "Mother Love," that followed the children in all their wanderings, and of the wonderously beautiful silvery robe she wore, a robe made of the smiles and kisses and kind words of her children, and each time a child did or said a kind, loving thing a bit more of silver beauty was added to the robe. The keynote of the play is the pursuit of happiness, the "blue bird," which the fairy says is all which is needed to cure a sick child. Two woodcutter's children, boy and girl, undertake the hunt for the sake of their little friend, and after a long quest they return to find the bird in their own home. There are so many beautiful lessons; the quick moving "hours" always going on as they troop from the clock—and they move so fast! The children's best friends come to life as bread, milk, sugar, fire, water, their faithful dog, and help them find happiness. They find all the "little happinesses," "loving the sunsets," "seeing the stars rise," "wild flowers," "of spring," "raindrops," and all the "big joys," "being well," "doing right," "being just." Ghosts are shown to be things not to frighten children, as they come from the graves, but beautiful spirits that the children love; the boy exclaims: "there are no dead, they were only resting there!" In a mystical land of memory they find grandmother and father, brothers and sisters, not dead, but "gone away" and sleeping there until called to life by the loving thought and remembrance of their living love. In the land of the future there was a depth of thought and beauty in the sight of unborn souls awaiting their time of opportunity to live on earth. No one was allowed to go with Father Time empty handed."

Wicked? I could wish most of our sermons were equally adapted to portray great truths!

CONCERNING CENTENARY COLLEGE.

I have accepted a great task, and as long as my service seems expedient, I am resolved to devote every power I possess to its faithful performance. Centenary College in Shreveport has steadily advanced, but its progress will soon be arrested unless Louisiana Methodism arises to its duty of erecting another building and of creating additional endowment. While other Conferences around are succeeding in their educational enterprises, the Louisiana Conference must go forward, for standing still virtually means retreat from the field. Unquestionably the opportunity in Shreveport is a great one, and I have accepted the presidency of Centenary in the hope that the preachers and laymen of our Church in Louisiana will rally enthusiastically to its support and its enlargement. Whatever differences of opinion we may have had in the past, and however many mistakes may have been made, this is now the only possible opportunity to promote a college for young men.

The first request I have to make of the friends of the College is to join with me in securing students to fill the dormitory for the coming session. Small folders have been mailed to the preachers in advance of the catalogues, and just at this time when parents are deciding where they will send their boys next session, I ask that the preachers take time to hand these to persons who ought to patronize the school, and to say to them that as far as in me lies, in co-operation with the faculty, I will give close personal supervision to the students, especially the younger ones. Send names and addresses of interested persons.

I appreciate more than I can say, the words of encouragement and assurances of help that have come from many sources. I am thankful that words of evil prophecy have been kept from reaching my ears. In preparing to give up my duty as presiding elder, and at the same time endeavoring to do some necessary planning for Centenary, I am having a rather strenuous time, and I earnestly beg for the prayers of the brethren. I will likely move to Shreveport about June 20th.

LAKE JUNALUSKA BIBLE AND EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCE.

By Dr. James Cannon.

The Bible and Evangelistic Conference, which is to be held June 30 to July 10 at the Southern Assembly Grounds, on Lake Junaluska, near Waynesville, N. C., announces herewith a program that will doubtless prove interesting to a large number of pastors, Bible students, and Christian people generally throughout the South. Waynesville is one of the most healthful and beautiful resorts in the entire range of the Blue Ridge Mountains. It is doubtful if a more delightful mountain climate can be found anywhere in the Southern States than that which invigorates the body and refreshes the mind of those who make their summer sojourn at this choice and beautiful spot that has been selected for the location of the great summer Chautauqua and Assembly Ground of Southern Methodism. Nature is at her best in these glorious wooded mountains and fertile valleys.

To those who would like to combine, in a sojourn of two or three weeks in the mountains, recreation for the body, entertainment and instruction for the mind, and edification and inspiration for the spiritual man, no better choice can be made for the summer of 1913 than this Bible and Evangelistic Conference at Waynesville.

June 25-29 a great Missionary Conference will be held on the Assembly Ground at which it is expected there will be a very large attendance. Immediately following the adjournment of this great gathering the Bible and Evangelistic Conference will begin its session on the morning of Monday, June 30. A specially favorable round-trip rate has been arranged with the railroads for those who wish to attend both of these Conferences, the round-trip ticket costing only a little more than one-half of the ordinary rate.

The main emphasis at this Conference will be placed on two subjects—the Bible and Evangelism. During the first week the Bible will receive most attention, and during the second week the subject of Evangelism will be especially studied and emphasized.

The opening address of the Conference will be delivered by Bishop James Atkins, the President of the Board of Directors of the Assembly, in whose mind was first conceived the idea which has taken final shape in this great Southern Chautauqua for Methodists. It will be fitting for him to say something concerning the place and moral value in Christian life and service, of seasons and places of rest, recreation, and diversion combined with efforts to instruct the mind, deepen the spiritual life, and inspire men and women for larger Christian service.

Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, known and honored by everybody in the bounds of Southern Methodism, will deliver two addresses on the opening day of the Conference. His theme in the morning will be "Lest We Forget—the White Man's Burden," and the subject of his evening lecture will be "Africa." It is hoped that Prof. John Wesley Gilbert, of Paine College, Augusta, Ga., Bishop Lambuth's colored traveling companion on this trip, will also speak the same day on "The Black Man's Problem." It will be arranged, if possible, that Bishop Lambuth's address on "Africa" shall be accompanied by the stereopticon pictures that Prof. Gilbert took while the two traveled together in this strangely interesting land.

Dr. Charles L. Goodell, of New York City, is perhaps the most successful and widely known evangelist-pastor in American Methodism. In addition to preaching on Sunday, July 6, he will on the four succeeding days discuss some or all of the following themes: "The Prepared Man," "The Prepared Message," "The Prepared Church," "Christ and the Social Order," "Criticism and Evangelism," "Individualism and Collectivism," "Heralds of a Passion." Dr. Camden M. Cobern, after filling the pulpits of some of the largest city pastorates in the Methodist Episcopal Church, was called to the professorship of the English Bible in Allegheny College, Pennsylvania. He has also made a special study of archaeology in its bearing on and illuminating of the Old and New Testaments, and has not only visited Palestine and other sections of the Orient in prosecuting his archaeological investigations, but has spent the past year in this kind of work in Egypt. He is a speaker of extraordinary power. He will spend a week at the Conference, and discuss some or all of the following themes: "The New Testament in the Light of Recent Discoveries," "St. Paul the Missionary," "St. Paul the Letter Writer," "Jesus and His New Gospel," "The Twelve Apostles," "Christ and the Absolute Religion," and it is also expected that he will deliver two or three lectures in the evening, illustrated with stereopticon slides made from photographs taken by himself, the general subject of these lectures being "Modern Discoveries in Bible Lands."

Dr. Lincoln Hulley, President of Stetson University, at De Land, Fla., is regarded as one of the most fluent, entertaining, and popular platform speakers on biblical and literary themes in the South. He makes the Bible entertaining and beautiful, as well as an instructive and divine message to the human soul, and those who hear him once come during the first week of the Conference and will deliver lectures designed to show "How to Read the Scriptures" and "How to Read Sacred Poetry." Dr. John A. Rice, of Fort Worth, Tex., is one of the most scholarly preachers and successful pastors of Southern Methodism. He is, by years of study and preparation, well equipped for work on the lecture platform no less than in the pulpit. He is a thoughtful, forceful, impressive speaker. He will interpret the messages of some of the great prophets of the Old Testament, and himself bring a most important series of messages to the Conference.

Dean Wilbur F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, because of his extensive experience in such matters, was requested some months ago by the Directors of the Assembly to arrange and conduct the program of the Conference. He was also requested himself to deliver a daily lecture in the early morning on the literature of the New Testament with special reference to the revelation and exaltation of Christ as the crowning purpose and inspiration of this literature. His lectures are designed to meet the needs of thoughtful students and other visitors who shall have come to the Conference to study and to learn as well as to be entertained and edified.

Rev. George R. Stuart, pastor of Church Street Methodist Church, Knoxville, Tenn., is the best-known evangelist-pastor in Southern Methodism. No man in the South has greater success on the platform in swaying a great multitude while discussing a great moral issue than George Stuart. He will not only be assigned an important hour on Sunday, but be called on to render other needed service in carrying out the program of the Conference.

No layman in Southern Methodism enjoys the confidence of the entire Church more fully than does Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis. He is our great lay leader in everything for which the Church stands, and his influence extends far beyond the bounds of Methodism. His pre-eminent love for and success in Sunday school work and his effectiveness as a public speaker make it fitting that he should address the Conference on "The Sunday School and the Saving of the Young." No program on Evangelism should fail to recognize and emphasize this mighty agency.

These two gentlemen, George R. Stuart and John R. Pepper, have rendered invaluable service in the efforts that have been put forth to provide for Southern Methodists in the heart of the mountains a summer home and place of assembly that shall meet the physical, social, intellectual, and spiritual needs of our people.

Suitable provision will be made for music and the service of song. No fees will be charged for membership in the Conference. Nearly all, if not quite all, of the exercises will be open to the public free of charge. Waynesville possesses ample facilities for entertaining all who come. Board may be obtained at reasonable rates at the numerous hotels and boarding houses in the city and vicinity.

This beautiful mountain region of North Carolina known as the "Land of the Sky" is famed the world over, and is visited by people from all parts of the world who are in search of health and beautiful scenery. A visit to these historic Carolina mountains is the dream of every summer tourist, at least in the South, and one visit only makes the traveler and sojourner all the more anxious to come a second time. With nature and mountain climate appealing to busy and tired workers, and a Conference program unsurpassed in its attractions for the intellectual and spiritual man, it is expected that a large number will spend from June 30 to July 10 at the quiet and restful little mountain city that has been selected as the site of the Southern Assembly.

While Dr. Goodell, during the last three days of the Conference, is discussing the great themes of evangelism, Dr. Hulley will divide time with him and deliver five addresses on the greatest book of sacred poetry in the literature of the world, the Book of the Psalms, his themes being as follows: "The Hebrew Hymnal," "Israel's Lyric Bards," "David the Singer and Poet," "Songs of the Inner Life," and "Songs of the Daily Task."

Prof. George M. Sleeth, of Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh, Pa., is said to have rare gifts in the reading of the Scriptures and of sacred poetry; and he shows, as few teachers can, how to interpret the Scriptures and the great hymns by the manner in which they are read. He will

According to statistics given out from Washington, the American Indians are again increasing in population. In 1900 there were but 237,000 of them in the United States, and in 1910 there were 261,683. The most important tribes are the Cherokee, the Navajo, the Chippewa, the Choctaw, and the Teton Sioux.

One of the objections of the Japanese Government to the terms of the Webb Anti-Alien Land Bill, which was recently passed in California, is the fact that in it the Japanese are termed Mongolians. The yellow men of Nippon deny the charge, saying that they are no more Mongolians than are the Americans Indians. To what race, then, do the Japanese belong?

Dr. G. D. Strayer, in a current bulletin issued by the United States Bureau of Education, favors the establishment of a Commission of Professional Educators, whose business it shall be to devise a standard of efficiency for city school superintendents. Dr. Strayer believes that the present system of selecting the heads of public schools, oftentimes by politicians or book publishing interests, is entirely wrong.

According to an order issued by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, every ship of the American Navy is to become a floating industrial institute, and the officers are to become professors. It is the plan of Secretary Daniels to teach the American youth who volunteer in the Navy something other than how to fight. He will offer courses of instruction in all the crafts and trades, as well as some studies in the academic branches.

According to the report of Chancellor Kincannon of the Mississippi State University, the enrollment in that school was less this year than last, due to the opening of the Normal School, which attracted many pupils who would otherwise have attended at Oxford. His report contained a recommendation that Prof. Leonard J. Farley, a former State Senator and a lawyer of some note, be appointed as Dean of the Law Department.

Japan has had in force for thirty-five years a compulsory school attendance law, and the result is that that nation is by far the freest from illiteracy of any of the nations of the Orient. There are more than 300 daily newspapers published in the Empire, besides the weeklies and other periodicals. Some of the larger dailies have a circulation of over 150,000 (daily). Next to the newspapers, the novel furnishes the most popular reading for the Japanese.

At the annual reunion of the U. C. Vs. at Chattanooga recently, General Bennett H. Young of Louisville, Ky., was re-elected Commander-in-Chief for the ensuing year, and Jacksonville, Fla., was selected as the next place of meeting. Until May 28, the ranking officer of the survivors of the Southern Confederacy was Major-General Junsford L. Lomax, of Virginia, who died on that date. He was the last of the officers who attained the rank of a Major-General.

A federal law recently became effective which makes a theft of articles in transit a crime against the United States and not against the State in which the crime is committed. This law was made necessary by the fact that State laws require complainants to show where a theft was committed, and in the case of thieves stealing from a moving train, such proof could not be furnished. Again, an article stolen is sometimes taken from a train in one State, and the thief apprehended in another State.

The recent death of Alfred Austin, the poet laureate of England, has left that nation without a representative poet. Rudyard Kipling, although a writer of rare gifts appears to have offended the loyalty of England because of a poem in which he referred to Queen Victoria as the "widow of Windsor," and is no longer mentioned as an eligible for the place. Other poets whose names have been mentioned as possible recipients of the

In the 1770 chapters of Confederate Veterans, there are now only 50,000 members. There were in all 750,000 men of the South who enlisted in the war of the sixties. The ranks are thinning fast, and the number will grow smaller at a more rapid rate from now on. There are 200,000 members of the G. A. R. chapters, and there were 2,772,500 enlisted soldiers in the Northern ranks. It perhaps would not be far amiss, in view of the fact that the Southern warriors withstood the Northern forces that were four times their size for four years, to say that there are possibly more real soldiers among the 50,000 U. C. Vs., than there are among the 200,000 G. A. Rs.

ACCORDED A NEW TRIAL.

Dear Mr. Editor: We have received the following cable: "Yun accorded new trial."

We have not had time for a letter giving fuller explanation. An extended dispatch from Seoul, Korea, has been published on this side of the ocean, of which the following is a brief extract: "The Supreme Court here to-day nullified the decision of the Appeals Court, which, on May 20, sentenced six prominent Koreans to varying terms of imprisonment on a charge of conspiring against the Japanese Governor General, Count Terauchi.

"The court ordered a re-examination of the case by the Tai-ku Court of Appeals, on the ground that the judgment of the Seoul Court had not made it clear whether actual preparations had been made by the conspirators for the assassination of the Governor General, and the chances are that the case will be dropped. The Supreme Court holds that both secret plotting and actual preparation are necessary for conviction.

"The Seoul Court of Appeals, in the second trial, sentenced Baron Yun Chi-ho, a former Cabinet minister, to six years' imprisonment; Yan Ki-tak, former editor of the vernacular edition of the Korean Daily News; An Tai-juk, Im Chi-chung and Yi Seungnun, all to six years, and Ok Ewan-pin to five years, while 99 of the accused were acquitted." MERIDIAN MALE AND FEMALE COLLEGES.

Some important forward movements are under way in connection with the Meridian Male College and Meridian Woman's College of Meridian, Miss. In the first place, funds will be available to aid in defraying the expenses of young men and women who are preparing themselves for religious work. Contests in the form of competitive examinations will be conducted, and those making the best grades will be awarded valuable scholarships. Prof. Roy Young, an eminent violinist and artist has been added to the regular staff of teachers for the two schools. The management of the schools in the future will be so arranged that President J. W. Beeson will attend to all the office work pertaining to both schools, and President M. A. Beeson will spend some time in the field and assume charge of the Science departments of the schools.

It is further arranged that the higher classes of the two colleges shall be combined, and the institutions to that extent be co-educational. General improvements in buildings, the campus, and in the faculty, as well as in the management, are being planned, and the Presidents of the schools are looking forward to a still larger degree of prosperity. 3. All the districts but two so far have sent in contributions.
4. Why does the church not pay the retired preachers $500? Help get this fund, and the Mississippi Conference will do it.
5. If you have not yet taken the collection, do so as soon as possible.
6. Send the money at once to Rev. T. J. O'Neill, Treasurer, Montrose, Miss. N. B. HARMON, Yazoo City, Miss.

PERSONAL.

Mr. D. A. Saunders, of Starkville, Miss., who recently was quite ill in St. Louis, has returned home, where he is steadily gaining in strength. Mrs. Saunders and her daughter, Miss Louise, had engaged passage to Europe where they expected to spend the summer, but were forced to give up their trip when Brother Saunders was stricken with illness. We earnestly pray that the honored head of this happy household may soon be rid of all his ailments and able to take up his work again. We were about to write with his accustomed vigor, but we think that that might with profit be somewhat abated. Brother Saunders is one of the few men that we have known who are disposed to overwork themselves.

The following communication from Rev. J. F. Foster, of De Ridder, La., speaks for itself: "I am off by log train to-day to one of the turpentine camps to hold services on a front gallery. When last there I had a fair audience, and one woman of about forty years of age admitted that the sermon was the first she had heard since early girlhood. I am also doing mission work in the town of Grabow, which was last year the scene of the timbermen's trouble. I go there by buggy two Sundays in the month. I was there last Sunday conducting Sunday school, teaching a Bible class, and preaching. I certainly had a full day, having five services in all—three sermons, two Bible classes, and the conducting of one Sunday school, besides a four and one-half mile ride through the hot sun. Was at Oakdale and preached the Commencement Sermon on May 25, and will deliver the evening sermon at the State Normal Commencement in Natchitoches next Sunday."

The following extract from a letter received from Rev. W. W. Holmes, the popular pastor of our church at Ruston, La., is full of interest: "Last Friday I had the pleasure of attending the closing exercises of the Ruston High School. This school has an enrollment of about 600. A good lady gave three medals for general excellency for the year's work, a medal for each of the departments—Junior, Intermediate, and High School. Two girls from our Orphanage won the medals from the Intermediate and High School Departments. Leola Greer made an average of 97.17-24 per cent, and her sister, Bertie May Greer, led the whole school with the high average of 98.1-8 per cent. About eight other students received honorable mention, four of whom—Sallie and Fannie Darton, Lois Hammit, and Allen Bennett—were from the Orphanage. I understand that all the orphans in school have made a most excellent record. They attend our Sunday school and church services and their deportment is ideal. I am proud of them. Brother and Sister Fontaine are doing a good work, and they ought to have the help of every Methodist in the State."

Mansfield Female College.

MANSFIELD, LA.

The year 1912-13 has been the best year in many. The boarding students number 150 per cent more than last year, and the local patronage has been 100 per cent larger. The graduating class is the largest in twelve years. The income for board and tuition has been $13,500, against $8,500 for the past few years. Of the $13,500, $13,000 has been collected, and to-day the College has not a dollar of indebtedness except the bonds. We have paid every obligation of the year and nearly $1,000 of old accounts.

Our new catalog is one of the neatest and prettiest. We have 1500 copies. Write for one and send us names of probable students.

The College kept open house to all its patrons during Commencement, and it has been our delight that we had friends from all over the State to enjoy the various exercises.

4. Mr. H. F. Laflamme, Executive Secretary, Laymen's Missionary Movement.
5. Mrs. Lucy Ryder Meyer, celebrated writer, lecturer and organizer of Deaconess Work.
6. Dr. W. F. Oldham, Missionary Secretary, M. E. Church.

WORTH MEDITATING UPON.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, formerly Editor of the New York Christian Advocate.

In all the Churches those ministers most distinguished for their piety, most zealous in self-denying labors, and most successful in genuine revivals of religion, are most opposed to the theater, while those * * * luxurious and tolerant of worldliness, with few exceptions, furnish ministerial apologists for the theater. * * * In local churches, where the members in general give themselves up to theater-going and kindred amusements, spiritual power declines to the lowest ebb, revivals are unknown, and conversions are rare, and mostly among children. In particular Churches, whatever may have been their past history, whenever a genuine, widespread, and powerful revival takes place, the people spontaneously renounce the theater, and no instance can be assigned of such a revival occurring in any Church contemporaneously with a general attendance of its members on the theater.

Here and there a brilliant young writer or preacher, a novelist or an utterer of startling paradoxes, may favor the theater, but his observations on this and other subjects are as incapable of serious refutation as the incoherent ravings of frenzy. Such a minister is said to have declared that "to see a certain actor in tragedy has a better religious effect than an hour of prayer." These wild talkers soon come to pass at their proper worth.

JOHN WESLEY SANDELL.

John Wesley Sandell was born Sept. 18, 1829, at the Sandell home three miles northwest of Magnolia, Miss., and passed to his eternal reward from his home in Magnolia, May 17, 1913.

Young Sandell spent his early life on the farm, where he grew to manhood, availing himself of such educational advantages as were afforded. For a time he superintended a large plantation near the home of his nativity under the regime of slavery. Later he entered the mercantile business at Magnolia in partnership with Dr. J. H. Laney, who was both a dentist and a minister of the Gospel.

Heeding the call of his country for volunteers, the subject of this sketch enlisted in the service of the Confederacy, leaving Magnolia on April 29, 1862, as Second Lieutenant of Quinn's Guards, afterward known as Company K of the Thirtieth Mississippi Regiment of Infantry. He was soon promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant, which position he held till captured in the siege of Port Hudson, July 9, 1863. As a prisoner of war he was transported to Johnson's Island where he was held till the close of the war. A surviving member of his company remembers Brother Sandell's war record as that of a brave and faithful soldier who never shirked a duty nor quailed in the presence of danger. He sometimes preached to the soldiers in camp, neither the strenuousness of army life nor the demoralizing influences incident thereto deterring him from the exercise of the sacred functions of the Gospel ministry.

Following the death of Dr. Otkin, the first chaplain, Brother Sandell was elected chaplain of Stoddell Camp, No. 334, U. C. V., which office he held at the time of his death. One of his last appearances in public was on Decoration Day, April 26, at the Magnolia Cemetery, when he officiated as chaplain in the ceremonies incident to the decoration of the graves of some 200 Confederate soldiers. On this occasion an original poem from his pen was read by one of the Daughters of the local chapter of the U. D. C.

Brother Sandell was married three times. His first wife was Louisa Thompson, to whom he was married Dec. 11, 1856. To them were born two sons: Hugh Murray, born Sept. 29, 1857; died Jan. 6, 1872; and Daniel Ford, born Nov. 12, 1859; died Sept. 23, 1861. The mother of these sons died Sept. 17, 1862.

The second marriage was to Permella L. Powell, Sept. 10, 1865. This union was dissolved by the death of the wife on Dec. 12, 1893. The last marriage, Sept. 15, 1894, was to Mary L. Simons, who survives to mourn his departure.

The following facts relating to the religious and ministerial life of Brother Sandell are gathered from a record kept in his family Bible and from private memoranda found among his papers after his death:

In 1855, at the age of twenty-six years, he was received into the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Topisaw Church, now known as Topisaw Campground. Two years later, on July 4, 1857, he was licensed to preach, the original license, still in a state of preservation, being signed by the late J. G. Jones as presiding elder. His gifts were exercised in the local rank for thirteen years, while he followed the profession of teaching. His ordination papers show that he was ordained Deacon at Canton, Miss., Dec. 1, 1861, and Elder at Brookhaven, Miss., Dec. 4, 1866, Bishop Robert Paine officiating in both instances. In December, 1870, he was admitted into the travelling connection on trial in the Mississippi Conference.

The record of appointments served by Brother Sandell is as follows: Holmesville 1871-1872, Amite 1873, Bogue Chitto 1874, St. Helena 1875, China Grove 1876, Rocky Springs 1877-1878, Magnolia 1879-1881, Pearlinton 1882, Meadville 1883-1884, East Feliciana 1885, Lake 1886, Springfield 1887-1888, supernumerary 1889, Beauregard 1890, Franklinton 1891, Wilkinson 1892, supernumerary 1893-Sept. 1900, Fernwood 1900 (part of the year), Lincoln 1901, Bogue Chitto 1902, Osyka 1903-1905, superannuated 1906-1913. Thus it appears that he was a minister of the Gospel for fifty-six years, and that for nearly forty-three years of this time he was a member of the Mississippi Conference.

The writer's impression of Brother Sandell as a pastor was that he was diligent and painstaking, attending with great care to the smallest details of a pastor's work. Believing in the dignity and importance of the work in which he was engaged, he attended to it in a business-like way.

In his views as expressed privately and publicly, Brother Sandell was thoroughly evangelical. He delighted to see what he called the old-time revival fires kindled on the altars of the Church. He loved his own Church and believed that the doctrines of Methodism constitute the best statement of the doctrines of the Holy Scripture; but his love for Methodism did not render him intolerant toward other evangelical denominations. He loved all God's people. He was fervent in prayer. It was a blessing to hear his trembling voice leading the congregation in its supplication to the throne of grace. He loved the house of God more and more to the last, and if he was absent from worship on Sunday morning it was known that physical infirmities had kept him away.

Brother Sandell delighted to preach, and neglected no opportunity to do so as long as his physical strength would permit. He was sweet spirited in retirement. With him subjective weakening and physical decline did not result in that morbid condition that sees the Church being degraded and the world growing worse. Never a robust man, he realized that in his weakness God was his strength. Having put his hand to the plow in the long ago, he resolutely went forward without looking back. He did not set out to build without first having counted the cost. "For the joy that was set before him," like his Master, he "endured the cross, despising the shame," and the joy made light the cross he bore.

In his last illness Brother Sandell lingered for two weeks, the last several days of which he lay in a comatose condition, from which he aroused at intervals for a few lucid moments. His last periods of consciousness were passed in full view of impending death. At such periods it was a benediction to be about his couch. He calmly talked about death, and expressed the wish that all his friends might be present to witness how peacefully a Christian can die. He hastened in the race with death to dictate messages of love and counsel to relatives and friends. He called by name many of the brethren of the Mississippi Conference and requested that they should be informed of his affection for them in his last hours. To the little children who gazed with pitying eyes upon his wasted form he spoke words of endearment and gave most wholesome advice. For the smallest effort to contribute to his comfort he did not fail to express his gratitude, declaring himself unworthy of such kindness. He entered most heartily into the prayers offered at his bedside, responding with fervent amens.

As long as speech was afforded, passage after passage of Scripture and line after line of familiar hymns were heard to fall from his trembling lips, and even when the voice became too husky to be intelligible, occasional words of praise and of transport could be caught by the ears of the anxious attendants. Toward the end came clearly and distinctly the words of the old hymn:

"Jesus can make a dying-bed
Feel soft as downy pillows are,
While on his breast I lean my head,
And breathe my life out sweetly there."

On the afternoon of the holy Sabbath, May 18, the body was borne to the Magnolia Methodist Church and placed before the chancel, hard by the seat he had been accustomed to occupy through the hour of worship. The writer was assisted in the funeral service by Revs. J. C. Ellis and B. W. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, and R. L. Bunyard, pastor of the Magnolia Baptist Church. From the church the body was carried by loving hands to its last resting place in the Magnolia Cemetery. In his death a disconsolate widow is left to mourn a devoted husband; a community suffers the loss of one of its most honored citizens; the Mississippi Conference loses a worthy veteran from its ranks; and the militant Church has made a contribution to the Church triumphant.

We shall see our fallen comrade again, and in a fairer clime, when for us life's fleeting day is done and we go home to our Father's house of many mansions. J. A. MOORE.

THE INVENTOR OF THE WATCH.

Peter Heinlein, the inventor of the pocket watch, was persecuted for witchcraft when he withdrew from his companions to work on his invention. He was finally cast into prison, where the watch was perfected. After some time he retired to the convent of the Carmelites, where he continued manufacturing watches, giving the proceeds to the order. He died in 1540. At Nuremberg, the scene of his persecutions, a monument has been erected to him.—New York Christian Advocate.

PADDY MINDED THE TELEPHONE.

One morning my sister went to see a friend and took with her our little dog.

When she left she quite forgot the dog, and as soon as our friends discovered him they did all they could to make him leave, but to no avail.

Some hours passed and he was still there. So they telephoned to let us know his whereabouts.

"Bring him to the telephone," said my sister.

One of the boys held him while another put the trumpet to the dog's ear.

Then my sister whistled and called:

"Come home at once, Paddy!"

Immediately he rushed to the door, barking to get out, and soon afterwards arrived at home.—Mayflower.

SIGNS OF SUCCESS.

"What makes you think that Frank will succeed?" said one business man to another, who had just lent a lad of nineteen some money to set him up in a small way. "Well, they used to live back of our house," replied the other, "and he was the only child. His mother was taken ill and was an invalid for several years. Frank went to work after school hours every day, and washed dishes and cooked and even sewed in order to save his mother's strength. The other boys made fun of him, but he set his teeth and stood it, and came out at the head of his class, besides. I'd be willing to back him up twice as heavily as I have done, for he's clear grit right through." The result showed that the speaker was right, for Frank is now one of the most successful young men in the little town.—Comrade.

HOW A PANIC WAS STARTED AND STOPPED.

By Ellen C. Babbitt.

Once upon a time a rabbit was asleep under a palm tree.

All at once he woke up and thought: "What if the world should break up! What then would become of me?"

At that moment some monkeys dropped a coconut. It fell down on the ground just back of the rabbit.

Hearing the noise, the rabbit said to himself: "The earth is all breaking up!"

And he jumped up and ran as fast as he could, without even looking back to see what made the noise.

Another rabbit saw him running, and called after him: "What are you running so fast for?"

"Don't ask me!" he cried.

But the other rabbit ran after him, begging to know what was the matter.

Then the first rabbit said: "Don't you know? The earth is all breaking up!"

And on he ran, and the second rabbit ran with him.

The next rabbit they met ran with them when he heard that the earth was all breaking up.

One rabbit after another joined them, until there were hundreds of rabbits running as fast as they could go.

They passed a deer, calling out to him that the earth was all breaking up. The deer ran with them.

The deer called to a fox to come along, because the earth was all breaking up.

On and on they ran, and an elephant joined them.

At last the lion saw the animals running, and heard their cry that the earth was all breaking up.

He thought there must be some mistake, so he ran to the foot of a hill in front of them, and roared three times.

This stopped them, for they knew the voice of the king of beasts, and they feared him.

"Why are you running so fast?" asked the lion. "O King Lion," they answered him, "the earth is all breaking up!"

"Who saw it breaking up?" asked the lion. "I didn't," said the elephant. "Ask the fox—he told me about it."

"I didn't," said the fox.

"The rabbits told me about it," said the deer.

One after another of the rabbits said: "I did not see it, but another rabbit told me about it."

At last the lion came to the rabbit that had first said that the earth was all breaking up.

"Is it true that the earth is all breaking up?" the lion asked the foolish, timid rabbit.

"Yes, O Lion, it is," said the rabbit. "I was asleep under a palm tree. I woke up and thought: 'What would become of me if the earth should all break up?' At that very moment I heard the sound of the earth breaking up, and I ran away."

"Then," said the lion, "you and I will go back to the place where the earth began to break up, and see what is the matter."

So the lion put the little rabbit on his back, and away they went like the wind. The other animals waited for them at the foot of the hill.

The rabbit told the lion when they were near the place where he slept, and the lion saw just where the rabbit had been sleeping. He saw, too, the coconut which had fallen to the ground near by. Then the lion said to the rabbit: "It must have been the sound of the coconut falling to the ground that you heard. You foolish rabbit!"

And the lion ran back to the other animals, and told them all about it. If it had not been for a wise king of beasts they might be running still.—St. Nicholas.

MRS. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT—AN APPRECIATION.

In the morning of May 9, 1913, exactly three years from the death of her honored husband, Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, for many years a member of the Mississippi Conference, Mrs. Eliza Wailes Hunnicutt departed this life in the city of Jackson, Miss. To pay fitting tribute to such a character demands a readier pen than this writer has ever claimed. An intimate acquaintance, beginning in his youth and extending through more than four decades, has given me an opportunity to know that in all the relations of life she appeared, in its fullness, a strong, great woman such as the Wise Man described as "a crown to her husband, and of price far above rubies." As her husband was known within the gates when he sat among the Elders of the Church, so was she known as the wife in whom his heart did safely trust. As they labored together in the Master's Vineyard their supremest thoughts were of the glory of God and how they might conduce most to the happiness of each other. In an emphatic sense, in the family, in the school room (where she spent many useful years) and in the social circle, none knew her hut to love her. Grace, charm and strength were added to every association into which she came. To wisdom and strong convictions, she so added discretion and charity that none could take offense. To this writer she became more and more a model for women in all the relations of life. In the 17th verse of the third chapter of his Epistle, St. James most accurately portrays her character: Pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance, without hypocrisy." As a pastor's wife she excelled, and in the various charges to which she and Dr. Hunnicutt ministered it will be said with one voice, "A great woman has gone."

Mrs. Hunnicutt was the daughter of Major John H. Magruder and Eliza Wailes, and was born in Madison County, Miss., April 13, 1837. She lived a few days beyond her 76th year. Early in life she joined the Methodist Church and was uncompromisingly true to her convictions, as they coincided with the teachings of that people. She was graduated with honors from Sharon Female College when that institution was in the ascendancy of its usefulness. On August 4, 1859, she was married to Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, then a professor in Madison College at Sharon, Miss., and truer love never received greater reverence. Since the death of her husband her home has been with her sister, Mrs. W. T. J. Sullivan, in the city of Jackson, and up to the day of her departure she was an active member of the Capitol Street Church in that city. She was quietly laid to sleep beside her beloved husband in the Cedar Lawn Cemetery in the western suburbs of the city of Jackson. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Editorial.

BROTHER BORDERS ONCE MORE.

We publish in this issue of the Advocate Brother Borders's article which we rejected some weeks ago because we thought it improper to let it appear in an official Methodist organ. As will be remembered in our controversy which arose with him later, he intimated that an injustice had been done him by referring to this article instead of permitting the people to see it and judge for themselves. It was for this reason alone that we offered to let it appear in the Advocate. This is the second of his articles bearing on the theater, the first having appeared in the Commercial Appeal of January 23, 1913, and the third in the New Orleans Advocate of May 15.

As will be noted, it fully sustains our statement that in this utterance he championed the cause of the professional theater. Indeed, as will be seen, he even goes to the extent of suggesting that "thousands of our people, misled by our anathema, are denying themselves an avenue of culture and development which would lead to more useful and richer living." Nor is this all: the article furthermore shows his family attending the theater, and to their conduct in doing so, he gives his full endorsement. The only point at which it could possibly appear that we have misrepresented Brother Borders in the course of our controversy is that in our last editorial reply, where we made the following statement: "He has not been advocating the view that the Church should change its position, and urging our members to be loyal until that is done; but his course has been utterly to ignore the Discipline of the Church, while publicly extolling the professional drama." This affirmation was strictly true of his utterance in the Commercial Appeal and of that which appeared in the Advocate of May 15 (all that had been published when we made this statement); but in his communication printed this week (which he had offered us), he does suggest that the Church should recede from its position. But there is not in his utterance a syllable urging our people to remain loyal to our rules until this is done; but, on the contrary, the whole effect of his deliverance is to encourage them to become patrons of the stage.

But the quaintest thing that Brother Borders has yet given us is the preface to his present article. The suggestion that it is only "the indecency of the stage that is reprobated" by our Bishops, and the clear implication that, aside from that, they have no objection to it, is something else "new under the sun." He also avers that "there is not a line in the Discipline of Church which prohibits the theater." This is a complete shifting of his position; for in his rejected article he speaks of the Church's attitude as "an untenable one" and of its "anathema" and "ban" against the theater; but, when brought face to face with these inhibitions as they apply to his own conduct, he denies that they exist at all.

But we will say to our variable brother that his first view was right and that the new one he has conjured up is wrong. It is true that in the present Discipline the theater is not specifically mentioned and forbidden; but our General Rules forbid "the taking of such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus; and Methodists have always held that this prohibition includes theater-going. It has never been the rule of our Church to leave it wholly to the individual conscience and judgment to determine what diversions are lawful and permissible. On Page 18 of his book, entitled "Christians and the Theater," Dr. J. M. Buckley, the most eminent of living Methodist historians, in referring to the Methodists of both England and America, says: "Their rule forbidding the 'taking of such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus' has from the beginning been understood to condemn and prohibit going to theaters. Many, in the early history of the movement, were expelled under that rule for attending play-houses, and many were deterred from joining these Societies by the knowledge of this restriction." The Disciplines of 1890, 1894, 1898, and 1902 each contained in its appendix a chapter "on Worldly Amusements," which was prefaced by the following emphatic utterance: "Resolved, That inasmuch as the deliverances of our Bishops, as contained in their quadrennial addresses to the General Conference from time to time, and quoted at length by the Special Committee of Fifteen, have declared dancing, theater-going, card-playing, and the like worldly indulgences to be contrary to the spirit of Christianity, and violative of the General Rules and moral discipline of our Church, as also of the vows of our Church members; we (the General Conference), therefore, heartily endorse the aforesaid deliverance as containing the just and correct interpretation of the law in the premises, and as such this General Conference accepts the same as having equal force and authority as if contained in the body of the Discipline."

This action, which was taken by the General Conference of 1890, was not construed as being designed for indefinite continuance in the Book of Discipline, and was given a place in the subsequent editions in which it appeared by the special order of each General Conference. On the last day of the General Conference of 1906, and almost at the last moment, the matter was brought up and the Bishops were ordered to write a new address on the subject. But no fault was found with the resolution quoted above; not a syllable was uttered indicating that a different statement was desired; on the contrary, the Bishops were at perfect liberty to make an utterance even more drastic if they desired to do so. It is utterly inconceivable that the attitude of our Church toward the theater throughout its entire history was completely changed without the slightest indication of such a purpose, and without a single dissenting voice; and it is equally inconceivable that our College of Bishops have entirely revoked the oft-repeated interpretation of their illustrious predecessors without so much as giving the Church the faintest hint of such action upon their part. That our Chief Pastors have done nothing of the kind is plainly evidenced by the fact that in our Manual of Discipline appearing in 1910 (bearing the same date as our latest Discipline), which was edited by Bishop Candler and approved by the Episcopal College as a whole, is contained a section which expressly mentions theater-going as one of the "diversions that cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus." This places the question as to the views of the Bishops (who are the interpreters of the law) beyond the possibility of reasonable dispute. The Discipline is merely an epitome of our laws; the Manual is an official commentary upon it and, in many respects, its supplement.

But there is another point that we wish to touch upon for a moment—the question of decencies and indecencies at the theater. These are so blended that they cannot be separated. A dignified scene may be followed by a ballet performance. What one will see on the stage when a certain story is played cannot be told merely by reading the book that contains it. Other things are interspersed to give spice. Dr. Buckley forcbly says: "The theater is not to be judged as though its representations were isolated things, like books. It is an institution. Reading has no significance in the way of moral influence. To say of a man, he reads, indicates nothing. To the limited circle who know what he reads the fact of his reading certain books has a moral meaning. But the theater is an institution with a very pronounced character. Theater-going means one thing in the estimation of the public. * * * The attempt is made to compare an institution with isolated facts. If there were in all our cities large institutions known as 'Recreation Halls,' and in them gambling in all its forms, with many more degrading amusements, such as prize fighting and drinking were allowed, and at the same time chess playing and other harmless games were practiced, and these last were in a very small proportion to the evil and sinful things done there, would it be proper for a Christian to patronize these 'Recreation Halls,' and say, 'I ignore the gambling, fighting, and drinking; I discriminate; I go there to play chess.' It may be safely assumed that the very persons who profess to object to the average play and argue in favor of going to the theater to see Shakespeare, would say of such a man, 'Why does he not play chess at home or give it up altogether? Why does he go to those Recreation Halls that are ruining so many?'"

In conclusion we will say, there is in reality no issue between the Editor of the Advocate and Brother Borders. The issue is between him and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to which he stands obliged "not to mend our rules, but to keep them"; and not merely to observe our Discipline himself, but to uphold it and seek to enforce it. If one of our ministers can publicly and repeatedly commend the professional theater, and if his family can attend it and have his paraded approval, then indeed are the bars all down and there is nothing left to prevent the tides of worldliness from overwhelming us—then indeed is the golden age of Southern Methodism in the past, and we may well tremble to face the future that awaits us.

A CHARMING VOLUME.

"The Story of My Life," by Dr. George C. Rankin, the well known Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, is one of the most entertaining books that it has been our pleasure to read in many a day. It gripped us before we had finished the first chapter and we could scarcely lay it down until we had read the last page. The author is one of the most vigorous men in Southern Methodism, and his career has been much more varied than that of the average Methodist minister. He has had throughout his life the fortunate faculty of close observation, and wielding the pen of a ready writer, he has told in a most felicitous and impressive manner of the things that he has seen and felt. Of his ancestry, of the shadow that so early came upon his home in the death of his father, of the struggles of the family with hardships and poverty, the burden of which chiefly fell upon his widowed mother and him, as he was the oldest living child, of his conversion and connection with the Church, of his strenuous battle to obtain an education, of his call to the Christian ministry and the busy years that have since followed—of all these experiences, he has written with a grace and charm that are irresistible. But Dr. Rankin's life story is vastly more than a mere biography. It abounds in graphic accounts of happenings that took place in the picturesque mountains of East Tennessee and elsewhere, and in anecdotes and estimates of the various celebrities with whom the author from time to time has come in contact. Passages of striking beauty occur here and there, and the work as a whole is uncommonly well done.

In preparing and bringing out this publication Dr. Rankin has performed a good service to the whole Church and to the Southern people in general. We predict that the volume is one which will live and circulate. The brother who misses reading it will miss much. It is written for the masses of the people, and we sincerely wish that it could find its way into every Southern Methodist home. We are not able to state the price, but we unhesitatingly affirm that it is worth many times what it will cost to secure a copy. It may be had by writing Messrs. Smith & Lamar at Nashville, Tenn., or Dallas, Texas, or Rev. G. W. Bachman, of Winona, Miss. We shall be glad when Dr. Rankin sees fit to give us his promised second volume.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Seashore Divinity School will begin at the Seashore Camp Ground on Tuesday evening, June 24, at 8 p.m., and continue through July 3. The program arranged has some most excellent features, and it is to be hoped that there will be a large attendance. The leading speakers will be Bishop Candler, Dr. Rice, and Dr. Cope, none of whom are strangers to the preachers of Mississippi and Louisiana. It is worth a trip across the continent to hear Bishop Candler alone in a series of addresses. The undergraduate work will be in the hands of competent instructors, and young men taking the Conference courses of study would do well to avail themselves of the advantages offered. The Seashore Camp Ground is one of the most attractive spots in the entire South—an ideal place for a brief season of profitable study and helpful recreation. Let all who can begin to prepare to matriculate in this school of the prophets and brighten up for their life work. The wise man is the one who never ceases to learn.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. J. M. Henry left New Orleans last Monday evening for Shreveport to attend the Commencement exercises of Centenary College.

We are grateful to the following brethren for subscriptions sent in during the past week, whose names do not appear elsewhere: Rev. A. D. George, Cotton Valley, La., 6; Mr. R. L. Cox, Dubach, La., 5.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon and his daughter, Miss Hattie Mouzon, passed through New Orleans last Friday on their way to Spartanburg, N. C. While in the city they were the guests of Rev. and Mrs. F. R. Hill, Jr.

The Sunday school of the Rayne Memorial Church of New Orleans enjoyed a delightful Children's Day service last Sunday morning, and the First Church of this city will celebrate the same service next Sunday.

Rev. A. H. Steele, the pastor, reports that he is in the midst of a splendid revival meeting at Clyde, Miss., on the Ohio charge. He is being assisted by Rev. E. L. Whiddon, who is preaching in a big tent to large crowds.

In a personal letter from Rev. Theodore Cope, pastor of St. John's Church of St. Louis, Mo., we learn that he is assisting in a great meeting at Midland, Texas. He reports that Methodism is flourishing in the Lone Star State.

On last Friday morning the first brick of the new church building that is being erected by our people at Crowley, La., was laid by Mrs. C. D. Atkinson, wife of our pastor there. The corner stone is to be laid on July 4 by Bishop W. A. Candler.

In a business letter to this office, Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., says: "We began a meeting in our church on June 1. Rev. J. E. Williams of Hickory is doing the preaching. The prospects are good for a great meeting."

We are glad to learn that Rev. G. P. Eikes, who has been ill for about two months, is again able to resume his duties as pastor of the Neshoba (Miss.) charge. As a result of his first efforts after his illness, the Advocate is in receipt of a nice list of subscribers.

According to the press dispatches published in the New Orleans papers last Tuesday, Major R. W. Millsaps gave to the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, at their meeting last Monday night, commercial property for the College valued at more than $150,000.

According to reports from Bogalusa, La., Rev. L. I. McCall, our pastor at that place, who was operated on last week for appendicitis, is slowly recovering. We are glad to chronicle the good news, and pray that he may continue to improve until he is entirely recovered.

Dr. J. W. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, delivered the Commencement Sermon for the Seashore Campground School at Biloxi, Miss., last Sunday morning. He reports that the school is closing an unusually successful term, considering the fact that this is its first year.

We are indebted to Rev. E. J. Coker, of Sharon,

Miss., for the following brief, sad message: "Sister G. W. Galloway, of Madisonville, Miss., died on June 3. She was the wife of the only surviving uncle of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway. Her death was as triumphant as had been her life."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, of Homewood, Miss., is planning to begin a revival campaign on his charge in the near future. We are sorry to learn that Sister Ormond is not enjoying good health. We trust that a kind Providence will favor her with a rapid recovery, and that she may soon join her husband in his loved employ.

In answer to a unanimous invitation issued by all the quarterly conferences of New Orleans to spend the month of November in the Crescent City, Bishop W. A. Candler has expressed a willingness to give as much of his time during that month as possible to this city without seriously hampering him in his other duties.

The Magnolia Gazette, in speaking of the Commencement exercises of the Magnolia High School on Monday night, June 2, says: "The address delivered by Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, was one of the most eloquent and forceable speeches heard here in many a day." We are not at all surprised.

Mr. John H. Hasling, one of the charter members of the McDonoghville Methodist Church, departed this life on May 3, after three hours' illness. He was a trustee of the church, and a man of pronounced religious integrity. The McDonoghville Church, as well as the relatives, are sorely bereaved in the death of this good man.

At the recent Commencement exercises of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, of Jackson, Tenn., seventeen young ladies received diplomas as follows: Four were given the A.B. degree; nine the degree of M.E.L.; two finished the course in Piano Music, one in Voice, and one in Expression. The next session of the school will open on September 17.

According to press reports from Shreveport, La., published in the New Orleans papers Monday, Rev. W. W. Holmes delivered a strong Commencement Sermon before the graduates and pupils of Centenary College last Sunday morning, and Rev. E. K. Means edified a large audience on Sunday evening with a sermon to the members of the Y. M. C. A.

Rev. J. H. Bass, of Columbus, Miss., writes as follows: "The congregation of our Second Church of this city has purchased a most desirable lot near the I. and C. campus at a cost of $2600, on which will be erected in the near future a handsome brick church." We heartily congratulate Brother Bass and his growing flock upon this forward movement.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Lottie May Griffin, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Griffin, and Mr. Hugh Allan Watrous, which took place in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Long Beach, Miss., on Tuesday evening, June 10. We extend to the happy young couple congratulations and best wishes.

According to the statement issued on June 6 by Mansfield Female College, that institution now has to its credit in the bank $304.13. After the accounts receivable are collected and accounts payable are paid, the year's surplus will be $900.43. This is by far the best showing ever made by the Louisiana Conference school for girls. Hats off to President R. E. Bobbitt!

Rev. L. C. Wilson, pastor of the Franklinton (La.) Methodist Church, passed through New Orleans last Monday on his return home from the Baton Rouge District Conference at Wilson. He paid this office an appreciated call while in town, and also visited the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting at First Church Monday morning. Brother Wilson reported that the Baton Rouge District Conference was a most delightful occasion.

We received the following brief, sad note from Rev. W. M. Sullivan of Moss Point, Miss., last week: "Captain John Alberts, one of our stewards, went to his reward on May 31 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. He was a good man." We are sorry, indeed, of the death of this consecrated man, and pray that God may have his sorrowing loved ones in his gracious keeping, and that their hearts may find solace in the consciousness of his presence.

We gratefully acknowledge an invitation to attend the wedding of Miss Mary Pierce Folkes Mounger and Mr. David Peel Cameron, which took place on June 11 at Ellisville, Miss., in the Methodist Church. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Mounger, of Ellisville. We extend congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, and pray that they may live long together, and reflect great credit upon the sacred relation which they have entered.

A postal card from Rev. A. S. Lutz, of New Iberia, La., dated June 2, says: "Our District Conference (The Lafayette) was one of the best ever held in this section of the State, and the local people attended it well. Yesterday we had Children's Day and our church was crowded to overflowing. It was a record-breaking crowd." We have in hand an article concerning the affairs of the Church at New Iberia, written by Brother Lutz, which will appear in a later issue. New Iberia Methodism appears to be enjoying great prosperity.

We have in hand a delightful letter from Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, a venerable member of the Louisiana Conference and a staunch friend of Mansfield Female College, written from his home in Mansfield. He speaks in terms of highest praise of the Commencement exercises of the college, and highly commends President R. E. Bobbitt. Brother Sheppard is enjoying unusually good health this year, and says that he has been often honored by visits from the brethren who come to Mansfield. Indeed, the brethren believe that the honor is all their own.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, our pastor at Donaldsonville, La., was in New Orleans last Saturday and honored the Advocate with a brief call. There are five appointments in his charge. Brother Lipscomb is serving a difficult work, but he is hopeful.

We are under renewed obligations to Rev. W. W. Hopper, our pastor at Woodville, Miss., for another nice list of new subscribers and one renewal. Brother Hopper has sent in 20 new subscriptions since the last session of the Mississippi Conference. At present he is one of the leaders of the Port Gibson District in the way of getting new subscribers to the Advocate.

We have a most interesting letter from Rev. O. P. Armour, of Sidon, Miss. He says: "My work is moving very well. Have had fine meetings at each appointment. There have been 34 accessions to the Church since Conference. Our Epworth League and Sunday school are doing fine work." The remainder of Brother Armour's letter was a list of subscribers and a reference to a check for $29.75 to cover the same. The Publisher is the easiest man in the Advocate office to convince that a work is "moving very well" when the letter containing the information also contains such a fine list of subscribers as did Brother Armour's.

In a letter from Rev. W. N. Thomas, of Daleville, Miss., we gather the following interesting account of the Commencement Sermon of the Daleville Institute: "Prof. G. W. Huddleston, of the Millsaps Preparatory School, preached the Commencement Sermon at the Daleville Institute last Sunday (June 1). He discussed the four objects of life that appeal to young people, as follows—pleasure, ambition, wealth, and service. His portrayal of service was beautiful, showing that it is the highest object for which a life can be used. It was a treat to have Professor Huddleston in our town, and an inspiration to listen to his message."

We have been informed that Dr. George W. Mathews, a member of the South Georgia Conference, has been secured as one of the preachers for the Seashore Camp Meeting which will begin on July 9. Dr. Huntley, the presiding elder of the Seashore District, who secured Dr. Mathews as the Seashore District representative on the preaching staff of the camp meeting, reports that he has been the President of the Indian Springs Camp Ground for the last twenty-three years. With Dr. J. M. Moore of Nashville representing the New Orleans District, and Dr. Geo. W. Mathews representing the Seashore District, and an equally strong man representing the Mobile District, those attending the camp meeting this year may hope for a great spiritual feast.

Mr. F. J. G. Pulsipher, a steward and trustee of the Epworth Church of New Orleans, recently resigned his positions with the church on account of his having been transferred from the New Orleans post office and stationed at Atlanta, Ga., where he will continue in the work of a post office inspector. We take the following paragraph from a set of resolutions adopted by the Epworth Board of Stewards in commendation of the service Mr. Pulsipher has rendered that church: "Be it resolved, That this Board hereby tenders to Mr. Pulsipher its thanks for the able manner in which he has administered the affairs of his office (that of treasurer of the church), and for his zeal and solicitude for the welfare of the church since his affiliation with this body."

LEAGUE CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

Members of the Epworth League in Louisiana will please notice the following communication from the State President, Mr. Robert A. Steel, of Shreveport, La.:

"The Annual Epworth League Conference has been postponed from June 11-15. We have been unable to get speakers on account of Commencement programs and District Conferences, and we will be glad to have you make note of same. The definite date of the Conference will be announced later."

THE SECOND GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

Obituaries.

Dr. CHAS. CLINTON PRICHARD was born in Catahoula Parish, La., in 1853, and died in Harrisonburg, La., April 29, 1913. Dr. Prichard had been a member of the Methodist Church since he was a young man, and at the time of his death was an efficient steward and a generous contributor to the church. He graduated in medicine in the Louisville University in 1884 and enjoyed a large practice for about 17 years, when he retired. He was married to Miss Mary Holstein in 1896. It was a happy marriage. He was a kind husband, a devoted father, and a true friend. He is survived by his wife and three little girls. Dr. Prichard took an active part in the election that drove whiskey from this parish and the Louisiana Lottery from this State. He was quiet and unassuming, but was found on the right side of moral issues. He will be greatly missed. He was a man of intellectual force and wide influence. He was recognized as a man of sterling qualities, which made him one of the first men of the community. He was a colonel on Governor Blanchard's staff, and was honored for twelve years as the assessor of this parish. He has been one of the potent factors of Catahoula Parish for a number of years. His home was always the home of the preacher. He loved the Lord and the Church, and was ever ready to further their interests. On Wednesday, the day following his death, a loving tribute was paid his memory by the assembling at the church in Harrisonburg of a great congregation. His body was laid to rest under a beautifully arranged collection of flowers in the Harrisonburg cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Be it resolved by the Flora (Miss.) Sunday school that we hereby try to express our sorrow and deep grief in the loss of Mrs. W. L. Kearney, who was a true friend of our school. Her kind disposition, fidelity to duty, and gentle influence will be greatly missed. While for the last few years she had not been physically able to attend our services, still the cause was on her heart, and she remembered us in her prayers and sent us her contribution each Sunday. She loved her friends, and the devotion of her loved ones was indeed beautiful.

Signed: L. B. Greaves, Mrs. McKeon, and Mrs. Dr. Fore, Committee.

A TRIBUTE TO A FRIEND.

I have just received a letter from home informing me of the death of Brother J. C. Reynolds. In the death of this man, I feel as if I had lost one of my own brothers. He joined the Methodist Church at Lisbon, La., when a boy, and was a useful member of this one congregation some forty years or more. Jimmie was a true man. His aim was to do right. He loved his Church and his Savior. During the past few years he was a great sufferer, and was often deprived of the pleasure and privilege of attending church. I was twice his pastor, serving four years each time, and I make no mistake when I say that a good man has gone to his reward. He leaves a wife, one son, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

J. B. WILLIAMS.

A REVIVAL AT LEAKESVILLE, MISS.

The afternoon train on Saturday, May 17, brought Brothers Peebles and SeEVERS to us to begin a revival meeting on the next day. Brother Peebles was so full of sermons and Brother SeEVERS of songs that we were obliged to get up a Saturday night service for them. The attendance on the initial night, with such a short time in which to get the people together, was very gratifying. The next day, Sunday, there was a better attendance, and as the meeting progressed the congregations became larger and more attentive. With a Methodist, a Presbyterian and a Baptist church in the town, the pastor had very little hope of securing a large number of additions to the Church. What was really wanted and prayed for a week in advance of the meeting was a revival among our members. Some eight of them gathered at six o'clock each morning at the church with the pastor, and earnest prayer was made that we might have an awakening in the church. Brother Peebles is strong on doctrinal preaching, but as we had had some rather strong doctrinal preaching in one of the other churches two weeks previous, we questioned the wisdom of turning him loose on his pet themes. But there arose a strong demand on the part of the people for it, because of the necessity of strengthening our own lines of defense; so we told Brother Peebles to turn loose, and to preach whatever he liked and as long as he liked. Of these privileges he very readily availed himself, both to his satisfaction and credit. The beauty of it all was that he did it in such a friendly and brotherly way. It seems to me that his sermon on "Water Baptism" is unanswerable. He took up the passages of Scripture that each side uses, for and against immersion, and presented the subject in such an intelligent form that it seemed to me that no one could doubt but that immersion had no place in the Bible. And Brother Peebles put the word immersion entirely out of the Bible, even of the immersionists' own Bible.

Some, of course, did not like it, but that was to be expected. Word got out during the meeting that Brother Peebles had been in the "Insane Asylum" three different times. Brother Peebles told his audience on the last night of the meeting that he had been in the asylum but once and that was to visit the institution, and that he did not get entirely through then, having left after visiting the first ward. One of our elderly Presbyterian ladies remarked that if that was the case, she now knew where to get good preachers. A banter for a joint discussion on the subjects presented went its rounds on the streets, but when an offer was made to the gentleman for one or two hours or more at any time during the meeting or after and a like offer was presented from the pulpit, no more was heard of it.

Results of the meeting? Well, I believe at the close here was a manifest presence of forbearance on the part of the brethren in all of the churches, and our own people were strengthened. A well known drummer of Mobile happened to be here a few days during the meeting and said he would not have missed it for anything—that he did not know that he had so much in his (the Methodist) Church. Five girls from the Sabbath school were received into the Church, and we look for more additions later on. This was Brother SeEVERS' second visit here, and to say he was pleasantly received puts it rather mildly. In song and prayer he excels many that I have heard. God's blessings be upon him and Brother Peebles.—L. E. WIGHT, P. C.

Tidings From the Field

Pickens, Miss.

We have just closed a good meeting at Pickens—a meeting which did our people much good. The preaching was done by Dr. H. G. Henderson, our pastor at Lexington, and he did it well. It was strong, scriptural, and spiritual. He is to be classed with the great preachers of the State. We received twelve into the Church on profession of faith and by letter. The people of the different churches stood by us through the meeting. We have here a faithful people who are true to God and to their Church. The charge is in very good condition. Pray for us.—J. D. Simpson.

Mayhew, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I preached at Mayhew the first Sunday in May, and we had prayer meeting nearly every night during the week. On the second Sunday we began a protracted meeting. Brother T. H. Porter of Olive Branch, Miss., was with us. He is a good man and a good preacher. He was a stranger here but the people of all denominations fell in love with him. Our people here say they never enjoyed a meeting more. The Church was greatly revived. We had no cold, dull, profitless services. We had showers of blessings and seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. There were 5 accessions to the Church; three on profession of faith and two from another Church. Our church here is small, and our people are proud of the accessions, as they are all good people and we hope that they will prove helpful and in turn be benefited.—W. J. Burt.

Pontchatoula, La.

I suppose a few lines from me would be in order, as I have not written in some time. Things are on the move here, and it looks like this is going to be the best year we have had since I have been here. This is my third year, and I have no desire to move. In fact, I hope the time limit will be removed at our next General Conference, so that I can stay here many more years. These people know how to make a preacher feel good. Last night we were given a "pounding" that would make the heart of any preacher rejoice. Among the many things which we received was about $5 worth of sugar. Our Children's Day was a great success. The collection was a record breaker—$23. We have three more such services to hold and we hope to augment this amount by at least $20. It is our desire to lead the District. New pews have been placed in the church here this year, and we have purchased an organ which will be installed sometime this month. These improvements cost us about $1200 or $1300. If Bishop Candler does not object, we propose to build a parsonage next year, and I will then leave a fine work for some good man. Brother Coleman is a happy fit on the District. I am going to send some new subscriptions to the Advocate soon.—J. A. McCormack.

Deasonville, Miss.

Dear Mr. Editor: The good ladies of Deasonville and vicinity have again endeared themselves to their pastor and his family. On Wednesday, May 23, at 2:30 p. m., they began to gather at the parsonage, and for thirty minutes or more we were kept busy receiving the guests, each bringing something. In this short time the house was filled. The guests being assembled, Miss Gussie Ewing was asked to play the accompaniment on the piano and all joined in singing, "Revive us Again." After several songs the pastor was asked to read a lesson and lead in prayer. After the prayer they sang "Showers of Blessings," during which the ladies showered us with all sorts of parcels and packages. When the song was over we were told to open the packages. We found that these contained $20, or more, worth of very useful articles for the parsonage. But this was not all: after we had looked into the packages, we were invited to our own dining room (for they had taken possession of our house), and there we found the table spread with so many good things that I will not undertake to name them. My! what a time we had then—laughing, talking, eating, etc. When we had enjoyed ourselves there, having partaken of the good things to eat to our satisfaction, we returned to the parlor and enjoyed more music by Miss Ewing and others. The occasion was one of great joy. Every one expressed himself as having had a good time. And we asked them back, and meant it, too.

We are very thankful to these good ladies, and want them to know that our door-latch is on the outside. They may come when they feel like it; we are always glad to see them.—J. B. King, P. C.

SOME WORDS OF COMMENDATION.

Dear Dr. Meek: I feel impressed to write some words of praise in regard to our District Conference which convened at Shubuta, Miss., May 27-30, 1913. Our new presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, opened our conference in a dignified manner—proving himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed in the Lord's work. We consider ourselves fortunate in having such a man as Brother Leggett at the head of our forces in the Meridian District. I, for one, am praying that his services in the various charges shall result in the building up of our Church, in the edifying of the saints, and in the salvation of precious souls.

The spirit that was manifested among the preachers and laymen of our Conference was excellent in every respect. The Lord of hosts was with us in all of our deliberations. The preaching was of a very high order. The messages from day to day were clear, forceful, and orthodox. Our hearts were fired with a greater desire to render more efficient service in the Lord's harvest field.

Dr. B. F. Jones, with his host of friends, entertained the conference royally. Everything possible was done by the good people of Shubuta to add to our comfort while we were among them. Their way of entertaining the District Conference was superb. May God's choicest blessing rest upon Brother Jones and his good people always.

After our series of services were brought to a close, I returned to my home more determined, under God, to strive more earnestly for the establishment of his kingdom within the bounds of my charge.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference met Wednesday morning, May 14, 1913, in the Methodist Church, at Bay St. Louis, Miss. The presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Huntley, D. D., was president of the Conference, and he showed his trained hand and mind in the management of its affairs and his spirit was most brotherly. The Conference throughout was a very pleasant one, and no one was disappointed in not receiving all his head and heart could hold; for there were many good things to be seen, heard and felt. The pastor, Rev. T. B. Cottrell, and his people had done all that could be done to welcome the Conference and make the brethren comfortable, and nothing more was needed to make each one feel that he had the best home. There are many beautiful homes in this little city on the Bay. A more rural welcome could not have been given, or a Conference more royally entertained.

Every preacher-in-charge in the District was present except two, and they were kept away by sickness. Twenty-four lay delegates attended, and three local preachers, besides those having pastoral charges.

The opening sermon was preached on Tuesday night by Rev. H. W. Van Hook, president of the Seashore Campground School, and it received high commendation. Brothers Guice, Crisler and Sharbrough also preached during the Conference, and brought messages that will linger in our hearts for some time, the first named presenting "The Mastership of Christ," the second, "The Neglect of Salvation," and the third, "The Life and Character of Jeremiah."

The following representative brethren were present and addressed the Conference on their work: Rev. C. W. Crisler, Treasurer of the Conference Board of Missions; Rev. R. Selby, Secretary of the Conference Board of Education; Rev. L. L. Roberts, Financial Agent of Whitworth Female College; Rev. H. E. Carter, Assistant Manager of the Orphans' Home; Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Methodist Hospital; Rev. H. W. Van Hook, President of the Seashore Campground School; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Secretary of the Conference Board of Church Extension; Dr. C. F. Reid, Secretary of the Laymen's Movement. The messages these brethren brought were inspiring and helpful, but special mention must be made of the presence and work of Dr. Reid. It is doubtful whether there is anyone in the Church more qualified or better able to discuss missionary problems than this great missionary of the Church. An entire afternoon and evening service were taken up by him in a most effective way, and the work was made real to all present. The reports from the various charges were inspiring and showed progress along all lines. Some splendid revivals had been held, the Sunday schools were flourishing, church buildings at First Church, Gulfport, and at Picayune are nearing completion, and the finances are very well up.

The Woman's Missionary work was well represented by Mrs. R. E. Johnson, the Conference Secretary, and the brethren all pledged hearty co-operation. Paul F. Daniel was recommended for deacon's orders; James Albert Hester was licensed to preach. The following were elected on the first ballot as delegates to the Annual Conference: Dr. J. C. Ballard, T. M. Evans, R. A. Breland, J. A. Vanderwall. Columbia was selected as the next place of meeting. W. T. Bolton and W. E. Lampton were elected their own successors as trustees of the Campground School. The following Licensing Committee was elected: M. L. Burton, W. L. Linfield, W. W. Moore, H. W. Van Hook. Dr. J. C. Ballard was elected Lay Leader.

The business of the Conference was finished during the night session of the second day, the first day being given to hearing those who had come to represent special interests.

W. B. JONES, Secretary.
Lumberton, June 5.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 43rd session of the Greenville District Conference convened at Cleveland, Miss., May 23, 1913. From the beginning the Conference was exceedingly interesting. Most of the pastors were present until the close of the Conference, but the laymen were conspicuous for their absence. However, those who were on hand added much to the success of the Conference. Bishop Murrah was present throughout the session. His presence was greatly enjoyed by all the brethren. The sermons preached by him were characteristically good, and were very edifying to all who heard them. Brother Spragins expressed the feelings of all when he remarked, "We are delighted to have Bishop Murrah here, and we feel ourselves peculiarly favored in having our own Mississippi Bishop with us."

The reports of pastors showed the work of the District to be in good shape. Some revivals have been held with good results, while preparations are being made for evangelistic services in the remaining charges. The reports showed that progress is being made in all the departments of our church work. The interest of Millsaps College was ably cared for by Dr. A. F. Watkins. His address on education, and in behalf of Millsaps, was clear, forceful, and effective, while his genial personality was refreshing to all.

Rev. H. M. Ellis made an able and effective appeal in behalf of our Methodist Hospital. He, as well as Brother W. M. Williams of our Orphans' Home, added much to the success of the occasion.

The following resolution was adopted regarding Memphis Hospital: "We recommend that the Greenville District Conference heartily approve the plan of apportionment recommended by our Commissioners, and gladly accept our share, $11,000, of the $75,000 for the North Mississippi Conference."

The preaching of the Conference was done, to the delight and edification of all present, by Brothers T. M. Bradley, J. W. Ward, G. W. Bachman, and Bishop Murrah. Brothers E. R. Smoot and Irwin N. Price added greatly to the joy and inspiration of the Conference by their solos and duets.

Every one greatly enjoyed the presence of Dr. R. A. Meek. The following resolution, anent his proposed resignation from the editorship of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, Dr. R. A. Meek's announcement of his purpose to retire from the editorship of the New Orleans Christian Advocate at the close of the present Conference year is a matter of deep regret to his many friends, to the constituency of the Advocate, and to the Church at large, and

"Whereas the New Orleans Christian Advocate has never been more ably and brilliantly edited during its long and notable career, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the Greenville District Conference deeply regrets that Dr. Meek feels moved to take this step, which we would regard as nothing less than a calamity, if consummated;

"Resolved further, that we request Dr. Meek to reconsider his resolution, and that we call upon the Publishing Committee to make provision, if possible, to retain his services in his present important position.

Signed: Hal S. Spragins, Tillery Lewis, W. S. Lagrone, J. J. Brooks.

The presence and addresses of Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick and Brother W. M. Weaver, who ably represented the Sunday school interests, were greatly enjoyed.

Brother L. A. McKeown and the good people of Cleveland did all in their power to make our stay with them an enjoyable one. Long will we remember their kind hospitality and eagerly will we embrace another opportunity to repeat our visit. A resolution to this effect was unanimously adopted.

The few times that Bishop Murrah resigned the chair to Brother Spragins showed that gentleman to be at home in directing the affairs of a deliberative body. Jonestown was selected for our next meeting place.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, Sec'y.

PRESCRIPTION FOR LIVER TROUBLES

Bond's Liver Pills are from a prescription originated in 1893 by three of the most prominent physicians of the South. They are especially intended to cure Constipation, Biliousness, Dizziness and all Liver Troubles. One little pill at bed time, repeated next night, when necessary, usually cures the ailments caused by torpid Liver or Bowels.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send to us. 25c Everywhere. BOND'S

NEARLY SMOTHERED.

Chandler, N. C.—Mrs. Augusta Lomax, of this place, writes: "I had smothering spells every day so bad that I expected death at any time. I could not sit up in bed. I suffered from womanly troubles. My nerves were unstrung. I had almost given up all hope of ever being better. I tried Cardui and it did me more good than anything I had ever taken. I am better now than I ever expected to be." Thousands of ladies have written similar letters, telling of the merits of Cardui. It relieved their headache, backache, and misery, just as it will relieve yours if you will let it. Try.

"Remember that what you possess in the world will be found at the day of your death to belong to somebody else, but what you are, will be yours forever."

Whitworth College.

A LETTER FROM DR. DU BOSE

On revisiting Whitworth College, my surprise has been great and my delight genuine. First, I have been struck by the marked material improvements seen on the campus. The fine residence of the President, the spacious, classic and well-appointed auditorium, are special features of this improvement, and would do credit to institutions far more richly endowed than Whitworth. The large and refined audiences which, added to the student body, filled the new auditorium impressed me as being one of the evident signs of the school's wider and abiding influence upon the commonwealth.

I have also had opportunity to see some demonstrations of the class and department work done in the College. These have given me the confidence that the Faculty has been well chosen, and that its members are personally efficient, alert and zealously faithful in the instruction given. The academic and language work, the music and art directory, have all seemed to be worthy of a generous commendation. The presidency of Dr. Cooper has, as to its diligence, firmness and far-sightedness, passed into a proverb. It is to his personal and official direction that happy advances of recent years are due.

As an ex-Mississippian, and one to whose heart Mississippi and its Christian education are ever dear, I heartily commend Whitworth to parents who have daughters to educate.

WOMAN'S GREATEST TROUBLE.

Big Sandy, Tenn.—Mrs. Lucy Cantrell, of this place says: "Every two weeks I had to go to bed and stay there several days. I suffered untold misery. Nothing seemed to help me, until I tried Cardui, the woman's tonic. Although I had been afflicted with womanly weaknesses for seven years, Cardui helped me more than anything else ever did. It is surely the best tonic for women on earth." Weakness is woman's greatest trouble. Cardui is woman's greatest medicine, because it overcomes that weakness and brings back strength. In the past 50 years Cardui helped over a million women. Try it for your troubles to-day.

OUR STEWARDSHIP OF PERSONALITY.

When we speak of stewardship we invariably associate the word with the money entrusted to our care. It has other applications as our heading indicates. Stewardship could not exist without first having the steward. Mary McMillan Kingery thus defines steward and stewardship: "A steward is a person entrusted with the management of things not his own; he controls and gives out for another. Stewardship involves, first, occupancy or possession with full control, and practically the rights of ownership. Secondly, responsibility, holding the possession thinkingly with due precaution against waste and loss. Thirdly, accountability, with constant remembrance of a day of reckoning. With these three principles of stewardship in mind it becomes a source of much interest to apply them to personal qualities rather than temporal belongings."

What is personality? And again we turn to Miss Kingery's article on the subject, finding there a definition replete with meaning. "It is something God-given, holy, inviolable; and it is the most powerful force in the world. Every power, every talent, every attribute in our possession increases our responsibility, and impresses upon us the deep importance of rendering an honest account of these God-given abilities."

Whether the increase be great or small, there must be an increase, for "laying away" of personality causes rust, and no one is willing to face the Master with rusted gifts or personality. How can we avoid this state? Consecrate our personality, and then when our services are needed in our missionary societies there will always be some upon whom our leaders can depend. Again, we say, consecrate your personality and be faithful in your stewardship!

WHY?

Why should I give money to foreign missions when the need in the United States is so great? Why should I give money to other States while Mississippi needs so much? Why should I give to Corinth when my own church needs so much? Why should I give to my church what my family could so well use? Why should I give to my family what I could so well spend on myself with pleasure? Why? Because I am a Christian and not a heathen. It isn't of how much of my money shall I give, but how much of the Lord's money shall I withhold?—Mrs. Walter Campbell.

361 MISSIONARIES IN FOREIGN FIELDS.

According to the report of Dr. W. W. Pinson, our Missionary Secretary, our United Mission Board is now maintaining in the foreign fields 361 missionaries. The total amount raised for missions last year was $1,179,000.

MISSISSIPPI'S CRYING NEED.

At the Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society held at Gretna last month, Mrs. Harrison Shull made a strong speech on the Negro problem in which she said:

"Many argue that the Negro isn't capable of any mental development; whether this be true of the race as a whole or not it is a known fact, exemplified in such men as Gilbert of our own Payne College, that God has not left the race without leaders among its own people. Some one has said, 'Opportunities are ours, results, God's.' This was never truer than in the case of the Negro. Why have long and heated debates politically, religiously, and otherwise until we have done more to prove that there is nothing in the Negro? We are so fond of saying, 'Well, the Negro isn't capable,' how do we know? We certainly have never taken the trouble to find out.

"In the investigation of this problem, we must remember that the Negro is a human being, and like other men has a three-fold nature, namely, body, mind and soul, and that each of these factors is capable of indefinite culture for good or evil. We are doubtless very much disagreed as to the possibility of, and necessity for, the development of the Negro's mind, and it would be useless discussion for us to set forth our views. Most of us would still cling to any former view or prejudice. To say the least, along this line, the State is providing something for them, and as our public men are brought to a realization of what is best, it will be done.

"Since God has made of one blood all the nations to dwell upon the earth, the Negro's body is subject to the same diseases and suffering as all others. If we send our white physicians to them their diagnosis and treatment, in as far as they can get it carried out, will be the same as for any other person of any race or color. Hence, bodily suffering, that which makes the whole world kin, should appeal to us more, nay it does appeal to us more, for there is not a woman among us, however much she may have been exasperated by the Negro's indolence and lack of judgment, who will not respond to their calls in time of disease or pain. But some of our far-sighted women tell us that sanitation, better housing, clean yards, and all of these things that make for the Negro's health, will necessarily come to them as other work of our city improvement and civic clubs progress, and, to become more positive, indicate, possibly, that this is not properly a thing for consideration by the Woman's Missionary Society.

"But women of the North Mississippi Conference, I challenge you as missionary women, working under the direction and by the laws and command of Him who said, 'Preach my gospel to every creature,' to say that you have no interest, no responsibility concerning that last possibility of the Negro—his soul. Can you in the face of the vice, the sin and degradation lived on your plantation, in your town, even in your own yard, say to God, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' I know you will say they have their Sunday schools and churches, their organizations and literature. Have you ever investigated what is taught and how taught in those same schools and churches? Have you ever walked or ridden through a Negro quarter or section of your town, and seen the nine dirty, ragged, wicked, debauched ones who play and curse and fight at home, while one perhaps is in that Sunday school, poor as it is? Did you ever question Negro girls of from twelve to fifteen on religious matters as I have, and find that some of them could not give you a definite idea in regard to Jesus Christ, and that they know nothing of the Bible or even the simplest catechism questions? This is certainly a part of the Negro problem that vitally concerns missionary women.

"We may believe what we like in regard to the Negro's right to other

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Rev. C. S. Wasson, of Tunica, reports five live Sunday schools in his charge, all doing excellent work.

Shaw and Merigold are both improving and have added a mission Sunday school to their credit on their list of good works.

Boyle reports a fine school, with four good teachers who realize that a teacher's work is for week-days as well as Sundays.

Superintendent R. M. Maricle, of near Rienzi, reports a growing, interesting school in his neighborhood, and the prospect for a great Children's Day as good.

Superintendent Chaney, of Rose-dale, continues to keep his school doing good work. He has a mixed class of adults and an average attendance of 45 in the school.

Shelby excels along Sunday school lines, having 75 church members and 100 in the Sunday school. There is a fine men's class, and all the work is well up to the standard.

Ackerman has a new church with fine Sunday school facilities. Mr. Townsend has a Women's Adult Class there, and the younger children are well cared for by their skilled teachers.

Our First Church of Corinth celebrated the best Children's Day in every regard ever held there on May 25. The program was finely rendered and a large crowd was in attendance.

Superintendent Ledyard, of Tupelo, had an ideal Mothers' Day service, the best day of the many good days they have planned and enjoyed. They expect to have a great Children's Day in June.

300 is the regular attendance in Greenville. This school uses the Graded Lessons, supports a native preacher in Japan, had an ideal Children's Day, and is doing a great work generally.

The Sunday school at Leland has increased one-third since Conference. There is a busy Women's Adult Class at Hollandale, which 21 members and an average attendance of 18.

Clarksdale has a fine school of 128 members and is growing right along. Shipman's Chapel has an Adult Bible Class of 30. Since they started with but six it is evident that their work has been greatly appreciated.

Jonestown charge has a Sunday school at every church and 50 in a Sunday school at Sabina where there is no church at all. Quite often it is the case that some of our best churches grow from just such Sunday schools.

The Field Secretary spent a good hour with Rev. C. A. Northington on June 1, attending the Children's Day service at Box's Chapel. The school is large and enthusiastic, and is doing fine work, and is materially assisting that rural community.

Superintendent Brinson, of Cleveland, has a splendid school of 104 members. Miss Peevey, his Elementary teacher, is doing exceptionally good work, and the superintendent himself, though a busy and up-to-date presiding officer, finds time to teach a teen-age Boys' Class of 25.

The Coahoma School is progressing and everybody is enjoying the work. A Bible Study Club of ladies is a fine accessory to the school and one no school can afford to do without. This school reports the best Children's Day ever enjoyed before. Bobo has an interesting and growing school, also.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Myrtle, has a well-organized Sunday school of 85 or 90. Mr. Moss, the teacher of the Adult Bible Class, offers $2 to any man if he will attend Sunday school once and not be sufficiently interested to come again, and the class continues to grow and the fine teacher has not had any calls for the above-mentioned $2.

Kosciusko has a fine Sunday school, of which Mr. Lucas is the Superintendent, and in which Prof. Boyd has a splendid class of young women, and Mrs. Allen one of men. The teenage boys are well handled by capable men. Mrs. Gilliland continues to do beautiful work with the children. Plenty of commodious and well arranged Sunday school rooms are being included in the plans for the new church, and a really ideal school is expected from these good workers.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

DID YOU OBSERVE CHILDREN'S DAY? IF NOT, WHY NOT? DID YOU TAKE A COLLECTION?

The Field Secretary visited the Brookhaven, Jackson, and Meridian District Conferences.

The Mendenhall Sunday school has taken the 3-cent assessment and is now getting ready for the Children's Day. Let others do likewise. Make your report and I will get it in the Advocate.

Did you ever get that teacher training class and the Bible classes organized? Hurry up and do it and report to the various Superintendents at Nashville, or to the Field Secretary.

The Port Gibson and Jackson District Conferences passed resolutions pledging to raise the 3-cent assessment for Sunday school work. The work is needed; the Field Secretary cannot answer half the calls made by the pastors.

The writer has recently addressed a letter to each of the presiding elders asking them to assist in securing the observance of Children's Day. Only one replied, and that one says that the pastor who fails to have Children's Day in his District will have a very serious reckoning. Shall the Mississippi Conference be in the rear on this important work of giving the child the proper place in the Sunday school?

Below I give a list of the charges that failed to observe Children's Day, or, if they did observe it, failed to turn in any funds. By Districts they are as follows: Brookhaven—Adams, Gallman, McComb Centenary, Summit and East McComb, Topisaw; Hattiesburg—Collins, Hattiesburg, Court St., McLain, Summerland; Jackson—Benton, Bolton, Canton, Edwards, Fannin, Harrisville, Jackson, Capital St., Lintonia, Madison, Mendenhall, Satartia; Meridian—Binnville, Buckatunna, DeSoto; Newton—Hickory, Homewood, Lake, Laurel, First Church, Laurel, Sixth Street, Montrose, Pachuta, Shiloh, Stallo and Indian Mission, Walnut Grove; Port Gibson—Fayette, Hermonville, Mayersville, Rocky Springs, Rolling Fork, Vicksburg, Washington St.; Sea Shore—Biloxi, Main St., Howison and Saucier, Wolf River.

You may note by the above list that some of our strongest charges failed to report the observance of Children's Day. Can't we make the record better this year?

MORGAN SCHOOL

FAYETTEVILLE, TENN.

To determine the wants as well as the aptitudes of the individual, and, through constant personal aid, so strengthen and develop his best qualities, that when the student enters college or business life he may have something more than ordinary qualities to depend upon—this is the aim of Morgan School.

Such training demands the closest individual attention of teachers of the highest moral and intellectual character. It is also important that the student have access to the teachers at all times, and that the instructors be in perfect sympathy and accord with the boy. This system prevails at Morgan school.

The equipment measures well with the School's standard. A new school building is in process of construction and a new steam heated, electric lighted dormitory was recently erected at a cost of $15,000. The homelife of the dormitory is safe and wholesome, and the strong moral and religious tone of the school is second to none.

The course of study comprises a thorough preparatory training in English, Latin, Greek, German, French, History, Civil Government, Mathematics and Sciences. Certificates of graduation admit without examination to the leading colleges and universities. Advanced course for students not intending to enter college. Special teachers' course.

Morgan School encourages the practice of manly sports and athletics, and for this purpose maintains a splendid eight-acre athletic field; has basketball, football and baseball teams, tennis, etc.

Corn Chicanery

Trying to Cheat One's Feet

Thousands of people pare their corns—merely take off the top layer.

Thousands of others use liquids and plasters, just for brief effect.

Yet every corn can be removed in two days. Every corn pain can be instantly ended.

Anyone can do this in a scientific way. It is being done on a million corns a month.

The entire corn comes out, root, callous, everything. And without any pain or soreness. You simply apply a Blue-jay plaster and then forget the corn.

You are cheating yourself when you use makeshifts in these modern days. The use of Blue-jay ends the corn.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

Over 100 Letters About the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club

The Management of the New Orleans Advocate Piano Club has received so many strong letters of commendation from Club members praising the Pianos, the Player Pianos, and the numerous attractive features of the Club, that we have decided to print them in a book for the benefit of those who have not yet joined.

This testimonial book, consisting of thirty-six pages, is now ready for distribution and will be sent free to any one who is interested in securing a high grade Piano or Self-player Piano at the lowest possible price. You should read this book.

1. Because it is written by the Club members themselves and tells in their own words what they think of the Club, its management and instruments.
2. Because it is the only thing of its kind ever published and proves conclusively that the Club is a grand success from the standpoint of the piano-buyer.
3. Because it illustrates how intelligent co-operation, honorably conducted, has saved each of these Club members over one hundred dollars on the purchase of their instruments.
4. Because these letters from Club members cover practically all of the attractive features of the Club and give you a thorough understanding of its practical working.
5. Because it shows how the Club members FEEL in reference to the management, with which many of them have now had monthly dealings for over a year.
6. Because these letters from Club members tell what they, their families, their friends and music critics say about the superb Ludden & Bates Pianos and Player Pianos.

Club Members Have Saved Over $50,000.00

That's a good deal of money, but it is a small item as compared with the fact that each Club member has received an instrument of KNOWN and APPROVED QUALITY, backed by the STRONGEST guarantee against imperfections in both workmanship and material, and secured by one of the OLDEST, LARGEST AND MOST RELIABLE Piano Houses in America. It is not like the fictitious saving on some piano you have never heard of before, for Ludden & Bates' instruments have for nearly half a century demonstrated their superior qualities of tone, action and durability in every State in the Union. They are the best known and most highly prized pianos in the Southern States. Wherever you go you find them in the homes of the most discriminating musicians and THEIR OWNERS are their best advertisers.

Write for Catalogue and Testimonial Book

If your home needs a good piano, or that delightful entertainer, the Self-player Piano that all can play, and if you have no money to waste in reckless buying, then by all means write for YOUR copy of the catalogue and testimonial book of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club. You will save about one-third the price and get terms to suit you.

Address

The above picture shows the popular Ludden & Bates Self-player Piano, the Piano that all can play, whether they have any knowledge of music or not. It is really two instruments in one, for it can be used as a regular piano by musicians, or as a Self-player by those who do not know one note from another. Even children of five or six years can play the sweetest music of the great composers without the slightest difficulty.

Editorial

All the power given to Christ is behind the Church, but the trouble is that instead of appropriating it, she too often spreads out sails to the capricious breezes of the world. The great need of Zion is to 'lift up her eyes to the hills from whence cometh her help.'

* * *

The Master said: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." This is a reversible proposition; for when one's heart truly enters into anything, it takes one's possessions along with it. The best financial method that any church can adopt is to awaken in the souls of its members a faith that will make Jesus precious to them.

* * *

A journal connected with another branch of Methodism says: "A few churches still allow the Bishop to appoint the preacher." Yet there are persons in our Church who appear to think that all the good in Methodism is to be found in the other bodies and that we should be constantly trying to imitate them. We fear that there are some people who even when they get to heaven will fancy that the Glory Land is situated somewhere else.

* * *

If we were to use the kodak and reproduce in the Advocate the pictures taken, it would be an easy thing to win in our fight against theatricals. And why shouldn't we do so? We admit that some of the scenes would be rather enlivening for the pages of a staid religious journal; but it would be sensationalism in a good cause. We are not sure that a church paper ought not to adopt modern methods in combating the evils of the age. The Ram's Horn does.

* * *

Mr. Frederick J. Haskin, writing in the Times-Democrat, says: "The historian, Bancroft, calls the American Government a 'plagiarized Presbyterianism.'" Our Baptist brethren are also stout in the claim that the framers of the United States Constitution got their principal ideas from their church polity. To which of these denominations does this distinction belong? We respectfully suggest that the Presbyterians and Baptists ought to constitute a joint commission and settle this important question, so that plain, ordinary people like the Methodists may know to whom they really owe this glorious Republic. Contentions so conflicting are a bit perplexing.

THE MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

It was our pleasure to attend the recent Commencement exercises of Millsaps College, which were among the best in the history of that splendid institution. The declamation contests by the students of the lower classes were up to the usual high standard and awakened much interest in college circles. The Commencement Sermon was preached in the Chapel at 11 a. m. on Sunday, June 8, by Bishop John C. Kilgo, of Durham, N. C. This was Bishop Kilgo's first visit to Mississippi, and the audience which greeted him was a magnificent one. His theme was "The Sovereignty of Christ," and he handled it in a most masterful and impressive manner, holding the close attention of the entire congregation from the beginning to the end of his able discourse. The music and singing, which were under the direction of Mrs. W. B. Murrah, were of a very high order and added much to the success and enjoyableness of the hour.

On Sunday evening Bishop Kilgo occupied the pulpit of the Capitol Street M. E. Church, South, and delivered an appropriate and forceful sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association of the College. The Bishop tarried in Jackson only a single day, and there was a general feeling of regret that his visit was so hurried. He is manifestly one of the most magnetic and resourceful leaders of Southern Methodism, alert, brilliant, eloquent, and thoroughly loyal to our doctrines and polity. He may be assured that a warm welcome will always await him when he comes to the Magnolia State.

On Monday at 11 a. m. orations were delivered in the College Chapel by members of the graduating class, the speakers reflecting credit both upon themselves and their Alma Mater. Monday night was given over to the Alumni Association which had arranged an excellent program for the occasion. The Baccalaureate Address, which was made on Tuesday morning by the Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh of Memphis, Tenn., was one of the best ever heard from the college rostrum. The distinguished speaker's theme was "The Reign of Law," and his emphatic and eloquent utterances frequently evoked hearty applause. Mr. Fitzhugh was born, reared, and educated in Mississippi, and his notably successful career in Tennessee has been a source of much gratification to the people of his native State.

Following the Baccalaureate Address, President A. F. Watkins awarded the diplomas to the members of the graduating class, which numbered 29—17 in the Literary Department, and 12 in the Law Department. Bishop W. B. Murrah, President of the Board of Trustees, then came forward and spoke briefly of the work of the College during the year and of its bright outlook for the future. When he announced that Major Millsaps had made the institution an additional gift of commercial property in the city of Jackson valued at more than $150,000, the audience manifested great enthusiasm and gave the Major a splendid ovation, rising and waving him a chautauqua salute from all parts of the building. The Bishop then pronounced the benediction, and the Commencement of 1913 was at an end.

The session just closed was the twenty-second in the history of Millsaps College, and the Methodists of Mississippi have reason to be proud of the record made. The enrollment reached 271, harmony and good will prevailed in the affairs of the institution, and the health of the students and instructors was good. Despite the fact that Founder's Hall, the home of the Preparatory Department, was destroyed by fire in the middle of the year, the work was not seriously interrupted and the sub-freshman pupils made fully an average showing. The burnt structure is being replaced by another building on the same site, which is now nearing completion, and which will be superior in every respect to the one which was lost. This new home of the fitting school will be ready for use before the College opens next September. Only two changes took place in the Faculty: Judge Richard F. Reed, of the Mississippi Supreme Court, an accomplished lawyer and a most estimable Christian gentleman, was chosen to succeed Hon. W. R. Harper (deceased) in the Law Department; and Prof. Withers, of Washington and Lee University and a post-graduate student of Johns Hopkins, was elected temporarily to the Chair of Modern Languages, in place of Prof. J. M. Burton, who was given a year's leave of absence to prosecute his studies at Johns Hopkins University. It was unanimously agreed in the meeting of the Board of Trustees that the present most urgent need of the institution is a large and well equipped dormitory for students in the college proper, and a Committee, consisting of President A. F. Watkins, Dr. T. B. Holloman, and the Editor of the Advocate, was appointed to plan and conduct a campaign to secure the requisite funds for such a structure.

The place of Millsaps College among the leading educational institutions of the Church is now well established and unchallenged. It has the finest location of any college in Mississippi, and one which is not surpassed by any school in the South. It has a beautiful and almost ideal location in the suburbs of the Capital City of the State, with a street car line on each side of its spacious and attractive campus. Its courses of instruction are comprehensive and thorough, and in financial resources it stands next to Trinity among the colleges of Southern Methodism, having about $750,000 worth of property, of which nearly $500,000 is in actual endowment. The day is not far distant when its holdings will reach the million mark. In the twenty-two years of its remarkable history, the College has never owed a dollar which it did not have money in the treasury to pay.

The career of this growing young institution has been nothing short of phenomenal. Blessed with the aid and guidance of such friends as Major Millsaps, Bishop C. B. Galloway, and Bishop W. B. Murrah who for nineteen years was its President, it has gone steadily forward, and has already reached a position of vantage such as many similar schools have failed to attain after nearly, or quite, a century of toil and struggle. But still larger things are ahead, and the 125,000 Methodists of Mississippi should rally enthusiastically to the support of President Watkins and his able corps of assistants, and help them to make the most of the sublime opportunities that now lie out before them. The watch word of the hour is "A GREATER MILLSAPS," and if all will do their duty, it will come far more speedily and upon a vastly larger scale than many among us now think possible.

IS SUCH ACTION LEGAL?

At its recent meeting in Dallas, Texas, the General Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, took the following action:

"That the Commission on Education be requested to work out requirements and standards for a class of institutions to be known as Junior Colleges."

"That these Junior colleges shall consist of those now on the unclassified list and those under the title above indicated (as per the May Bulletin of 1912, pages 52-53) which give as much as two years of college work and do not confer baccalaureate degrees."

"That the institutions in said list which confer baccalaureate degrees but do not meet the requirements of the Commission for colleges within a year of the adjournment of said Commission, either take their places as Junior Colleges or raise their standards and enlarge their equipment and income so as to meet the requirements of college classification."

"That the Annual Conference Boards be advised that they are not at liberty, under the law of the Church, after the above readjustment shall have been consummated, to make appropriations to institutions which have not been properly classified by this Board."

In order that we might clearly understand upon what provision of the Discipline the General Board based its action forbidding the Annual Conference Boards of Education, or the Annual Conferences themselves (which practically are included in the scope of the enactment), to appropriate money to their own institutions, already established, unless they shall obey the requirement of the General Board of Education as to classification, we addressed a note of inquiry to Mr. Stonewall Anderson, the General Secretary, asking him for a statement in regard to the matter. To our letter Dr. Anderson made the following response, to which we invite careful attention:

"May 12, 1913.

"My Dear Dr. Meek: Your favor of May 8 has reached me. In reply I will say that I do not know that I am at liberty to give for the Board of Education an authoritative interpretation of the law of the Church in the matter which you mention. However, I am able to suggest the view which underlies the action which you refer to.

"1. The Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, has the general superintendency of all our schools. The Board is provided for in Par. 407-412 of the Discipline. You will notice that Par. 408 provides that the members of the Board shall be incorporated under the laws of Tennessee. The first item in the charter of incorporation reads as follows:

"The general purposes for which a charter is sought are to establish a Board of Education for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which shall consist of members whose general duties and powers shall be fixed by the General Conference of said Church, and said Board shall have general care for the upbuilding of the educational institutions of said Church, for the establishment of new ones, and for the union of all in a harmonious system."

"You will notice that the duties of the Board, so far as its function of superintendency is concerned, are set forth more clearly in the charter than in any clause found in the Discipline. However, I take it that this must be a defect in the Discipline which the charter serves to correct."

"2. Par. 413 of the Discipline provides that the Conference Boards of Education shall be auxiliary to the General Board. Since they are auxiliary they are not at liberty to inaugurate independent plans and policies and educational systems for themselves. While Par. 414 of the Discipline provides that each Annual Conference may foster such educational work as it may desire, still, as an auxiliary to the General Board, this must be interpreted, I take it, to mean that the educational work which it fosters, so far as an educational policy and system are concerned must be in line with the work of the General Board of Education. In Par. 417 it is provided that the General Board shall, through its members, agents, and Boards of Education of the Annual Conferences, seek to increase endowment and otherwise to strengthen our institutions in harmony with the general educational policy of the Church, to correlate existing institutions, and to originate new ones where they can be judiciously established and maintained. You will notice that in this paragraph the Board of Education is made the supreme superintending power in the educational department of the Church, and that the Boards of Education of the Annual Conferences are made sub-ordinate agencies through which the General Board is to exercise superintendency, and to effect correlation, etc., and this is all to be done according to this paragraph, in harmony with the general educational policy of the Church. You will notice that here it is assumed that there is one educational policy of the Church, and not many.

"3. Par. 419 provides that there shall be a commission of ten practical educators whose duty it shall be to prescribe the minimum requirements to be demanded of institutions seeking recognition by the Board of Education as secondary schools, colleges, and universities. This Commission is required to report its work at least every four years to the Board of Education. And the same paragraph declares that it shall then be the duty of the Board to classify all the educational institutions of our Church and to designate each as university, college, or academy, etc. Now the Board's view of the matter—I say the Board's view; at least it is mine—that the standards which the law here provides for must, according to the law, be applied by the Board of Education to all our institutions of learning. No institution of our Church is at liberty, under the law, to ignore the standards prescribed by the Commission and the Board has no option in the matter. It must apply these standards to all our institutions of learning and classify them according to their relation to these standards."

"Now the action of the Board which you refer to is based on this view of the law. I do not regard that any institution, under the law, has a right to ignore the standards which the Church has provided. If it does ignore these standards, it is thus far an outlaw, throws itself out of our educational system, and frustrates the very purpose for which the Board of Education was called into being; namely, 'the upbuilding of the educational institutions of our Church, for the establishment of new ones, and for the union of all into a harmonious system.' You can readily see that if the institutions of an Annual Conference ignore the educational standards provided by the Commission under the law of the Church, and then the Conference Boards of Education also ignore these standards and their application, and foster institutions that ignore our system of education and our efforts to standardize and organize our schools, that we shall not have 'one harmonious system of education.' But we shall have cross-currents and discord in our educational work even from 'Dan unto Beersheba.'

"You are at liberty to use the above exposition of our educational law in any way you desire."

"With very best wishes, I am,

Respectfully yours,

STONEWALL ANDERSON."

THE EDITOR'S VIEW.

After carefully reading all in the Book of Discipline that relates to our educational work and Dr. Anderson's exposition of the law regulating it, we find ourselves utterly unable to concur in the view that in undertaking to dictate to the Annual Conferences as to which of their schools they may make appropriations the General Board of Education has kept within the limit of its powers. We speak of "Annual Conferences" instead of the Annual Conference Boards of Education, because it is really the rights of the former which are trenching upon in this action, and not merely the rights of the Boards which they have created—a fact which the General Secretary of Education seems largely to have overlooked. But upon what do we base our conviction that Dr. Anderson is in error in the position which he has taken, and to which he has influenced the General Board to give its sanction? This we shall now proceed to show.

Paragraph 414 of the Discipline, which stands in the Chapter authorizing the organization of our Boards of Education (General and Annual), defining their respective powers, and outlining the general scheme of operation, reads as follows: "Each Annual Conference shall make an assessment for educational purposes to be distributed among its charges in the same way as the other Conference assessments, and applied by the contributing Conference to such educational work as it may desire to foster; but donors may give special direction to their contributions." A clearer and more explicit bestowment upon the Annual Conferences of the right to raise educational funds and apply them as they may see fit to their educational institutions, already existing, would be difficult to conceive. No restrictions whatever are imposed in this delegation of power; there is not the faintest hint that it may be exercised only when in harmony with the wishes of the General Board, as our Secretary now contends.

In the face of this specific and perfectly plain declaration contained in the Discipline, the nebulous generalities which Dr. Anderson has brought forward to sustain the Board in the action taken, seem to us to be unconvincing and wholly unsatisfactory. First, he goes back to the charter and tells us that it sets forth the functions of the Board as to its general superintendency more clearly than the Book of Discipline, even suggesting that the former instrument may be used to correct what he adjudges to be a defect in the Discipline. Truly, this is a remarkable contention. That we are to determine what the law of the Church is by scrutinizing charters, and that they may sometimes be used to supplement the enactments of the General Conference, is, so far as our knowledge extends, a brand-new idea. Let it be noted that in this instance it was expressly stated the charter was to be "for the purposes and with the powers herein set forth" (in the Discipline). If any of its provisions have gone beyond this distinctly affirmed limit, they are manifestly illegal and invalid. The law may be used to determine the proper scope of the charter, but the charter cannot be used as a means of adding to or subtracting from the law. If the efforts of our distinguished Secretary of Education in this direction are to be regarded as of any value, might it not be a good idea to have the next General Conference to appoint a Commission to study the charters of all our church organizations and prepare a book, entitled, "Church Law as Deduced from the Various Charters Which, from Time to Time, Have been Taken Out by Representatives of the Church—a Volume Specially Designed to Correct Defects in the Discipline?"

Dr. Anderson tells us that the General Board of Education has "the general superintendency of all our schools." And in another place he claims that it is "the supreme superintending power of the educational department of the Church." To the first of these expressions we have no particular objection, though it is nowhere contained in the Discipline. A general superintendency does not necessarily vest those exercising it with the right to do whatever they please, regardless of the law. Our Bishops, for instance, are spoken of as "general superintendents," but their powers are restricted in many directions. What such "a general superintendency" amounts to depends entirely upon what those having the legal right to constitute it designed it to be. It may vary all the way from a mere casual supervision to a direction of affairs that is plenary and minute. The facts, however, do not warrant the claim that our General Board of Education has a superintendency over our educational work that is "supreme." Abridgments of its powers are not lacking. Thus, it cannot establish any new institution of learning within the bounds of an Annual Conference without the consent of both the Conference and the Conference Board of Education; nor can it appropriate its own money to a person desiring its assistance without the recommendation of the Board of Education of the Annual Conference within whose territory he resides. But this phase of the discussion is very largely out of place, since, as we have said, the Discipline does not anywhere affirm that the General Board of Education has either a general, or supreme, superintendency of the educational department of the Church. This expression is one of the Secretary's own coining.

But again it is declared that "since they (the Conference Boards) are auxiliary they are not at liberty to inaugurate independent plans and policies and educational systems for themselves." We respectfully submit that none of these things are being done when an Annual Conference sees fit to exercise its legal right to donate money to one of its own institutions, already established. The Conference Board of Education has no right to dictate to the Annual Conference in this matter; neither has the General Board. The expression, "educational policy," upon which Dr. Anderson is disposed to lay so much stress, is one which has no very definite meaning. Who is to determine what that policy is? The General Board alone? Let the authority for such a contention be specifically adduced. Can that body, independent of the General Conference, inaugurate whatever plans and methods it may wish, and style them the "educational policy" of the Church? Nay, it must keep within the prescribed limits of the law. It can no more block out an educational policy of its own accord and demand its universal acceptance than can the Conference Boards. That prerogative belongs only to the General Conference. What the educational policy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is must be inferred from a study of our entire educational system, as it is constituted under the law. To be sure, the General Board has a large and important part in that system; but the Conference Boards and the Annual Conferences also have their places in it, as also do the trustees of our various institutions and the charters under which these institutions are incorporated. That all these other agencies are merely subsidiary and subordinate and that they may be overridden at will by the General Board of Education, is a contention for which we find no legal warrant.

We think that Dr. Anderson reads into the word "auxiliary," which appears in the Discipline, a much larger import than our lawmakers designed it to have. Because a body is "auxiliary" it does not follow that it must be entirely subservient, and that it has no rights safeguarded from invasion. That precise term is used of the Conference Boards of Missions and Church Extension; but the General Boards with which they are aligned have never set up the claim that they have a right to dictate to them and control them. The General Board of Missions would not think of telling any Conference Board that it must not appropriate money to a charge situated in the Annual Conference with which it is connected; nor would the General Board of Church Extension undertake to tell the Conference Boards affiliated with it what churches they may or may not assist. It has remained for Dr. Anderson in the management of our educational work to undertake to perform such a role as this. But the discussion of this point is largely irrelevant, since the attempted dictation is in reality to the Annual Conferences themselves, which are not "auxiliary" to the General Board of Education.

But how about the following declaration, which the Secretary cites as giving the General Board a large measure of power: "The Board shall, through its members, agents, and Boards of Education of the Annual Conferences, seek to increase endowments and otherwise strengthen our institutions in harmony with the general educational policy of the Church (not of the General Board), to correlate existing institutions, and to originate new ones which can be judiciously established and maintained?" There is nothing here which can be construed as abrogating the specific power delegated to the Annual Conferences in Paragraph 414; and there is nothing that vests the General Board with power to dictate to the Conference Boards about anything. The General Board is obviously expected to load in this necessary work, using a policy of persuasion, and not of coercion. That it was not intended to give it authority to dictate absolutely in these matters is clearly evidenced by the fact that the establishment of new institutions is one of the things mentioned, and that, as is indicated elsewhere, it can in no instance do simply upon its own election.

We shall not waste much time upon Paragraph 419, which deals with the question of classifying our educational institutions. We believe that the "classifying" which the General Conference had in mind was merely to group our institutions, giving each its proper place as "a university, college, or academy" in the official list of our schools published. That it was meant to empower the General Board to force every school to take its place in these classes by conforming to its requirements, however ruinous it might be to our local educational interests for it to do so, or to outlaw it and make war upon it, we do not at all concede. We see in the Discipline no evidence of any such design upon the part of our church lawmakers. On the contrary, "institutions seeking recognition by the Board of Education" are spoken of as if the effort to obtain that recognition was chiefly a matter of their own option. But whatever the word "classify" may mean, it can delegate no power that would strip an Annual Conference of a right given specifically to it long before this Classification Commission was ever thought of, and which has never before been challenged.

As we see it, our General Secretary is trying to accomplish by duress what was intended to be done by persuasion and wise leadership; and in order to succeed in this, he wishes to set aside a perfectly plain law which he thinks stands in the way. But we have little idea that he will be able to do this as long as the Discipline remains as it is at present. What we really need to fear is that the next General Conference may enact such legislation as would give the General

Board the plenary power which is now improperly, we think, claimed for it. If that should be done, in our opinion, the results that would follow would be most disastrous. But the discussion of that question and of the probable effect of the recent action of the General Board, if carried out, upon our educational work in Louisiana and Mississippi, we must leave to the next issue of the Advocate, since we have already written much too lengthily for a single editorial utterance. It has been a long time since a more important issue than this has arisen in the Church, and it well deserves the earnest and thoughtful attention of all our preachers and people. And when they understand what is involved, we predict that they will be heard from on this subject in no uncertain manner.

THE NEW ORLEANS Y. M. C. A.

(An extract from an address delivered by Dr. L. Sexton in the Carrollton M. E. Church, South, on Sunday, June 8, in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. forward movement in New Orleans.)

The Y. M. C. Association under its new Board of Administrators has determined on a forward movement in regard to Y. M. C. A. work in New Orleans, which is very much needed. In the past this Association has not had the close co-ordination with and relationship to the churches which its work and aim justifies. The Association has stood much in the same relation to the churches as that of a step-child—the churches wishing it well, but taking no active part in promoting the development which is so essential to the success of Y. M. C. A. work here and everywhere. The Association should be a sort of moral clearing house, or down-town church club for all young men of the community, and this can never be accomplished until we get all the churches more vitally interested in helping the Board of Administrators of the Y. M. C. A. to realize this worthy aim. It is upon this mission that the different members of the Board have been addressing the various churches of New Orleans during the past few months and this is my excuse for addressing you to-day.

The hundreds of students that are being educated in New Orleans from the adjacent country and States, added to the large number of our New Orleans young men, certainly emphasizes the need of some down-town moral influence or club life to offset the various worldly attractions that are staring the average young man in the face, such as bar rooms, salacious picture shows, theaters, and the red light districts. These and other things are constantly throwing temptations in the path of the average young man. This pressing need for the betterment of the surroundings of the average down-town hall-room boy, the students, and employed young men in our various stores and factories caused seven of the Board of Administrators to sign notes for $1000 each to make the improvement necessary upon the present Y. M. C. A. building—to convert the large auditorium and other rooms in the building into dormitories suitable for the lodging and entertaining of 150 young men. The contract has been signed and awarded for these additional rooms and the renovation of the gymnasium and the building, the improvement of the plumbing, heating and lighting, and the construction of 50 new rooms besides those already in use. The Board of Administrators thought that if they individually converted this building into a dormitory for the accommodation of 150 young men they might reasonably count upon the churches and the generous public of New Orleans to furnish such rooms at a nominal expense of $50 per room, either as a memorial to a member of some family, or as a philanthropic and benevolent donation for the better housing and environment of at least a portion of our transient and permanent down-town young men. It is also the expectation and desire of this new Board of Administrators to launch a membership campaign for 1000 new members to enjoy these added facilities to our gymnasium, swimming pool, shower baths, in-door base ball, and various other sports which tend to interest young men and to keep them apart or separated from the temptations which are so flagrantly offered to them in all down-town sections of the city.

To any one who knows the cheerlessness of the average hall room, with its inadequate ventilation, furnishings and comforts, it is scarcely a surprise that hundreds of young men are nightly tramping the streets, promenading up and down the walks, yet going nowhere.

There is a call to every right thinking man and woman with proper civic pride to at least try to offer a counter-attraction to the allurements to evil which many young men have, and our splendidly equipped gymnasium, with its splendid athletic leader, our hot and cold shower and plunge baths, our reading room, well equipped with literature, including all the daily papers and new magazines, and our alert Secretary will, in our judgment, appeal to their better emotions, and perhaps cause a reformation in the lives of many splendid young men who otherwise might be lost to all moral and regenerating influences. The auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. is to be moved to the front portion of the building where attractive lecturers, speakers, preachers and teachers will be constantly employed for the upbuilding of the moral and intellectual side of our young men patrons. The new Board of Administrators expects to make the name of the Y. M. C. A. stand for the moral uplift of the young men of this community. Its athletic conveniences, as well as lectures and teachings upon hygienic subjects, are expected to offer ample inducements for the development of the physical well-being of our patrons. Mens Sana in corpore Sano is to be the watchword in the new movement of the Y. M. C. A. work in New Orleans. It is to this end that the Board of Administrators is appealing to the various churches, and to those who are charitably inclined to at least take care of the furnishings of these dormitories after the Board of Administrators has built and equipped them. Can we realize our expectations? Can the churches and community really afford to do less?

THE TRI-STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

The Tri-State Epworth League Assembly, for the States of Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, will be held this year from July 17 to July 27. The Assembly will, as in former years, be held at the Seashore Camp Ground at Biloxi, Miss. The arrangement of the program for the Assembly has been placed in the hands of Rev. C. N. Gulce, of Canton, Miss. Brother Gulce promises the best program that the Assembly has ever had. He states that he will soon be able to make definite announcement as to speakers, etc. We feel sure that he will look after the program to the very best of his ability and that the Leaguers and others attending this meeting will be greatly profited thereby.

There are many of our young people and other Christian workers who are now thinking of their vacation and are beginning to make plans for the same. There is no better place where these young people can spend a vacation than at the Seashore Camp Ground during the ten days that this Assembly will be in progress. Here will be found all the advantages that one could wish for in the way of enjoyment and for spending the vacation in a pleasant manner. Beside all this, there will be a fellowship with other Christian people and Christian workers that will be helpful and uplifting. The addresses and the other work that is done by the Assembly will be of great benefit toward the better preparation of everyone for living a victorious Christian life and for being useful in helping others to this victorious life.

The past history of the Seashore Assembly is one of which everyone concerned in it may well be proud. There have been young men brought into the Christian ministry through the work of this Assembly. There have been young women brought into the work of the deaconess by the influence that has been brought to bear upon them by these meetings.

We trust that a larger number of young people than ever before will plan to spend their vacation at the Camp Ground during the meeting of the Assembly this year. Yours faithfully,

W. L. DOSS, Sec'y.

Dr. H. M. Blair, Editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, who has lately been going around a good deal, thinks that there is very little sentiment throughout the Church in favor of changing its name.

Dr. G. C. Rankin, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, doubts the wisdom of publishing the Epworth Era in Dallas, instead of Nashville. He thinks it would cost 25 per cent more to issue the paper in Texas, and that the advertising would not be as profitable as that which can be secured at the Tennessee Capital.

The campaign that is being conducted in the Holston Conference to raise $75,000 for Emory and Henry College is approaching a successful culmination. Already $60,000 has been secured, and the balance of the amount desired will be in hand by the 1st of July, if the predictions of the leaders of the movement are fulfilled.

Episcopal Methodism has at last gained a foothold in France. On April 20 the first Methodist Episcopal church ever erected in that country was dedicated, after having been built at a cost of $4000. It has sixty members. The Wesleyan Methodist Church of England also has gained a small foothold in the French Republic, and a great revival meeting is said to be in progress at Bourgneuf.

Professor George Jackson, who for many years has stood out as one of the leaders of Canadian Methodism, preached his farewell sermon in Toronto, Canada, on the fourth Sunday in May, and sailed the following week for England where he will take up work in Didsbury College. The Church in Canada has lost a strong man, and England has secured an accomplished scholar and gifted educator.

At a recent service held in Centenary Church, St. Louis, Mo., the pastor, Rev. L. E. Todd, received more than four hundred members into the Church at one time. This large class was not the result of a revival meeting, nor of any special series of services, but was the culmination of a long and carefully worked out plan of pastoral visiting and evangelistic work in which the pastor had the co-operation of his flock.

For many years the Portuguese Government has sent a legation to the Vatican in Rome in order that it might have the advantage of the counsel of the Pope. On May 31 the legation was abolished by the vote of the Chamber of Deputies in Lisbon. The Pope is reported to be greatly incensed by this act of the Deputies, and charges that it was brought about through the influence of Free Masonry.

The International Bible Students met recently in Hot Springs, Ark., and after reaching the conclusion that there is no hell, passed resolutions asking all ministers to cease preaching such a doctrine. It might be added that this same body reached the same conclusion about a year ago, and that when the public looked up its record, it was learned that the International Bible Students are only a branch of Pastor Russell's Millennial Dawnites.

Mrs. J. D. Hammond, wife of the president of Paine College, has undertaken to raise $50,000 with which to purchase a ten-acre tract of land near Atlanta, Ga., where she expects to demonstrate that better equipped houses and absolute segregation is the paramount need of the Negro race. Mrs. Hammond's plan includes the building of a large number of modern three-roomed houses for rental purposes and a large community house for assembly purposes and class rooms.

It has been less than a year ago since the Methodists of Canada agreed to unite with the Presbyterians and Congregationalists, making one great Protestant Church in Canada. Recently an application was filed in Montreal by prominent Methodist ministers asking for a charter to establish another Methodist Church with a slightly different name from the one that voted in favor of union. Organic union does not necessarily bring the oneness among Christians for which Christ prayed.

The United Brethren Church in its recent Annual Convention passed a resolution urging its members to refrain from attending the Panama Canal Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, giving as a reason for such action the wide-open and godless manner in which the managers are planning to conduct it. If all the Churches of America would take a similar stand, those directing the exposition might be influenced to eliminate some of the features which are considered most objectionable.

GIRLS' MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

A Girls' Missionary Conference will be held at Booneville, Miss., from July 12 to 14. The Conference will be composed of five girls from the ages of 16 to 21 years from each of the charges between Corinth and West Point, between Amory and New Albany, and between Ripley and Pontotoc, including Iuka and Houston. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Young People's Missionary Society.

A delightful program has been arranged which includes plenty of attractive music and live inspirational addresses. The social feature of the gathering has not been overlooked. Among those who are to take part in the program are Rev. S. A. Brown, of Booneville, and Rev. S. L. Pope, of Itta Bena, Mesdames Vic Thompson Hoyle, of Tupelo, J. E. Thomas, of Columbus, and W. M. McIntosh, of Iuka, and Miss Corinne Rogers, of Tupelo, and Miss Maggie Tate, of Blue Mountain. The Conference will convene at 5 p. m. on Saturday, June 12, and continue until after the evening service on Monday, July 14.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

The 1912-1913 session of the Mississippi Conference Training School has passed into history, and some of the patrons and friends of the school pronounce it one of the best sessions it has ever had. Two hundred and seventy pupils were enrolled during the session, seventy of whom were in the academic department. Nine of these pupils were ministerial students, and five were the children of preachers—the children of the Presiding Elder not counted.

The Commencement Exercises reflected credit on all the participants. Five very interesting programs were rendered. Rev. G. H. Thompson, Presiding Elder of the Hattiesburg District of the Mississippi Annual Conference, preached the Commencement Sermon. His Text was Psalms

VIII, 4, which he developed with the skill of a master. I think if there were any in the audience at the beginning of the service who were inclined to degenerate man to the level of the brute creation, they were converted before the close of the sermon, so powerfully and clearly did the preacher explain man's kinship to God. Sunday night our own beloved Presiding Elder, Dr. H. Walter Featherston, preached a very interesting sermon, especially to the Epworth Leaguers. The Baccalaureate Address was delivered by our pastor, Rev. H. F. Tolle. With his wit and eloquence he easily swayed his auditors at his will. Four noble young men and three charming young ladies graduated in the literary department. Four young ladies received music diplomas.

After thoroughly discussing the matter, the Trustees decided to raise the curriculum, and advance the institution to the dignity of a college, so from this time the school will be styled "The Montrose College," and in the new classification of schools, it will be classed as a junior college.

As President of the school, I wish to thank my honored predecessors for all they have done for it, and all the friends of the school for their valuable assistance, and all the patrons of the last session for their co-operation with the administration in making the session a success.

I shall thank the preachers, and all others who may read these lines, if they will send me the names of any boys or girls who are interested in getting an education at the least possible expense.

Respectfully,
Montrose, Miss.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

June 24, July 3, 1913.

The Editorial notice in the New Orleans Advocate of last week is highly appreciated by the management of the Seashore Divinity School, and we are expecting a large attendance at this session. The program is altogether up to that of any previous session. The presence of Bishop Candler will be a great inspiration to those present. Dr. Rice will present his themes in a strong and helpful manner. He is one of the greatest pastors of our great Church, and he knows how to inspire men with faith in the Word. Doctor Cope is not one whit behind those who discuss the character of subjects he will present at this session. Altogether, we have a strong and pleasing program.

Let every pastor and presiding elder of the patronizing territory be on hand at the opening and remain through the entire session. There have been more inquiries this year regarding courses and conveniences than any year previous, and I predict that the grounds will be alive with preachers and laymen who desire to get the benefit of the lectures.

With high hopes and strong faith in the permanence of this great institution, I am,
With love for all the brethren,

Brookhaven, Miss.

Mansfield Female College.

MANSFIELD, LA.

The year 1912-13 has been the best year in many. The boarding students number 150 per cent more than last year, and the local patronage has been 100 per cent larger. The graduating class is the largest in twelve years. The income for board and tuition has been $13,500, against $8,500 for the past few years. Of the $13,500, $13,000 has been collected, and to-day the College has not a dollar of indebtedness except the bonds. We have paid every obligation of the year and nearly $1,000 of old accounts.

Our new catalog is one of the neatest and prettiest. We have 1500 copies. Write for one and send us names of probable students.

The College kept open house to all its patrons during Commencement, and it has been our delight that we had friends from all over the State to enjoy the various exercises.

SOME NORTHWEST LOUISIANA HAP- PENINGS.

By Dr. J. M. Henry.

Methodism in Shreveport gives evidence of great vigor. Wise counsel has prevailed and telling work has been done. Much is under way, and much more is to follow in the near future. First Church has a magnificent building nearing completion. The building when finished and furnished will represent an expenditure of $125,000. The site upon which this building stands is worth $100,000. This splendid plant representing almost a quarter of a million dollars, occupies the most desirable site in the city of Shreveport. Here a great congregation is soon to make its home. This is to be the home of a great Sunday school. From it will go forth great missionary and evangelistic influences. One is almost impatient to see the building finished, and this great church, in all its departments, at work in its new home.

There are other churches in and about Shreveport which contribute to the forward movement of Methodism in that growing city. Involved in this movement, and a very vital part of it, is Centenary College. This institution is situated in a rapidly growing suburb, within easy reach (just about a fifteen minutes ride) of the heart of the city. The College crowns an elevation which is symbolic of the position it has held in this State, and is destined to hold. When the College was brought from Jackson, La., a few years ago, no student body nor faculty came with it; the Board of Trustees to a great extent was composed of new men. The present enterprise is practically a new Centenary; yet it is not a new, only a renewed Centenary, for the history and traditions remain. Men of mature years, filling high places in State and Church, claim it as their Alma Mater.

And of greater importance than these things, the renewed Centenary holds sacred the ideals of the old Centenary. Taking all these things into consideration, we see in this year's work a splendid success. Six men finished the regular A. B. course, and one the B. S. course. The students and members of the faculty are so closely associated that the work bears the marks of "hand made." This is an excellency which schools having overgrown classes cannot produce. This personal element is essential to the best quality of education.

The Board of Trustees met in the Library on Tuesday morning. The occasion was of more than usual interest, for, in addition to the routine business, the College was bidding adieu to a retiring President and welcoming an incoming one, and setting on foot an advance movement. Dr. Hill's retirement was the cause of regret, and yet all recognized the wisdom of Dr. Hill in asking for relief. The position is one which requires the strength of a younger man. Dr. R. H. Wynn is young and strong, and in every way fitted to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Dr. F. R. Hill. Already Dr. Wynn has a strong grip upon the details of his new work, and is maturing plans for large things for the College. The Board put itself on record as favoring large things. Nothing less than adequate buildings and a sufficient endowment is to be considered. It was well understood that these plans could not be realized in a day, but that time and hard work alone can bring the results desired. The immediate need is another building, costing not less than $50,000. All available space is occupied; more room is an imperative need. The money for this building ought to be placed in the hands of the Trustees by the Methodist of this State immediately.

The Presiding Elders, the Board of Education of the Louisiana Conference, the Board of Trustees of Centenary College, and the Board of Trustees of Mansfield College, are all agreed that the time has come for a "Forward Movement" in the educational affairs of this Conference. With the success of the year just closing as an inspiration, there is no reason for delay. There is every reason to believe the Methodist people of Louisiana are ready to give hearty support to this movement. With Dr. R. H. Wynn, President of Centenary College; Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, President of Mansfield College; Rev. P. M. Brown, President of the Louisiana Conference Board of Education; and Rev. M. C. Holt, Conference Secretary of Education, as leaders, it is expected the thing will come to pass.

Some Additional Notes.

The following young men were awarded the A. B. degree at the recent Commencement, Centenary College: I. B. Robertson, Jena, La.; E. L. Whittington, Alexandria, La.; Luther E. Martin, Gibbsland, La.; H. W. Cudd, Benton, La.; H. T. Young, Shreveport, La.; and H. M. Elston, Haughton, La. L. A. Sims of New Orleans, La., received the B. S. degree.

The Board of Trustees, Centenary College, made Dr. F. R. Hill President Emeritus as a mark of appreciation.

Upon the recommendation of Dr. F. R. Hill and his faculty, the degree of D. D. was conferred upon Rev. R. H. Wynn.

Dr. R. H. Wynn became the President of the College at the close of the Commencement exercises, and will move to Shreveport in a few days.

Rev. P. M. Brown was elected President of the Board of Trustees.

The Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference met in the College Library, Wednesday, and gave attention to some matters of general concern. The reports indicated a prosperous year so far. The next meeting of the elders was set for Baton Rouge, Oct. 15, 1913.

AN APPEAL

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Conference.

In order to meet the obligations assumed by the Annual Conference which would fall due before the next meeting of the Conference, the Board of Education asked that the second Sunday in February last be set apart as Education Day and that the collection for "Conference Education" be taken on that day and forwarded to the Treasurer of the Board. This action was taken by the Conference without a dissenting voice.

Very few churches have reported the proceeds of this day to our Treasurer. The Board will be seriously hampered in its work if it does not have funds in hand by July 1 to meet the semi-annual interest on the Mansfield Bonds. Brother Pastor, if you have funds on hand from the observance of this day, will you not remit to me at once at Shreveport, La.? (Our treasurer is out of the State at present.) If you did not observe this day, will you not take the collection between now and July 1? This is by no means an extra collection but simply an appeal for an early collection for a vital cause, which you have no idea of neglecting. It will help you to get this done early in the year.

Thanking you in advance for a prompt response to this appeal, I am,

Your obedient servant,

PAUL M. BROWN,
Ch. La. Conf. Bd. of Education.

SHALL GOD'S METHOD BE SET ASIDE?

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Has the old time revival meeting, with its accompanying revival preacher and mourners' bench, gone out of style? It so appears to one who reads the writings of a large class of religious workers. This seems to be the age of the teacher and the child; and the theory of the teaching enthusiast is that all the Church needs to do to-day is to instruct the child, and that to-morrow the world will be saved. In order to bring the child into full accord with the principles of Christianity and the Church, we have the Sunday school, the Junior League, the Juvenile Missionary Society, Boys' Clubs, Scouts, and other organizations galore. The preacher finds himself so busy with his missionary societies, his training classes, his men's banquets, his District meetings, conferences, institutes, classes, leagues, boards, and other subsidiary organizations of the Church, that he falls by the wayside and faints spiritually, thinking that when all the inner wheels of his church are running smoothly Zion is prospering.

Is there not danger of the Church of to-day missing the goal she is expected to reach by allowing enthusiasts for petty organizations to becloud the real business of the Church? Does it not stand to reason that a thoroughly converted father and mother is a surer guarantee of a religious family than the best equipped Sunday school building in the Connection would be? If the parents are not religious, it is well-nigh an impossibility to develop their children into first-class Christians by training them for one hour a week in a Sunday school, or any other junior organization.

The first business of a preacher is to offer Christ as a Savior to dying sinners. The preacher is an evangelist, not a theological professor. The average congregation is composed of ten people who can not follow abstract reasoning to where it has one who can. These ten, and the one, too, can understand and appreciate a simple presentation of the story of the Cross, wherein Christ is offered as a Savior. A great sermon is not a great argument—it is a great appeal. First Corinthians 1:21 says: "For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."

While we would not minify the importance of their work, we do not hesitate to express the conviction that the salvation of the world will never be accomplished by the Sunday school teachers. In the first place a lamentably large number of them do not know Christ themselves, and how can the blind lead the blind? The atmosphere of the Sunday school is characterized by too much of a hurrah to be the most effective place to influence children to seek Christ. Decision Day is not Scriptural on the very face of it; for it postpones deciding for Christ to a given date in the future, and the Bible says, "Now is the accepted time," and "To-day is the day of salvation."

The hope of the Church is in the preacher and not in the teacher. No laymen's movement, missionary society, league, club, or any other organization will ever fill the demand for the man of God who stands in the pulpit and warns against sin and points to Christ. Give us more men of the stamp of Wesley, who spent most of his life as a revivalist. He organized, but his organization work followed his revival work and did not precede it. The average enthusiast to-day, when his church becomes dead, is beside himself until he has found a new organization to arouse increased enthusiasm. If our churches are dead, preach Christ! If the Sunday school has run down, preach Christ! If the League is dead and the prayer meeting a drag, and the missionary society a burden, preach Christ! I did not say preach about Christ, I said preach Christ. Hold him up until a dying church and community can see in him the balm for all their ills, and your troubles about a dead church will soon be over.

SOME MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE.

Mr. Editor: Some special features of the recent session of the Seashore District Conference should (in the judgment of the Conference) receive more emphasis than is ordinarily given to reports and memorials. The questions of evangelism and the spiritual condition of the Church are as important at this time as any that are confronting us. Both these questions were thoroughly discussed and the result was the adoption of a memorial to the Annual Conference, and of an impressive report prepared by the Committee on the Spiritual State of the Church, which was read by Brother Sharbrough. The memorial is as follows: "Resolved that it is the sense of this District Conference that the present arrangement made by the Annual Conference for special evangelists is inadequate and unsatisfactory in that it does not touch the most needy charges; that this District Conference memorialize the Annual Conference carefully to investigate this whole matter, and, if possible, make more adequate provision as to the number of evangelists appointed, and that they be placed under the direction of the Board of Missions, and that their remuneration be provided for through the Board, so that they shall be accessible to the most needy charges."

Report on the Spiritual State of the Church.

"We rejoice to note that, as a rule, good reports have been made on this subject by the various pastors of the District; that in a few instances revival meetings have been held and that in others careful plans for revivals are being enthusiastically laid. We would urge a close and constant walk with God on the part of our preachers and laymen throughout the District. We would insist kindly but most fervently upon the restoration of family altars in homes where they have fallen into decay, and their erection in every home in our Church where they have never been established. We would devoutly and most earnestly recommend that our pastors preach more upon family religion and that they emphasize the same in their pastoral visitation; that they press upon the conscience of the people the importance of a better observance of the Sabbath; and we urge the churches constantly to a more consecrated and deeply spiritual life; and also that they do all that is possible to counteract the worldly spirit wherever it shows itself in the Church, whether manifested in excessive devotion to business, or to worldly amusements, or in immodest attire. We further recommend that our pastors, while avoiding fanaticism and extreme views on the subject of sanctification, preach earnestly on Scriptural holiness, emphasizing the truth that all real Christians must live without committing any transgression (in spirit or act) against the divine law; and that they all be wholly the Lord's whether for sacrifice or service, and that they should go on to perfection in love; that the Spirit's fullness is for all who will meet the conditions of the full knowledge of the truth—entire consecration to Christ and constant believing prayer.

"As to revival methods, we would recommend the employment only of those preachers who dig deep and lay firmly the foundations of Christian life and character, and who heal not the hurt of God's people lightly. We would advise the singing of the grand old penitential hymns of the Church in revival services; and we urge that those who profess faith in Christ be led to the reception of the witness and fellowship of the Spirit."

COURTLAND SETS A GOOD EXAMPLE.

Last Sunday I was at Courtland, Miss., with Brother A. S. Raper, who has won his way into all hearts there, and has his charge doing business for the Lord at a pace entirely new to it. We started in expecting to raise $1,000 from the entire charge (double its apportionment), which would give it a room in the Methodist Hospital named for it. But the Courtland Church, with fifty or sixty members, responded so heartily to the Hospital appeal that the $1,000 was promptly subscribed by it alone, and the room will therefore be named for that church, which is but one of the seven on the charge.

How did they come to do it? That is easy enough to answer:

They have a pastor who is doing things, and who threw himself into the effort with all his heart.

Then, they had recently had a splendid revival, led by the pastor and our good brother, Rev. John Park. Three cheers for the Courtland Methodists and their pastor!

Are the other brethren and churches going to let Courtland, with no rich members, run away with the record? If not, they will have to hustle. The Methodist Hospital cause is winning everywhere. It is the greatest cause now before our people.

HURRY UP! HURRY UP!!

"The world is changing rapidly and Christ says: Hurry up! Hurry up!! Hurry up!!! You cannot afford to waste time. You can better afford to waste money. Time is getting to be precious. The Angel of the Covenant stands to-day with one foot on the sea and the other on the land and proclaims to all the earth 'Time shall be no more.' You have got to hurry up or your work will never be done. Don't wait! Don't wait!! Six months of to-day is worth a century of to-morrow. We are moving with such tremendous rapidity along life's highway that we cannot afford to lag behind on this—the King's Highway."

The above are the closing words of the stirring appeal made by Bishop Abner W. Wilson for an increase of the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension from one half million to one million dollars. The address was delivered on the evening of May 1, in First Church, Dallas, Texas, in connection with the Annual Meeting of the Board and will be published in booklet form at an early date.

LITTLE HELPERS.

When every little hand
Helps sow the Gospel seed,
And every little heart
Doth pray for those in need;
When every little life
Such fair, bright record shows;
Then shall the desert bud
And blossom as the rose.

WHERE MARY FOUND HELP.

"Mary, what do you do when you feel cross and naughty?" asked the lady of a little girl only 5 years old.

"I just shut my lips and eyes tight and think a prayer to Jesus to come and make me feel right," answered Mary.

Mary is a wise little girl. She knows that when she is tempted she needs help from above to keep her from falling into sin.

Let us all remember that in every temptation we need the help of the Lord Jesus Christ to keep us from doing wrong. So, when we feel our tempers rising let us lift up a little prayer to Jesus, and he will surely hear and answer us.—Little Ones.

A BOY'S ESTIMATE OF VALUES.

A deep sigh of sorrow broke from the lips of Freddie.

"I wish," he said plaintively, "I wish I wuz Billy Smith!"

His mother was astonished, shocked.

"Why, Freddie?" she asked. "Billy Smith has none of the nice things you have. He doesn't get any pocket money, and he isn't as big as you, and he is not nearly so strong. His father never buys him presents or—"

"Yes; I know all about that," said Freddie. "But—"

"And then look what a nice home you have, and nice books, and you never have to go out when it is cold and wet to carry papers, and—"

"Yes, I know that," said Freddie irritably, annoyed at his mother's strange lack of sympathy and understanding. "But, Billy kin wiggle his ears."—Times-Democrat.

JOHNNY AND THE BEE.

By Gertrude M. Neil.

"Oh, Johnnie, you are a lazy boy," said his auntie, as she watched him weed the onion bed. "Why, if that little bee was big enough to do your job and had been given it, he would have had it done long ago, for he is busy all the time. Don't you know, Johnnie, that when you fiddle over a job you make it twice as hard?"

"Now look at the bee; it goes from flower to flower and never wastes a minute, and then, when it has all the honey it can carry, off it goes to the hive without being told. Surely you ought to be as able to work as a little bee. Why, a bee earns its own living, and that is more than you can do."

Johnnie began asking questions about the bees, which auntie answered; then, telling him to hurry with his work before the sun became too hot, she left him.

Lazy Johnnie weeded one more row and then decided he must have a rest and an apple, so over he went to the apple tree and threw himself down on the grass.

"That's all stuff auntie was telling me about bees," he told himself. "She can always find something to compare a fellow to, but that bee business—I can't swallow that."

Just then he heard a buzzing noise, and a bee settled on a dandelion not far away, and the funniest thing happened. That dandelion began to grow bigger and bigger until it was as big as a tub, and that bee became larger until it was as long as Johnnie was tall. But, funniest of all, the bee began to talk.

"Hello, Johnnie slow-poke! have you finished weeding your onion bed yet?"

"No, I haven't," answered Johnnie, "but that is none of your business."

"Oh, you're a saucy boy, as well as a lazy one," answered the bee. "Well, I could sting you real hard for speaking to me like that, but I won't; I will try to teach you better manners."

"I thought you were such a busy fellow you would not have time to stop and talk," answered the saucy boy.

"Well, I have my pocket filled with honey, so I stop long enough to tell you a few things about busy bees. I heard you say you do not believe all the stuff your aunt was telling you."

"Well, go ahead," said Johnnie.

"Well, in the first place, my companions and myself gather all the honey our queen, our drones, our babies and ourselves eat, and what a great many people eat also. We make bee bread out of honey and pollen to feed our babies. We also make the wax for our honey combs, and then make the combs. When our hive becomes stuffy for want of air, some of us turn ourselves into fans and fan the air into the hive. We wait on our queen and make wax nests for her in which to lay her eggs, and then we attend to the baby bees when they are hatched. We never stop from morning until night, and if you do not think this is true come over to Mr. Brown's farm, where my hive-home is, and watch us work, and ask Mr. Brown to tell you about us. Now you'd better finish your onion bed, for I must go away with my heavy load."

Away flew the bee, and Johnnie rubbed his eyes and looked at the dandelion on which the bee had sat, and it had grown small again. "I wonder if I was asleep," thought the boy, as he went back to his onion bed job and worked so hard that he finished it in a very short time.

After dinner he asked his auntie and received permission to go over to Mr. Brown's farm. Mr. Brown was only too pleased to let Johnnie watch the bees, and he told him many interesting things about them, and Johnnie found that all the things the bee had told him were true. Mr. Brown also told him that if two queens are allowed to remain in a hive the bees will quarrel and divide, part of them leaving with one of the queens. Wherever the queen settles, on tree, chimney, bush or man, there the runaways will settle in a bunch around her, and they are very easily captured and put in a box. Thus another beehive is started. Johnnie saw the queen of one of the hives, and noticed that she had a much longer body than the workers or the drones.

As Johnnie watched the bees through a glass window which Mr. Brown had put in one of the hives just for that purpose, he began to think the busy bees were about the busiest things he had ever seen and the drones about the laziest. He began to be very much disgusted with the drones, and then a sudden thought struck him.

"Why, there are lots of boys and girls just like those drones, who get out of doing all the work they can. Why, I believe I have been a drone boy myself! Well, I won't be after this."

Johnnie's relatives were much surprised to see him suddenly change from a very lazy boy into quite a little worker, and if ever he was tempted to shirk his work the sight of a bee would make him hustle.—The Christian Guardian.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Dear Brother Meek: I have received returns from 57 Children's Day offerings, representing some 60 or 65 Sunday schools, and amounting to $588.43.

This is very fine as far as it goes. But this is only about one-fifth of our schools. May has passed, and June is passing, and I am beginning to wonder if the other four-fifths are going to do their part.

I have heard of some schools celebrating the Day, from which I have not received any returns. I have had some complaints that the minutes do not give credit for Children's Day offerings last year, in some cases. I do not know why, but if the offering is not turned over to the Sunday School Board, it is evident that such credit cannot be given. Nor is it proper for the pastor or officials to use this offering for any other purpose.

The object of this note is two-fold:

1. To request every pastor and superintendent to see that the Children's Day offering is sent to me promptly, and that it is not diverted to any other channel.

2. To urge those schools which have so far failed to act to do so at an early date and thus clear the Sunday school decks for a great Rally Day in the fall. Yours fraternally,

T. W. HOLLOMAN,
Treas. La. Conf. S. S. Board.

RAILROAD RATES TO THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Our Committee on Railroad Rates has just forwarded me the following note from the South-eastern Passenger Association:

"Dear Sir: Referring to your favor of 2nd inst., and previous correspondence, I will say that upon investigation, it is found that, although the carriers went to the expense of publishing a tariff of special fares for this occasion last year, only 11 delegates availed themselves thereof; therefore the carriers do not feel that they can consistently publish special fares this year. Presumably most of your delegates used their clergy permits. Very respectfully,

JOSEPH RICHARDSON."

I had thought we would have the same rates given us as heretofore, but this note ends that expectation.

Let all the preachers attending use their Clergy Permits. This will be just as cheap and as convenient any way. Really it will save a little. The only loss is to the laymen or members of the preachers' families who may attend.

H. M. ELLIS.

A WORD FROM BROTHER BORDERS.

Dr. Meek brands me as "variable" because I deplore the admitted fact that the generality of opinion in our church condemns the theater indiscriminately and inveighs against it with unofficial anathema, while I at the same time aver that there is no mandatory law upon the subject. The inconsistency is at least not apparent.

Respectfully,
I. D. BORDERS.

Editorial.

A SERIOUS SITUATION AND THE REMEDY.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is at present being considerably disturbed by "higher criticism," one of its latest advocates being Dr. George P. Mains, the New York Publishing Agent of that denomination. Among other things, Dr. Mains is quoted by Our Hope as giving utterance to the following statement: "The Reformation started by Luther protested against an infallible Church. 'Protestantism has put in place of that Church an infallible Book, which has been called the 'Paper Pope of Protestantism.' Higher criticism is to-day doing for that infallible Book just what the earlier reformers did for the infallible Church, and this task is as important and necessary as was the other." He is also quoted as saying that the battle of the critics has been won, and that some parts of the Bible have been selected as worthy of credence, while others have been rejected.

There must be troublous times ahead for a Church in which a man occupying the prominent official position that Dr. Mains does can talk in such a manner as this. Whether our Sister Church shall be able to handle this distinguished offender as he deserves to be remains to be seen. If she cannot, after him will likely come a veritable deluge of such infidelity. The truth is, the paramount question in practically all of the Protestant Evangelical Churches to-day is whether they shall be able to maintain sound doctrine and discipline, or whether a state of anarchy is to become prevalent in them.

This is quite as true of the Southern Methodist Church as of any other. We boast of our episcopal and subordinate forms of supervision, but these seem to amount to comparatively little in these stirring times. Far too often it is the case that some preacher tramples our doctrines and rules under foot, and not a word in rebuke is uttered by those charged with the duty of oversight. Of one thing we are fully convinced, namely, that the present chaotic condition of things will never be remedied by a mere general preaching against it. What is needed is a firm and faithful administration of discipline. If an unsound and hurtful utterance is heard in one of our pulpits or theological schools, or from one of our platforms, or is seen in one of our periodicals, the offender should be taken promptly and vigorously to task. There should in such cases be no compromising or shirking of duty. There are yet plenty of orthodox men among us to easily save the day if all would only stand forth fearlessly in the defense of truth and right. But if each deems it prudent to hold his peace and let things drift along in a haphazard way, the present contagion of liberalism is pretty certain to work havoc among us in the coming years. Scarcely any person in the Church exerts a more hurtful influence than the complacent optimist who insists that all is going on well and that we need not concern ourselves very seriously about anything. The Prophet Amos knew whereof he spoke when he uttered the warning: "Woe be unto them that are at ease in Zion!"

FINANCIAL VALUE OF A COLLEGE EDUCATION.

That a college education greatly increases one's enjoyment in life and capacity for useful service in the world, are facts very generally admitted and frequently emphasized, but the extent to which it is of financial value is not fully appreciated. Indeed, there are some who go so far as to venture to suggest that a long course of scholastic training tends to make one impracticable and to militate against a successful business career. We think, however, that a careful study of the question would utterly refute any such notion and show that in the commercial world, as well as in most other spheres of human endeavor, the advantage is clearly with the man who is well-equipped intellectually.

Some interesting statistics on this subject were recently given out in Chicago, which we quote, in part, as follows:

"A college education is worth $25,000 according to statistics compiled by the administration office of Northwestern University and made public to-day. In seeking to prove in dollars and cents the value of a higher education, the University took a census of the class of 1903, members of which have had 10 years to get settled. The investigation showed that for the first five years out of school the average earning power of the graduates was $367, and for the next five years the earning capacity jumped to $1862.

"According to the United States census bureau the average capacity of the salaried man in Chicago is $1202. An estimate of the total value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between this amount and the earnings of the graduate, and multiplying the sum by 40, which the statistician considered a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

"The cost of a college education at Northwestern is estimated at $2400."

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The Seashore Camp Meeting will begin this year on July 9 and close on July 16. The preachers announced for the occasion are Dr. John M. Moore of Nashville, the Home Missionary Secretary of the M. E. Church, South, Dr. George W. Mathews, a leading member of the South Georgia Conference, and Dr. J. D. Simpson, President of Birmingham College, all of whom are said to be gifted as revivalists. It is to be hoped that the attendance upon the services will be large and that the occasion will be one of spiritual power and profit. To this end, let the readers of the Advocate pray that those who are to dispense the Word may be anointed with the Holy Ghost and that all the workers present may have the burden of immortal souls placed upon their hearts. Camp meetings have had a conspicuous part in the history of Methodism, and it is to be regretted that they do not now command the attention that they once did. In our judgment, the Church is losing much as a consequence of the decreased interest in them. We should be delighted to see the Seashore Camp Meeting assume the proportions of former years. Doubtless such a development at this time would bring a far-reaching blessing to the Methodism of New Orleans and the Gulf Coast, quickening, heartening, and energizing it. There is no Christian who is not helped by a season of spiritual uplift and refreshing. Every disciple needs an occasional mountain-top experience. Therefore, if you can, go to the Seashore Camp Meeting and drink in the inspirational influence of the place and the occasion. For any information desired, write Mr. R. G. Price, Biloxi, Miss.

REV. J. B. STONE DEAD.

A telegram from Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Winona, Miss., bearing date of Monday, June 16, reads as follows: "Rev. J. B. Stone died at his home at Amory, Miss., this morning at two o'clock. He will be buried here (in Winona) to-morrow."

According to the press dispatches, the obsequies were to be under the direction of Dr. T. C. Wier, of Starkville. This announcement will touch with sadness many hearts and homes. Brother Stone was for many years one of the most prominent and active Methodist ministers in North Mississippi, filling with marked acceptability many of the leading appointments of his Conference. He was a model presiding elder, and is reported to have served the Church in that capacity for twenty-four years. He was a man of deep piety, and both his private and public ministrations were helpful and strengthening. He had been on the superannuate list for a number of years, and his closing days were peaceful and radiant with light. He "kept the faith," and we doubt not that he has now obtained the promised crown. Brother Stone left four children: Mr. J. K. Stone of St. Louis, Mrs. Dowden Rogers of Texas, Mrs. J. B. Small of Winona, and Mrs. John Kirk of Amory. His wife preceded him to "the better land" several years ago. We extend to the bereaved our deepest sympathy.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. J. B. Streater and Miss Ella Rivers Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., are visiting Mrs. R. A. Meek at her residence, No. 5914 Coliseum street, New Orleans.

We regret to learn that Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, has lately been ill. We earnestly pray that he may soon be quite himself again.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Paxton, of Arcola, Miss., have been spending some time in New Orleans taking medical treatment. They are among the best of our Delta Methodists, and to know them is to esteem and honor them.

Mrs. John S. Summerlin, of Denison, Texas, in renewing her subscription, also enclosed $1 to send the Advocate to some needy person. We are grateful to Sister Summerlin, both for this kindly act and her generous words concerning our paper.

Rev. George H. Thompson, the presiding elder, states that the Hattiesburg District Conference will convene at Mt. Olive, Miss., July 8, and that he hopes to have Bishop Candler preside. We dare say that the occasion will be one of much interest.

At the recent Millsaps Commencement, Mr. N. B. Harmon, Jr., the gifted son of Rev. N. B. Harmon of Yazoo City, Miss., was awarded both the Clark Essay medal and the D. A. R. historical medal. He is regarded as a young man of unusual intellectual gifts.

Mr. Harper Seawright and Miss Pearl Harmon, of Ackerman, Miss., were married at the beautiful home of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. W. Harmon, on May 28. Rev. J. M. Wyatt officiating. We extend congratulations and best wishes to the contracting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Jones and Mrs. Ella Melton, of Greenwood, Miss., visited relatives at Jackson, Miss., last week. Brother Jones is one of the Trustees of the Mississippi Orphan's Home, and it was chiefly to be present at the annual meeting of that body that he went to Jackson.

In the last paragraph of our editorial in reply to Brother Borders last week we were made by the linotypist to say "obliged" where we had written "obligated." We rarely take the trouble to correct typographical errors in what we write, and we have varied from our rule in this instance.

Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah will sail for Europe on their way to the Far East from New York on July 19, having taken passage on the Imperator, said to be the best equipped steamship afloat. While crossing Siberia the Bishop and Mrs. Murrah will be aboard the train for ten days consecutively.

Among those attending the Commencement exercises of Millsaps College, from outside the city of Jackson, last week we noted the following: Rev. Robert Selby, Brookhaven; Rev. G. S. Harmon, Meridian; Rev. O. S. Lewis, Brandon; Rev. C. F. Emery, Vicksburg; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona; and Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Galloway, of Edwards.

From Hattiesburg, Miss., Rev. G. W. Huff sends us the following good news: "I have just closed a great meeting at Cedar Lake, Miss. There was a wonderful spiritual awakening in the community, resulting in many conversions and 52 accessions to our Church. I am a superannuate, but conduct revival meetings when my health will admit."

"A Treatise on Sin and Depravity" is the name of a volume by Rev. R. A. Ellis, of Yazoo City, an esteemed member of the North Mississippi Conference, which has just been issued by the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South. It has as a frontispiece an excellent picture of the worthy author. We shall have more to say of this book at a later date.

The New Orleans District Sunday School Association held a very profitable session at the Louisiana Avenue Church last Tuesday evening.

The Lewis Brothers (Quartette) have consented to lead the singing at the Seashore Camp Meeting. This means that the song feature of the services will measure up to a high standard.

Rev. J. L. Sutton and family and Rev. J. G. Snelling and family are planning to spend a part of the summer at the Seashore Campground. Sister Snelling and her two sons went over the first of this week.

Mrs. J. W. Carnes, the wife of the Superintendent of our Sunday school in McDonoghville, underwent a serious operation in the Presbyterian Hospital, in New Orleans, last week. We are glad to state that she is making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Douglas, of Meridian, were blessed with the arrival in their home of a sweet baby girl, Mary Elizabeth, on May 27, 1913. We extend congratulations, and pray that the Heavenly Father may watch over and safely keep the mother and little one.

Under the leadership of Dr. Thaddeus P. Bell, the Algiers Methodist Church has installed a complete line of new fixtures in the Sunday school rooms of their church building. A finance committee is working energetically to secure as much cash as possible at this time to be applied to the building of the proposed new $20,000 church in Algiers.

According to the press dispatches, the North Mississippi Epworth Leaguers had a great time in their recent annual meeting at Pontotoc. We were especially pleased to note the strong stand which they took against theatricals. So long as our young people remain true to the doctrines and discipline of the Church, the future of Methodism is safe.

A card just received (Tuesday) from Rev. T. W. Adams, the presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, reports the Kelley meeting in Vicksburg to be deepening and widening in its influence. He says: "About 30 have joined the Church, a large proportion of them being married men and women. We are looking for still greater results during the next few days."

The Corinth District Conference, which met at Sherman, Miss., last week, was largely attended and the enthusiasm seems to have been at high tide. Bishop Murrah's presence and service added much to the occasion. The presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, is to be congratulated upon the progress Methodism is making in the territory under his supervision.

While at the Capital City of Mississippi last week, it was our pleasure to meet Rev. D. W. Babb, the genial pastor of our church at Charleston. He was in Jackson to attend the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Orphanage, of which body he is one of the most useful members. We were delighted to see him looking so well and to hear him speak so encouragingly of the work in his pastorate.

Bert, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ahrens, of New Orleans, died Monday night in the Presbyterian Hospital while undergoing a second operation for peritonitis. The young man was first injured by being struck with a baseball in the stomach about a month ago, and his death was an after-result of that accident. The sympathy of a host of friends goes out to Brother and Sister Ahrens in this hour of sore bereavement.

The Napoleon Avenue (New Orleans) congregation of the Presbyterian Church has bought a new lot on the corner of Napoleon and St. Charles Avenues at a cost of $20,000, and will, as soon as is practicable, proceed to erect thereon a $100,000 house of worship. What disposition will be made of the property at present owned and used by this flock on Napoleon Avenue, we are not yet informed.

The members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Brookhaven, Miss., announced last week that they would hold a farewell service in honor of Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb last Sunday morning. Sister Lipscomb will soon proceed to Nashville and take up her important duties as the Home Base Secretary of our Woman's Missionary work. She will be greatly missed both in church and educational circles in Mississippi.

Rev. D. H. Crowson, of Paris, Miss., writes: "I am sick, and have been so for some time. I should like to have you and the readers of the Advocate to pray for me and my charge. I am anxious not to fall behind in my part of the Master's work. My collections are in good shape, and the prospects are encouraging for a fruitful revival campaign. Indeed, the Holy Spirit is already manifesting his quickening power among us."

Dr. R. H. Wynn, President of Centenary College, writes as follows: "Bishop Candler has appointed Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir presiding elder of the Lafayette District in my place. My address after June 20 will be Shreveport." Doctor Wynn's work as a district superintendent was of a high order and the preachers and people will give him up with not a little reluctance. In Brother Hoffpauir, however, he will have a faithful and capable successor.

The Vanderbilt Commencement exercises were held this week, closing yesterday. We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to attend them.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, the pastor of our Second Church at Baton Rouge, La., reports a successful and fruitful meeting, which was greatly enjoyed by his people. His interesting account of these services will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

We are indebted to the following persons, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for subscriptions to the Advocate which have been recently sent in: Rev. W. B. Hogg, Fernwood, Miss., 5; Rev. J. H. Strait, Louin, Miss., 8; Mrs. Joe Bailey, Conehatta, Miss., 5; Rev. W. W. Murray, Shubuta, 6; Rev. J. T. Lewis, Clarksdale, Miss., 8.

Rev. W. H. Saunders is in the midst of a protracted meeting at the Washington Street Methodist Church of Vicksburg, in which he is being assisted by Rev. D. E. Kelley. Brother Saunders says: "Brother Kelley is doing the best preaching that it has been my privilege to hear in many a day, and everybody is delighted with him. The indications point to a really great revival."

In forwarding some subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Hermanville, Miss., adds the following concerning his work: "We are moving along nicely here. Our third quarterly Conference, which was held on June 3, was well attended and was a most profitable one. The Presiding Elder was on hand with his genial smiles, a head full of good thoughts, and a heart running over with love for the brethren. The general outlook in the charge is most promising."

We greatly regret to learn that Mrs. Parker, the beloved wife of Dr. F. N. Parker, of Trinity College, has found it necessary to submit to an operation for appendicitis. It was performed at the Touro Infirmary, in New Orleans, on last Monday, the 16th inst, and at this writing the patient is thought to be in a satisfactory condition. Let earnest prayer be made that the Heavenly Father may have this elect lady and her anxious loved ones in his special care during these days of apprehension and trial.

We have on our table an attractive wedding invitation which reads as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dana Wight request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Rev. James Archibald McKee, on Wednesday evening, June 25, 1913, at eight o'clock, at 1425 Pinon Street, Trinidad, Colorado." Brother McKee's many friends in Mississippi will read with interest this announcement of his approaching nuptials. We wish both him and his bride-to-be much happiness in the coming years.

We have on our table a copy of the Catalogue of Mansfield Female College for 1913-14, which was printed by Mr. C. O. Chalmers, the Publisher of the Advocate. It is a most attractive publication and ought to be in every Methodist home in Louisiana in which there are young ladies to be educated. Send to President R. E. Bobbitt, Mansfield, La., for a copy. This historic institution is now moving forward with a steady step, and well merits the patronage and hearty support of all our people in the Pelican State.

Rev. P. D. Hardin, the energetic and aggressive presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, sends us the following note concerning the progress of the work in the charges under his supervision: "Notwithstanding the adverse financial conditions with which we have had to contend in some parts of our territory, we are able to report a gratifying increase in the assessments made for the pastors this year. Canton has advanced $400; Capital Street, Jackson, $200; Millsaps Memorial, Jackson, $195; Madison, $100; Camden, $25, and Sharon, $5."

We are indebted to Rev. John W. Chisolm, of Jackson, Miss., for the following item of news: "Rev. F. H. McGee, the pastor of our church at Longview, Miss., and a member of the graduating class of Millsaps College, was seized with a violent attack of appendicitis on the afternoon of Tuesday, June 3, and was carried immediately to the Baptist Hospital in Jackson, where he underwent an operation. He stood the ordeal well and a speedy recovery is expected." We regret to be informed of Brother McGee's illness, and we pray that it may, indeed, be of brief duration.

Rev. B. P. Jaco, the leader of our Methodist forces in the Winona District, in a personal note to the Editor, makes the following reference to his work: "This quarter has been full of interest and progress. The field gets larger and larger as I go over it. The new places to be taken in and the need of enlisting our people more fully in the enterprises of the Church tend to put spurs to all the energies a man has." Ever since we have known Brother Jaco he has been spending his strength freely to speed the Master's coming kingdom. He never trifles with life's fast-fleeting opportunities.

Writing from Alexandria, La., on June 16, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy says: "One week ago last night, upon the invitation of Dr. Werlein, we began a meeting in the First Methodist Church of this city. During the opening days of the campaign we were much hindered by rain and other unfavorable conditions, but notwithstanding this, much good has been accomplished. Up to the present, we have had more than 20 applications for church membership, and great interest is being manifested. Yesterday (Sunday) was a fine day with us. Three splendid services were held, and indications point to a sweeping revival during the coming week. First Church observed Children's Day on Sunday, June 8. An excellent program was rendered and the occasion was an inspiring one."

Our church work at Minden, La., is going steadily forward under the efficient pastorate of Rev. A. G. Shankie. Work has already commenced on the beautiful new parsonage to be erected there. This, when completed, will cost about $5750. The ladies now have in hand several hundred dollars to be used in furnishing it. The congregations are good and the Sunday school is prospering. The zealous pastor needs but one thing more to make him happy, and that is to see a revival that will quicken the spiritual life of his flock and bring many souls into the kingdom. We pray that he may have it at no distant day.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer, of New Orleans, writes as follows: "By request of the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, Dr. J. M. Henry, I spent last Sunday with the Methodists of Bogalusa. The Children's Day exercises and all the other services were attended by large congregations, and the indications point to a year of great success in that field. Rev. L. I. McCain, the pastor, is an able preacher and is thoroughly alive to all the interests of the Church. He is much beloved by his people, who stand ready to back him in whatever he undertakes for the Master. He did a phenomenal work in Bogalusa last year, which likely he will outstrip during the year now passing. Brother McCain is rapidly recovering from his recent operation for appendicitis and will soon don the harness and take up his 'loved employ' again."

The General Educational Board (Rockefeller Foundation) appropriated $337,600 for the benefit of 16 educational institutions on May 23. The John B. Stetson University of Deland, Fla., will probably receive $50,000. Other gifts to the South include $180,000 to encourage agricultural work, especially by the organization of Boys' Corn Clubs; $75,000 for the promotion of Girls' Canning and Poultry Clubs; $30,550 for professors of secondary education in several State Universities; $20,000 for State supervisors of Negro schools, and $35,000 to three schools for Negroes.

A WORD OF EXHORTATION.

To the Members of the Ruston District.

Dear Brothers: This resolution was passed by the Annual Conference at its recent session: "The Second Sunday in February, or as near thereafter as practicable, is selected for Educational Day, and our preachers are urged to present the cause of Christian education to their congregations and take up a collection on the assessment."

If you have taken the collection, please send the money to Rev. P. M. Brown, Shreveport, La., and if you have not done so, please present the claim at your earliest opportunity. The Board is in need of funds. As to all the collections, press them and remember that early collections mean good collections. If you postpone too long you will come up short. Your brother, BRISCOE CARTER.

BRINGING RESULTS.

New Orleans Christian Advocate: We beg to acknowledge receipt of the recent issue of The Christian Advocate, in which we ordered you to place our advertisement; and have to thank you for the very good space given us. We are very much pleased with the results obtained from this first insertion, and, for your information, we may say that we have so far received six inquiries from the same, which is better results than we have received from other publications. Thanking you for past favors, and wishing you well, we are,

Yours very truly,

EVELYN WHITTINGTON was born August 9, 1912, and died May 12, 1913, having lived only 9 months and 3 days. In this short time Evelyn had so entwined her affections around the hearts of loved ones that it required great faith and loyal obedience to a loving Heavenly Father to submit to his will. But he who said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven," said also, "My grace is sufficient for thee." "The above dates span but a short period, and one full of anxiety, yet long enough to expand that niche in the parental heart and intensify the loneliness of the vacant cradle and the empty arms." She is gone from her earthly habitation, and from the loving care of her mother, but she is now in the tender embrace of Jesus. W. L. BLACKWELL.

LUCY THELMA SHELBY, who but recently passed to her reward, was a dear, sweet girl just blooming into young womanhood, scarcely fifteen years of age. She joined the Methodist Church when quite young, and as far as was possible, she ever filled her place at church and Sunday school. She was a frail, delicate child, and had to fight every step of life for existence. She was a bright, intelligent girl, making friends wherever she chanced to be, and was especially the idol of a fond and loving mother's heart. She would have graduated from the graded school of Hermalville had she lived a few weeks longer. Her life was one of great self-sacrifice, looking after others' pleasures and enjoyment more than that of her own welfare. Weep not, dear mother, she has been transplanted from an earthly habitation to the home of many mansions, the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Gone from your tender embrace, mother, but safe in the arms of Jesus. W. L. BLACKWELL, Pastor.

Mrs. AMANDA DELILA MILLER, wife of Rev. A. D. Miller, deceased, died May 4, 1913, being 60 years 8 months and 6 days old. She leaves six children, some grandchildren, and other relatives to mourn her departure. But their loss is her eternal gain. Brother and Sister Miller have left a noble heritage in their good, consecrated children. One of them is a Sunday school superintendent; one, a teacher, and the others are workers in the church. Sister Miller was a lover of the Church, being always interested in its success. She always inquired of the present pastor as to what was being accomplished on the circuit, how every thing was getting along, etc. She was energetic, literally wearing herself out for her home and loved ones. She was a great lover of flowers, as was evident to any one passing her home. Sister Miller was a sufferer for over four months, but she possessed herself in patience, trusting in the Lord all the while. She was not afraid to talk of the future, had no doubts of the rest that awaited her, was hopeful to the end, and died in great peace of mind, as one going to sleep. Weep not, loved ones; she is reposing in peace, enjoying a much needed rest in the home of many mansions, in "the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." W. L. BLACKWELL, Pastor.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER CURRIE.

I left home soon after the first of April, and have preached since then in three States—Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Several conversions resulted and I have baptized 7 children.

Recently I baptized my grand niece at the home of her father and mother,

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Gunter of Oklahoma City, who wore the same dress that her grandfather and her mother wore when baptized (I also presented her mother for baptism to Brother L. S. Jones, then pastor of the Clinton charge). While on my trip I had the privilege of conducting prayer meeting at St. Luke's Church of Oklahoma City and met Rev. R. E. Goodrich, the pastor. I have had a good trip and have felt the blessings of God on my rounds. I am now ready to return home. W. T. CURRIE.

FELDER'S REUNION AND QUARTERLY MEETING.

On Friday, May 23, 1913, a large concourse of people gathered at the Topisaw Methodist Church to honor the name of John Felder, the founder of the Topisaw church and campground; this annual gathering is known as The Felder's Reunion. In the forenoon a large crowd listened to a lecture on the "Sinking of the Titanic" by the Rev. Mr. Lane, a Baptist pastor of McComb City, Miss.

This lecture should be heard all over this land, because of the marvelous and wonderful religious and moral truths brought out by the speaker. In the afternoon there were short talks relative to the object of the gathering, some songs, instrumental music, and prayers, all of which made the day an enjoyable one. Mr. R. H. ("Uncle Bob") Felder, the eldest son of the above mentioned John Felder, is the living head of the Felder family, the elected President of the Felder's Reunion Association, and an interesting character he is. He was born October 9, 1824, and still retains a strength and activity equal to most men at 30 years of age. He was Sheriff of Pike County, Miss., the last two years of the Civil War, having been elected to this position while away in the Army. He subscribed for the New Orleans Christian Advocate in 1852 and has been a regular subscriber since, with the exception of the time during the Civil War that the Advocate ceased to be published. He still has the work of the church at heart, and when the official roll is called at quarterly meetings, unless providentially hindered, "Uncle Bob" Felder always answers to his name. Immediately after our arrival here this year he came over to see us and bid us welcome.

I could say more of The Felder's Reunion and "Uncle Bob," but time and space forbids. On the day following the above mentioned Reunion the second quarterly meeting of the Topisaw church for 1913 convened at Topisaw church, and, to say the least, it was an inspiring, well attended, and spiritual meeting. Nineteen officials and the lay leader answered to their names, and some questions were asked by the presiding elder that provoked interest and enthusiasm of the right kind. There is every reason to believe that there will be more interest manifested by some of the officials relative to church work as a result of this meeting. Brother Selby gave two good sermons; especially good was his sermon on Sunday, his theme being "Christian Stewardship in the Use of Money." It was the most convincing discourse on this theme the writer ever heard.—J. A. Wells, P. C.

Yet, on the whole, there is no possession so valuable as good habits, for this means that not only is the mind pledged and covenanted to good, but the muscles are supple, and even the bones are bent to what is good.—James Stalker.

Tidings From the Field

Matherville, Miss.

We are working and praying for a great revival on the Matherville charge during the summer months. On June 1, at Salem, several came forward for prayer, after which we opened the doors of the Church. Six came forward and were received on profession of faith. This was at our regular appointment. As some of the good ladies remarked on that day, the Lord hears and answers prayer. On June the 8th we observed Children's Day at Winfred. The day was very inclement (it rained some), but a crowd came though no dinner was given on the ground to induce them to do so. The children did their parts well. The women of the Missionary Society had made special arrangements for the occasion and the church was beautifully decorated. The congregation gave us a good collection. Our finances are far in advance of what they were at this time last year. We are looking for great things from the Lord, and we praise him for what he has already done for us.—Algie Oliver, P. C.

Shuqualak, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Brother J. E. Thomas held my Third Quarterly Conference at Cooksville last Saturday and Sunday, June 7 and 8. It was a delightful occasion, every one was in a good humor, and what the Cooksville people did on the dinner proposition was a plenty. They know how!

We closed our meeting at Shuqualak last night. Brother Felts did some fine preaching. He is a good thinker and a strong preacher. He caught the ear of not only the Methodist people, but of the whole town. I am informed that the crowds were the largest, perhaps, ever known in the history of this place. The whole town was benefited. While the visible results were not what we had hoped for, yet we were greatly helped. God only can know the good that was done. Two joined our Church. To God be all the glory and all the praise!

You are giving us a fine paper. I hope that the management will retain you in your present position and that your editorship will be continued. God bless the paper! Long live the Editor!—W. C. Carlisle.

Sulphur, La.

The Methodist Sunday school of Sulphur, La., held Children's Day services on June 8 with great pleasure and profit. As each little one gave its tribute of praise to the Savior's name, hearts were softened, and eyes bedewed with tears of joy for the very sweetness of their baby voices. Some who took part were only old enough to lisp in the language of baby-land, but they were "getting the habit" and will do better next time. As an instance of the good these services can accomplish, one little boy from a French family, who took part for the first time in last year's Children's Day exercises, has not missed a service of the Church since then, except for sickness, and took part again this year, although none of his family speak enough English to understand the exercises. Pray for him that he may be a true missionary in that home. The collection for needy Sunday schools was $6.10. Great credit is due Mrs. T. Hebert, Mrs. J. Simmons, and Mrs. J. Shrader for training the children.

MRS. J. HILLEBRANDT.

New Iberia, La.

There are indications of a forward movement among our people at this place. The Sunday school has reached a record-breaking attendance of 216 members since the beginning of the year. The Children's Day service was carried out in full, with an attendance that crowded our church. The offering was in excess of last year. The Ladies' Aid Society, which has been in existence many years, has made a forward step in being merged into a Woman's Missionary Society with both the Home and Foreign Departments represented. They will carry out the regular programs at the business meetings, and, in addition, will maintain a large mission study class. Work of this kind cannot be recommended too highly by our pastors, as it means new life infused into the membership. The Lafayette District Conference, which met in our church, was a great stimulus to our people. We had some heart-searching preaching and inspiring addresses on the various phases of our church work.

Our Epworth League is looking forward to the coming of the District League Conference with a great deal of pleasure. This is always a gathering of a large number of young people who seriously plan for larger things and seek to produce a spiritual awakening in the young life of the Church. Last Sunday one of our Leaguers, in the testimony meeting arose and said he had made a full surrender of his life and felt called to preach the Gospel. Through the League mission study class others have caught a vision of the world-field and will live a deeper consecrated life. Our Boy Scouts are a live bunch of youngsters who contemplate camping out during the summer. They have already explored Spanish Lake, the Salt Mine, the Gravel Pit, Vermilion Bay and the Game Reserve; all of which were full of interest to the Scouts.—Albert S. Lutz.

Dear Brother Meek: The meeting conducted by Rev. J. O. Hanes came to an end last Thursday. Gracious results crowned our efforts. We did not have a great ingathering, but the meeting brought a tremendous uplift to us. Measured by the resolutions for a better life and the great impulse given spiritual religion, as well as by the depth of the impressions made by the meeting, this revival may be set down as a genuine work of grace. I have never seen better impressions made. Brother Hanes is an ideal leader. He has in him the elements of a real revivalist, and is singularly free from objectionable methods. He is earnest and tactful, and employs no clap-trap methods, but holds up Christ as one mighty to save. As was said of one of old, "He is full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." Mr. W. G. Waltermire, of Honey Grove, Texas, led the choir, and did most excellent work. Yesterday (June 8) we received 15 into the Church on profession of faith, and I have the names of six more who intend coming in the same way. Six came in by letter, and 23 had been received before the meeting began, which makes a total for the year since Conference of 51. We feel that the meeting was a great blessing to us, and as a result we have set our faces more resolutely toward the tasks to which we have been called.

OUR FATHER'S LITTLE ONES.

About nineteen hundred years ago, when the greatest of all conferences was held in Heaven and it was decided to send Jesus to earth, we think that that paramount mission, with its coming years of sorrow, must have been greatly enhanced by the presence of little children.

In July, 1912 years after our Lord's advent, there came to the home of Brother and Sister E. L. Alford at Pachuta, Miss., two bright and lovely babies—Mary and Elizabeth, as they were called—who by their affability and sweetness entwined themselves about the hearts of the family and their friends. We saw them in the parsonage where, what was then, our beloved pastor and his wife resided, the day previous to their departure for another charge, and never shall we forget the picture presented by these little ones whose influence was so indelibly imprinted upon those with whom they came in contact. The sweet reminiscences of these infant lives shall ever inspire us to brighter and better hopes.

But after removing to Anguilla, they became victims of an epidemic among the children—due to the overflow—and little Mary was sick only ten days. Elizabeth was taken violently ill later and struggled four short days when each was released from the small earthly tenement and borne hence to perpetually radiate gladness in the Paradise of God. The little bodies were carried to Magnolia, Miss., for interment and there, beside two precious darlings gone before, they were put to sleep underneath a flower-covered mound.

We are unable to fully sympathize with the sorrowing loved ones, but let us be glad that the dangers in the paths their little feet would have trodden have now been avoided, and rejoice with the Angels around the throne that God was permitted to take back his own. Let us offer a prayer for the bereaved hearts left back here, and commit them to Him "who standeth behind the dim unknown, keeping watch over his own." May we each resolve that the crowning of Jesus shall never take place till we, with Mary and Elizabeth, are there taking part in the coronation.

CHILDREN MENTALLY HANDICAPPED.

Children of arrested mental development, commonly known as feeble minded, carry a handicap which make it impossible for them to keep pace with normal children in the race of the public school-room. Their minds move very slowly and unless coached by teachers who have made a life's study of their defects, soon balk and remain at a stand-still.

For the mentally defective child special methods and specially trained teachers are absolutely essential, and these should be under the constant direction of a medical specialist who understands the mental and physical defects of this class of patients.

Parents and guardians who bear the responsibility of providing for the education and training of such a child would do well to write for a copy of the annual catalogue of the Stewart Home and School, a private institution for the care and training of such cases. Whitworth College.

A LETTER FROM DR. DU BOSE

On revisiting Whitworth College, my surprise has been great and my delight genuine. First, I have been struck by the marked material improvements seen on the campus. The fine residence of the President, the spacious, classic and well-appointed auditorium, are special features of this improvement, and would do credit to institutions far more richly endowed than Whitworth. The large and refined audiences which, added to the student body, filled the new auditorium impressed me as being one of the evident signs of the school's wider and abiding influence upon the commonwealth.

I have also had opportunity to see some demonstrations of the class and department work done in the College. These have given me the confidence that the Faculty has been well chosen, and that its members are personally efficient, alert and zealously faithful in the instruction given. The academic and language work, the music and art directory, have all seemed to be worthy of a generous commendation. The presidency of Dr. Cooper has, as to its diligence, firmness and far-sightedness, passed into a proverb. It is to his personal and official direction that happy advances of recent years are due.

As an ex-Mississippian, and one to whose heart Mississippi and its Christian education are ever dear, I heartily commend Whitworth to parents who have daughters to educate.

ANNUITY PLAN BOARD OF MISSIONS

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

Business and Benevolence

The Board of Missions wishes to put before its friends a plan of mutual benefit.

It combines business and benevolence in that it offers at once an opportunity for profitable investment and generous giving. In brief, the Annuity Plan is this: The Board will receive amounts of $100 or more, paying interest on the same during the life of the annuitant. At his or her death the money falls to the Board without further obligation. If the annuitant is from 40 to 50 years of age, 4 per cent interest will be paid; if 50 to 60 years, 5 per cent; 60 to 70 years, 6 per cent; 70 to 80 years, 7 per cent; 80 years or over, 8 per cent. The interest is paid semiannually. A bond is executed for the payment of the interest, properly signed and bearing the seal of the Board.

Large Income

The income is larger than from almost any other safe investment. The rate of taxes in most places is at least 2 per cent, from which you are free when you place your money with the Board on the Annuity Plan. This, added to the interest you receive, makes your income equal to 7 to 10 per cent in other forms of investment.

Safety

The Board of Missions is as safe as the government. A bond of the Board is absolutely good—a government bond is no better. This bond is free from risks, which are unavoidable in other forms of investment, and free from speculation.

Permanence

Your money will bear interest every day through life. Most investments are liable to expire within a few years or to change in value. All uncertainties are avoided by the Annuity Plan.

Convenience

The interest is mailed promptly when due. There are no taxes, no repairs, no insurance, no interest or rent to collect, no reinvesting.

Better than a Bequest

Money placed in the Annuity Fund begins its usefulness at once. There is no will to be made and possibly set aside by the courts. There is no cost or delay in settlement.

Money Does Good

The annuitants not only have a regular income, but they can rejoice in knowing that their money is invested in a work which is dear to all Christians and very dear to our Lord. It will be in use daily in extending the kingdom, in giving the gospel to those who have it not, in regenerating the life of individuals, and in transforming the life of nations.

EATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The eighteenth session of the Baton Rouge District Conference met at Wilson, La., June 5. Rev. J. D. Harper preached the opening sermon on Wednesday night. Brother Harper is the oldest preacher of the District; hence his sermon for that reason, as well as for others, was much appreciated by the younger brethren. Brother Harper is very optimistic as to the outlook for the Church, and he puts to shame any young man who has decided that the Church is rapidly going to the "bad."

On Thursday morning the Conference was formally opened. Rev. W. H. Coleman, our presiding elder, made a very inspiring address to the Conference. Brother Coleman's utterance, along with his previous work among us, has brought about a more hopeful spirit among the brethren of the District, and we are all now looking for greater and better things in our territory.

The point of special interest was the large attendance of laymen and Sunday school superintendents. There were thirteen of the latter present. Nor was the Conference lacking in the attendance of visitors from other parts. Among these were Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our Sunday school missionary; Rev. P. H. Fontaine, manager of our Orphanage; Rev. Ira D. Robertson, of the Mississippi Conference; Rev. C. B. Carter, presiding elder of the Ruston District, and Brother C. Girard, a representative of the Anti-Saloon League.

The Conference authorized the District Board of Trustees to sell the parsonage at Hammond and a new one will likely be bought at Baton Rouge. A resolution was passed endorsing Brother R. H. Wynn's election to the Presidency of Centenary College. Brothers J. R. Abels, W. B. Rounds, W. H. Underwood, and W. E. Morgan were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference. Brothers F. H. Holden and O. E. Townsend were elected alternates.

John Elijah Methvin and Joseph

Milegan were licensed to preach. Rev. W. T. Currie was received as a local preacher, and was voted to recommend to the Annual Conference the recognition of his orders.

Missions, Sunday School Work, Church Extension, the Orphanage, and the Divinity School were duly emphasized as far as the time would permit. Two special meetings were held by the laymen for the purpose of planning some improvements in the financial condition of the District.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, the host of the Conference, did his part nobly, and left Wilson with a warm place in their hearts for Brother Sweeney and his good people. R. S. WALTON, Secretary.

Back to the Land

That's the slogan of success. Now-a-days you don't have to seek the city to make good. Every farm locality and rural district offers big, money-making opportunities to hustling men.

Just consider contract ditching. Here's what it offers: Steady work, profits of from $15 to $18 a day, and a business that is all your own. The only thing you need is a

Buckeye

Traction

Ditcher

This machine digs from 100 to 150 rods of drainage ditches a day, depending upon the soil. It cuts these ditches true to grade and uniform size, and it lays the dirt evenly along the sides, so that back filling can be quickly done.

That's what farmers want. They not only want their ditches dug accurately, but they want the work finished as quickly as possible. The men who own a Buckeye Traction Ditcher find it easy to get work enough to keep them busy 9 to 10 months in the year.

Get the facts about the contract ditching business. Read what other men are making with the Buckeye Traction Ditcher. What they have done, you can do. Just drop us a card and ask for catalog 33.

GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

Lake Junaluska, N. C.,
June 25-29, 1913.

A brief statement of the origin and development of the Southern Assembly will perhaps not be amiss just now. During the first General Laymen's Conference held at Chattanooga in April, 1908, the following was adopted: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that it would be well for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to have a great Assembly Ground on the order of Northfield, Mass., for the gathering together of our forces at stated times, and that such grounds should be so located and so improved as to make them suitable for the various Conferences of our Church when desirable to hold them there, and for Bible Institutes and such other organizations for the help of the preachers and laymen and the general upbuilding of the Church and her forces as may be decided upon in our onward movement for the evangelization of the world."

In order to carry out this resolution a committee was appointed to select a suitable location. This has been done, and one of the most beautiful spots in the Land of the Sky has been selected, laid off into lots which have been offered for sale, and the property is being rapidly improved and developed. Provision has been made to keep the controlling interest always in the hands of members of the Southern Methodist Church. At this great assembly will be present Bishops, men of international reputation, ministers, laymen, and women from every section of our Church. Its scope is far-reaching, including all branches of missionary activity.

MESSAGE FROM SECOND VICE PRESIDENT.

North Mississippi Conference.
The Conference Second Vice President, Miss Lillie Louise Hartwell of Water Valley sends greeting to the young people of her Conference. She says: "Our pledge this year is $1000—$800 for the Foreign Department, and $200 for the Home Department. The money for the Foreign Department is to be used for the McTyeire School, Shanghai, China, and also for the school in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. In the Home Department the pledge goes to the Laredo, Texas, school for Mexicans. The Foreign Department gave $900 last year on the pledge. Let us go forward with loyalty to Christ. 'Attempt great things for God; expect great things from God.'"

An Omission.

Mr. A. M. De Moss of Vicksburg, Miss., calls attention to the fact that we omitted a part of our missionary creed when it appeared in the Advocate of May 15. She writes: "We say, 'We believe in God the father and his son Jesus Christ,' and omit our belief in the Holy Ghost." Mrs. De Moss quotes Eph. 4:30 and John 14:26, and then asks, "Can we afford to leave out this part of our Missionary Creed as unimportant?"

We regret this omission, but publishes the creed as it appeared in Mrs. Edmund F. Cook's little book of Plans and Suggestions for leaders of Young People's Missionary Societies.

The Great Experiment in China.
"The World's Work" for June, 1913, contains a pertinent article under the above heading. The great political transformation in China has furnished a theme for Bishops, missionaries, and men of international reputation—all deeply interested in world-wide missions. It is well sometimes to stop and gain the viewpoint of those who are not so vitally interested in our great work. For this purpose we have made copious extracts from the article in question:

"Seven hundred earnest men of mature years, nearly all of them dressed in European fashion, met recently in Peking and with simple and solemn ceremony opened the first Chinese Parliament, thus making the oldest nation in the world into the youngest republic. They were elected by 40 million voters to begin a new era in the government of 400 million people. With this Parliament begins popular government upon a larger scale than has ever been tried in the history of the world. Our population is about one-fourth that of China. No other republic approaches China in population even so closely as this. As an indication of the spirit with which the great task is being undertaken, the Government appealed to all the Christian churches in China to set aside a certain day for prayer for the success of the new regime.

"The twenty-two Provinces of China are nearly as autonomous as our States were before the adoption of the Constitution. These Provinces collect tariff dues upon goods passing from one to another. They are not used to acting in co-operation; and even in their relations to the former Imperial Government at Peking they often showed a feeling of independence. To clothe the central government with power and credit is the immediate task before the framers of the new Constitution. The foundation upon which they can build is (as it was with us a century and a quarter ago) the knowledge and practice of local self-government. It is now, and has been for centuries, a fundamental part of Chinese life. This, and the inherent ability of the Chinese in agriculture and commerce, is a solid ground work for an effective national government.

"On the other hand, the new leaders of China have even more difficulties to overcome than the framers of our Constitution had. They have a much greater territory and a much larger population to govern, and the means of communication in China are still woefully inadequate. To make China a governable republic there is need of a common language and efficient communication—a public school system, wagon roads, railroads, telegraphs, telephones, and newspapers. Until these things come through the slow processes of educating a people, the machinery of government will be clogged by ignorance and prejudice.

"In the meanwhile, the immediate problems would be critical even for a people long practiced in the use of the machinery of democratic government. The Manchu Government derived its revenue from what practically amounted to tribute money from the Provinces. For the conduct of the multitudinous affairs of a modern government, this tribute money is pitifully inadequate. The country's greatest source of revenue, the tariff, is used chiefly for the benefit of foreign nations. The immediate problems before the Republic are to get control of its finances; to get an adequate source of revenue, so that it will not be subject to the demands of the money-lending countries; and to build up an army and navy that will

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The "Tammany system" in politics is worked by putting every voter's name on a card and having him visited regularly until all hope is gone or he is enrolled as a supporter of the ticket, and he is never considered safe until three men separately report him so. If politicians so minutely organize and so persistently work to secure a voter, should not we be as wise in planning and as eager in seeking to enlist people in the study of the Holy Bible, the entrance of whose truths "giveth light"? Or are "the children of this world" still to be "wiser in their generation than the children of light?"

Some months ago Mrs. B. E. Eskridge, the Secretary of the Baton Rouge District Woman's Missionary Society, organized an auxiliary of her Society at Olive Branch on the East Feliciana Circuit, with "circles" for each appointment on the charge. This auxiliary has resulted in the organization of a Sunday school which has already observed Children's Day, and promises other good to the church life of the circuit. Thus does one line of mission work help another line of church activity. Mrs. Eskridge has recently been elected chairman of the Missionary and Sunday School Extension Department of the West Baton Rouge District Sunday School Conference.

Recently the Boy Scouts of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge, numbering twenty-four, had a track meet with the Scouts of the First Presbyterian Church and won in every contest except the basket ball game, and tied on that. They say that they will win in this also when the tie is played off. Wm. Drake, Jr., the pastor's son, won in the mile race. Good for Methodist boys and for a preacher's son! This team work and ambition for the mastery are both divine instincts that need development, and when carried to the logical end will result in loyal church members and overcomers in the Christian race.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

All Adult Classes should purchase and read the full Reading Course for Adult Classes for 1913. Dr. Bulla has issued an interesting and instructive leaflet along this line and will gladly send it for the asking.

Rev. W. R. Williams, of Mt. Pleasant, sends in the encouraging news that he has succeeded in getting fine Sunday schools in all four of his churches, and that he is planning a fine Sunday school rally for the middle of July.

Do not be afraid, but be eager to teach your Sunday school class out of doors these sultry summer days, especially if your class quarters seem crowded and uncomfortable. There may come a great illumination from such a change, if handled properly.

Supt. L. P. Fain, of Pine Valley, writes that his school is doing better work. The Pine Valley school is 14 miles from a railroad and is composed largely of farmers who are necessarily busy at this time. Mr. Fain is preparing to celebrate Children's Day in July.

Here are some good general Sunday school books: "Sunday School Problems," by Amos R. Wells; "The Blackboard in Sunday School," by H. T. Bailey; "The Teacher, the Child, and the Book," by A. F. Schaeffer; "The Adult Class," by W. C. Pearce; "Ways of Working," by A. F. Schaeffer; and "The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice," by Henry F. Cope.

Some Sunday schools find that it helps their attendance and also increases their membership to have a specially appointed "Membership Visitor," who selects her own committee and visits all the absentees for one month, or all the summer, as the case may be. The lists are handed her by the secretary at the close of Sunday school, and she makes her report the following Sabbath. Try it and observe the results.

The Pocket Testament League celebrated its second birthday on May 12. In two years the League has established itself in 734 centers; 48,239 duplicate membership cards have been received; and 70 per cent of the signers have been under 25 years of age. Quite a number of Adult and Teen Age Classes have realized what a fine impetus to Bible study this League is and it should be pushed in all such classes.

Very artistic and attractive invitations have been gotten out by the Baraca Class, of the First Methodist Church of Columbus, as an initial step toward securing all the men in the church for the Class. On the second page of this invitation you find these short, crisp but suggestive sentences: "Our present enrollment is forty. There are nearly 200 men in our Church. How many ought we to have? Interesting lectures on the lesson. Good fellowship and pleasant associations. Warm reception and cool room." The following are the officers of the Class: J. I. Sturdivant, teacher; Dr. Joe E. Lacy, president; Jno. A. Lipsey, secretary; Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor. This class meets in the pastor's study and under his fine leadership really great things will be expected of it.

EMINENT AUTHORITY DEFINES "HABIT-FORMING."

Dr. Mallet, late professor of chemistry at the University of Virginia, was one of the greatest scientists that America has ever produced. He received his Ph. D. degree from the University of Gottingen; his M. D. from the State University of Louisiana; his LL. D. from Princeton, John Hopkins and the University of Pennsylvania. He was honored with the title of Fellow of the Royal Society.

At various times he occupied the chair of chemistry in the University of Alabama, University of Texas, Tulane University, Jefferson Medical College and the University of Virginia, occupying the latter position for nearly forty years.

Testifying as an expert before the Federal Court, Dr. Mallet discussed the caffeine containing beverages (coffee, tea, Coca-Cola, etc.) and stated that his analysis showed that Coca-Cola contains less caffeine than either tea or coffee as ordinarily prepared. He stated further that the use of caffeine or beverages containing caffeine in moderation, is not only not harmful but absolutely beneficial. Dr. Mallet explained why caffeine was not a habit-forming substance and gave the following scientific definition: "In the first place, I think that the habit formed must be a detrimental one and an injurious one, and in the second place, one which becomes so firmly fixed upon a person acquiring it that it is thrown off with great difficulty and with considerable suffering, and in the third place, that the continued exercise of the habit increases the demand for the habit-forming drug.—Adv.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lafayette District Conference convened at New Iberia, La., on May 19, with the presiding elder, Rev. R. H. Wynn, in the chair. The attendance was the largest in years, both of preachers and laymen, and there was no desire to go away before adjournment, which spirit has sometimes manifested itself in former years.

The reports were optimistic and showed that all the various interests of the Church were moving forward. The outlook is hopeful; and while this is a difficult field on account of Roman Catholicism, light is beginning to break.

The preaching was ably done by Revs. H. N. Harrison, C. C. Weir, C. D. Atkinson, and L. N. Hoffpauir.

H. Williams, V. A. Mitcheltree, Joe Morgan, and A. P. Holt were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and R. E. Brumby and W. L. Doss were elected alternates.

The following resolution was passed: "The Conference hereby declares in favor of State-wide prohibition (by legislative enactment) against the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages; and to achieve this end we humbly and devoutly invoke the blessing and guidance of Almighty God, and earnestly solicit the active co-operation and united assistance of all good people who recognize and condemn the evils of the liquor traffic."

The District has prospered under the wise and efficient leadership of Rev. R. H. Wynn, and the members of the Conference were loath to give him up. The following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Whereas Rev. R. H. Wynn has been painstaking, faithful, and highly capable in the office of presiding elder of the Lafayette District, and has for the past year and a half administered the weighty affairs of the District with much diligence, ability, and tact; and whereas the Board of Trustees of Centenary College has elected him President of that important institution and he has in obedience to a sense of duty accepted that office;

Therefore, be it Resolved by the members of the Lafayette District Conference, That we invoke God's richest blessing upon Brother Wynn in his new field of work, and that, while we are profoundly sorry to lose him from this District, we confidently trust that the Divine Head of the Church will raise up a true successor who will worthily and capably continue the able administration of the retiring incumbent, who is universally loved and trusted throughout the District which he has so nobly served.

"Be it further Resolved, That in the administration of his new office as President of Centenary College, we pledge to him our prayers, and support."

A petition to the Bishop requesting that Brother Wynn be continued as presiding elder, in addition to his duties as President, was privately circulated and signed by all of the preachers. He has given complete satisfaction and leaves the District beloved by all, and followed by many prayers for his future usefulness.

M. C. HOLT, Secretary.

MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference was held at Bastrop, La., June 3-5.

Rev. Wm. Schuhle presided with dignity, grace and authority. The business of the conference moved forward to completion without a word of discord or a note of discouragement. The pastors have all been hard at it, and the laymen co-operative and responsive to the lead of their pastors in the work of the Church.

Much has been accomplished up to the present, and larger and more extensive plans of operation inaugurated for the summer campaign. Brother Schuhle and his co-laborers in the District are confidently expecting great results and an advancement along all lines over last year.

The Conference was well attended by pastors and laymen. Bastrop proved to be an ideal place to hold a conference, so much so, that every preacher and delegate was confident that he had the best host, and the most delightful home—and it was so. Brother Fox, the Conference host, deserves and has the love and respect of his brethren for his unselfish and untiring efforts in behalf of the comfort and convenience of the members of the Conference.

Every interest of the Church was well presented and represented. The Conference was delighted to have with them Brothers A. W. Turner, Supt. Anti-Saloon League; H. P. Fontaine, Sup't of the Orphanage, and P. O. Lowrey, our well known Sunday school man. These brethren are in their respective work heart and soul; and left a fine impression on the Conference.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate was well represented by Rev. A. I. Townsley, and the Conference responded with a strong resolution, commending the editorial work of Dr.

Meek and the mechanical work and management of the publisher. It was insisted that an urgent effort be made to extend the circulation of the paper.

The Sea Shore Divinity School was highly commended, and plans put on foot to insure a goodly attendance from the District. Brothers Miller, Ledbetter and Schuhle spoke at length of the work and importance of the school to the delight of the Conference.

Brothers W. L. Calhoun, R. O. Randle, J. T. Shell, and Dr. R. B. Leavell were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference; and Brothers W. S. B. Colvin and W. R. Baker were elected alternates.

The material advancement of the District has been marked by a general improvement in the work and the building of churches and parsonages and other enterprises.

Centenary and Mansfield Colleges came in for their meed of praise and commendation, and the response of the Conference bespeaks the hearty co-operation of the brethren with the Presidents of these institutions, in the furtherance of our educational work, and in the widening of their influence by bringing a greater number of our people into touch with them, and thus insuring a larger student body for the future.

THE CARNEGIE-KIRKLAND TRANSACTION.

We give below the most salient facts of the Carnegie-Kirkland deal relating to the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University as they have appeared in the secular press. This attempted transaction deserves the careful attention of every true and loyal Southern Methodist.

Their Published Correspondence.

"May 1, 1913—Andrew Carnegie, Esq., New York, N. Y.—My Dear Sir: The executive committee of the board of trust of Vanderbilt University, which is charged with the duty of looking after all the interests of the university when the whole board is not in annual session, held a meeting to-day to consider the needs and work of the medical department. As a result of our action, we beg to invite your attention to the opportunity which we believe now exists to establish in Nashville upon a firm foundation a medical school of modern type and of high standards. In calling your attention to this matter we are in part influenced by the epoch-making work of the Carnegie foundation in promoting medical education. A few years ago there were three weak and struggling medical schools in this city. After the work of the Carnegie foundation was made public we succeeded in reducing the number to one combined school, which was and became the medical department of Vanderbilt University. By the most earnest exertions an excellent site of sixteen acres and some good buildings have been procured, good standards introduced, and a sum of money secured which has taxed every resource of those interested in medical education in this city.

"Meanwhile, it has been made evident to disinterested observers that the establishment of a well-equipped medical school at this central city of the south, attached to one of the most active of American universities, would be a most helpful aid to the development of this whole region.

"As the trustees of the university, finding ourselves unable to develop this great work on account of lack of means, we venture to suggest this field as one worthy of your consideration and philanthropy. No gift for medical education in this whole region has ever been made of a magnitude comparable with the demands of modern medicine. No one can estimate the benefit such a gift would bring to the south and to the whole nation.

"Our present site is admirable and affords room for hospitals and other medical buildings. Our present buildings are in good repair and furnish lecture rooms, but are insufficient in the matter of laboratories. To place the medical school upon a permanent basis two additions are now essential:

"First, modern scientific laboratories.

"Secondly, an endowment.

"To place the medical school at this time upon a permanent basis will require $1,000,000. Of this amount, not more than $200,000 should be spent in the erection and equipment of laboratories. The remainder should all be used for endowment.

"We beg to express the hope that in your far-reaching plans for the betterment of American civilization you may see your way clear to make such a gift. In case this matter should receive your favorable consideration, we suggest the following method of administration for the school:

"First—The trustees of the university shall select or appoint for the management of the medical school a governing board of seven members. The chancellor of the university shall be the chairman of the board, and three of its members shall be men of recognized standing in medical education or medical science. All the members of this board shall be chosen without regard to denominational considerations, and solely because of fitness for the service desired.

"Second—The teachers in the school shall be chosen from the best men obtainable, the professorships to be filled as far as practicable by men who are primarily teachers rather than practitioners.

"In presenting this matter to your attention we feel that we are dealing not with a local educational enterprise only but with one destined to affect profoundly the ideals and standards of this whole region. Such a gift would be a noble contribution to that spirit of Americanism which knows no boundary of section or state.

"In the event of this gift, we hope that the president of the Carnegie Foundation may be induced to serve as a member of the governing board of the medical school.

Very respectfully yours,

"J. H. KIRKLAND,

"Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Trustees and Chancellor of the University."

To this communication Mr. Carnegie replied as follows:

"Carnegie Corporation of New York,

576 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Dr. J. H. Kirkland, Secretary Executive Committee Trustees Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

"My Dear Sir: I have given careful consideration to your letter of May 1, written on behalf of the trustees of Vanderbilt University, inviting me to contribute a million dollars for the establishment upon a sound foundation of a medical school of modern type in the south. After consultation with those familiar with medical education of this country I am convinced that the sum of money you mention could be wisely devoted to a medical school in Nashville. I approve thoroughly your suggestion that this gift be conditioned on the appointment of a small board of seven persons to govern the medical school, who shall be chosen absolutely without reference to denominational considerations and purely upon the ground of fitness for their duties.

"There is, however, one factor in your university situation which leaves the policy for the future in doubt. A suit is now before the courts to test the question whether the university shall be governed by an independent self-perpetuating board as at present, or whether the trustees shall be chosen by the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with which denomination the university has been since its beginning in sympathetic relations. Should the trustees finally receive an adverse verdict, I understand that the university will then be under distinctive denominational control. This result would seem to be unfortunate for the future progress and well-being of the institution. I do not believe that it is wise for any sect to control educational institutions such as universities, whether the organization be a Methodist conference, or a Presbyterian assembly, or a Catholic order.

"For this reason, therefore, while I am anxious to make this gift, which would be of high value to the whole south, I hesitate to do so until the question of denominational control has been settled by the courts.

"I make the following proposition for your consideration: I will furnish the $200,000 cash now needed for the laboratories, and the remaining $800,000 shall remain in the custody of the Carnegie corporation in New York—interest at 4 per cent to be paid to the university for the use of the medical school until such time as the question of denominational control has been settled by the court of last resort, its final disposition to be then determined. Should this proposition be satisfactory to your board of trustees, I understand that the conditions agreed to in your letter of May 1, as to the size and constitution of the governing board of the medical school and the character of the school itself are also conditions of this gift.

"The objection to denominational control of colleges and universities is not due to lack of sympathy with religion. It lies in the fact that such control by a single denomination rarely means religious development, but nearly always means that both education and religion are subordinated to the interests of the particular organization which is in control. I welcome, rather, all Christian sects, believing with Matthew Arnold, whom I am proud to recall as my friend:

Children of men! the unseen Power, whose eye
Forever doth accompany mankind,
Hath looked on no religion scornfully
That man did ever find.

"Which has not taught weak wills how much they can?

Which has not fallen on the dry heart like rain?
Which has not cried to a sunk, self-weary man,
"Thou must be born again?"

As a true friend of the south,

Sincerely yours,
ANDREW CARNEGIE."

PROTEST OF THE MINORITY OF THE BOARD OF TRUST.

When the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University met in Nashville last week and proceeded to consummate this deal in accordance with the terms agreed upon by Mr. Carnegie and Chancellor Kirkland, a strong objection was made by four members of that body. The following is their statement in regard to the matter:

The protest of certain members of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust against the action of the board in accepting the conditional offer by Andrew Carnegie of one million dollars to the medical department is as follows:

"The undersigned members of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University take occasion to state upon the records of this Board their protest and objections to the action of the Board in approving the act of the Executive Committee in its correspondence with Mr. Andrew Carnegie touching a proposed gift by him of one million dollars for establishment on a sound foundation of a medical school of modern type in the South. We had heard rumors of and had seen newspaper references to such correspondence, and although one of our number had requested a copy of it before the Board met this day, such request was refused. Nor did we know what the terms of the proposed gift were until they were read to-day before this Board. Thereupon we requested that action on the proposition be deferred until we had had an opportunity to consider it carefully. This request was as follows:

"R. W. Millsaps—I move that final action not be taken at this meeting on the proposition of Carnegie to donate one million dollars to the medical department of Vanderbilt University and that Chancellor Kirkland be requested to furnish each member of the Board of Trust with a copy of his letter to Mr. Carnegie or Dr. Pritchett, acting for him, and the reply to same, that trustees may have time to duly consider same."

Motion Rejected.

This motion was rejected.

"We have now carefully considered the correspondence and state at length our objections to the proposition. (Here follows the correspondence between Chancellor Kirkland and Mr. Carnegie printed above, which the protestants proceeded to discuss.)

"Had this proposal been made without condition attached (which proposal we regard for the reasons herein attached, as impossible of acceptance) we should have welcomed the gift. Had Mr. Carnegie been moved in the spirit of that broad philanthropy which characterized Commodore Vanderbilt's gift to this University, and that which characterized as well all the other gifts which have from time to time been made to this University, recognizing it as the institution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we should have joined cheerfully and gratefully in its acceptance and in its use for the purposes indicated.

"But Mr. Carnegie did not see proper to make such an unconditional gift and the Executive Committee, it appears, invited a different plan.

"It must be remembered that the original foundation of this University, the Memphis Resolutions of 1872, provided for establishing a University to include, among others, a medical department. Commodore Vanderbilt made his original and all subsequent donations upon the plan thus outlined, and his gifts, as well as all others up to this time, have been made upon that plan and with that assurance. In pursuance of it, the Medical Department of this University has been established and is now being maintained.

"The property set apart to its use represents at least $300,000 of these donations. Of this, $150,000 was given by William K. Vanderbilt and $150,000 by the General Board of Education. It was also a condition of these several gifts, implied clearly in the language of the Memphis resolutions and in the charter of this corporation, that the management of the Medical Department should be, as all departments are, under the control of a Board of Trust to be selected in accordance with the terms of the charter and of the statutes of the State of Tennessee.

"It is now proposed in this Carnegie gift to separate the control of the Medical Department from the legal authority of the Board of Trust and to commit it to an independent board of seven members to be chosen without regard to denominational consideration.

"Thus it is proposed to give over $300,000 of this corporation's property and the management and control of one of its departments to another body than this Board. This would be in our opinion (1) a defection of the trust; (2) virtually an alienation of part of the corpus of the University property, and (3) an abdication of the duty devolved upon this Board to manage and control that department of the University.

"Some doubt may be implied from the Executive Committee's letter to Mr. Carnegie as to whether the governing board of the Medical Department is to be subject to the control of this Board, whereby it might be possible for this Board to govern that department at last. But Mr. Carnegie's letter removes that doubt, for he says, explicitly:

Suggestion Approved.

"I approve thoroughly your suggestion that this gift be conditioned upon the appointment of a small board of several persons to govern the medical school, who shall be chosen absolutely without reference to denominational considerations and purely upon the ground of fitness for their duties."

"He then states the pending controversy as to whether the University shall be governed by an independent, self-perpetuating board, or whether the Trustees shall be chosen by the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He then sets forth his objections to denominational control of Universities, and offers to give $200,000 for buildings and equipment and $800,000 conditional endowment, and adds:

"Should this proposition be satisfactory to your Board of Trustees, I understand the conditions agreed to in your letter of May 1 as to size and constitution of the Governing Board of the Medical School and the character of the school itself, are also conditions of this gift."

"Thus it appears to us that whatever may have been the plan in the mind of the Executive Committee, Mr. Carnegie's offer is expressly conditioned upon the Governing Board being an independent body when elected. The fact that certain members of the majority in the course of their remarks upon the motion to approve the action of the Executive Committee, expressed the opinion that the arrangement suggested would not be legally binding on this Board or on the corporation we cannot for one moment consider as an argument, if it be an argument. We are as unwilling to deceive Mr. Carnegie as we are to violate the trust in us as members of this Board.

"There was lately a suit pending in the chancery court of Davidson County, Tenn., wherein the Bishops and certain Trustees of this corporation sued to enjoin the other members of this Board, including the majority who to-day voted on this proposition as well as the undersigned, from electing members of the Board of Trust contrary to the Resolution of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held at Asheville, N. C., 1910. That suit was fully prepared and was heard and decided recently by the chancery court. The judgment decreed the relief prayed for by the complainants, holding, among other things, that this Board is not self-perpetuating, but subject to selection by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We are unwilling to agree to an arrangement proposing a different mode of government of the University or any of its departments, and solemnly contracting to do so.

"The gift of the proposed endowment of $800,000 is further conditioned, in effect that the pending appeal from the judgment of the chancery Court, being prosecuted now by certain of the Trustees of this University, be decided adversely to the appellants, and in favor of the Church, that it will then be subject to Mr. Carnegie's further consideration whether it shall become effective. In the meantime we will have given over our Medical Department to an independent board of governors.

"This last mentioned condition appears to us, therefore, to be unfortunately timed by Mr. Carnegie. If Mr. Carnegie had in mind not to give anything to a school controlled by a religious denomination (and such seems from his letter to be his fixed view) he might well have awaited the decision by the Supreme Court before acting at all on the request of the Executive Committee. This consideration is of itself sufficient to justify its instant rejection.

"This action, furthermore, concedes the power of this Board to provide similar independent governors of each of the other departments of this University, contrary to the terms of the charter, the conditions of all previous gifts, the statutes of the State, and the will of the founders and patrons of the University. We are unwilling to enter into such a concession or to treat concerning it.

"We deny the power of this Board to give away the property of the University, or, which is the same thing, to give away its management and control. Nor does it matter whether a consideration is passed. We deny the power of the Board to sell any of the colleges of this University. It was not incorporated to be sold, and it is not for sale—no matter what price may be offered. But in this instance we note that the proffer of one million dollars to the foundation of the Medical Department is not in fact given to the University at all—it is reserved to an independent body to which the University is to give over the Medical Department of the value of more than a quarter of a million dollars. It is not so much a gift to the University, but is a donation by the University.

"In Mr. Carnegie's offer he asserts that a religious body is not competent to govern a University. His belief may be a sufficient ground to justify his making his charitable gifts to undenominational institutions, but the history of the Methodist Church, South, and of all other Churches, is contrary to his opinion. Our own views are also at variance with his. We cannot conscientiously accept his gift coupled with that statement of his views. The University needs money, but not so sorely that it must surrender its own record and deny the history of a century of the Church which founded it, or refuse to continue the struggle for wholesome religious training of its youth, in whatever vocation.

"We regret to find these impossible conditions attached to Mr. Carnegie's proposal. In the main they are not new. We have long known that by surrendering the Church's charge of its educational plants, somebody would willingly adopt them. But we have not heretofore found either the necessity or moral justification for such an abject surrender, and we protest against it now.

"We do not contest Mr. Carnegie's right to found schools, as many and of as many kinds as his will and means may permit. We have no quarrel with him. We regret that he has not seen his way clear to help this University or our Church. But we respectfully, though firmly, protest against turning our schools over to him or to anybody else.

BISHOP HOSS'S STATEMENT.

To the Tennessean:

"In view of the fact that many partial and misleading statements have appeared in the public prints in regard to Mr. Carnegie's proposed gift to Vanderbilt University, I desire to set out the exact facts in the case, so that the public may be able to form an independent judgment in the premises.

"It is known that the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acting under the definite instruction of the General Conference, brought suit about three years ago in the Chancery Court of Davidson County against the Trustees of the University to assert and maintain the rights of the Church. This suit, after the most elaborate and exhaustive argument on both sides, was decided wholly in favor of the Church. An appeal was at once taken by the Trustees—a majority of them—to the Supreme Court of the State, and is now pending before that tribunal. It would seem, on even the most casual consideration, to be the part of wisdom to await the result of the suit in that court of last resort before raising new questions. The Bishops have adopted that view and have kept silent on the whole subject.

"Now comes Mr. Carnegie, however, and throws a million dollars into the State against the Church. That this gift, magnificent as it is on the face of it, can have any bearing on the issue of litigation is not possible. The rights of the Church now are exactly what they were before, neither more nor less. No one need doubt that they will be defended to the last extremity. The Church does not solicit nor desire one hair's breadth more than belongs to her under the charter and the Statutes of the State, and she will not be content with one hair's breadth less. The assertion, so often made, that the Trustees are a self-perpetuating body is without the slightest foundation in fact.

Nothing to Sustain.

"There is not a line, nor a word, nor a syllable in the charter to sustain it. The Trustees have recently affirmed it, but that does not make it so. Two judicial tribunals—one ecclesiastical and one civil—have denied it categorically, and the Supreme Court will soon pass on it. I am told that this Court will surely reverse the decision of the Chancellor. How anybody could chance to know that is beyond my comprehension. As a matter of fact, nobody does know it. The Trustees—some of them—imagine that the Court will be favorable to their contention. I imagine that it will not, and my imagination is as good as anybody's.

"The Trustees, very unwisely, as I think, have complicated the whole situation by making a contract with Mr. Carnegie which they cannot fulfill unless they are victorious in the Courts. Was it worth while to take a risk of that sort when, in about six months, everybody could have known definitely what could not be done?

"There are two chief objections to the contract. In the first place, the University does not get a dollar from Mr. Carnegie, but gives away its Medical Department to a new 'governing body' without limitations or restrictions of any character whatever; and on this foundation Mr. Carnegie is to establish a Medical College according to his own views. If this be denied I refer my readers to the appended documents which speak for themselves. (The Bishop refers to the correspondence between Dr. Kirkland and Mr. Carnegie.) Now, if the Trustees can thus give away one of its departments it can likewise give away any other. The action, in the judgment of competent lawyers, is not legal, and will not stand before the courts.

Eliminate Church.

"In the second place, Mr. Carnegie makes no promise to give the $800,000 endowment unless the Trustees shall succeed in eliminating the Church. Even a blind man can see that. That he has a right to affix whatever conditions he may choose to his donation is certainly true. Legally, his money is his own, and he can do with it as seems good in his own eyes. But it doesn't follow that the Church should agree to be crowded out of her inheritance to make room for him and his peculiar views. His prejudices against denominational education are well known. He has never hesitated to view them. The mere fact that a school is under the patronage and control of a Church, no matter what its other merits may be, makes it persona non grata to him. In his letter to the Trustees, he speaks out openly and vigorously against the Church's influence in education.

That he is a man of great ability in many directions no one will wish to deny; but that he has any expert competency to pass judgment on questions of religion, philosophy and education is by no means certain. There are a good many people still left in the United States who do not dread the influence of the Christian Church in education as much as they do the influence of Mr. Carnegie and his foundations. The mere fact that he controls $500,000,000, made in one of our protected interest industries, does not prove that he is entitled to leadership in matters that affect the intellectual and moral life of the nation.

"Why the University authorities should have been unwilling to publish all the facts in this case I do not know. For weeks the correspondence with Mr. Carnegie was refused even to the University Trustees, on the assumption, manifestly, that nobody who ventures to dissent from the majority has any right to a voice in the affairs of the University. But things of this sort cannot be hidden. The truth will come out."

"E. E. HOSS."

BISHOP CANDLER ON THE TRANSACTION.

The recently announced gift of $1,000,000 to the Vanderbilt University, of Nashville, Tenn., by Mr. Andrew Carnegie is, in the opinion of Bishop Candler, not so much a donation to the University as an attempt to "denature the institution."

To a representative of The Journal, Bishop Candler said:

"This loud-heralded gift appears, on close inspection of the terms of the offer, to be no gift at all, but a shrewd attempt to get control of a part of the property of Vanderbilt University in order to set up a Medical School fashioned according to the peculiar ideas of Mr. Carnegie and his educational employees.

"In the first announcement of the so-called gift the essential terms of the gift and the expressions of purpose accompanying it were held back. The request of a member of the Board of Trust, even, who asked to see the papers in the case, was refused. What was contained in the letter of Mr. Carnegie was not known to any one outside an inner circle until last Monday, when the Board of Trust met. The matter was so serious that Major Milisaps, a member of the Board of Trust from Mississippi, moved that the question of accepting the gift be postponed until the members of the Board could have time to consider it. This motion was rejected, and the motion to accept the gift put through with inconsiderate haste. On Tuesday four of the Board of Trust offered a protest against the acceptance of the Carnegie proposals. When the public sees Mr. Carnegie's letter the protest of these worthy gentlemen will be generally approved, if I am not greatly mistaken."

Belongs to Methodists.

"The Vanderbilt University belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The Church's ownership having been denied, suit was brought by order of the General Conference some time ago to settle the question, and the Chancery Court decided every point in favor of the Church. From that decision those who deny the Church's rights took an appeal, which is now pending in the Supreme Court of Tennessee. To this Mr. Carnegie makes allusion in his letter, putting his offer in such relation to this suit as to make it tantamount to dangling money before the public with the purpose of influencing the case. He also denies the ability of any and all Churches to manage and control educational institutions—a preposterous piece of ignorance and confident assertion which the whole history of education in Christendom for a thousand years contradicts. His expressions about the Churches are as discreditable to him as his conditioning a gift on the result of a pending suit is indecent."

"But I need not comment on the proposal. It speaks for itself. Without Edenic innocence Mr. Carnegie is in this letter like Adam in paradise, 'naked and not ashamed.' (Here Mr. Carnegie's letter to Dr. Kirkland is quoted.)"

Effort to Dismember.

"Now the dullest mind can see that Mr. Carnegie does not propose to give a penny to the Vanderbilt University, but to take something from it, to dismember from it one of its departments, which is worth about $500,000.

"By the same process he may proceed to alienate all the other departments and put them under his little boardlets. It is strange that more of the members of the Board of Trust did not perceive this patent fact, and protest against the acceptance of his offer. It would be just as appropriate for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to accept for its uses the gate receipts of a bull fight as for this gift to be accepted by a Christian institution."

"It appears also that the Episcopalians see in this affair an effort to defeat the proposed Medical Department of the University of the South. If they are correct in their opinion, Mr. Carnegie is proposing at one blow to destroy the medical school of the Episcopalians, and denature the medical school of the Methodists, and raise on the ruins of both a Carnegieized establishment in his own image and likeness."

"An Impudent Proposal."

"I cannot doubt that this impudent proposal of the aggressive and agnostic steel-monger will provoke the indignation of the Christian people of all denominations in the country, and incur the emphatic disapproval of all thinking men. This undisguised attempt to disintegrate a Christian University is in keeping with the well fixed purpose of antagonism to Church schools which Mr. Carnegie has pursued for a long time."

To the question, "What will the Bishops of the Methodist Church do in the case?" Bishop Candler replied:

"The Bishops are common-law visitors to the University, and citation of the Trustees to a meeting of the visitors at the Bishops' room in Nashville next Friday has been issued. I have no right to anticipate their decision, and I have as little doubt about what it will be. The attempt to make it appear by a telegram sent from Nashville that Bishop Hoss only is concerning himself about the matter is as unjust to his colleagues as it is unfair to him. Bishop Hoss has done his duty, and he has had opportunities beyond most of the other Bishops for rendering good service to the Church in the case. But the attempt to make it appear that he is standing alone is utterly without foundation in fact. This effort to isolate Bishop Hoss from his colleagues before the public eye is sinister and unworthy. It lacks even the virtue of Carnegie's candor."—From the Atlanta Journal of June 18.

CHANCELLOR KIRKLAND'S DEFENSE.

In defense of the position of the majority of the members of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University in accepting the $1,000,000 gift from Andrew Carnegie for the Medical Department of the institution and declaring that nothing is surrendered in the acceptance of the magnificent gift, Chancellor J. H. Kirkland quotes the rules for the Conduct of the Medical Department in answer to the protest entered by four members of the Board. Dr. Kirkland's statement follows:

"All the objections so far offered to the acceptance of Mr. Carnegie's magnificent gift to Vanderbilt University and through it to Nashville and the South, turns on the assumption that the Board of Trust is to turn over the Medical Department to an independent board. The sufficient answer to this is found in the regulations adopted by the Board at its recent meeting for the administration of this new trust. These relations are as follows:

"Rules for the conduct of the Medical Department in accordance with the conditions of the Carnegie donation:

"1. The members of the Governing Board of the Medical Department shall be elected by the Board of Trust. If vacancies occur previous to the annual meeting of the Board, the Executive Committee shall have power to fill the same until the next regular meeting of the Board of Trust."

"2. Members of said Governing Board shall hold office for eight years or until their successors are elected, but may be removed for cause by the Board of Trust at any annual meeting."

"3. Said Governing Board of seven shall elect its own Secretary and keep a record of its own proceedings, which record shall always be open and accessible to the Board of Trust or to the Executive Committee of said Board or to the President of the Board of Trust. Three members of said Board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business."

"4. The Chancellor shall in connection with his annual report make a summary of the most important business transacted by the Governing Board of the Medical Department, and these actions of the Governing Board shall be subject to the ratification and approval of the Board of Trust."

"From this and from the correspondence between Dr. Kirkland and Mr. Carnegie, which has now been given to the public, it is at once clear that the Board of Trust surrenders nothing at all. It merely agrees that the immediate direction of the Medical Department shall meet with a group of gentlemen selected in accordance with Mr. Carnegie's wishes. The majority of them are members of the Board itself and their work is subject to its legal control, as appears from the above regulations. The protest of four members of the Board ignores wholly the plain provision of these regulations, though the gentlemen signing it were present when they were offered or adopted."

"Even from the point of view of the Methodist Church, there can be no ground for the rejection of the money or the plan. Vanderbilt University has everything to gain by it and nothing to lose. If the University is to be controlled by the Church, it will be much better off with a first-class medical school than without one. Certainly Nashville and the South generally can hardly be expected to relish the refusal of a great donation on grounds so peculiar."

It is understood that Chancellor Kirkland will make a fuller and more complete statement on the discussion in the near future.

ACTION OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

At a called meeting held in the city of Nashville on Friday, June 20th, by a unanimous vote, the College of Bishops took the following action and issued to the Church an address setting forth their reasons for so doing:

"Whereas, the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, sitting and acting as a Board of Visitors of Vanderbilt University, having had due notice given to Board of said University by citation hereinafter referred to, and having read and considered the answer of E. B. Chappell, W. J. Young and R. W. Milisaps, three of the members of said Board, and having further considered the communication of Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, in which communication he declined to furnish a transcript of the minutes of the meeting of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, at which meeting action was taken accepting the Carnegie gift, but affirming that certain publications in the Nashville Banner of June 16, and in the Tennesseean and American of June 19, contained the acceptance by the Board of Trust of Mr. Carnegie's donation and of certain resolutions passed by the Board for the management of the Medical Department; and also having read and considered the correspondence, to-wit, a letter to Mr. Andrew Carnegie, dated May 1, 1913, signed J. H. Kirkland, Secretary Executive Committee of the Trustees and Chancellor of the University, and reply thereto, dated 'Carnegie Corporation of New York, 576 Fifth Avenue, New York, May 20, 1913,' addressed to 'Dr. J. H. Kirkland, Secretary Executive Committee Trustees, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.,' and signed 'Andrew Carnegie.'"

"Therefore, be it resolved, First, That in our opinion said action of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University is a breach of the trust vested in said Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University under and by virtue of the resolutions of the Memphis Convention, which constitute the foundation of Vanderbilt University."

"Second, That said action is ultra vires the power of said Board of Trust."

"Third, That it constitutes a diversion of a large portion of the funds and property of the University from the trust upon which said property is held; is contrary to the terms of other gifts to the university; is illegal, null and void."

"We, therefore, veto said action and every part thereof and declare the same null and void."

"Be it further resolved, That a copy of this action of the Board of Visitors of Vanderbilt University be duly certified by the Secretary of the College of Bishops and forwarded to the Secretary of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University."

Statement of Bishops.

The following communication is addressed by the College of Bishops to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, setting forth the views of the Bishops in regard to the Carnegie gift acceptance:

"In view of the fact that as a Board of Visitors of the Vanderbilt University, we feel constrained to disapprove the action of the Board of Trust in undertaking to accept the proposed gift of Andrew Carnegie to the Medical Department of the University, we make the statement which follows:

"We are deeply concerned for the welfare of the University, and if this gift had been offered without embarrassing conditions, as all other gifts to the institution have been made, we should have offered no objection to its acceptance, but the conditions attached to this gift, and the letter accompanying it, which must be taken as expository of the conditions, are such as lead us to believe that it cannot be accepted without a breach of the trust, and without dishonor to the Church, if the conditions are fulfilled in good faith to the donor."

"We are as unwilling that Mr. Carnegie should be deceived as that the University should be dismembered and the Church of God dishonored."

Claim Action Illegal.

"We are of the opinion that the Board of Trust cannot legally delegate the government of the Medical Department or the control of any other department of the University to any governing body, such as is stipulated in this case. The adoption of regulations for the control of a governing body which the Board of Trust cannot legally create cannot affect this consideration. The conditions of the gift, which the Board of Trust solemnly pledged itself to carry out, 'in letter and in spirit,' constitute the only material point in this matter, and these conditions call for a governing board unknown to the charter of the institution. If the Board of Trust, in pursuance to these conditions, could thus dismember the Medical Department, it could by the same process set off every other department, and thus break up into fragments the whole foundation and put each piece under the control of a board framed with a view to alienate from the Church the University which it founded and owns."

"The coupling with the proposal to deal thus with the Medical Department, an allusion to the pending suit of the Church to maintain by law its rights to the University, and the suspending of a gift upon the issues of that suit puts the matter out of serious consideration. The implications of such a proposal we forbear to discuss.

Destruction of University.

Our University needs funds for its enlargement and improvement. It needs far more than one million dollars. And we welcome all benefactions which are made in furtherance of the aims for which it was founded. We are grateful to the large-hearted men and women whose unconditional gifts in the past have blessed it, but we cannot approve the acceptance of gifts the conditions of which require the change of the nature of the institution, which in effect means the destruction of the University that its founders set up and the use of its name and resources, to raise upon its ruins an establishment that they never desired or intended. To such a course neither the offer of one million dollars, nor any number of millions, can tempt us for one moment. We should betray the confidence of the Church and of God and prove recreant to our duty if we fail to disprove such a course and exert whatever power we have to arrest such a proceeding. Were our people never so poor and our educational needs never so distressing, we could not entertain such a proposition. We know how to endure poverty, but we have not learned, nor are we ready to be taught, how to accept gifts to which are annexed conditions that require the sacrifice of our self-respect, the defeat of the founders of the University, the renunciation of the principles which we hold in common with all the Churches, and the abdication of the mission of the Church of God in the field of Christian education.

Mean No Offense.

In thus expressing ourselves we disclaim any intention of giving offense to anyone or of reflecting upon the motives of any. We are called upon, however, on the present occasion, when the fitness of any and all branches of the Church of God to own and operate colleges and universities is called in question, to reaffirm the Church's position on the subject with all emphasis. The issue is clearly joined, that we cannot hesitate for a moment to do our duty as we see it. With sincere devotion to the interests of the University, with profound concern for the welfare of our country, with fervent desire for the promotion of the cause of Christian education and in the fear of God whom we serve, we feel constrained to withhold our approval of the acceptance of this gift with the conditions annexed to it.

Signed by direction of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as their unanimous action.

"COLLINS DENNY,
"Secretary."

OUR MISSIONARY RECORD.

A careful study of the statistics found in the Minutes of the last session of the Louisiana Conference will reveal some facts with reference to our missionary contributions that are more surprising than gratifying. The first of these facts is that the per capita contribution for Home and Foreign Missions combined in the regular assessments amounts to a little less than 31 cents, or a little less than 14 cents a member for Foreign Missions, and a little more than 17 cents for Home and Conference Missions. A second and more discouraging fact is that this per capita is a decrease from the reports of 1911 of more than ten per cent. Apparently we are putting into practice the time-honored Methodist doctrine of lacksliding.

A third fact is that only nineteen charges, and not a single entire district in the Conference, paid both assessments in full. Of the charges that paid in full, six are in the New Orleans District, six in the Shreveport, four in the Lafayette, two in the Alexandria, one in the Ruston, and none in the Monroe and Baton Rouge. The minutes show also specials amounting to $1277, which would add about three and a half cents to the per capita average for the Conference. Most of this amount for specials came from the First Church of Shreveport.

A fourth startling fact is that ten charges—three in the Alexandria District, three in the Baton Rouge, one in the Ruston, one in the Lafayette, and two in the Shreveport—reported nothing for either Home or Foreign Missions; while three others which reported nothing for Home and Conference Missions, paid small amounts on the Foreign assessment. The following statement shows the order in which the districts stand as to the per capita contributions:

District.	Foreign	Home	Total
New Orleans	22 cents	31 cents	53 cents
Shreveport	20 "	25 "	45 "
Lafayette	14 "	19 "	33 "
Alexandria	13 "	15 "	28 "
Ruston	12 "	15 "	27 "
Monroe	10 "	12 "	22 "
Baton Rouge	7 "	9 "	16 "

These figures are particularly humiliating in view of the fact that many Conferences are now undertaking large specials of ten, fifteen, or even as high as thirty-five thousand dollars in addition to assessments; while our Conference is paying less than half of the assessments, and almost nothing in the way of specials.

It is hardly convincing to explain our deficit and our low per capita rate by saying that Louisiana is missionary territory. It is true that we have peculiar difficulties and problems, and a small membership in proportion to the demands of self-support; but it will be fatal to our spiritual vitality to plead the difficulties of our local work as an excuse for such pitiful response to the call of the world field. If we narrow the horizon of our sympathies and our service to the work at our own doors, under whatever urgency of local need, we will destroy the missionary impulse which is a vital element of our spiritual life. If the amount of our missionary contributions is an expression of our interest in world evangelization, in response to the Master's last command, we may well inquire whether as a people we really care for the redemption of the world or for our Lord's command.

I am persuaded that much of our failure and negligence in this matter is due to the fact that the body of our people are unacquainted in any adequate way with the principles and facts of the missionary enterprise. This lays upon the preachers and leaders a heavy responsibility for the instruction of the Church in the matter. One of our greatest needs is for a campaign of education that shall inform our people concerning this vital interest. Each church ought to be organized under the direction and leadership of the pastor and lay leader, with a definite missionary program providing for a missionary plan in the Sunday school and in the League, missionary sermons and prayer meetings, the circulation of the Missionary Voice, and the distribution of missionary literature. Literature for free distribution can be had by application to the Conference Secretary or the Board at Nashville, and books, charts and maps full of inspiration as well as information are plentiful and cheap, and can be circulated widely by determined effort.

It is encouraging to note in this connection that at least two of our presiding elders have this year supplied all their preachers with the set of the twenty-five cent charts recently published for our Board, and that at least one has supplied all the preachers of his district with a copy of "The Call of the World." Every pastor can, by persistent effort, and by the study of missionary literature as a help to his own preaching, help to wipe out the shameful record shown by our Minutes. While a shortage in missionary collections does not always evidence a pastor's unfaithfulness or inefficiency, it is unquestionably true that in many instances reasonable diligence in teaching and in effort to collect these assessments would greatly increase the pitiful showing indicated by some of these reports. A presiding elder speaking recently of the carelessness of some preachers in this matter said to me that he did not propose to keep in his district a man who did not make an earnest effort to lead his people to meet these demands of the Church.

Another reason for much of our failure is in the lack of a system for securing these collections from all our people. The Boards of the Church have agreed upon a system, "A Financial Method for Methodists," which involves an every-member canvass early in the year, under the pastor's direction, and the using of the lay leader and missionary committee, and an envelope system of regular offerings that provides for all the interests of the church. This system has brought great advance wherever it has been introduced, and is so flexible that it can be used in any charge where it is intelligently taken hold of. I sincerely hope that all our pastors and leaders will carefully study this system before the end of the present Conference year and introduce it for next year without waiting till next year has begun.

We are abundantly able, if we will take hold of this matter intelligently and earnestly, to pay in full the moderate assessment of about sixty cents a member that the Church asks of the Louisiana Conference for Home and Foreign missions, without neglecting or discriminating against the other sacred claims assessed to us. Let us make a new record this year.

W. WINANS DRAKE,
La. Conf. Missionary Secretary.

BROOKHAVEN AND WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

In many particulars Brookhaven is an ideal appointment. A membership of more than 500, a well organized Sunday school, an official board of intelligent business and professional men, an efficient band of Christian women in the Missionary Society, and good congregations, all contribute to the pleasure and inspiration of the pastor. We have been well received by this cultured people, some progress has been made in the work of the church, and we feel that we have reasons to be encouraged.

Last Sunday morning a missionary rally, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society, was held in the Church in honor of Mrs. Lipscomb, who is soon to leave for Nashville. The address of Mrs. Lipscomb on this occasion was instructive and inspiring.

Whitworth College has just closed one of the best sessions in the history of the institution. The Commencement exercises were a success in every particular. The Mary Jane Lampton Auditorium, completed just in time for the commencement exercises, is a beautiful building and a valuable addition to the College. The President's Home, recently built and donated to the Church by Dr. Cooper, is an elegant building and stands as a monument to Dr. Cooper's generosity and love for the Church. The Board of Trustees authorized the Building Committee to proceed with the erection of a central building as soon as the necessary funds could be secured. This building is to be used for the President's Office, Society Halls, Y. W. C. A. Rooms, Parlors, and Dormitory purposes. This is a much needed building and the Methodists of our Conference ought to contribute liberally to make possible its immediate erection.

The religious spirit of the College is good, and it is the place where our Methodist girls should be educated. Dr. Cooper is doing a great work for our Church and deserves the confidence and co-operation of every Methodist in the Mississippi Conference. Let us rally to him and make this the greatest institution for girls in the South.

W. H. LEWIS.

FOR SALE.

A most desirable Beach Cottage at Seashore Camp Ground. In good repair; furnished; six rooms, four rooms front beach; gallery on front and one end. Immediate possession, $950.00 cash. Apply at once to Mrs. W. H. Goodale, 160 Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss.

Mansfield Female College.

We have mailed this week more than 600 copies of our new catalog to our pastors throughout Louisiana. To date we have sent out nearly 1000.

Forty per cent of our boarders last year came from four pastoral charges. If half our pastors would send us one girl each, we would have a house full.

The faculty for next year will consist of graduates from the best colleges in the land. We offer first-class instruction, careful training, and Christian environment—a school where character making is the end; and books, and music, and work and play are means.

Young girls who must leave home for school advantages are wanted in our Preparatory department; high school graduates, in our College department; prospective teachers, in our Normal department, and special students in our Music and Domestic Science departments. Write for catalog.

R. E. BOBBITT,
President.

THE UNFAVORABLE THINGS OF THIS GENERATION.

It is so unpopular nowadays to talk or write about the conditions, practices, etc., that are unfavorable, that we fear that the tendency is to declare all right what is not all right. However, let us stop and see and consider things as they are.

The first unfavorable thing to which we desire to call attention is the decline of family worship. It is true that occasionally we find a man who holds family prayer once a day, but how about twice daily? How many are there in the Church in this favored land who hold family prayer twice a day? No family can measure fully up to God's requirements that does not have family devotion twice daily, unless providentially hindered.

Another unfavorable thing is the lack of family government, that is, in detail and completion. How often is the husband and father found to be bossy, partial, or wholly lacking in executive ability, and the wife fussy, too indulgent, or self-assuming, having no real care for her head, her husband, as did her model, Sarah, of whom Peter said: "Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord, whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement." (1 Peter 3:6). Furthermore, the husband often treats his headship with complete indifference, or renders himself unworthy of it; although the Bible plainly declares: "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the Church." (Ephesians 5:23.) As a father, the Lord cannot say of him as of Abraham: "For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment." (Gen. 18:19.) Children are growing up self-willed, loud, impolite, irreligious.

Another unfavorable thing is the covering up of the wickedness of the untrue, even to the damage of the innocent and faithful. Another, is the tendency of people to disown or defend their own faults instead of confessing them and making proper amends for them and ceasing entirely from them. And still another, is the very poor conception many have of what a Christian ought to be to please God and make sure of a home in heaven. Others could be given, but let us think on these.

A SO-CALLED CLERICAL CONSPIRACY.

Some one has sent us two copies of "The Bible Students Monthly," published in the interest of "Pastor Russell" of Brooklyn. In one of the papers is an article, evidently written by "Pastor Russell" on "A Clerical Conspiracy to Injure Pastor Russell." The opening sentence of the article is as follows: "The various denominations of Christendom, after fighting each other for centuries, have concluded that they all are partly wrong and partly right, and that they do not know where the Truth lies, nor what is Truth, nor what is error." Of course, Russell knew that this statement was false when he wrote it.

Russell made a flying trip to foreign lands, stopping at ports here and there, and claimed to have spoken at various places where it is said by competent authorities that he did not speak. He also said some disparaging things about the work of Foreign Missions. Mr. Ellis, a newspaper man who has made more than one trip abroad to investigate Foreign Mission work, and whose investigation was thorough, has shown up Russell's trip, proving that his claims are false. Now, Russell, in the article mentioned, claims that Mr. Ellis is making a systematic attack on him, and says: "All the clergy have been urged to join the conspiracy, and nearly one-fourth of their number have joined the campaign of lying and slander." This statement is absurdly false and without foundation. This is the first we have ever heard of such a conspiracy. This is only one of Russell's methods of advertising himself, that the dollars may flow into his purse.

We heard Russell when in Birmingham. His coming was extensively advertised by circus-size bill posters all over the city. These posters were imaginary pictures representing a couple being confused by the various roads to heaven. The inference was that Russell could tell them of the only road. We left the theater, as many others did, before he finished his lecture, because we were bored. We were convinced that he was a religious trickster working on the credulity and ignorance of the masses.

Some grave charges were brought against Russell by his wife, who separated from him. The Brooklyn Eagle showed him up in some of his methods and he sued the Eagle, but lost. In the article on the clerical conspiracy, Russell explains some of the charges made against him by his wife. The following is his explanation of one of the charges made against him: "As to my being in a girl's room with a door locked: Our servant girl was reported to be sick, and my wife asked me to take time to see her, as I had some knowledge of medicine. In the room where she was, was a noisy pump and sink, and after being interrupted, I turned the key for quietness about one minute." We cannot understand how locking the door would stop the noisy pump and sink, and we do not understand why it was done for "about one minute." Russell's own statement convicts him, but his followers will believe anything he says.—The Baptist Chronicle.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

Dear Brother Meek: The following are the North Mississippi Epworth League officers for 1913-14:

President, Prof. E. F. Puckett, Amory; First Vice President, Miss Nona Evans, Caledonia; Second Vice President, Miss Mary Stokes, Columbus; Third Vice President, Mr. L. K. Carlton, New Albany; Fourth Vice President, Mr. V. H. Stephenson, Booneville; Junior Superintendent, Miss Myrtle Furr, Pontotoc; Press Reporter, Mr. R. T. Hollingsworth, Houston; Secretary and Treasurer, W. T. Boswell, New Albany.

Below is given a list of the District Secretaries: Aberdeen, Mr. W. L. Thomason, Pontotoc; Columbus, Miss Bessie Heron, Columbus; Corinth, Miss Esther Hall, New Albany; Durant, Miss Blanche Foose, Tchula; Greenville, Rev. E. R. Smott, Glen Allan; Holly Springs, Roy Sissell, Water Valley; Winona, Mrs. O. W. Bradley, Winona; Sardis, Rev. W. H. Mounger, Coldwater.

The North Mississippi Leaguers at their recent annual meeting in Pontotoc adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference assembled in Pontotoc, Miss., on this 12th day of June, 1913, do hereby put ourselves on record as endorsing the general principles contained in the recent editorials of Dr. R. A. Meek in the New Orleans Christian Advocate on the subject of wordliness, such as the dance, card parties, the professional and amateur theatricals, and that we heartily commend his fearless advocacy of the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and of the plain teachings of the Holy Scriptures in this regard."

W. T. BOSWELL, Secretary.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE—ITS STATUS AND WORK.

The question of the relation of the Port Gibson Female College to the Mississippi Annual Conference having arisen at the late Annual Session of our Board of Trustees it was thought well to appoint a committee to look into the same and report to the next session of the Annual Conference, and also to send a copy of its report to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

In response to said order the committee reports the following facts: The property consists of two tracts known as the Main building and the Annex. The Main building is located in the center of a square in the heart of the town of Port Gibson and has the capacity to care for sixty boarders and the President's family, besides furnishing recitation rooms and the study hall. This property was conveyed to the Mississippi Annual Conference more than forty years ago by the Port Gibson Collegiate Academy with one condition, namely, that a "school for children of the white race be maintained." Many years ago a donation was made to the Church and loaned by it to the Academy the interest upon which goes to the local Methodist church, and same is assumed by the Board of Trustees. This, however, is a small amount and in no wise embarrasses the college or its management; this property is otherwise unencumbered and is valued at $35,000.

The Annex is a more recent purchase and consists of a dwelling adjoining the property of the Main Building. It has a capacity to accommodate sixteen boarders; is valued at $5,000, and is deeded unconditionally to the Mississippi Annual Conference. One note for $250 with interest is all the encumbrance upon this property. It will be seen from this investigation that the Church has under its control in this institution a property worth about $38,000.

For more than seventy years this institution has been under the control of the Methodist Church, and for the greater part of this time was the only church school for young women in the western part of the State. The alumnae of this college make quite a roll and are scattered over the States of Louisiana and Mississippi and are a credit both to the school and the Church. Lack of railroad facilities for some years made the school inaccessible as compared with other institutions which operated against its patronage, but with the coming of the Y. & M. V. railroad it revived and is now doing good work for the State and Church in the education of young women. In thorough sympathy with the advanced educational ideas, and appreciating the need of the thorough training of our young womanhood, the more recent managements have adopted plans which are resulting in a finished product of which the friends of the institution may be justly proud. Before the county boards her graduates take high rank as educators in the schools of the State. Nor is the religious development of the students neglected; there is maintained in the institution a Young Woman's Christian Association, an Epworth League and Sunday school in which the teaching is done by the faculty of the institution. During the session just closed the morale of the student body was remarkable for its excellency.

The faith of the trustees and management of the school is evidenced by the sound of the hammer now making improvements upon the buildings necessary for the work of the approaching session.

AN APPRECIATION OF J. P. MORGAN.

"Mr. Morgan's Personality" is the subject of an article by Joseph B. Gilder, to appear in the July Century. This intimate study of the great financier, revealing his nature as his closest friends knew it, will contain many anecdotes illustrative of Mr. Morgan's generosity, integrity, religious faith, and marvelous mental accuracy. Mr. Gilder's article will give also a host of little-known yet significant facts about the shy genius who so consistently shrank from the limelight.

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. G. W. Bachman.
II.

The Chickasaw Mission District noted in the former article embraced all of Mississippi north of Yallahusha River and west of the Tombigbee. The country at that time, 1836, was in a chaotic state. The Chickasaw Indians, having sold their lands to the United States government, were moving out—going to their allotted country in the Indian Territory—and the white people were rapidly coming in and taking possession of the country. Neighborhoods were being formed and villages and towns were springing up in many quarters. The distance between these was frequently great, requiring many hours, and sometimes days, to pass from one to another. Traveling had to be for the most part on horseback or afoot, over poor roads and by paths, and often without either, across water courses without bridge or boat, or through forests and canebrakes inhabited by wild and ferocious animals and reptiles, with occasionally a lone roving Indian, lost or straying from his tribe.

There was probably but one church building in the District—the log house at Coffeetown—and but few schoolhouses, and they were built of rude logs with puncheon floors and seats, so most of the preaching had to be in private dwellings or in the woods under the shade of the trees.

With these conditions it required alert, energetic, and courageous men to find the scattered settlements and preach the gospel to the ever-incoming multitudes of people.

The presiding elder, Rev. R. Alexander, and his co-laborers, S. W. Speer, J. P. Sneed, and Wm. Craig, proved themselves to be heroic and zealous pastors and evangelists, whose labors in this pioneer work were owned of the Lord in accomplishing great and abiding good. They had success in finding and organizing the scattered immigrant church membership, and in adding many new converts; so that at the close of the year they reported 454 white members and 34 colored.

This being an entirely new field, no statistics had been previously reported. The preachers seem to have operated principally in the counties of Yallahusha, Pontotoc, Lafayette and Marshall, including the towns of Coffeetown, Pontotoc, Oxford, and Holly Springs, which were then just beginning to exist.

Rev. S. W. Speer, in his narrative, says: "On a visit with Rev. J. T. Sneed through his extensive mission, we passed through Oxford the day the surveyors were measuring off the town; there was but one log cabin in the place."

Again he writes: "The presiding elder (Alexander) asked me to go with him to hold a meeting in Pontotoc, sixty miles east of Coffeetown. We had a good meeting in a schoolhouse, and were kindly cared for by General McMackin, the king of hotel keepers. On our return we were met with a heavy storm. The next morning it was snowing, and the streams were bank full. We came to a stream, and a man by the roadside feeding his hogs was asked if it could be crossed. 'Oh, yes,' he said; 'it is not deep.' The presiding elder, being a tall man and having the tallest horse, pushed in and was afloat in an instant; his horse rounded to on the other side and walked out, the presiding elder wet up to his armpits. I dismounted, floated my horse across and walked over on a log. So the creek could be crossed. We stopped at the next house for repairs, and after two or three hours spent in drying out, we left for Coffeetown and got into port by sunset."

This incident is only one of many similar and worse experiences of those pioneer preachers which reminds us of the perils and hardships they endured in preparing the way for the better things that we of to-day enjoy.

Robert Alexander is represented as a man tall of stature, great preaching and executive ability, and of peculiar qualifications for pioneer or missionary work.

writes of him thus: "Brother Alexander was a live presiding elder. He meant business and he did what he meant. The mere routine of questions in the Quarterly Conference was but a small item in his work. He wished to see the application of these principles and what had been done. So he walked about Zion that he might see the strength of her towers. He was a good preacher, a genial companion, a pleasant co-laborer and suited to the oversight of the work." After three-fourths of a century, this abides as a good picture of a model presiding elder of our Southern Methodism.

From a memoir published in the Minutes of the Texas Conference, 1882, we get the following items: "Rev. Robert Alexander was born in Tennessee on Aug. 7, 1811; was converted in 1828; was licensed to exhort in 1829, and to preach in the early part of 1830, and in November of the same year was admitted into the traveling connection by the Tennessee Conference. In 1834 he was transferred to the Alabama Conference, but before entering his new field he was transferred to the Mississippi Conference and placed in the Port Gibson and Grand Gulf work. In the autumn of 1835 he began that which was henceforth to be his peculiar province in the Master's vineyard, to-wit: the opening of new fields and preparing ground for other laborers to occupy. He was appointed superintendent of the Chickasaw Mission District, and during the year organized and reported at Conference a large field which was divided into two districts known for many years as Holly Springs and Grenada Districts. In 1837 he was sent as a missionary to Texas, which was then as truly a missionary field as are Mexico and Brazil to-day. Several times he was elected president of his Conference in the absence of a Bishop. He was a member of the Louisville Convention in 1845, and of nearly every General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, until his death."

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

By Dr. J. W. Moore.

The greatest opportunity of Louisiana Methodism is Centenary College. Centenary's increased prosperity means a growing Church and the enlarged usefulness of Methodism.

The Louisiana Conference is alone responsible for the success of this institution. Its growth will be our glory, its decline would be our shame. Formerly we could depend on Mississippi for patronage, but the development of Millsaps has cut off that source. It was thought that by locating a first class school at Shreveport that considerable patronage could be drawn from Texas, but the Southern Methodist University has pre-empted that field. Fortunately we have been thrown on our own resources and Louisiana unaided must make either a great college or a great failure.

We can fail, but we must not. There is too much at stake. Centenary has had a creditable history and is too closely identified with the life's work of some of our greatest men to be allowed to suffer for lack of funds. In looking over the old files of the Advocate the writer was much impressed with the interest taken by the great men of our Methodism in this institution. We owe it to their memories to make this one of the greatest colleges in America.

Without a strong, aggressive and spiritual institution Louisiana can not hope to take its rightful place in the advancing columns of Methodism. Centenary ought to be the very heart of the Louisiana Conference. From this vital center the warm blood of intellectual and spiritual life ought to radiate to every corner of our State. On Centenary we must depend for the education of our ministry unless we desire to send them elsewhere and have them come back to us (if they come back at all) with an opinion of us that is scarcely complimentary. A patronizing spirit is easily acquired.

The world is getting tired of a secularized education. It is not only lop-sided but it is failing to accomplish what its advocates maintained would be its results. The fruitage of this system is already apparent in a lowered moral tone and in the rapid increase of crime. A Christless education is an unmitigated curse to the nation. Washington's Farewell Address seems almost inspired in its prescience and wisdom. "And let us," said he, "with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of education on minds of a peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

Mr. Huxley has said, "I hold that any system that attempts to deal with the intellectual side of the child alone and leaves the rest untouched, will prove a delusion and a snare, just as likely to produce a crowd of astute rascals as anything else. In my belief, unless a child is taught not only morality but religion, education will come to very little."

Discerning parents will more and more seek the church schools for the symmetrical education of their children. They desire for their offspring an environment of reverence for sacred things, of high ideals and high standards of morality, and above all a reverence for religious faith.

Centenary College is admirably situated in a community that possesses brains, wealth, push, and Christianity. Shreveport has shown a disposition to be liberal. One of our most successful preachers has been elected president, taking the place of Dr. Hill, who has crowned a life's work as a successful pastor by a signal service to Methodism as a college president. Now, let the whole Conference rally around Dr. Wynn and let the name, "Centenary," be on the tongue and in the prayers of our preachers until a spirit of loving loyalty shall be in the heart of our entire membership.

A great Centenary spells a great Methodism in Louisiana. A declining institution will mark a waning Church. Forward!

HE PRACTICED WHAT HE PREACHED.

A chaplain on the battlefield came to a man who was wounded, lying on the ground. "Would you like me to read you something from this book—the Bible?" he asked the soldier. "I'm so thirsty," replied the man; "I would rather have a drink of water." Quickly as he could the chaplain brought the water. Then the soldier asked, "Could you put something under my head?" The chaplain took off his light overcoat, rolled it and put it gently under the soldier's head for a pillow. "Now," said the soldier, "if I had something over me! I am very cold." There was only one thing the chaplain could do. He took off his own coat and spread it over the soldier. The wounded man looked up into his face, and said gratefully, "Thank you." Then he added feebly, "If there is anything in that book in your hand that makes a man do for another what you have done for me, please read it to me."—Unknown.

WHEN THE WEATHER IS CLOUDY.

"The weather is cloudy this morning," said Maude's father.

"Why, father, the sun is shining just as bright!" cried Maude.

"Oh, that sun! But I meant the inside weather."

Maude looked at her father a minute and then turned quickly away from him. She must have known what he meant.

"What is inside weather, father?" asked Madge.

"Oh, when anybody in the family comes to breakfast late, and wishes there were something good to eat, and wishes our canary bird wouldn't make so much noise, and wishes that old school wouldn't begin so early, why, then I think the inside weather is rather cloudy, don't you think so, too?"

Maude looked at her father a minute and then laughed. "Father makes inside sunshine, anyway," she said.

LITTLE MISSIONARIES.

By Graham Wentworth.

Beatrice and Juliet were two little New Yorkers. Beatrice was nine and Juliet seven. The children lived very near Central Park, where in pleasant weather they spent all their play hours. They were strong, healthy little girls, merry as crickets, and happy as the day was long.

Six days in the week they were allowed to amuse themselves in any reasonable way, but on Sunday a different order prevailed. Sunday school, church, a walk with father and mother in the afternoon, and then, after an early supper, the good old hymns were sung. Mr. and Mrs. Cooke were criticised by some of their friends as being "narrow" and "unprogressive," but the criticisms were unheeded and the same routine continued Sunday after Sunday.

The little sisters had a German governess of whom they were very fond, but poor Fraulein was often lonely and homesick for the beloved "Vaterland," so it is not to be wondered at, that when walking in the park one day, and meeting an old school friend from her own village, her joy was boundless. The friends embraced rapturously, kissing each other on both cheeks, and talking so excitedly that the children had difficulty in understanding. Fraulein's friend was a governess also; but, unlike her, was governess to a little Jewess.

The two Frauleins now arranged to meet every day, so the three children were thrown constantly together. Little Helene proved to be a sweet, amiable child, and delighted to play with the little sisters. Sometimes the governesses would seat themselves on a park bench and talk long and earnestly of the dear home country, of family and friends, while the children, tired of play, sat at a distance also engaged in an animated conversation. It never occurred to Fraulein Kruger to inquire into the subject of their discussion.

One day as Fraulein Kruger and the two children were about leaving the house, Beatrice ran back, flew upstairs, and rushing into her mother's room, asked breathlessly, "Mamma, may I take my Bible to the park to-day?"

"Take your Bible to the park?" cried the astonished mother. "Certainly you may, my dear, but why?"

"We are trying to convert Helene," was the eager response. "We tell her stories from the New Testament, and teach her our favorite hymns. Helene doesn't believe half we say. She says the New Testament is a book of fairy tales, so we thought if she could see it written, she might be convinced."

Beatrice sped down stairs, the Bible under her arm. "Surely," thought Mrs. Cooke, as she sat alone in her room, "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings Thou hast perfected praise."—Christian Intelligencer.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Corinth District Conference came to a close last Sunday night. I do not remember to have attended a district conference with so few uninteresting and tedious moments. Every moment was full of interest and one thing of importance crowded upon another throughout every session.

We were disappointed that Bishop W. B. Murray was prevented by other duties from presiding over more than one session. He made us glad with one of his masterful sermons. Brother Mitchell presided with his usual grace and courtesy.

The attendance of pastors was unusually large, only three being absent. Those present gave most encouraging reports of their respective charges. The attendance of laymen was the largest I have seen in any conference since I have been secretary. Revs. W. L. Graves, J. A. Poe, L. M. Lipscomb, J. H. Felts, W. M. Williams, H. M. Ellis, J. H. Mitchell, and S. A. Brown preached during the conference.

The Lay delegates elected to the Annual Conference were D. T. Yeates, L. K. Carlton, Dr. L. W. Worsham, and Dr. J. Y. Murray. Rev. T. L. Porter was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. Henry W. Scott and Philip B. Grisham were recommended for Deacon's Orders.

The visitors present and contributing to the profit of the conference were: Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick and Mr. R. M. Weaver, representing the Sunday School Board; Miss Corinne Rogers, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society; Rev. W. C. Carlisle, looking after the interests of the Church Extension Board—he makes a good connectional officer; Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, representing the Board of Education (the conference assumed an obligation to raise $200 to assist in the education of a minister, at Brother Lipscomb's earnest request, brought from the Board); Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Agent of the Methodist Hospital; Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Orphans' Home; Rev. G. W. Bachman, with "Our Books"; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, representing Millsaps College, and Rev. W. L. Duren, President of the Conference Board of Missions. All of these brethren can be depended on to worthily represent the interests committed to their hands. We were glad to have in the conference room for one day that staunch friend of Methodism, Mr. S. H. High, of Tupelo.

The conference will be held at Ecru in 1914.

The pastor of the church at Sherman, Rev. G. W. Gordon, and his good wife were untiring in their efforts to make the conference a great success, and they succeeded admirably. I have never known a community to show more fraternal interest in a conference; all denominations joined in entertaining royally, and the large attendance, not only upon the preaching service but upon the business sessions as well, indicated a keen interest and endeavor to make the Conference a successful meeting. If there is a disinterested layman in the Methodist Church at Sherman, he stayed in the background. If there is a member of any other Church at Sherman that was not heartily in sympathy with us, he was not found. With new zeal, we continue our labors.

THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

My Dear Doctor: I am sending you an announcement of my third round of quarterly conferences and will add a brief statement concerning the work in the Alexandria District. We have had about 200 accessions to the Church to date. The support of the preachers in most places has been better than usual. We are occupying two churches that have been opened since Conference. Our church at Grayson has been built this year. The church at Oakdale will be, I hope, ready for use by October 1. By vote of the District Conference, I am instructed to procure a district parsonage in Alexandria.

Revival meetings are being held in many places. Montgomery at Campiti and Bennett at Merryville have had fine meetings. Perritt at Marksville, with Freeman to assist, had a most unusual revival. Dr. Werlein is now engaged in a good meeting in Alexandria. We will have five churches and three parsonages by December 10 that we did not have at the last session of the Conference. The outlook is bright for quite a growth in the membership of the Church and the opening of two or three new charges in manufacturing towns will be necessary.

Yours cordially,

H. W. MAY.

Editorial.

WHAT THE EFFECT WOULD PROBABLY BE.

Last week we promised to discuss in this issue of the Advocate the probable effect, if carried out, of the recent action of the General Board of Education relative to the unclassified educational institutions of the Church upon our educational interests in Mississippi and Louisiana. In order to form an intelligent opinion of what would likely result from this new movement, we need to get clearly before us the entire scheme of classification adopted by the General Board, including this last feature which it is proposed to add:

All the schools of Southern Methodism are at present placed by the General Board in four groups; (1) Universities, which must have not less than a million dollars of endowment, and be organized on a basis of professional schools and of elective studies, with departments of original research. (2) Colleges, which are divided into classes "A" and "B." In order to be given a place in "Class B" an institution must have seven professors, or adjunct professors, and a permanent annual income, exclusive of matriculation and tuition fees, of not less than $5,000. This income may be derived from interest on an endowment fund, Conference assessments, private gifts, or NET EARNINGS from board or dormitories. The requirements for admission into "Class A" include all of the foregoing exactations, with the additional one of a $100,000 endowment (a temporary exception to this item is made in the case of female colleges). The curriculum is also required to be higher in the latter class of institutions. (3) Academies. These are only required to do a certain grade of work, no endowment or particular income being necessary. (4) Unclassified institutions. This group includes all the institutions of the Church not embraced in any one of the three classes mentioned above.

Now what the General Board, under Dr. Anderson's leadership, recently did at Dallas was to request the Commission on Education (appointed by the College of Bishops) to work out requirements and standards for a class of institutions to be known as "Junior Colleges," which are to give as much as two years of college work, but which are not to be allowed to confer degrees. And going further, the Board proclaimed that all the unclassified institutions in the Church within twelve months after the report of the said Commission must either meet the prescribed conditions and take their places with the "Class A" or "Class B" Colleges, or else become "Junior Colleges," thereby surrendering the right to give degrees. Nor is this all; but, as has already been stated, the Board ventured to go even further and to advise the Annual Conference Boards (which is equivalent to advising the Annual Conferences themselves) that they are not at liberty, under the law, to appropriate money to any institution which does not obey the above-stated mandate of the General Board.

In the light of the foregoing facts, the probable effect of this action upon our educational institutions in Mississippi and Louisiana is perfectly obvious. Millsaps College, of course, would not be affected adversely by it; but it would seriously involve the interests of Grenada, Whitworth, Port Gibson, Centenary, and Mansfield Colleges. It is scarcely possible that any one of these schools could secure in so short a time as that specified a guaranteed income sufficiently large to entitle it to admission in "Class A" or "Class B." They would therefore, if this late order of the General Board should stand, be forced to fall into the rank of a "Junior College" and be stripped of the privilege of awarding diplomas, or else to pass under the anathema of the General Board and be deprived of any assistance from the Annual Conferences.

There is not, in our opinion, a single one of these institutions that could surrender the right to confer degrees without seriously damaging its patronage. Many Methodist parents would refuse to send their sons and daughters to them under such conditions, and the young people themselves would be indisposed to go. A diploma is valuable in many respects to the young man or young woman, who, after leaving school, desires to secure a position as a teacher or some other remunerative employment.

Some of these schools do not receive donations from the Annual Conference, but there are others that do receive such assistance, and which could scarcely get along without it. This is particularly true of Grenada, Centenary, and Mansfield Colleges. If this plan of the General Board should be carried out and the colleges in our patronizing territory should fall in with it, there would not be a single Methodist school in Louisiana that could confer degrees, and only one in Mississippi. If this should cause the students that ought properly to attend the institutions from which this right is taken, not to patronize them, where would they go to secure an education? To Millsaps College? The facilities there would fall far short of being large enough to accommodate them. Would they go to Methodist schools in other States? A few of them perhaps might, but the great body of them would, in all probability, go to the near-by schools of the State or other denominations. What sound sense can there be, out of a mere blind devotion to an idealistic scheme, to strike our own institutions such a blow as this, and to send our Methodist young people to schools wholly out from under our influence to secure educational instruction? It would, in our judgment, be exceedingly difficult to conceive of a more unwise course of procedure than this.

But let us consider for a moment the other alternative—let us look at what would follow if these schools should refuse to comply with the order of the General Board and remain unclassified, and if Dr. Anderson's construction of the law, that in that event the Annual Conferences may not in any way help them, should by any possibility hold good. The loss of this assistance would greatly cripple some of the best of these institutions, if indeed it did not destroy them. We would thus be wrecking our own property, much of which has come to us at the cost of toil and sacrifice and suffering. Nor are there only a few schools that would be thus stricken. There are more than 40 of them, and they have a property valuation that reaches up into the millions. If they should be immolated upon the altar of a foolish idealism and should cease to exist, the Church would sustain a loss compared to which that resulting from the alienation of Vanderbilt University would be a mere bagatelle. These small colleges have long been the strength and glory of Southern Methodism. They have contributed largely to its upbuilding, and but for them the history of our Church would have been vastly different and far less brilliant. They may not have large faculties and heavy endowments, but they give their students the advantage of close personal contact with their instructors, and some of them do a work which, for depth and solid worth, can scarcely be paralleled anywhere. It takes more than money and a catalog curriculum to constitute a really great institution of learning.

But great as is their value and immeasurable as would be their loss, the welfare of the unclassified schools of Southern Methodism is by no means all that is involved in this issue. In our judgment, a supreme superintendency by the General Board of Education, such as that contended for by Dr. Anderson, would imperil the whole educational system of the Church. Seventeen men scattered throughout the connection, most of whom have seen only a few of our institutions, who are busy with other things, and who only meet once a year for two or three days are, we respectfully submit, not equal to the task of dictating in detail the management of all our schools. (Let it be remembered that the General Secretary is the only man connected with the General Board who is giving all his time to this work.) Are we to have one mold into which, regardless of local needs and the wreckage that might result therefrom, all the colleges of Southern Methodism are to be cast? Is no room to be left for individual initiative upon the part of our various boards of trustees and college faculties? Are charters to count for nothing and to be overridden at will by one supervising body for which plenary power is claimed? If this is to be the case, the place of but few of our institutions will be secure. The standards may be changed at any time and the school that is a college to-day may be forced to meet new conditions next year or become something else. Indeed, we are frankly told that some feature of the present standards are only temporary and may soon be altered. If the General Board may absolutely dictate in regard to these matters and outlaw an institution that does not obey its instructions, why may it not interfere with reference to anything else it wishes? Under Dr. Anderson's interpretation of the law, it appears that the Conference Boards of Education and the Boards of Trustees of our educational plants are mere automatons that must move whenever the General Board sees fit to pull the string. We imagine that our laymen of means would be exceedingly slow to put their money into schools that are to be managed in such a manner.

We desire to say, in conclusion, that we are not at all opposed to the General Board of Education and its work when they are kept within their legal and proper limits. On the contrary, we regard such an organization as well-nigh indispensably necessary. It has rendered a great service since it was constituted, and by giving counsel and information, by devising plans and impressing the Church with the wisdom of them, and by seeking to strengthen our various schools and lending a helping hand in every forward educational movement that may be enterprised in the Connection, it may continue to make its influence a mighty force for good in the coming years. But let it be understood that these high ends are to be achieved by a policy of persuasion and wise leadership and not by one of intimidation and coercion. The latter would, in our opinion, awaken such a spirit of resentment among our people as to foredoom it to disastrous failure. We heartily sympathize with every purpose to better our educational system, and we also believe that it is wise to correlate our schools as rapidly as practicable; but we should never forget that it is our paramount duty, not to work out some theoretical educational ideal, but to meet the real educational needs of our people. If every college in Southern Methodism could tomorrow be lifted into "Class A," it would probably be a curse rather than a blessing, for the reason that they would be placed beyond the reach of the masses of our membership and constituency. To be sure, we need some higher institutions of learning equal to any that can be found anywhere, but not one whit less urgently do we need well located and wisely managed schools of a lower order.

Let us strive to relate properly our various institutions of learning so as to do away with wasteful competition and secure the best possible results; but let this be done tactfully and in a way to conserve and make the most of all our educational plants, rather than rashly to outlaw and sacrifice them. Of one thing we may be sure, and that is that any educational system, no matter upon how lofty a plane it may be pitched, that leaves the instruction of a majority of our Methodist young people, after they leave the public schools, in alien hands, falls very far short of what it ought to be. It always makes us a bit weary when we hear one of our educators say that he does not care much for numbers—that he prefers to have a select school of high grade. The mission of Methodism is not a restricted one. She believes in no aristocracy in service. John Wesley said, "The world is my parish," and the Church that he founded, to represent him worthily, must recognize her obligation to all lands and to all men. Nor can she in any other way faithfully exhibit the spirit of her Lord, who came with blessings for the whole human race.

THE CHRISTIAN ON VACATION.

Ample provision has been made in nature for stated periods of rest for all forms of life. God made the universe in six days and rested on the seventh. Every day man takes time to rest from his labors, and it is well that he does. But there are times when people take more than their daily rest, and seek to break the monotony of the daily grind by a change of scenery and habits. We call it a vacation. The hope of the person going on a vacation is that he may so recuperate his lost energies that he will be better able to perform his daily tasks after his return. It is often true, however, that he returns in a state of exhaustion, or worse than he was when he went away. There is no need of this; we have a certain rule which, if observed, will effect the results desired.

In Acts 9:31 we find that after a period of persecution, the early Church enjoyed a period of rest—a vacation, if you choose to call it that. But during that vacation the Church was "edified," walked "in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost," and was "multiplied." Too often the Christian on vacation takes with him to read nothing but trashy novels, hair-raising stories, and his newspaper. How can he expect to be edified on a mental diet like that? Take with you nothing but your Bible and you will be nourished as never before on a vacation. Too many walk in worldly ways and almost venture over the bounds of propriety trying to have so-called pleasure, and the result is that their vacation fags them out. Walk "in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost" and you will do nothing that will exhaust you. Life like that during your summer's rest will cause your strength to be increased. Quite often the church member ruins his Christian influence by his follies and worldliness while away on trips for recreation. It was not so with the early Church. When it had rest, it was "multiplied." If the Christian will make his summer's vacation a period of Bible study and of devout walking in the fear of the Lord, sinners will be attracted by his shining example and the Church will be multiplied.

PREPARE FOR WHAT?

We are often told to prepare to live and we will be ready to die. The hope of life thrills one and makes him willing to undertake great things, but often the great things he undertakes are for himself. When by sickness or otherwise one is brought near to death's door and is forced to look face to face with the terrible fact that in the midst of life we are in the midst of death, he is apt to take time to consider his relationship to God and his hopes of life in the great beyond. Why not turn around the oft-repeated advice and say, prepare to die and you will be ready to live? Certainly the one who is ready to meet his God is ready to meet his brother. The one who is ready to join the hosts of angels around the throne of God in praises of the blessed Lamb is ready now to lift up his voice and confess his name before men.

It may not be an inviting subject to study, but death is certain and the day of its approach is uncertain. The sooner teachers and preachers teach men to esteem the privileges of the world to come more highly than those of this world and that the duties devolving upon them in this world are necessary stepping-stones upon which they may attain to the heights of Christian experience now and the saint's glory yonder, the sooner will men realize that they are but pilgrims and sojourners here and prepare themselves for their eternal habitation.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of San Antonio, Texas, is announced to preach at First Church, New Orleans, next Sunday at 11 a. m.

We have in hand an account of the Alexandria District Conference, written by the secretary, Rev. A. S. J. Nell, which will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of the Felicity Church of New Orleans, left last Tuesday evening for Lake Junaluska, N. C., to attend the great Missionary Conference that is now in session at that place.

Dr. J. M. Henry spent last Sunday at Bogalusa, La., where he occupied the pulpit both morning and night. He reports that Rev. L. I. McCain, who was recently operated on for appendicitis, is rapidly recovering.

Rev. W. W. Drake, our pastor at Baton Rouge, La., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office last Monday. He was on his way to Lake Junaluska, N. C., where he expects to attend the great Missionary Conference which convened there yesterday.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon, the evangelist, recently closed a revival meeting at Clyde, Miss., which resulted in ten additions to the Church. As an after result of the meeting, the stewards increased the church's pledge for the support of their pastor from $50 a year to $150.

Dr. F. N. Parker paid the Advocate office a brief call last Monday. It was our misfortune to be out at the time, but we hope to have the honor of being visited again. Dr. Parker is reported to have preached a thoughtful sermon at the First Methodist Church in this city last Sunday evening.

The pastor, Rev. D. Ulmer, has been engaged in a revival meeting at Oakvale, Miss. He has been ably assisted by Rev. I. L. Peebles, one of the Conference Evangelists of the Mississippi Conference. According to the last report we had of the meeting, the indications are favorable for a great revival.

Rev. J. L. Sutton, pastor of the Louisiana Avenue Church, in New Orleans, left last Tuesday for the Seashore Camp Ground at Biloxi, Miss. Brother Sutton, who is also Superintendent of the New Orleans Asylum for Orphan Boys, expects to remain on the Coast for several weeks, in charge of the boys of the Home.

We are sorry that space prevents us from giving our readers an interesting account of a revival meeting that was lately held at Jackson, Miss., for members of the Y. M. C. A. of Millsaps College, by Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Natchez. Brother G. L. Harvey will tell of this meeting in a later issue of the Advocate.

In a letter containing five subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. E. J. Coker, the pastor of the Sharon (Miss.) charge, says: "The outlook on the Sharon charge is hopeful. The financial condition of the country is not good, but the people place the interests of the Church first." Brother Coker is fortunate to have such a fine class of people to serve.

The following brethren wrote letters to this office last week and reported their charges as doing finely, and evidenced the same by enclosing lists of subscriptions to the Advocate: Rev. R. C. Kennedy, Ripley, Miss., 10; Rev. W. H. Young, Trenton, Miss., 5; Rev. D. L. Griffin, Ringgold, La., 2; Rev. R. P. Fikes, Bolton, Miss., 5; Rev. J. Y. Bowman, Utica, Miss., 5.

From Brother W. L. Blackwell, the pastor, we learn that each of the Sunday Schools on the Hermitage, (Miss.) charge has celebrated Children's Day this year. The total offering for that charge was $16.50. We regret that the Advocate made Brother Blackwell say in a recent communication that his third quarterly conference was held on June 3, when it should have read, "second quarterly conference."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Shaw, Miss., has accomplished most excellent results for the Master since last Conference. He has received 81 into the Church, and has baptized 5 infants and 13 adults, and the year is but half gone. With such results already accomplished by the middle of June, we anticipate hearing Brother Broyles give a banner report at the next session of the North Mississippi Conference.

We have in hand a delightful account of some of the happenings in our church at Lucedale, Miss., written by the pastor, Rev. F. L. Applewhite. Among other things, he has just closed a successful revival meeting in which Rev. J. L. Decell did the preaching, and which resulted in thirteen accessions to the Church. We hope to allow Brother Applewhite to tell of the other good things in an early issue of the Advocate.

Rev. R. I. Collins, pastor at Cockrum, Miss., writes that Children's Day has been observed at two of his appointments, and will soon be observed at the other two. His work is progressing along all lines. In his letter he inclosed the renewal of one of his oldest and most saintly members, Mrs. Louisa Greer, of Coldwater, who is 82 years of age, but who has never slackened in her zeal for the Master's work, and in her interest in the works of the Church.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, our pastor at New Iberia, honored this office on last Tuesday morning with his presence for a few minutes. He was on his way to the Seashore Camp Ground to attend the Divinity School which opened its 1913 session yesterday. Brother Lutz reports the work of the Church as prosperous in New Iberia, and says that the Lafayette District is fortunate in having Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir as the successor to Dr. R. H. Wynn as presiding elder.

A letter reached this office from Mr. W. Fred Long, the active General Secretary of the Mississippi State Sunday School Association, dated June 20, and bearing the post-mark of Montreal, Quebec. Brother Fred stated that his party was ready to sail for Zurich, Switzerland, to attend the World's Sunday School Convention. He promises to keep the Advocate readers posted as to the success of the trip of the Mississippians who, with himself, are making the journey to the great convention.

We recently received the announcement of the marriage on June 4 of Mr. Charles M. Harrison and Miss Burma J. May, both of Amory, Miss. The groom is the youngest son of Rev. K. M. Harrison, and is a prosperous banker, and the bride is one of Amory's most accomplished young women. We extend congratulations to this young couple, and wish for them much happiness in life's journey together. The marriage was performed by Rev. W. M. Young, assisted by the groom's father, Rev. K. M. Harrison.

Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick has been announced as the representative of our Church at two chautauqua gatherings in Florida this summer, and also as teacher of Bible class work at the International Summer School at Lake Geneva, Wis. Methodism has very few as brilliant Christian workers as is the North Mississippi Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, and we predict that those attending the chautauqua sessions in Florida and the Summer School in Wisconsin will be more than pleased with her work.

Rev. H. T. Carley is one among the many attending the Divinity School at the Seashore Camp Ground this week. He left Shreveport the early part of the week, and, after the School closes, expects to spend the Summer at Ellisville, Miss., where he may be addressed by those wishing to communicate with him. Brother Carley desires not to remain entirely unoccupied during the summer months, and says that he will gladly assist any of the brethren who may desire his services in revival meetings for the next three months.

The New Orleans City Mission Board has taken a lease on a large and roomy house at 906 Esplanade Avenue, and St. Mark's Hall has been moved to that place. Last Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Dr. J. W. Moore preached the opening sermon in the new hall. The new building is better located, roomier, and in almost every way superior to the one formerly occupied by the St. Mark's Hall workers, and Brother W. E. Thomas, who is in charge of the work, believes that much larger results will be accomplished for the Church in the future than in the past.

The following letter from Rev. O. P. Armour, of Sidon, Miss., brings a message of sadness and a request that will be granted by all the readers of the Advocate: "Sister Morehead, wife of an honored superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, who resides in Sidon, is very sick—perhaps fatally so. Will the Editor and readers of the Advocate join in prayer to God to spare her life? Brother Morehead is slowly recovering from a recent operation. Both are bearing their afflictions like well-tried soldiers of the Cross. Brother H. D. Morgan of Cruger, who has been quite sick, is much improved."

Mr. Ivy L. Lee, executive secretary to President Rees of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is the son of Dr. J. W. Lee, pastor of St. John's Church of St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Lee is rapidly taking rank as one of the most trusted officials of that road, and in a recent issue of the St. Louis Star, presented the views of the Pennsylvania System on an important issue. From the article in the Star it is evident that the young man is a chip off the old block, and has the ability to give to the world as clear an analysis of the science of railroad building and management as his illustrious father has to give to humanity works illuminating the path that leads to God.

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy closed a very successful revival meeting at Alexandria, La., last week, and is now taking a needed rest at Yazoo City, Miss. He has made arrangements that will keep him busy in revival meetings almost all the time from now until the fall Conferences; however, he has a few open dates which he will give to pastors who may desire to communicate with him at Yazoo City. Brother Norsworthy will have with him during his revival campaign a liberal supply of sample copies of the Advocate and will be authorized to take subscriptions and collect for renewals. The evangelist who places the church paper in a large number of homes in a community has done a great work, even if there are no conversions as a result of his preaching.

FROM DR. I. W. COOPER.

At our recent Commencement exercises here, Dr. DuBose gave us a great sermon—few can equal him. Leggett beat himself. What a dear brother he is! True, brave, and honorable, never guilty even of the suggestion of violating the spirit of brotherhood. Smith gave us a charming address. What a perfect Christian gentleman Smith is! I would love to transfer if I could be loved as we love this brother.

Brother Roberts, our financial agent, is a wonder of enthusiasm, energy, and efficiency. He is a horn college agent. Selby has captured the District. He is the embodiment of honor. He is a leading exponent of church law, and few can surpass him in it. W. H. Lewis bids fair to become the successor of his sainted father as the St. John of the Mississippi Conference. His appointment to Brookhaven gives entire satisfaction. We predict for him a glorious pastorate. And Bishop Candier comes to us. There are few men I love as I do this Bishop. He is the "great heart" of my circle of friends.

I. W. COOPER.
Brookhaven, Miss.

FIRST CHURCH, ALEXANDRIA, LA.

We have just closed a two weeks' revival at First Church, Alexandria, La. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy did the preaching from the beginning to the end of the meeting. He did excellent work. He placed great emphasis on salvation as a fact of personal experience, and as a result of the faithful service rendered by him thirty-one persons professed saving faith in Christ and have been received into the membership of the Church. Brother Norsworthy was a surprise to me. I had no idea of his ability or success as an evangelist. I desire heartily and unreservedly to commend him to any preacher who needs a capable and brotherly evangelist to assist in a protracted service. He preaches with unusual force and often with great unction. He makes the salient truths of the Gospel stand out with great clearness, and gets very close to the hearts of the people. He is specially gifted in reaching children, while at the same time those more advanced in years find in his addresses much to please and edify.

S. H. WERLEIN.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

The elegant and complete annual catalog of Mansfield Female College is in hand, and I feel like saying to all who may have daughters of college age that, if they will put them under the care of President and Mrs. Bobbitt and the excellent Faculty announced in the catalog, they will be doing the right thing. I have known Brother Bobbitt a long time, and I believe him to be the very man for Mansfield, for he is a ripe scholar, a genuine Christian, and a refined gentleman. I am not surprised that his first year at Mansfield College has been such a success, and I am sure it is an indication of greater success ahead. If any parents who read this are going to start their daughter to college this fall, they should write to President Bobbitt for a Mansfield catalog and any information they wish.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

PRESIDING ELDERS, NOTICE.

I am desirous of a work and will be glad to correspond with any presiding elder concerning any opening he may have in his district.

On Monday night, May 26, 1913, Brother ROBERT N. SMITH, Sr., passed to his reward. He was alone at his home on the Clover Hill plantation, and from all appearances died of heart failure. He was found the next morning sitting in his chair, just as if he had fallen asleep there. Brother Smith was raised in the Methodist Church here, and his influence will live on and never be forgotten. He was as obedient and affectionate as a child. He was a devoted husband. As a father he was kind and indulgent, true to his friends and loyal to all that he thought calculated to make for the betterment of his country. He leaves a wife, two sons, and three sisters, besides other loved ones, and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

H. N. McKIBBEN.

On the morning of May 29 the death angel came and took from the home of Brother R. E. Foster his companion. SISTER FOSTER had suffered intensely for some years, but with the fortitude of a Christian she had borne it all. She had faith in Christ, and our loss on earth is her gain in heaven. As a companion, she was devoted and earnest; as a mother, kind and indulgent, and as a friend, ever true. She was a great source of comfort to the writer when in her home, being so profoundly interested in the work of the Church and so earnest in prayer. Sister Foster was a Baptist, but for many years she has worshiped with the Methodists, as she was not convenient to her own Church. She leaves her husband, one son, two daughters, and two brothers, besides other loved ones and friends. May God help us to meet her in the home of the blessed.

H. N. McKIBBEN.

On Friday, June 6, 1913, the death angel visited the Gilchrist and Fordney camps and took from us one of our best and brightest little girls—little RUTH BARNETTE, 4½ years old. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Barnette, and was afflicted about three months, but was unconscious of pain, it seemed, until just before she died. She made home happy with her presence, and always wore a cheerful smile. Her parents did all they could for her recovery. After trying the surrounding physicians, they carried her to Meridian and Hattiesburg, but all that medical skill could do brought no results. The Superintendent of the Camps, Mr. Blackledge, furnished the train that carried the corpse, and relatives and a host of sympathizing friends as far as the N. O. M. & C. railroad; from there relatives and friends, with the pastor, were carried on the N. O. M. & C. train to Hoy, just north of Laurel, Miss., where we were met, and carried to Shady Grove Church. There a large crowd was waiting for us. The writer paid the last tribute of respect to little Ruth. She leaves a father, mother, and three sisters to mourn her death, besides her many playmates. We know that earth's loss is heaven's gain.

C. H. STRAIT.

Death has removed from our midst one of our truest, best men, Brother J. W. HARMON, of Ackerman, Miss. He died on the evening of May 11, in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone for medical treatment. He was a valuable citizen, always to be found on the right side of every moral question. He was a faithful, liberal member of our Church; an attentive, devoted husband; a deeply concerned, affectionate father; and a truly conscientious man who earnestly desired in all things to do his whole duty. He leaves sad and grieved his excellent wife, a lovely daughter who was but recently married, and two promising boys—Carter and William. We all loved him, and we all miss him. He was a good man and enriched the world by his influence. May God kindly and richly bless the bereaved family, and may the boys be so directed and taught as to develop into a firm, gentle, noble manhood such as characterized their father.

J. M. WYATT.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. SALLIE C. RICHEY (nee Smith), was born Aug. 2, 1830. She was a native of McNary County, Tenn., but moved to Mississippi early in life. She was married Oct. 21, 1846, to Mr. J. G. Thompson, and was the mother of four of his children, all of whom made good citizens and useful members of the Church; three of whom still survive. In 1886 she was married to Mr. R. C. Richey. She lived a long and faithful life, one that cannot be measured by the flight of years, but by kind deeds, gentle words, bright smiles, and heart throbs of love and mercy. She joined the Church while quite a young girl and was ever a faithful servant of her Lord and his cause. She was a faithful wife, mother and friend. She lived well and her end was peace. May her mantle descend to her posterity, and may the grace of her God be their comfort on her going away.

J. A. POE.

ROXIE ANNA THOMPSON was born in Charlotte County, Va., May 29, 1828. She was married to Mr. Jesse T. Mitchell on March 28, 1846. They moved to Mississippi with a large company of Virginians in 1847. She joined the M. E. Church, South, with her husband, in 1856, and died on April 25, 1913. Of her six children, only two survived her: Mrs. B. F. Sanders of Maben, Miss., and Hon. T. J. Mitchell of Pheba, Miss., now President of the Board of Supervisors of Clay County. Her devoted husband preceded her to the better land several years ago. It was my privilege to know this elect woman for more than 30 years. It was a benediction for any young man to come under her Godly influence. While Mrs. Mitchell did not have a demonstrative nature, her influence for righteousness was unbounded to those who came in contact with her. She had been expecting the summons to "come up higher" for several years, but she waited with Christian patience, knowing that she was abiding God's time. May God's richest blessings rest upon her remaining children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren!

S. B. WHITE.

West Point, Miss.

JOHN HARDY REES McHAFFEY, son of Van Henry and Irene Rees McHaffey, was born on Oct. 6, 1912, and died June 14, 1913, aged one year eight months and eight days. The chronicling of these events call to mind some of the happiest experiences and one of the saddest of all occasions. This dear little fellow, so full of promise, so bright and interesting, brought at his coming the keenest delight to fond parents—his going has created a vacancy that is heart-rending. His last illness, which was almost his only illness, was a surprise, and was more than a skilled physician and loving nurses could control. He was sick two weeks, but suffered very little and was in the possession of his faculties until the very last when he so quietly slipped from loving hands. His precious little body was laid in a vault in the Booneville Cemetery. We must not stop here and ask, why? That question has so often been asked, and the only reply was silence. We give him back to God knowing he is "Safe in the arms of Jesus," and knowing that we can follow after awhile to his home and ours. May our loving Heavenly Father comfort the mother and father and fond grandparents in their distress!

Tidings From the Field

Pelahatchie, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are still moving forward on the Shiloh charge. The congregations are good at every church, the revival spirit seems to be getting hold on the people, and there are three or four good prayer meetings in operation. We have observed Children's Day at two of the churches, Shiloh and Johns, and they were reported to be the best held at those points for many years. The collections were good, and the other churches on the charge are planning to observe the day. We are planning to have a big Sunday school rally at the Shiloh Camp Ground on July 4. We are expecting to have a great time. All the neighboring pastors and Sunday school workers have been invited to attend. We have organized an Epworth League at Johns, with 35 members. The outlook for the entire charge is very promising. We hope to begin a revival at Shiloh on the third Sunday in July, in which I will be assisted by my son, Rev. H. H. Griffin, of the Midland Heights Church of Ft. Smith, Ark. We are praying for and expecting revivals at every point on the charge, and will be disappointed if we do not have them. Pray for us, Mr. Editor.—C. C. Griffin, P. C.

Coalville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are enjoying a gracious revival season and ingathering on our charge. On the first Sunday in May we began a meeting at Coalville. Brother J. L. Decell was my help for six days, and we received four into the Church. The latter part of May the Baptists held a meeting, being led by a strong preacher, and added 11 members to their Church. Immediately after their meeting closed, on the first Sunday in June, Rev. G. W. Huff occupied my pulpit and 8 applied for church membership. On the same afternoon I preached the opening sermon of a revival which was led by Brother Huff at Cedar Lake. He did some good, earnest preaching. Rev. L. Fayard, who is serving the Wolf River Mission, was also with us and rendered some valuable help. The Cedar Lake church had but about six members at the beginning of the meeting, but the result of the revival was that the crowds were larger than the church would hold, and I received 42 into the Church. On June 15 I received three more at Coalville, making a total of 53 since Conference, only three of whom were taken in by certificate. I have 16 applicants yet to take into the Church. We have also to be reported quite a number of infant baptisms. We have organized one new Sunday school, have started two prayer meetings, and have four revivals and one camp meeting yet to hold this year. Pray for us.—C. C. Gibson, P. C.

Millsaps Memorial, Jackson, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I feel like writing to the Advocate with reference to our work this year, as I feel really good over our church being out of debt. When we came here by order of the Bishop we fully intended going to Millsaps College, but finding much to do, I decided not to go and set to work with the people to build up the Christian influence in the community. We first decided to build a parsonage, and began to work for it. After working up an interest in it and corresponding with parties who owned lots adjacent to the church, I thought it wise to see that there was nothing in the way. I had heard that there was a $100 debt on the church. I went to the holder of the notes and was surprised to find that it was $361. We abandoned the parsonage movement and set to work on the church debt which we have paid, and are rejoicing over it. Just here I must say something else in connection with our debt. We have heard that friends are more to be desired than great riches, and I believe it; for with friends we can get money and have the friends too. When we have too much money we have no friends. Any way, a friend proved to be good here, for while discussing the church debt with the friend and benefactor of Millsaps College, Maj. R. W. Millsaps, he made us a proposition that if we would raise a little less than one-third of it, he, with others, would see that the rest was paid, and so he did. It is needless to say that we feel under obligations to him. This makes his contribution to our church well up in the hundreds.

In appreciation of his kindness we took it upon ourselves to surprise him by changing the name of our church from that of "Galloway Chapel" to that of "Millsaps Memorial." In doing this, we did not feel that we were treating the name and honor of our beloved Bishop Galloway with indifference, or a small degree of appreciation. In view of the fact that the First Church of Jackson, Miss., has changed its name from that of "First Church" to that of "Galloway Memorial," I think we did what was right.

Our work aside from this is not anything out of the ordinary. I am sure some other preacher could have done more than I have, yet I have worked very hard. We have had our second quarterly conference, and my people are in love with our presiding elder, and think that his sermons are not only the result of careful study and much thought, but of deep meditation and waiting on the Lord as well; and they get much inspiration and courage out of his preaching. We trust that the Bishop will see fit to send him back to us again next year. The dear old Advocate gets better all the time, and I am going to make a canvass for it in the near future.—W. B. Waldrop, P. C.

ELEVATOR ACCIDENTS RARE.

The elevators of Manhattan carry eight million passengers every day, yet they have killed only thirty-eight people in ten years. A Russell Bond, who furnishes this interesting information in "Cars that Travel Skyward," in the July St. Nicholas, says that if the shafts of these nine thousand passenger elevators and sixteen thousand freight elevators were placed one on top of the other the shaft thus erected would be about five hundred miles high.

A REVIVAL AT COMO, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed one of the greatest meetings in the history of this church. Rev. G. A. Klein, an evangelist from Nashville, and his singer, Brother P. M. Boyd, were with us for two weeks. They impressed our people with their earnestness, faith and genuine piety. Brother Klein is no sensationalist. His methods are simple and sensible. He preaches faithfully the pure Word of God. He is fearless in his denunciation of sin. Our church was greatly revived. Brother Boyd contributed greatly to the success of the meeting by his appropriate and effective solos. These men are doing a great work for the Master and his Church. Yours fraternally,

J. B. RANDOLPH.

Sunday School

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"It is the Bible teacher who builds the pillars of the Church."

The Okolona Sunday school observed Mothers' Day and Children's Day this month with fine success. The Okolona Boy Scouts have three patrols of Scouts and are working faithfully.

Rev. E. H. Mohier of Artesia has 100 children in his Sunday school. He has a splendid Superintendent in Mr. A. L. McIlwain. He recognizes the great need of all Sunday schools to be trained leaders.

Rev. S. A. Brown's proposed conference for Teen-Age girls is a splendid idea, and every girl who can should avail herself of the information and enthusiasm to be derived from this well-planned program.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney's Boy Scouts are making an unusually fine summer record and are doing a great work. This same progressive pastor will organize the Camp-Fire Girls soon. We bespeak for him equal success along that line of high Christian endeavor.

A well organized and continuously working Adult Bible Class reports 32 years of good service, with a total enrollment of 684 members. And still we hear it said that the Adult Department is a passing phase of Sunday school work. This class holds an afternoon session at a State Prison close by and has accomplished a wonderful work.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., recently received twelve from his Sunday school at Epworth, New Orleans, into the membership of the Church. Dr. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder, conducting the service. Similar gatherings are reported in all sections of the Church. And while the revival of the old type may not bring results as of yore, the more Scriptural way of bringing up children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" is being more and more magnified in the work of the modern Sunday school. And not only are these children thus evangelized, but they come into the Church instructed in Christian duty and intelligent in Bible knowledge. Thus are we more and more learning the true way and walking in it. Every adult that needs conversion is a reflection on the training of his home and Church.

At the recent session of the Alexandria District Conference Mr. R. O. Corrpender, who teaches a class of Junior boys in the First Church of Alexandria, was licensed to preach. After the vote was taken and the presiding elder had given some well chosen words of brotherly welcome, he had the members of the Conference to give the young brother a handshake and a hearty Godspeed, which all together made an impressive service. Brother Corrpender joined the Church during Rev. H. R. Singleton's pastorate. He will leave in September to enter the Baptist Theological school at Louisville; Dr. Geo. B. Eager, the President of that institution, being his uncle by marriage.

A fine piece of Christian work is reported from the First Church of Shreveport in the way of helping a young man to secure an education. He is a plumber by trade and at the First Church night school was found to be an unusually diligent student, so much so that Miss Addie Webb, his teacher, interested others in him. It was decided to send him to the McTyre Training School at McKenzie, Tenn. Who is prophet enough to say what the interest of these teachers—Mr. F. E. Russ is his Sunday school teacher—and the investment of these friends may mean to the world through this ambitious young man. Investment in men is the best investment, and the returns are in interest doubly compounded in the high value of intellectual and spiritual coin.

Brother Holloman, the Treasurer of our Sunday School Board, reports the following returns from the Children's Day collections since the last report: Columbia $11.28; Many $3.30; Magnolia (with 30 members) on the Gilbert charge, $8; Camp Ground, Waldheim, $3.08; Jonesboro, $3.90; Felicity, N. O., $13.18; Arcadia, $3.35; New Iberia, $13.50; Mer Rouge, $5.74; Plank Road, Oak Grove, and Olive Branch, $7.90; Lisbon, $15.15; Pine Grove (Sibley charge), $6.75; Alberta, $10.48; Clear Creek, $9.70; New Hope, $8.10; Maxie, $4; Mansfield, $13.05; Opelousas, $6.25; Alexandria, $22; Kentwood, $11.10; Brushwood on the Lanesville circuit, $3.70; Winnfield, $10; Ponchatoula, $22.80; Huff's Chapel, $2; Zachary, $11.74; Robeline, $5.75; Lafayette, $15.55; Trout, $4.06. Thus it will be seen that the substantial gains in the amounts contributed holds nearly everywhere. Let the collections be sent directly to the Treasurer.

"THE VESTIBULE OF THE BODY"

So the mouth has been called, and so it is. Through it the food and drink necessary to sustain life pass into the stomach. Through it also, to a large extent, the air which we breathe passes into the lungs.

But through it also the bacilli and bacteria, the microbes and germs, of disease enter the body, and reach those parts vulnerable to their attack.

How important, therefore, to keep the mouth clean. For the mouth is not only the "vestibule of the body," but, by medical authority, it is also the "incubator for pathogenic (disease producing organisms)." It receives these microbes from the air, from the hands, from insanitary public drinking cups, from telephone mouth pieces, etc., etc., holds them long enough for its warmth to cultivate them, and then passes them on to throat, bronchial tubes, lungs, stomach, to produce tonsillitis, laryngitis, diphtheria, bronchitis, pneumonia, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, etc.

"In the process of disinfecting, antiseptizing and sterilizing the mouth, the vestibule of the body, the incubator for pathogenic organisms, dependence may be placed on Absorbine, Jr., which affords a thorough process, and is of specific and distinctive value." Thus Dr. Willard H. Morse, Consulting Chemist and Therapist of Hartford, Conn., reports.

Again, he says: "Bearing in mind the numerous disadvantages existing in the ordinary methods of disinfection of the mouth, it is grateful to find an agent (Absorbine Jr.) that can be relied on in all inflammatory conditions, and its pleasant taste makes it especially suitable."

Absorbine, Jr. is a non-poisonous antiseptic and germicide liniment composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils non-destructive of tissue.

Dentists say of Absorbine, Jr.: "It's great stuff. I like it." "Excellent as a disinfecting mouth wash or spray after operating"; "Relieves pain after teeth extraction, diluted as mouth wash."

Chemical Laboratory tests show that a ten per cent aqueous solution of Absorbine, Jr. destroyed diphtheria bacilli in four minutes.

A good way to use Absorbine, Jr. as a mouth wash is to mix one part of Absorbine, Jr. with two parts of Mucilage of Acacia, U. S. P., and seven parts distilled water, or to mix one part of Absorbine, Jr. with nine parts of pure water, and use in an atomizer or as a gargle.

Sold by leading druggists, $1.00 for 4 oz. bottle; $2.00 for 12 oz. bottle; or delivered to you, all charges paid and delivery guaranteed, at these prices by the manufacturer. Liberal trial bottle sent for 10c. W. F. Young, P. D. F., Sole Manufacturer, 466 Temple Street, Springfield, Mass.

The Guntown Charge (North Miss.)

Dear Brother Editor: Will you please give place to the following good news from Guntown? We began our meeting on the fourth Sunday in May and continued ten days. Brother J. H. Holder did all the preaching after the first day. The meeting was a success. Fifteen were added to the Church, some members of the Church were greatly built up in the faith, and the whole town was benefitted. The spirit of kindness and co-operation among the denominations was beautiful. Our Sunday school is better than it has ever been, I think. We are planning to remodel our church by adding several Sunday school rooms. Brother Holder is one of God's most faithful and efficient evangelists. He is zealous, strong, true and gentle. I wish that we had more of his kind. We have organized a good Sunday school at Saltillo, and are now in our new church there. Our people there have wrought faithfully, and are growing every day. They are a good class of people and have a bright future. Our work is growing at Baldwin where we have a fine membership. It ought soon to be one of the best churches in our connection. Pleasant Valley, one of our country churches, is coming to the front by remodeling and adding Sunday school rooms. We will soon have a model country church there, for we have a fine working force and the country is as fine as can be found in Mississippi. We have a good large congregation and membership at Liberty, but our house is in ruins, and the committee in charge of plans to rebuild or repair it is having some trouble getting things adjusted; but with God's help I think they will come out victors and that we will soon have a strong live church in the midst of that promising people. We have received forty-one into the Church since Conference, and our goal is not less than the one hundred mark. We want the prayers of all the good people that we may exalt the name of our Lord and advance his kingdom.—J. A. Poe, P. C.

PINNED HIS FAITH TO IT.
J. C. S. Douglas of Edenworld, Tenn., writes: "I had been a sufferer from white swelling in my right arm for three years, carried my arm in a sling and could not dress myself. The doctors gave me up to die. Remembering what Gray's Ointment did for me when a child, I decided to pin my faith to it in this case and live or die by it. I began wrapping my whole arm in Gray's Ointment from the elbow to the shoulder and am now perfectly well." Put your faith in Gray's Ointment—you can trust it absolutely to cure all ulcers, old sores, boils, bruises, carbuncles, swellings, and other skin diseases. It has never failed when used properly and never will. Write to Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample, or get a 25c box at your druggist or direct by mail from the manufacturer.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Centerville, Miss.

Conference Press Superintendents:

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK.

"All that the knowledge of healing owes to suffering.
All that the knowledge of love owes to the loveless.
All that the knowledge of salvation owes to the perishing.
We owe to the heathen. And may God help us to feel the obligation!"

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SOCIETY.

The following message comes from our new Conference President, and while not sent for publication, we take the liberty of having it put in print. You cannot become too familiar with its contents. Perhaps when it is read at your next meeting you may be away or your summer vacation, and thus fail to hear its contents. What we perceive through the eye often makes the more lasting impression upon the mind. Grant that it may be so in this instance!

In our missionary work, as in other lines of work, it is the eternal "keep-at-it-ness" that accomplishes things. We must not grow weary in well-doing.

We did not intend giving such a lengthy preface to this message, and we hope these words will not detract from those which follow, but serve to make us read them more earnestly and prayerfully and put into our hearts a stronger desire to fulfill the requests which are "our obligations."

"My dear Sisters:

"As your new President, I want to extend you a hearty greeting, and express my deepest love and interest in you. We are united in our love for the Master's work, so now let us pledge our best efforts to him for this year, 1913. The second quarter is nearly gone, and before we enter upon the heated term of summer, lest we forget our obligations to our Lord and Savior, I want to offer a few suggestions.

"I know it is your desire to have our society up to the highest standard, both spiritually and financially, so let us pray our Father to grant us this desire. May we live more consecrated lives so that those around us may 'take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus.'

"In order that the work may grow, The Contingent Fund is very necessary, so I hope that each member in the society has paid this small amount for this year.

"In the Home Department, we are anxious to buy our Wesley House property at Biloxi so we can add improvements. This work among the foreigners is very important, and especially do these little children who are ignorant and godless need our attention. The Wesley House in Meridian is just complete, but it has a small debt on it. At the Hattiesburg Conference we pledged $2000 for this department, so let us put into execution this pledge.

"The Foreign work is equally important, only a larger sum, $3500. Let us not forget the needs of our schools and the consecrated women who are laboring in other lands. I am sure the good women of Mississippi will not let these two pledges fall one cent below these figures. Let us work and pray that God's kingdom may be advanced in the Mississippi Conference.

"If you have not made a pledge as liberal as you feel that God would want you to do, make it now, so that you will not be ashamed before Him at his coming."

"With true Christian love, MRS. R. E. JOHNSON."

In making or increasing your pledge, remember to Give as you would to the Master

If you met His searching look;
Give as you would of your substance
If His hand your offering took."

GIRLS' MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Rev. S. A. Brown, Pastor of the Methodist church in Booneville, writes as follows:

"We are planning to have a conference under the auspices of The Young People's Missionary Society of our church, July 12-14. We are inviting five girls between the ages of 15 and 21 from each of the pastoral charges between Corinth and West Point, Amory and New Albany, Ripley and Pontotoc, and including Iuka and Houston. The subjects that will be discussed are such as 'The Prepared Girl,' 'If I were a Girl,' 'The Advantage the Girl has over other Christian Workers,' 'The Girl's Social Life,' 'Why Educate the Girl,' 'The Girl as a Sunday School Asset,' and 'The Young People's Missionary Society.'

"We have on the program Mrs. J. E. Thomas, Columbus; Mrs. Vic Thompson Hoyle, Tupelo; Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, Iuka; and some others are invited from other towns who have not yet said they could be with us. In addition we have Miss Kate Cunningham of this place, and Miss Sallie Lou Buchanan of the Presbyterian Church. Rev. S. L. Pope will preach an appropriate sermon on Sunday morning and Brother Buchanan of the Baptist Church will preach on Monday morning. The conference will be composed of Methodist girls, but we want all of our young people to get inspiration from the meeting. Pray that God may enable us to use this splendid opportunity profitably."

MISSION STUDY CLASSES HOLD A SOCIAL MEETING.

From Mrs. W. M. Williams, Publicity Superintendent, we have the following:

"As the two woman's auxiliaries of the First Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss., completed the book, 'China's New Day,' a meeting of the two societies was planned for Monday afternoon, June 16, 1913. Mrs. F. E. Gunter kindly invited the ladies to meet with her in her lovely home on North State street. The spacious library was filled with chairs and all things made ready for the entertainment and pleasure of the guests.

"The reader for the afternoon program was Mrs. W. B. Murrah, who read that ever beautiful and inspiring chapter, the 16th of Acts."

The program on this occasion must have been an interesting one. Mrs. Williams says there were renderings of much interest on questions concerning China by Mrs. G. C. Swearingen, Mrs. J. M. Shoemaker, Mrs. Charlie Thompson, Mrs. A. F. Watkins, Mrs. J. W. Tucker, and Mrs. W. M. Williams. Little Misses Lucy and Frances Watkins sang a Chinese song. There were other features including Chinese rhymes and Chinese Mother Goose rhymes by Miss Harley Shands, Misses Helen Howie and Elizabeth Brame. There was also a number entitled, 'Chinese Classics for Girls,' by Misses Susie Taylor and Sarah Somers Thompson. Musical selections were beautifully rendered by Mrs. F. E. Gunter, Miss Margaret Black, and Mrs. Cowan Dixon.

Mrs. Williams continues as follows: "After the program, which was so beautifully and impressively rendered, in which our hearts were lifted to

NOTICE TO WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

I have for the last eight months been delivering lectures on the following subjects: "Danger Signals of Modern Society," "The Evil Tendencies of the Modern Ball and Opera," and "Modern Pictures and Suggestive Songs." I illustrate these lectures by means of stereoptical slides. I have written endorsements from the President and members of the faculty of the Port Gibson Female College, the C. H. A. of Port Gibson, Miss., and from some of the most prominent ministers of the Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas Conferences. I give advice to young ladies who travel and are not conversant with the disguised evils of our day.

To any W. H. M. Society that desires to have me come and give these lectures (the three of them are delivered in one evening) and which will agree to sell the tickets at from ten to twenty-five cents each, I will give fifty per cent of the net proceeds. Write me if you need me to help you in raising a church fund.

MRS. G. W. GALLOWAY.

Yesterday afternoon we laid to its resting place the form of Mrs. G. W. Galloway (nee Fannie Elizabeth Holliday) in the family cemetery at old Madisonville, seven miles from Canton, Miss., hard by where just three months and two days before we had placed the form of her noble son, Dr. G. Marvin Galloway. Those who were well acquainted with the son could know without ever having met her that the mother was one of Earth's noble women. About ten days after her son's funeral she had an unfortunate buggy accident, which dislocated her knee and shattered the knee-cap. But she was beginning to walk again, and loved ones were rejoicing in prospect of her complete recovery, when suddenly she was attacked by acute indigestion, and died in five minutes, seemingly without pain, a look of peace and joy upon her face. So unexpected was the attack that only one white person, Miss Maggie Galloway, niece of Mr. Galloway, was in the house.

Mrs. Galloway was born at Sharon, Madison County, Miss., November 4, 1851, and is survived by her husband, two brothers, three sisters, a son, C. Hervey Galloway, and two daughters, Mrs. A. M. Reid and Mrs. H. G. Hawkins. Her father, Isaac Newton Holliday, was courier for General Loring during the Civil War, and took part in all the battles fought from Resaca to Atlanta and at Nashville and Franklin, Tenn. He was noted for his hospitality, and was one of the most successful farmers of the county, leaving a considerable patrimony to each of his seven children. The mother, Elizabeth Tisdale Holliday, was modest and retiring, but when occasion required she could prove a woman of large action. During Sherman's raid, her husband and two sons being to the front elsewhere, an engagement occurred at Sharon and the enemy was repulsed. A part of their line passed through the large Holliday yard, which had a well in it half way to the gate. "As our men entered the yard the lady of the house ran out to the well (under fire of the enemy) and drew water and gave it to the boys in gray, expressing thanks to the Lord that she was permitted to wait on Southern boys while in battle." Mrs. Galloway inherited from these parents, and cultivated as Christian graces, meekness and quietness and yet large hospitality and wondrous activity.

She was a home maker, guarding with unflagging care the health and other interests of her husband and children. "She looked well to the ways of her household and ate not the bread of idleness." Many a happy group assembled at her family board, for her home was often the mecca of numerous friends and relatives. With her children, even when they were absent, sometimes in distant States, she kept in closest touch by a constant vivid correspondence. She took many a stranger in, clothed the naked, visited the sick, gave food to many hungry, drink to the thirsty. As the writer was leaving the new-made grave he paused a moment before the group of negroes who had been solemn witnesses of the funeral, and asked, "What do you think of that grave?" One man in a flash answered, "I'm ruin't." Another, a woman, said, "I went to Miss Fannie's house many a time, and never once went away empty-handed."

She exemplified, without assuming, the Christian virtues and graces; and other pastors could testify, as did Rev. E. J. Coker, "After spending a night in Sister Galloway's home, my first night upon the charge, I went away knowing that I had been with a Christian; and I thanked God and took courage." She was a bright woman, she was a good woman. The writer of these lines knew her for fourteen years, thirteen of which were in the relation of son-in-law. During all this time there was never a breath of distrust, but always only love and perfect confidence. Many, many of us will keenly miss her thoughtful care and smile of blessing; most of all is she missed by the companion who now for the first time in thirty-six years finds himself deprived of her tender, unstinted attentions. But his nephew, the lamented Bishop Galloway, used to say of him, "He's the salt of the earth;" and during and after the funeral we found him sustained by an unflinching trust. Her body has found rest; her spirit, with that of her noble son, rejoices in the very presence of the throne of God.

Whitworth College.

A LETTER FROM DR. DU BOSE

On revisiting Whitworth College, my surprise has been great and my delight genuine. First, I have been struck by the marked material improvements seen on the campus. The fine residence of the President, the spacious, classic and well-appointed auditorium, are special features of this improvement, and would do credit to institutions far more richly endowed than Whitworth. The large and refined audiences which, added to the student body, filled the new auditorium impressed me as being one of the evident signs of the school's wider and abiding influence upon the commonwealth.

I have also had opportunity to see some demonstrations of the class and department work done in the College. These have given me the confidence that the Faculty has been well chosen, and that its members are personally efficient, alert and zealously faithful in the instruction given. The academic and language work, the music and art directory, have all seemed to be worthy of a generous commendation. The presidency of Dr. Cooper has, as to its diligence, firmness and far-sightedness, passed into a proverb. It is to his personal and official direction that happy advances of recent years are due.

As an ex-Mississippian, and one to whose heart Mississippi and its Christian education are ever dear, I heartily commend Whitworth to parents who have daughters to educate.

MORGAN SCHOOL

FAYETTEVILLE, TENN.

To determine the wants as well as the aptitudes of the individual, and, through constant personal aid, so strengthen and develop his best qualities, that when the student enters college or business life he may have something more than ordinary qualities to depend upon—this is the aim of Morgan School.

Such training demands the closest individual attention of teachers of the highest moral and intellectual character. It is also important that the student have access to the teachers at all times, and that the instructors be in perfect sympathy and accord with the boy. This system prevails at Morgan school.

The equipment measures well with the School's standard. A new school building is in process of construction and a new steam heated, electric lighted dormitory was recently erected at a cost of $15,000. The homelife of the dormitory is safe and wholesome, and the strong moral and religious tone of the school is second to none.

The course of study comprises a thorough preparatory training in English, Latin, Greek, German, French, History, Civil Government, Mathematics and Sciences. Certificates of graduation admit without examination to the leading colleges and universities. Advanced course for students not intending to enter college. Special teachers' course.

Morgan School encourages the practice of manly sports and athletics, and for this purpose maintains a splendid eight-acre athletic field; has basketball, football and baseball teams, tennis, etc.

Free catalogue and announcement will be sent upon request addressed to

R. K. MORGAN, Principal.
